The WREN in Business

It is characteristic of the Wren that it will sneak in and occupy the nest made by another bird, in preference to building one of its own. This same trait is often seen in business. It is shown by the imitators of

COTTOLENE

No sooner has the wonderful merit of this new vegetable shortening, so much better than lard, created for it a remarkable sale and popularity, than the business wrens are ready to move upon the market with many worthless counterfeits. Any housekeeper can be easily and cheaply convinced of the value of COTTOLENE by simply giving it a trial. They will then be unwilling to go back to lard, or go down to fraudulent imitations.

DENOUNCE THE ORDER

A. R. U. Men Angry at Federal Interference.

Instead of Inducing Men To Go Back To Work It Will Result In Driving Out Thousands of Others—The Authorities Prepared for Any Emergency at Chicago—Situation at Different Points—Federal Troops Subject to Judge Ross' Orders—Deputies Ordered to Fire if Attacked by Strikers—Uneasy at Detroit.

CHICAGO, July 3.—The critical point in the railroad strike will be reached within 20 hours. That was the opinion confidently expressed at the headquarters of the railroad managers at a late hour last night. It is likewise the first expression emanating from the managers end since the commencement of hostilities with which the representatives of the strikers are in complete accord. Both elements are sanguine that the beginning of the end will be in sight before sundown to-day.

As to the means by which this desirable consummation is to be attained, however, there is a radical difference of opinion. The general managers profess to believe that the extraordinary injunction issued by Judges Woods and Grosscup will prove to be worthy of the terse yet epigrammatical designation given it by the members of the federal judiciary first named, "A gatling gun on paper."

A veritable drag-net in the matter of legal verbiage; one of those peculiar instruments that punishes an individual for doing a certain thing and is equally merciless if he does not do it so, so it is difficult to understand how strikers can maintain their present policy and at the same time evade its operation or escape its influence. Even personal service is not an absolute necessity to its legal enforcement. According to the law as expounded by United States District Attorney Milchrist last night, the publication of the decree in a widely circulated paper, its posting in a public place where it is certain to be read and its contents disseminated; or the formal reading to a demonstrative crowd by a deputy marshal, may be ruled upon as constituting sufficient service to place those guilty of a breach of its provisions under the ban of the law. Under this interpretation thousands of strikers might be arrested day after day and be arraigned and summarily dealt with for contempt of court, and this is precisely the policy, according to the reports at the government building last night that it is intended to pursue. If it is carried out there will be no need, so it is believed, for the employment either of state militia or federal troops. A goodly force of deputy marshals armed with power to make arbitrary arrests and with the knowledge on the part of the strikers that, once within the clutches of the law, peremptory sentence to prison for contempt instead of a preliminary hearing, bail, and a final trial months hence, when the echoes of the strike may have died away, will be their portion, should, so reason the railroad managers, create such a combination of circumstances as to induce the strikers to pause and reason before proceeding farther in the present course.

But the strikers themselves reason differently. At their headquarters last evening the interference of the federal court was denounced in vigorous language by one and all of the hundreds if not thousands of railroad men that passed in and out, and the most intelligent of the number voiced the general sentiment in the declaration that the far-reaching and drag net character of the injunction would tend towards defeating the very ends to which it was directed. Instead of inducing men to return to work, so it was contended, it would result in driving out thousands of members of railroad organizations not affiliated with the union or apparently in sympathy with its present operations, simply because these men would not tolerate the cracking over the shoulders of their fellows of a government whip that some day or other, under similar circumstances, might be used as a lash for their own shoulders.

The opinion was confidently expressed in the strikers' camp last night that the engineers and firemen of every road that attempted to resume operation by virtue of the injunction would immediately leave their posts, and that citizens that Cook county can produce, armed to the teeth and wearing the insignia of state or national authority, are subject to orders and will doubtless be brought into service to-day. Lights were burning in the windows of the government and county buildings alike at midnight and the authorities were prepared for any emergency.

Situation at Denver.

DENVER, July 3.—The strike situation here is not materially changed. All roads are running passenger trains with sleepers attached, although some of the trains are considerably delayed. A Santa Fe passenger train arrived yesterday with two Pullmans well filled with passengers, some of whom had been four days en route from Chicago. The Santa Fe officials claim to have every engine and train manned on the western division and all moving, though not on time. No trains are running through Trinidad.

Deputies Ordered To Fire.

DENVER, Col., July 3.—Marshal Israel has issued orders to deputies in Pueblo to fire if any attempts are made to attack or disarm them. The deputies there are patrolling the yards, but the passenger trains at the depot are said to be in possession of the strikers. The federal troops upon their arrival in Pueblo will disperse the mob and place all railroad property in possession of the railroad officials and United States deputy marshals, after which they will push on to Trindad.

Melon Industry Suffering.

ATLANTA, July 3.—Georgia's melon industry is suffering seriously from the tie-up of the western roads. Chicago is the best distributing point the melon growers have. Now they cannot get a carload of melons into the western market. The railroads have stopped taking them for shipment. This cuts the roads out of a large item of revenue and causes a heavy loss to the farmers who grow the crop exclusively.

Seven Thousand Employes Laid Off.

UNION STOCK YARDS, Ills., July 3.—Yesterday 7,000 more employes of the packing houses were laid off, making fully 80 per cent. of the employes now out. There is nothing for them to do and the houses have shut down indefinitely.

Only the Stars and Stripes.

ELIZABETH, N. J., July 3.—Mayor J. C. Rankin, jr., stated in his annual message to the city council last night that he had given instructions that no flag but the stars and stripes should be raised on the city buildings. Many societies of foreign born citizens had petitioned him to permit their native colors to be raised, but he replied that Elizabeth knows only one flag. He also stated that anarchists need expect no sympathy from him and that he has instructed the chief of police to suppress all gatherings of persons whose object is to violate or bring into disrepute American laws or institutions.

Mills Closed at Pittsburg

PITTSBURG, July 3.—A majority of the iron and steel mills and all of the window, flint and green glass houses in this vicinity are closed. The glass houses will remain idle for a month or more. All of the steel mills are closed owing to the disagreement on the wage scale. Only three sheet and tin plate mills are now in operation. It was learned this morning that Jones and Laughlin, of the American Iron Works, signed the steel scale late Saturday night. As soon as improvements now in progress are completed work will resume.

Desperate Italians.

CAPE MAY, N. J., July 3.—Seventy-five hungry, unpaid Italian laborers from Contractor Tennis' construction department of the South Jersey railroad, tramped down here and tried to force their way into Supervisor Rhoads' tent and compel him to pay them. They were kept back at the mouth of a revolver until the police arrived, who arrested the ringleaders and chased the others away. Mayor Hildreth has sworn in extra police. The men threaten violence if not paid at once.

Jerolomen Guilty of Murder.

NEWARK, N. J., July 3.—The coroner's jury impanelled to investigate the death of Hugh Drain, who was killed in Belleville on Wednesday by Theodore Jerolomen for stealing a few cherries, found Jerolomen guilty of murder. Jerolomen is wealthy, and his friends are trying hard to secure his release on bail. It is not probable, however, that bail will be accepted.

Will Go After Jackson.

NEW YORK, July 3.—A cablegram from Pugilist Corbett states that notwithstanding his success in England he will sail from England on July 13 for New York. Corbett says he will go after Jackson and will make him declare himself. If Jackson refuses to fight in Florida, Corbett will give Fitzsimmons the first chance.

New Haven Short of Meat.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 3.—If the Great Western railroad strike holds out, New Haven will be without fresh meat by Thursday evening. Since Friday last there has been a general rise in the price of meats, averaging about 33 per cent. This rise in price is likely to continue until the supply is exhausted.

Large Sawmill Destroyed.

CORNING, N. Y., July 3.—The large sawmill of M. D. Walker & Co. was totally destroyed by fire last evening. The fire started in the engine room. The loss is $50,000; insurance, $30,000. A quantity of lumber valued at $60,000 was saved.

STOPPED BY THE LAW

Injunction Against Striking Railroaders.

President Debs and Associates Enjoined from Interfering with the Business of Railroads in Chicago—The Order a Veritable Drag-net—Names All Roads Entering the City.

CHICAGO, July 3.—The striking railway employes within the jurisdiction of the United States court for this circuit, and which includes Illinois and the greater portions of Indiana and Wisconsin, were confronted last night by the strong arm of the law in the shape of the most sweeping injunction that has ever been issued from a federal court under similar conditions. Compared with it, according to the views expressed by corporation attorneys of long experience, the now celebrated injunctions of Judges Jenkins and Dundy were but mere verbiage.

All last night United States District-Attorney Milchrist, in accordance with instructions from Washington, was hastily engaged in preparing a bill covering the entire situation, and when completed it covered no less than 40 pages of typewritten legal cap.

Immediately upon their arrival in this city Judges Wood and Grosscup repaired to the government building and the bill was submitted for their consideration. In the meantime Edwin Walker, who on Sunday had been commissioned by Attorney General Olney as special counsel for the government, had also reached town, and was also on hand to take part in the conference. When the bill had been roughly reviewed he raised the grounds of a violation of the interstate commerce act; whereas, according to his own views of the situation, interference with trains carrying the United States mails should form a salient feature of the complaint. The judges were inclined to the same view and so the bill was returned to a lawyer for amendment. When the attorneys again returned the amended result of their labors it proved acceptable and the restraining order was promptly issued. In part it reads as follows:

E. V. Debs, George W. Howard, L. W. Rogers and the American Railway union; Silvester Keliher, Lloyd Hotchkiss, A. Pyzabok, H. Elfine, James Hannan, John Mastebrook, William Smith, Edward O'Neil Charles Nailer, John Duffy, William McMullen, E. Shelby, Fred Ketcham, John Doyle and all other persons combining and conspiring with them and all other persons whomsoever are enjoined absolutely to refrain from interfering or stopping any of the business of the railroads in Chicago engaged as common carriers of passengers and freight between states, and from interfering with mail, express or other trains, whether freight or passenger, engaged in interstate commerce, or destroying the property of any of the railroads; from entering their grounds for the purpose of stopping trains or interfering with property; from compelling or inducing by threats, persuasion or violence any of the employes of said roads to refuse or fail to perform any of their duties as employes of such road in connection with interstate commerce of such railroads, or the carrying of mails, passengers or freight, or attempting to induce by threats or intimidation any of the employes of such roads engaged in interstate business, or operation of mail trains to leave the service of such roads or preventing any persons from entering the service of such road.

The order went on at length in such wording as to prove a veritable drag net, completely covering any demonstration of violence or interference whatever with trains, on the grounds that such interference would be a hindrance of United States mails and a violation of privileges granted railroads under the interstate commerce laws. Every road entering the city and affected by the strike, to a total of 23, was specifically named and the employes thereof specifically enjoined. Referring to the scope of the order, Judge Grosscup said:

"It enjoins all strikers, their friends, sympathizers and those whom they may incite from interfering in any way in the United States court district of northern Illinois with the United States mails or with any interstate commerce traffic, either passenger or freight. Those arrested for violation of the order will be brought before the court and required to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court."

A Pittsburg Man Injured.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Huch Gribbon, a well-to-do hotel keeper of Pittsburg, was knocked down by a horse car yesterday and severely injured. He was dropped from the car in front of the forward wheels and pushed along for several feet over the rough cobbles. His head and face were severely gashed and the fingers of his right hand crushed. He was taken to Bellevue hospital, and unless he is internally injured the surgeons there think he will recover.

NEWARK, N. J., July 3.—Albert Turton, the young English artist who caused the death of his sweetheart, Lillie Clayton, by giving her a dose of oil of tansy, has been taken to the county jail to await trial for his crime. Turton begged piteously to be allowed to see his victim's body before burial, but his request was denied.

FIVE WERE KILLED

Trestle Collapsed with the Montreal Express.

Engine and Four Cars Fell 25 Feet Into a Rocky Gorge—Opinions Differ as to the Cause of the Wreck—Claimed a Sleeper Was Placed on the Track—The Killed and Injured.

BANGOR, Me., July 3.—Particulars of the wreck of the Montreal express, on a trestle over the west outlet to Moosehead lake, some 12 miles from Greenville, yesterday, state that the train was proceeding at its ordinary rate of speed when it struck the trestle. The engine, baggage, mail, second-class, and smoking cars went over the trestle into a rocky gorge, some 25 feet below. It was a wooden trestle with an iron bridge in the centre. About 40 feet of the western end of the trestle collapsed beneath the train. The sleeping car was the only one that did not go into the gorge, but that was thrown on its side in the gulleys. A scene of indescribable confusion followed. The first three cars were telescoped, the tops torn off, timbers wrenched to pieces, great 70-pound rails were twisted like twigs in the debris, and baggage and boxes were mixed up and broken. The passengers numbered 23. They were terribly frightened and few escaped without bruises of some sort. A wrecking train was sent from Brownville junction as soon as possible carrying a rescue party, including four physicians, who did noble work. The wounded were extricated from the wreck, an hospital was improvised, and wounds were attended to as well as possible under the circumstances. The dead and injured were afterward put aboard a car and taken to Greenville junction, where they were carried to Moosehead inn, which was turned into a hospital. Coroner W. H. Hanson, of Jackman, was notified. He soon arrived on the scene and started an inquest. It was found that the following had been killed:

Fred Leavitt, engineer of the train, residing in Megantic, Que., married, was crushed under the engine.

Fred Foss, Canadian Pacific station agent at Greenville junction, scalded to death; single.

Walter Starkey, male clerk, home in St. John, N. B., head crushed and mangled.

G. C. Hoyt, of Fort Fairchlin, Me., riding second class.

An unknown man, riding second class killed under the wreck.

Fireman Angus MacDonald was fatally injured. He jumped to save his life before the train went through. His death is expected at any moment, if it has not already occurred. Charles Grant, station agent at Jackman, was also probably fatally injured.

W. J. Kelly, of Megantic, had his arm broken and shoulder dislocated.

News Agent Devine, of Montreal, arm cut and contusions; will recover.

The slightly wounded include Richard Duke, of Gloucester county, N. B.; A. Balfour, of Nova Scotia; W. E. Williams of Manchester, Eng., and E. J. Maben bank, of Nova Scotia.

Of the 23 passengers all are accounted for.

Opinions as to the cause of the wreck differ. Some claim it was caused by the giving way of the western end of the trestle, while others claim that a sleeper was placed on the track, on the trestle, with the intent of wrecking the train. Certain it is that a new sleeper was found with marks of wheels on it, and many firmly believe it was the cause.

The fireman jumped from the train, which would give color to the theory of an obstruction, which he must have seen as the train was about to strike it.

The Maine railroad commissioners are at the scene of the wreck and will thoroughly investigate the matter.

Increased Its Capital Stock.

PHILADELPHIA, July 3.—At a special meeting of the stockholders of the Pittsburg, Virginia & Charleston railroad company, held in this city, an increase of $3,700,000 in the capital stock of the company was authorized. This makes the capitalization $6,000,000.

JUDGE ROSS COMMANDS.

Federal Troops Subject to His Orders at Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 3.—United States District Judge Ross has received notice from Washington that the federal troops in this district are subject to his orders, and in event of trouble with the strikers he is authorized to call them out.

At the Santa Fe yards no attempt is being made to move trains. Conductors, brakemen and other trainmen, except the engineers, are tendering their resignations in order that they may not come in conflict with Judge Ross' injunction. No trains are moving on the Southern Pacific.

The government has just filed a bill in equity asking Judge Ross to restrain the employes of the Southern California and Southern Pacific roads and all persons connected with them, especially Debs and the members of the A. R. U., from interfering or obstructing the train on these roads within the district carrying either mail, freight or passengers.

Blockade Broken.

DANVILLE, Ill., July 3.—The backbone of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois blockade of mail trains was broken here yesterday by the posting of notices signed by Lawrence Maxwell, assistant attorney-general, in which it was stated that any interference with the mail trains was a felony, punishable by fine and imprisonment in the penitentiary. No trains moved on the Eastern Illinois railroad. The Big Four ran as usual.

Meat Famine May Occur.

NEW YORK, July 3.—At the stockyards in Jersey City it is said that trouble in receiving consignments from the west have not been felt as yet. The superintendent stated, however, that if the strike lasted until after Friday of this week a meat famine might occur. The supply on hand and in transit will be sufficient for all demands until that day.

Afraid of the Strikers.

CINCINNATI, July 3.—There has been a slight change in the strike situation here. Seventy-eight non-union men employed in the Pullman shops at Ludlow, Ky., quit work, giving as their reason that they were afraid of being assaulted by the strikers.

Railroad Shops Shut Down.

MEADVILLE, Pa., July 3.—The N. Y., P. & O. railroad shops in this city have shut down. A notice posted by the master mechanic stated that the move was necessitated by the loss of revenue caused by the tie-up of the western end of the road.

Uneasy at Detroit.

DETROIT, July 3.—None of the railroad employes in this city have quit work as yet, but railroad officials are in an uneasy frame of mind, not knowing when the lightning will strike.

Will Take Strikers' Places.

BOSTON, July 3.—Twenty-eight men left this city for Chicago, via Boston and Albany railroad, where they will be assigned to places left vacant by the striking railroad employees.

Convicted of Extortion.

TRENTON, July 3.—Jesse C. Hanse the Hoboken pension agent, charged with extorting illegal fees from applicants for pensions, was tried in the United States court yesterday on two charges. He was convicted on one and acquitted on the other. Several other charges, involving procuring of false affidavits, will be tried next week. Hanse is said to have grown rich in the business. His former typewriter, a Miss Fisher, testified against him. The maximum punishment for the crime is two years.

Killed by Lightning.

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y., July 3.—Herman Ledke, of Sprout Brook, Montgomery county; John McLoughlin, of Camden, Oneida county, and William Feeter were standing in the barn of the last named yesterday when a fierce thunder storm came up. The barn was struck by lightning and Ledke was instantly killed, and McLoughlin and Feeter were rendered unconscious. The building, with its contents, was burned to the ground.

STRUGGLE OVER SUGAR

Mr. Hill Scores a Victory in the Senate.

The Repeal of the Bounty To Take Places on the Passage of the Act, Instead of On the First of January, 1895—Pettigrew's Amendment To Abrogate the Hawaiian Treaty Lost.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The tariff bill was before the senate all day yesterday for action on the amendments agreed to in committee of the whole. The great mass of them—those on which special votes were not called for—were agreed to in bulk, and then action was commenced on the amendments in which senators were most interested.

The longest and closest struggle was over the sugar schedule, and Mr. Hill (dem., N. Y.) was the only senator who scored a signal victory over the finance committee on that field of action. He offered an amendment, which was carried by a majority of three, making the repeal of the sugar bounty take place on the passage of the act, instead of on the first of January, 1895.

Various efforts were made by Senator Manderson (rep., Neb.) to have the sugar bounty continued in force until 1900 with an annual reduction of 25 per cent., or until 1905 with an annual reduction of one-tenth. He was out-voted, however, on all his propositions, and, as the paragraph now stands, the sugar bounty will stand absolutely repealed with the passage of the act.

Efforts were also made by Senator Kyle (pop., S. D.) to strike out the additional duty of one-eighth of a cent per pound on sugars above number 16 Dutch standard in color, and then to strike out the additional duty of one-tenth of a cent per pound on sugars imported from countries which pay, directly or indirectly, a bounty on the export thereof. Both these were voted down, by the close vote of 34 to 35 and 33 to 35.

An amendment was offered by Mr. Pettigrew (pop., S. D.) to abrogate the Hawaiian treaty, and after a long discussion it was defeated—yeas, 11; nays, 57.

Finally the sugar section—183 1-2—was agreed to as amended. It fixes a duty of 80 per cent. ad valorem on all sugars, with additions of one-eighth of a cent per pound on sugars above number 16 Dutch standard and of one-eighth cent a pound on sugars imported from countries that pay an export duty; and it goes into effect on the passage of the bill.

The railroad troubles in the west had their echo in the senate in the morning in the shape of two resolutions, one by Mr. Kyle (Pop. S. D.) and the other by Mr. Call (Dem. Fla.).

Mr. Call proposes a special committee of five senators to inquire and report the cause of the existing strike, and Mr. Kyle proposes a law forbidding the issue of any warrant or other process, civil or criminal, by any United States court or commissioner for alleged obstruction of trains, except the movement of the mails is interfered with. Both propositions went over till today.

Almost all the senators from western states where the railroad strikes are now on have received messages from the officials of the American Railway union urging them to support the resolution introduced by Mr. Kyle. None of the eastern senators appear to have received such messages. Many of these communications are couched in parliamentary language, although some senators have shown dispatches worded in a way that has offended and lost friendship among the recipients rather than enlisted them in behalf of the cause the strikers represent. Senator Davis of Minnesota is the only one so far who appears to have sent back any reply, and the tenor of that reply having been known in the cloak room it has received the cordial endorsement of senators on both sides of the chamber. There is absolutely no hope that the Kyle resolution will have any support in the senate.

House of Representatives.

The house was in session two hours and adjourned until Thursday. In the morning hour the resolution of Mr. McGann (dem., Ill.), directing the commissioner of labor to investigate and report upon the conditions attending the employment of women and children, their wages, sanitary surroundings and cost of living, was passed.

The bill providing for the erection of a hall of records in Washington was called up and two attempts were made to dispose of an amendment reducing the appropriation for the site from $300,000 to $175,000. A quorum failed to vote on the proposition and at 2 o'clock the measure was withdrawn and the house adjourned.

Electricity in Place of Steam.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The General Electric company announces that it has just closed an important contract with the West Side Electric railway, of Chicago, to equip its entire line with electricity on a principle similar to that employed in the Intramural railway at the Chicago exposition. This is said to be the first real adaptation in this country of the electrical system to the roads usually operated by steam locomotives.

Massachusetts' Election Laws.

BOSTON, July 3.—The two branches of the legislature could not agree upon the house bill relative to alleged violations of the state election laws. The senate concurred in all amendments except the one making the provisions of the bill apply to all offenses committed since January 1, 1893, and authorizing the attorney general to prosecute, refusing to recede from its position. The bill was consequently killed.

Cheered the Spies.

LONDON, July 3.—The Berlin correspondent of the Daily News, referring to the release of the French spies from the Glatz fortress, says that the populace of Gratz cheered and threw flowers at the spies while they were driving to the station. This show of good feeling on the part of the people is ascribed to approval of the emperor's clemency rather than to sympathy with the liberated officers.

Bullying to be Stopped.

BERLIN, July 3.—The new regulations to suppress bullying in the German army have been issued. The chief feature of the new rules is that a private is enabled to communicate directly with the captain of his company instead of through the non-com missioned officers.

Jerry Simpson Better.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—A telegram received from Berkeley Springs announces that Representative Jerry Simpson is much better. His relapse was only slight, and Mr. Simpson rallied from it quickly.

THE TARIFF BILL.

Probable Course It Will Take After It Leaves the Senate.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—A high democratic authority furnished to a United Press reporter yesterday a statement of the course which the tariff bill will take after it leaves the senate. It will come to the house, and, under the rules, lie on the speaker's table for one day. It will then be referred by the speaker to the ways and means committee. The full committee will be called together and the bill will be considered at a session lasting not more, probably, than two hours. The disagreements will then be reported to the house and a committee of conference asked. It is possible that a few hours' debate may follow this request, but under no circumstances will the senate be prolonged beyond one legislative day. The conferees of the house will then take the bill in charge and will hold hourly sessions until they shall have settled all, or nearly all, of the points in dispute. Then the republican members of the conference will be called to a meeting at which the conclusions reached by the democratic conference will be discussed, after which the conference report will be laid before the two houses. How long the bill will remain in conference is something that none of the democratic members of the ways and means committee will venture to predict. It may be ten days, two weeks or a month. Meanwhile there will be no meeting of the democratic members of the ways and means committee or of the full committee until the bill shall have been resurned to the house.

QUEER HARRIETT SACKETT.

She Was Always Cold and Died Under a Heavy Load.

SILVER CREEK, N. Y., July 3.—Harriett Sackett, an eccentric maiden lady, is dead at her home near Smith's Mills. Thirty years ago she and her sister, Julia, then young women, went to bed and refused to get up. They were cared for many years by their mother, but she died, and then a singular old man, a distant relative, waited upon them. Three or four years ago he died, and Julia arose from her bed and once more took up her household duties. Harriett became paralyzed and one side of her body withered to a skeleton. She was always cold and insisted upon being covered with everything available. Even sheepskins were placed over her head and body. Yesterday morning, while the thermometer registered 90 in the shade, she expired under a load of furs and bed clothes, which was actually a foot thick.

The sisters were not in poverty, having inherited considerable property.

A PLUCKY MUSIC TEACHER.

Attacked by Tramps She Proved To Be a Fighter.

WESTCHESTER, Pa., July 3.—Two tramps waylaid Miss Lizzie Painter, of Hopewell, on Saturday evening, and one of them received a pistol bullet in his arm. Miss Painter, who is a music teacher, was driving from the home of one of her scholars to Hopewell. In a lonely part of the road a man, evidently a tramp, jumped out from the roadside and commanded her to get out of the wagon. For an answer Miss Painter raised a revolver and shot, and with a cry of pain the man dropped his hold on the horse with a bullet in his wrist. At this moment another man ran out to catch the horse and the young woman fired at him also, but missed. The animal became frightened and rushed down the road before the second man could stop it.

Since Saturday a diligent search has been made for the tramps, but they have not yet been captured.

The Bender Will Broken.

ALBANY, July 3.—Surrogate Conway has decided that E. H. Bender, the well-known book publisher of this city, was insane at the time he made his last will. The estate is valued at a quarter of a million. The legal fight over the probate of the instrument was the greatest battle ever fought in the surrogate's court of this county. The estate will now be divided among six children. The will which was broken placed the money in trust for twenty years.

Couldn't Stop the Duel.

PARIS, July 3.—The mayor of Bezons, a town nine miles north of Versailles, while walking on Sunday in a public avenue near the Seine, saw Vicomte Breteuil and a recently naturalized Italian named Dicanona fighting a duel. The mayor shouted for them to stop, but they finished the duel before he reached them. Vicomte Bueteuil was seriously wounded in the arm. Dicanona and the seconds decamped. The principals had quarrelled during a discussion on Santo's crime.

Bumped Into the Bath.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The steamer Belle Horton, with 300 or 400 passengers aboard, gave the free bath at the end of the Battery an awful bump last night. Thirty feet of the steamer's rail were carried away. The bath was not damaged, although there was some excitement among the more than 500 female frequenters of the swimming school.

Rev. Dr. Teal's Funeral.

ELIZABETH, N. J. July 2.—The funeral services of the Rev. John W. Teal, D. D., who died suddenly at the breakfast table on Saturday morning from shock caused by the death of his two daughters, were held last evening in Westminster church. The edifice was crowded and many prominent divines participated in the obsequies.

McClave Going to Europe.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Police Commissioner McClave, whose name has recently been brought into prominence through his connection with the Lexow committee, is recovering from his recent illness at his home in Port Chester. As soon as Mr. McClave is able to leave his home he will sail for Europe.

Effects the Teachers' Convention.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 3.—It now seems that the great railway strike centering in Chicago will measurably effect the attendance of the western members at the sessions of the national music teachers' convention, which will begin here to-day at Congress hall.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The treasury gold reserve was drawn on slightly yesterday at New York for export to-day, $250,000 being engaged. The banks paid in $100,000, leaving a net loss for the day of $250,000 and making the gold reserve stand at $64,623,024.

CIRCULATION EXCEEDS THAT OF ALL OTHER PLAINFIELD DAILIES COMBINED.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., JULY 3, 1894

Off for the Summer?

CAN'T ALL GO—

Town stays here, and things keep doing.

The Daily Press

keeps you posted for 10 cts. a week.

Nothing xtra for stamps.

Plainfield people paying increased prices for provisions have their opinion of the strike, and the foolish workingmen who are thus putting up the cost of the necessities they themselves must buy will have their opinion about it too before they get through suffering the effects of their blind folly.

Being American and patriotic, The Daily Press takes a day off tomorrow to celebrate. Today it surrenders its columns to the freedom of the American eagle(may its glory never grow less!),and the proud bird gives us some mighty interesting reading. Don't let the boy miss giving you the extra sheet, even if you have got a big boom of your own on for the morrow.

The annual Frisbie frolic has begun. If you haven't the pleasure of knowing Mr. Frisbie, just get a dog, and you'll be right in the Frisbie swim. Not even the Czar of all the Russias, nor the mighty Debs, is more potent an autocrat in his field than is Mr. Frisbie in the gentle art of snatching canines. There are ways of keeping your dog from getting gathered in: muzzle and chain it is one; for others, see Frisbie. Or perhaps you already know from old acquaintance.

Mayor Gilbert is deserving of much credit for his energetic effort to have the sewerage project well advanced this season. He says he will do his utmost to have the main trunk sewers built before the cold weather sets in, and that the disposal beds will be laid out when the ordinance becomes a law. Mr. Gilbert is the kind of a mayor to have when public improvements are planned. The coming of sewers means much more for Plainfield than the citizens ordinarily realize.

The greater Plainfield is on the way. Here's Netherwood clamoring to be granted Plainfield's postal facilities, and now Mayor Gilbert makes the cheering prediction that the time is nigh when North Plainfield is to be annexed to the city. The consolidation is much to be desired by both city and borough. They are practically one community; their interests are identical; and it is hoped that the Mayor has actual legislation in view that will consummate the desired project.

Why should it cost 90 cents to go from here to New York, while by stopping off at Rahway or Elizabeth, purchasing a ticket from here to either of these stations and thence to New York,the whole trip can be made for 75 cents? This is a question we asked last week, and it is yet unanswered. Is'n't it unjust discrimination against New Brunswick?

Thus speaks the New Brunswick Home News, and Plainfield can join in a similar plaint. A continuous trip from Plainfield to New York costs 5 cents more than a ticket to Elizabeth and from Elizabeth on. The reason is that there is no competition part of the way and is the rest.

Two enterprising and generous individuals are going to do a good turn for Plainfield next Monday, in securing the visit of the five hundred or more editors of the National Association now in session in Asbury Park. The individuals are H. P. Baldwin, General Passenger Agent of the world's best commuters' railroad, and Walter Scott, inventor and maker of the world's greatest printing machines. Mr. Baldwin furnishes free the train service for the Plainfield visit, and Mr. Scott's personal invitation is responsible for their coming. The so-called Board of Trade of the town will be exceeding slow if it do not jump at this chance to show the nation what a great place Plainfield is. The matter of providing vehicles for an editorial driving parade through the city would be a small expense compared with the boom the town would get all over the land.

Since the above was written, The Press is told by Mr. Scott that the plan as originally mapped out by him included the driving of the editors through the town, and showing them its beauties and advantages. But just how to get wagons enough to transport the 500 to 800 editors and their wives about,is a puzzle,at which he is still at work. Mr. Scott has the day's programme in his own personal charge, and can be depended on to look faithfully after the city's best interests. The special train will run directly to his works, and leave from there in returning. If he can possibly arrange for such a trip through town as The Press proposed, he will consummate the thing in his usual thorough style. He agrees with The Press that it would be a great boomer for the town. Anyone wishing to co-operate with him in the scheme should lose no time but consult him at once. Liberal-minded men who have private conveyances which they are willing to put to this excellent public purpose can do a great thing for the town by making driving guests of as many of the visitors as they can accommodate. Mr. Scott is the man to see about arrangements.

The Press is asked to plead the cause of the people on far West Seventh street who want the gas mains extended to their homes. The company does not seem to regard with favor the petition of the residents, but why is not so clear. The Press knows of five householders on that thoroughfare, just beyond the present limitation, ready and willing to burn the company's gas, even though it is such a high-priced commodity, and there are doubtless others only waiting the extension of the mains to become paying patrons of the gas concern. Inasmuch as the citizens are asking not alone a favor but a chance to spend money for what the company has to sell, it would seem that the company ought to make an effort as a business investment to see how much it can get the petitioners' meters to blow in. West Seventh street has a big future, even out in the section now largely devoted to corn, and mains extended out through the populated district asked for ought to repay the gas company satisfactorily. Let there be light!

He put a little "Want and Off-r" in The Press, and Mrs. Gambling of 417 West Fifth street read the ad and returned the glasses, which she had found.

—B. T. Barnes has made up his mind that the people like ice-cream as much this year as ever, but that they have less money to spend. He has therefore put the price down to 30 cents a quart, and as his cream has a great reputation for unvarying purity and excellence his sales ought to be largely increased in consequence of his liberal reduction. B. T. Barnes can be found at 219 Park avenue, every day in the year except Sunday, and his cream is always as refreshing as a polar breeze.

—The Free Public Library will be open at the usual hours on the Fourth, though it being a legal holiday there will be no circulation of books. There will be no prayer meeting Wednesday evening in Bethel Chapel, but there will be preaching service Thursday evening, preparatory to the Communion of Sunday.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis of Plainfield preached an anniversary sermon in the Westfield Presbyterian Church Sunday. His discourse was eloquent, touching powerfully on the evils that threaten our national existence. Dr. Lewis is popular in Westfield; and when it is known that he is to preach his audience is a large one.

A carriage painting shop has been opened on South Second street near Grant avenue.

Mrs. Smalley of Lafayette place visited friends in Dunellen yesterday.

Little Doing in the Schools.

The School Board last night paid its bills, discussed without final action plans to ventilate Washington School, decided to suspend tuition pupils delinquent in payments, ordered a book closet built and walls repaired in the High School, and arranged for a new flag for the Stillman building. The amount of tuition fees last year was $2,500, better than ever before. An extra class room is to be fitted up in the Irving building, and Lake Hopatcong sand spread on the Irving playground.

SCHNEIDERWINN WILL APPEAL.

He Is Found Guilty on the Gambling Charge, and Sentenced.

In the City Court by jury trial yesterday afternoon Peter Schneiderwinn was found guilty of keeping a gambling house. The jurors were Clifford Brady, Jacob Long, Fred J. Pope, J. Harvey Doane, Harry VanEmburgh, J. Fred MacDonald, Geo. Eddy, Olaf Sangstad, Harry Cramer, Charles Knight, Charles Gisentzer, John L. Blackford.

Counselor Charles A. Reed represented the city and Attorney Winfield S. Angleman the defendant.

After testimony had been given by Policemen Cooney, Mattox, Frederickson, Vanderweg and Robinson and by the defendant and P. J. McAndrews, both sides summed up, Mr. Angleman claiming that the evidence was very weak, and that Peter and his friends had only played forty-five for fun, and Mr. Reed explaining that the words and sounds heard by the four policemen who listened from a ladder indicated that nothing but a poker game could have been in progress during the time mentioned.

The jury remained out about an hour and returned with a verdict of guilty with a recommendation to mercy. Mr. Angleman moved to set aside the verdict on the ground that he had just learned one of the jurors, Jacob Long, lived in Somerset County. It was contended that the attorney should have challenged the boroughite.

The judge then sentenced Schneiderwind to pay a fine of $10 or go to jail for 20 days. John Rafferty furnished a $225 bond of appeal and Peter will take the case to Elizabeth. He thinks it strange that the police should not have summoned as witnesses the other two players who were with him and McAndrews.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

Popular Holiday for the Little Ones.

"Forepaugh" day is come to be regarded all over the United States and Canada as children's day. This is the highest compliment that could be paid the Adam Forepaugh Shows. To afford so much and such innocent pleasure to little children is better than being a king. The children delight in doing honor to Forepaugh and in that respect we are all more or less children. The great shows will be here July 6. Who is there who will not want to renew his childhood days by seeing these, the greatest of circus shows? Not many it is fancied, and the writer is most certainly not one of them. There seemed to be nothing left to be desired when the great shows were here last, but this year they are better than ever. The management give their word for that, and it must be so, for the public has come to know that whatever the old Adam Forepaugh Shows have said for the past thirty years has always been so.

ROADWAYS AND SIDEWALKS.

Well Paved and Neatly Kept Streets Speak For Themselves.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the importance of having and maintaining well paved and neatly kept streets and sidewalks. The air of respectability and prosperity impresses the stranger within the gates and assures him that here is a town that is very much alive and even with the times, and this impression is never wrong. Parsimony in this respect is the antithesis of economy, and sooner or later the truth of this statement will be demonstrated. No community can afford to bear an aspect of dilapidation and neglect that is foreign to the real state of affairs, and in fact very few do. We may take it as settled, then—contrary to the words of the song—that things are nearly always what they seem, especially when applied to the outward evidence of inward wholesomeness presented by smooth and well kept roadways and ample sidewalks of brick, flagging or asphalt.

Macadam or telford pavement properly and scientifically constructed forms a handsome and durable roadway for town or country. For streets where a great deal of heavy hauling is done perhaps the square stone blocks, known as belgian blocks, may be necessary, but the latter is only required where the traffic is continuous and exceptionally heavy. For all ordinary purposes the broken stone pavement is sufficient and easily kept in repair.

The method of construction of macadam roads is already well known, but a few remarks on the subject may not be out of place. The foundation should be excavated to the proper subgrade and rolled with heavy roller until well compacted and shaped as the finished road will appear and about 10 inches below the finished grade. Upon this prepared foundation trap rock crushed to pass through a 2½ inch ring is laid to the depth of about eight inches, well watered and thoroughly rolled. A layer of two inches of smaller stone (1 to 1½ inches) is then applied and watered and rolled as before. A binder dressing of trap rock screenings, gravel and loam finishes the surface. The whole should be well watered and rolled until thoroughly compacted.

In building telford roadways excavations are made as for macadam, but instead of small broken stone a foundation is formed of large stones laid by hand. They should not average more than four inches in diameter and be of pyramidal shape. They are laid base down and carefully wedged, after which a top layer of broken stone is spread, watered and rolled and the surface finished as is macadam.

Either of these pavements is comparatively cheap and durable, and with reasonable care will last indefinitely.

HEALTHFULNESS OF TREES.

The Value of Plant Life In Towns Greatly Underestimated.

The city of Washington has a commission which takes full charge of the streets of the city as regards the matter of tree planting and caring. As a result the planting of shade trees in its streets is carried out in harmony with one general plan, and, in addition, the trees are planted by men who understand their business, and failures are few and far between. Further, in certain difficult localities trees are selected by men of experience that are particularly adapted to the trying conditions under which they must exist. In a word, there is a general plan of planting which is carried out for the benefit of the general public regardless of the little likes and dislikes of individual property owners.

The trees are in the absolute control of this commission, and therefore they are intelligently cared for, and individual property owners are not allowed to have trees mutilated by any alleged jobbing gardener that they may happen to employ on their grounds. As a result the city of Washington is noted the world over for its street trees, and in enumerating the charms of Washington its street trees are invariably mentioned as one of its most beautiful features.

Further than this, the universal planting of trees in a city or town contributes to its healthfulness in a much greater degree than is generally recognized. Any botanical textbook will tell you that plants take up carbonic acid gas and give off oxygen. This, as every one knows, is exactly the reverse of animal life. The absence of trees from large cities and the heavy contributions of carbonic acid gas to the atmosphere from the combustion of fuel are what make the cities less healthy than the country, and we can do nothing better to render the atmosphere of cities purer than to plant trees freely in their streets, but to carry out a uniform plan of street tree planting in any city it is necessary that the work be under the direction of a thoroughly competent commission, and we therefore suggest the adoption of the Washington plan as a means that will contribute more to beauty and healthfulness at less expense than any other plan that can possibly be advanced.

SANITARY PRECAUTIONS.

Masonry Rendered Damp Proof by a Treatment of Coal Tar.

Experiments having been made in the use of coal tar as an ingredient in the surface of walls and other parts of buildings exposed to the action of water, such favorable results were obtained that new methods are likely to supersede those heretofore employed. Especially is this the case in masonry laid below water. Even when the walls are made of very porous material they are practically water tight. It is recommended that all stone or brick buildings be finished in this way, as it not only makes them damp proof, but adds greatly to their durability and preserves their contents in a much better fashion than structures built after the ordinary plans. It would be an easy and by no means expensive undertaking to finish all house cellars in this way. Much of the ill health in families may be traced to damp cellars, in which mold germs propagate and flourish until they almost cover every article contained therein.

To provide a perfectly damp proof house wall and cellar bottom would be among the most important of sanitary precautions. The average cellar is not a safe resort for any delicate person. Indeed during the necessary household operations in this part of the dwelling many a woman has contracted a cold that has caused her death. The coal tar may be applied either in a boiling state or after it has flamed up. An eminent authority states that when three coats of boiling coal tar have been put upon the masonry the result is a black and very brilliant varnish, which perfectly resists the action of water, sun and frost, being absolutely impervious. The heat absorbing tendency may be counteracted by dusting the surface with some white powder or brick pulverized to proper fineness. This is to be applied before the coal tar has had time to harden. Any desired tint may be obtained in this way.—New York Ledger.

WOMAN'S TRIALS.

SOME LIGHT ON THE SUBJECT.

So Many Suffer Without Knowing Why. Much Can Be Avoided.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

So many feel the very life crushed out of them, wake up cheerful and happy, determined to do so much before the day ends, and yet:

Before the morning is very old, the fearful backache or bearing-down feeling attacks them, the bravespiritsinks back in affright; no matter how hard they struggle, the "clutch" is upon them, and they sink into a chair, crying, "Oh! why should I suffer so?

What can I do?"

The answer is ready, your cry has been heard, and a woman is able to restore you to health and happiness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will stop your torture and restore your courage. All your pains come from a deranged uterus or womb.

It is the greatest of all rewards to receive such letters as the following from Miss Louise Müller, who lives at 44 Michigan Ave., in Evanston, Ill. She says:

"As I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and have thereby become entirely well,

I am recommending all my lady friends to use it. I am sure it will help them in all cases of womb trouble, leucorrhœa, irregular or painful "monthly periods." I am sure it is our best friend. I am so thankful to Mrs. Pinkham for the good she has done me, that I wish every [illegible] in America would write to

HOME TESTIMONY.

Mr. Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly. They were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 144 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOS. CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep,sit down,lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J, and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering,and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

UP IN A BALLOON.

BY M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

IT was not only the glorious Fourth of July, but our town had a circus and a balloon ascension as well. The three events had been advertised and talked about until everybody for 20 miles around made arrangements to come in and enjoy the day.

I was a lad of 15 then, serving my first year's apprenticeship in a printing office, and of course everybody connected with The Weekly Journal had a holiday and a deadhead ticket to the circus. The balloon ascensions were not a regular feature of the circus, but had been tacked on "for this day only" to help draw the crowds. How the circus people got hold of the aeronaut I do not know, but it was afterward learned that he knew little or nothing of the business and was sadly lacking in nerve as well. He called himself Professor James, and he arrived in town with his balloon several days before the circus. The Journal published a notice written by him to the effect that he would be glad of company on his trip among the clouds, but that the weight of the volunteer must not be over 125 pounds. It was a very curious thing that almost every man in all that county expressed a strong desire to make the ascension, but was barred by the weight. Each and every one of them tipped the beam at about 10 pounds too much. Our local editor had never been able to pull down more than 120 pounds in his life, but on this occasion his weight suddenly increased to 132. But for this unfortunate circumstance he would have taken his seat in the car and given the 472 weekly readers of the leading newspaper in Fairfield county a three column article on the sensations of a trip through space. Some people suggested that the editor himself, who was a lightweight and full of enterprise, should take advantage of the occasion to distinguish himself, but unfortunately his weight increased 10 pounds while they were talking about it. The pressman had no ambition to soar, and the foreman of the office said he would be so busy looking at the animals in the menagerie that he would have no time to spare for the balloon.

In this emergency I determined to go myself. I didn't declare my intentions around the office, as I didn't care to receive the grateful thanks of the staff, and I kept very quiet at home, because father had a notion that a boy 15 years old ought to stay down on the ground with both feet. I had a quiet talk with the professor and settled things. I was to take my seat in the basket at the last moment, and his only caution to me was not to get frightened and to obey any orders he gave me. Dodgers were printed and handed around to announce that a person had volunteered, and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, after the circus performance, the crowd which assembled to witness the ascension was said to number 15,000. While I hung about the spot ready for the critical moment no one had the least suspicion of my intentions. The editor and the local editor came around and denounced their inability to get down to weight, and 10 minutes before the start my father came along and stopped to say:

"Boy, you keep clear of the ropes when he makes his start and don't get yourself carried off."

When all was ready, the professor gave me the wink. It was a wink which astonished thousands of people. I was in the basket, and the men let go of the ropes before any one could stop me, and as the crowd looked up and cheered we seemed to jump half a mile high. It was not a hot air balloon, to make a trip of three or four miles, but it had been filled with natural gas and was expected to make a voyage of perhaps a hundred. The town, as I may tell you, was Lancaster, O., and there was a south wind blowing as we rose. As to the sensation, there was none. It was like sitting on a bench in a public park. The balloon was moving, but we couldn't realize that it was unless looking over the side of the car.

The breeze below was a gentle one, but a thousand feet above the earth it blew at the rate of 15 miles an hour. We traveled steadily to the north for two hours with scarcely a motion to the car, but then we met a current of air from the east which spun us round and round like a top for five minutes and then sent us to the northwest. In that spinning around the balloon received an injury, and the professor seemed to lose his nerve all at once. What the injury was I could not make out, and he did not tell me. It seemed to me that we dropped several hundred feet like a stone, and I expect we should have brought up in a Delaware county cornfield if the professor had not heaved over several sand bags. We jumped again till in the twilight I could no longer distinguish the earth, but the balloon did not sail along as steadily as before. Its motion was like that of a ship sailing over a stormy sea. Seeing that the professor was frightened frightened me, but yet I am sure I was the cooler of the two. He tugged away at valve ropes which would not give, peered over the car and up at the swelling silk, and as we began to sink again he knelt down in the car and cried out:

"May heaven have mercy on us, but we are lost!"

We went down, down, down till we seemed to scrape the housetops of the town of Marion, and then we took a shoot like the flight of a bullet. As we did so I grasped at a rope dangling around my head and pulled, and I distinctly felt a movement at the upper end. When we met that eastern current, the escape valve was in some manner opened and jammed open. That was what rattled the professor. In pulling on the rope I had closed it. I still had the rope in my hands when I looked around and found the professor missing. As it afterward appeared, the balloon had dipped down till it brushed the tops of the trees in an orchard, and in his fright he had leaped out and left me to my fate.

A HASTY ENTRANCE.

I wasn't so frightened as you may imagine, because the balloon sailed very steadily, and I didn't understand the situation. Relieved of his weight and my shutting off the escaping gas at the same moment shot the balloon to an immense height—so high that I was soon shivering with the cold. Ignorant as I was, I did not make matters worse by handling any of the ropes. Had I been posted I could have opened the valve and caused the balloon to descend to earth, though I might have been dashed to pieces in the landing. Realizing that I could do nothing in the matter, I lay down in the bottom of the car, pulled a blanket over me and was soon sound asleep. There was a lighted lantern underneath the car, and people traced the balloon by that during the night. It continued on a northwest course to within 50 miles of Toledo, and the direction was then changed to due east, and it made straight for the town of Clinton on the shore of Lake Erie. I awoke just at sunrise, and the balloon was then driving along at a distance of about 500 feet above the earth. The silk had become weighted with the dampness and caused a gradual descent. But very few people were to be seen as I slowly approached the town, but my shouts soon routed out 100. It seemed as if 50 different men called to me to jump, but a man who stood at his back door in his shirt sleeves gave me the right sort of a pointer. He called to me to throw out the anchor, and for the first time I suspected the use of the coil of stout rope with a curious piece of iron attached to one end. The balloon was not traveling faster than five miles an hour and was gradually descending when I threw the coil of rope over. Down I went till the anchor raked along the roofs of the houses. Once it caught in the telegraph wires, but broke away, and as I floated across the commons the iron bumped a cow and turned her around. In my fright, for the car was now being dashed about, I threw over two bags of ballast and the roll of blankets. Up shot the balloon to a height of half a mile and began to drive out over the lake. The sun now began to dry the silk, and I kept rising until I could no longer distinguish the earth.

It must have been a full hour before I caught sight of the lake again. I hadn't meddled with the ropes at all, but there had been an escape of gas, and the balloon was slowly settling down. By and by the car was within a few hundred feet of the water, but I lightened it of the professor's overcoat, such food as was left and the last bag of sand, and again I sailed among the clouds. Not for long, though. In the course of 15 minutes the balloon began to drop. I cut away the anchor, but that only delayed the fall a few minutes. I took notice of two steamers, a tug and two or three sailing vessels as I came down, but when I found the car only a hundred feet above the water I shut my eyes and got a grasp with both hands and held on for the crash. I expected to strike the water, and as a matter of fact the car did descend within five feet of the surface. A puff of wind then lifted it a few feet and drove it along in a horizontal direction until there came a sudden crash, and I heard half a dozen men shouting. Balloon and basket had driven against the sails and rigging of a schooner under sail, and while I was bumping about some of the sailors came up and made things fast and assisted me to descend. After a bit my aerial vehicle was hauled down and secured, and then a funny thing took place. The captain was a hard headed old chap, with a good deal of quarter deck dignity, and he squared off at me with:

"Young man, what do you call that thing?"

"A balloon, sir."

"And what were you doing up in the air?"

"Making an ascension, sir."

"What was the object?"

"Why, just to go up in a balloon."

"Young man, you are a fool! Who gave you leave to board my schooner?"

"No one."

"I'd have you know, sir, that I'm captain of this craft, and that I'm not to be boarded in this fashion without resenting it! You ought to have your jacket tanned for your impudence, and I'm the man to tan it!"

And he might have done it but for the interference of the mate, who suggested that it was a case which I could not help myself. However, I had to beg the captain's forgiveness and promise never to be caught in such a scrape again before he would give me a bite to eat. The craft was bound for Sandusky, and thither I was carried, but the man could not quite forgive me. As I stepped ashore he said:

"Boy, when you want to play the fool again, go out and jump into the well or try to fly off the roof of the barn. I'm sorry I didn't give you a good licking before we got in!"

That was hard to bear, but worse was coming. When I got home, father called me a dolt and a doughhead and added that he'd like to wear out three or four gads on me, and the local editor of The Journal received me with:

"Well, smarty, you think you've done it, I suppose! I was just getting into the car when you pushed me away, and if I don't get you bounced in less than a week I'll walk out myself."

However, I'd been up in a balloon and come down again all right, and as no other "printer's devil" had done the same I found something to console me in the knowledge of the fact.

NOW SCREAM, DEAR BIRD, AND LET US HAVE A GOOD OLD FASHIONED CELEBRATION.

THE GREAT FOURTH.

BY R. K. MUNKITTRICK.

There was once a time when the Fourth of July was, strictly speaking, an American holiday which was celebrated from one minute after 12 on the morning of the Fourth until after midnight. Many an enthusiastic boy would go to bed at 6 o'clock p. m. in order that he might arise long before the lark, the shanghai and the milkman to set the ever glorious day in motion.

Although this day of days in our history is still as American as it was a century ago, it is in a certain sense quite as dear to the Italian, the Frenchman and the Chinaman, who celebrate it almost as enthusiastically as does the old time American. As soon as one of these foreigners settles on our shores he comes to the conclusion that this is the elysium of liberty, and when this conviction is firmly settled in his mind he becomes a citizen and buys a pack of firecrackers.

In the case of the Chinaman the firecracker is particularly dear—in fact, between the Chinaman and the firecracker there is a sentimental relationship existing which is as tender and beautiful as that which exists between the oyster and the butter cracker. And this is all because the firecracker is of Chinese origin and must ever be dear to the heart of the Chinaman, who when he hears the, to him, melodious bang or sizzle is carried back in spirit to the Flowery Kingdom, where he hears the melodious interlude of the rice hunting throbbing gently against a background of fricasseed poodle.

A calm student of the principles of consistency would argue that the firecracker, instead of being a solid red, should be red, white and blue, if only to be in harmony with the stars of fire which fly from its wick. But if it hasn't all the colors of the flag we may find a patriotic relief and consolation in the fact that these colors may be found in the fireworks which so gayly embroider the ebon tablecloth of night so to make even the fire insurance man forget himself in the wild delirium of joy that bursts from his heart like a geyser.

And these fireworks are very dear to the small boy, although they make no noise. He watches them with speechless rapture, and they make for him an Arabian, or rather an American, night. In the pinwheels he sees bicycles and in the roman candles baseballs, and the astronomer sees shooting stars falling in gayest showers, the patriot is rejoiced to see Washington on his horse, and the man whose ruling passion is for the chaste and gentle art of angling is so delighted when he observes fishes darting from the pinwheels as from a whirlpool that he imagines he is sitting on the banks of the glassy Delaware pulling black bass out of the reflected sky.

The boy who would never think of hiding his light beneath a bushel thinks nothing of setting off a pack of firecrackers under a barrel. Of course this is a wild extravagance, but the small boy feels that he can be extravagant in thus firing off the fruits of the money which he has been carefully saving for many weary moons. And he is quite right, for what appears to be rank prodigality on his part is only a fair illustration of the patriotic sentiments that surcharge his tempestuous being. He feels that he is a part of the Fourth, and his spirit never goes out like the punk.

But the poor boy who cannot have a brass cannon, or a pistol, or a firecracker is really the only object that has a tendency to make the day pathetic. Yet with a lively imagination he can have lots of fun, because he can enjoy the bang of the firecracker of the roof of the next man's son and see the fireworks that cost thousands, which really makes the Fourth to him like a circus to which he has a free ticket. And to him, as long as the Xmas is merry, and the New Year happy, will the Fourth of July be as glorious as a sunshiny Saturday upon which there are two baseball matches and he has a sweet and airy seat upon the top of a nearby telegraph pole.

Red, White and Blue.

ULL oft the red of vengeance blazed
Upon thy parent tree,
And then the sky's own blue was raised,
The bondsman's hope to be.
Anon the white of justice came
To lead the desperate van
And claim again in Freedom's name
The priceless gift to man.

"YANKEE DOODLE."

How the Song Originated and the Bravery of the Macaronis.

FROM the time a Yankee boy dons his first pair of trousers and can shove his hands into the pockets he begins to whistle "Yankee Doodle." He whistles it when he goes to school, and later in his college days the old tune is called upon as an outlet for the exuberance which naturally follows some college victory. The merry strains may be used to express his feelings when he has been accepted by his best girl, and again he teaches it to his boys as his father taught it to him.

Yet it is no exaggeration to say that not one out of a hundred Yankee boys can tell where the song originated, and should he even apply to his father for information on the subject it is safe to say that he would be dismissed with the evasive and general statement that it was written during the Revolution. In the general sense the statement would be correct, but again the average Yankee boy is not satisfied with only a general idea. So let the boy read this and learn whence came the song which is regarded as the national anthem of Yankeeland all over the world.

Just before the battle of Long Island General George Washington applied to the continental congress for more troops, and among those sent him was Colonel Smallwood's brigade of Maryland infantry. They were only 200 strong, but what they lacked in numbers they made up in courage. Added to their reputation for bravery, they were conspicuous by reason of their particularly bright uniforms, which were copied after those of a regiment of the private guard of the king of Italy. Red, gold, green and blue were so intermingled that the other soldiers in plainer dress dubbed them the "Macaronis." Then a wag of the Long Island camp took the music of a German drinking song and wrote the doggerel:

Yankee Doodle came to town riding on a pony.
He stuck a feather in his cap and called him Macaroni.

The Macaroni referred to must have been one of Colonel Smallwood's brigade, which later took part in the campaign which ended in the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, Va., and fought with such daring bravery that, when the articles of peace were signed between this country and England and they returned to their homes in and around Baltimore, only 15 Macaronis remained out of the brigade of 200.

And while very few if any histories of the United States record the brave deed of the Macaronis they will forever be immortalized in the song which was written as a jest at their expense, and which is now whistled and sung from Maine to California and from Hong-Kong to London.

H. B. DELAIGNE.

No Sectionalism In the Fourth.

More as I grow older, says Bishop Haygood, and understand the relation a great history bears to the character and progress of a great nation do I value a fit commemoration of the mighty movement that began to take shape July 4, 1776. God has given to us a wonderful, hundred years, and we have just begun our work for mankind. Ours is a very new country, and we are a young nation. Our best history, if we be true to our traditions and to God, is before us.

Whatever, in the commemoration of July 4, 1776, helps us to love our whole country and to trust and obey the God who has made us all we are, that is good. If anything could be brought into such commemoration that tends to mere vanity or sectional littleness, that is bad.

The south, the war between the states getting further from us, begins to rally once more to the great national day. That the south honors men like Lee does not impeach her sincere acceptance of the issues of the war or her absolute devotion to the Union. Union loving northern men should despise a people who failed to honor men who died for them.

The Rights of Man.

American independence! The theme never grows old. Each generation, as it comes forward to assume the responsibilities of citizenship, shall turn to that period when our country was small and feeble, but her sons sturdy and heroic, and shall heed with what resolve the signers of the Declaration stood for the rights of man the world over.

SAVED HER BROTHER

HOW A CHILD'S DISOBEDIENCE DID GOOD FOR ONCE.

A True Story of Revolutionary Days—A Feud Between Friends—A Treacherous Plot Overheard by a Little Girl—A Bit of New History.

"I tell you I am going, Uncle Moss, so there, now!" The speaker, a girl of about 10, proceeded to put her threat into execution, while an aged darky stood, hat in hand, looking after her. His countenance expressed a mixture of disapprobation and amusement. Meanwhile Miss Margaret, or Peggy, as she was generally called, wended her way along so blithely and merrily that one would never have supposed she was doing what she had been expressly forbidden to do. And here we may as well give the circumstances which led to the above emphatic remark.

Margaret Northcote belonged to an intensely patriotic family living on the outskirts of Elizabethtown, N. J., and she was going, as she so emphatically announced, to see a friend of about her own age who lived in the town half a mile away. The father of this girl was a gentleman named Bent. This Mr. Bent had formerly been an intimate friend of Margaret's father, but after the breaking out of the war they took different sides in the struggle—for Bent was a zealous Tory—and this had created a difference between them which, increasing with time, had finally made them bitter enemies. The children, however, still remained good friends, very justly thinking that their fathers' opinions ought not to influence them. But at last Peggy's parents interfered and forbade her going to visit any longer at the Bents', declaring that they didn't want their daughter to get any "British notions." Mr. Northcote, however, was away on business most of the time, and as this afternoon her mother was too busy to pay much attention to her she had decided to brave her parents' displeasure and see her friend. Uncle Moss tried to stop her, but did not succeed, and as she marched on with so much confidence he chuckled: "Hi! She's her mudder's own gal fur shuah!"

On reaching the Bents' she found that Dorothy was the only one of the family in. The two friends, therefore, enjoyed each other's society to the full without any disapproving fathers or mothers to frown upon them. The afternoon rapidly wore away, and when Peggy looked to see the time it was 6 o'clock. "I wonder," remarked she, "that Uncle Moss hasn't been sent for me long before this. I supposed I might have an hour or two with you, but I've been here all the afternoon, and I don't believe mother knows it yet, she's so busy."

"Do stay to tea," said Dorothy. "Everybody's away, and we could have a lovely time."

"Well, I believe I will," replied Peggy. "I don't know when I can come again." The statement that they would have a lovely time was fully verified. In fact, they had a rather uproarious one, and it was to the decided relief of the servants that Peggy rose to leave. "It's dusk now," exclaimed she, "and I must go." And amid mutual protestations of friendship she stepped out into the open air.

Ordinarily it would not have been dark for an hour yet, but tonight a shower was coming up. Peggy was hurrying to get home before it should strike her when, on the outskirts of the town, she saw two men talking. As she approached they stopped, and both, leaning over the wall, seemed engrossed in the beauties of the sunset, which, by the way, were not plainly visible on account of a dark bank of clouds which nearly excluded the last rays of the sun. There seems very little in all this to excite curiosity, but then it is proverbial that a very small thing will achieve this result with the fair sex. Peggy looked back. At the same moment a ray of light broke through the clouds and lit up the faces of both men. One of them she recognized. It was George Bent. Once or twice she had seen Dorothy's brother, though he was away most of the time.

At this instant she came to a sharp curve in the road, which hid them from view. The moment she turned the corner an irresistible desire took possession of her to know what those men were saying. "Why did they stop talking when I passed, and why did they both turn away so I couldn't see them?" thought Peggy. As soon as she had turned this corner she hesitated for only a moment and then quickly climbed the stone wall by the road side. On the other side of the wall was an old apple orchard. Along the fence especially there was a continuous line of trees, which by their foliage in spring nearly shut out the view from the road and by their fruit in autumn entirely corrupted the morals of all neighboring small boys. Under cover of these Peggy slowly retraced her steps on the other side of the wall and at last reached one about 15 feet away from the two men. Should she try to pass from this tree to the next under which they were standing? She stopped and listened. They were still talking, but in so low a tone that she could not understand what they said. Keeping close to the wall, she stealthily crawled along until nearly opposite the objects of her curiosity. Then she composed herself to listen.

The first words that greeted her ears were these, from Bent, as she thought: "It was the merest chance that I happened to see him, for I'm away most of the time. But I knew him right away and where he must have come from. Did you notice the child that passed here a minute ago? Well, that's his sister." Peggy could hardly believe her ears. Could they mean her? But her brother was in the southern army, as she had often heard. How could any one have seen him? "What's he stopping there for," returned the other, "if his dispatches are so important?" "It's not much out of his way," replied Bent. "And then, too, he was sure of getting a good horse there."

"Not so very sure either," was the answer. "Old Northcote happens to be out of town with it, luckily." "When will he be back?" "Probably early tomorrow morning." "Do you think he'll wait?" "No, I think he won't." "Wouldn't it be better to make the attempt tonight then?" "No, for he'll sell his life dearly." "Well, and isn't it worth it," returned the other, with an oath, "especially with those papers of his?" "And then," went on Bent, "I've got sure notice the British will be here tomorrow, and then we could hand him over to them. He's safe in the meantime, as the house is watched. Of course, if he tries to get away, we can't wait till tomorrow, but he doesn't know he's watched and won't try to hide what he does." Poor Peggy thought all this while that she must be having a dream and a very unpleasant one. Were her neighbors really such wicked people? Her father and mother were right. She would never go into their house again.

It had now grown very dark, and that half mile, of which she had always thought so little, seemed now an interminable distance. When at last she reached the house, she dropped into a chair utterly exhausted. Mrs. Northcote had risen, alarmed, to meet her, but seeing that she was only tired and out of breath waited until she had recovered a little and then gravely asked: "Peggy, where have you been? I sent Uncle Moss for you an hour ago, and he isn't back yet."

"To the Bents', mother, and as I was coming home"—

"But Peggy," said her mother, "I thought I had forbidden you to go there!"

Poor Peggy! Subsequent events had completely driven this fact from her mind. "But, mother," exclaimed she, and her voice trembled, "I must tell you what happened as I came home." Then brokenly and incoherently she told the whole story and ended by crying, "John is in the southern army, isn't he, mother, and what does it all mean?" Mrs. Northcote turned pale, but merely told Peggy to take off her wet clothes and go straight to bed. There, excited as she was, she was so tired she soon fell asleep.

Peggy had hardly mounted the stairs when Mrs. Northcote entered a small chamber adjoining the sitting room and woke a sleeper stretched at full length on the bed. They held a hurried conversation together in the dark, and then without a light both descended to the cellar, the sleeper stopping only to get his hat and coat. "I suppose I'll have to go with the other horse, poor as it is, since father isn't home," said he. "Yes," was the hurried reply. "You mustn't lose a minute." In that side of the cellar farthest from the road was a small window. Through this the man proceeded to climb with no regard to dignity or anything but haste and secrecy. "You have the key?" whispered she. "Yes," returned he. And stooping to kiss her, a difficult performance, which nearly caused his precipitation from the narrow window, he flopped—I would prefer to say dashed, but a historian must sacrifice everything to truth—out into the rain, which was coming down in torrents, and by as guarded a way as possible directed his steps toward the barn. Mrs. Northcote stood looking out for several moments and then slowly groped her way up stairs and dropped into a chair. For awhile she sat with every nerve at the highest tension, expecting each second to hear the report of a musket, but as minute after minute passed and nothing happened she grew gradually calmer and finally retired to rest, having first relieved Uncle Moses, who came in much excited, by telling him of Peggy's return.

The next day the British made Elizabethtown a call. If you consult a history of this war, you will find that in the year 1780, on June 6, an incursion was made into the Jerseys; that in the course of it the British entered Elizabethtown; that they pillaged and burned several houses there, and that, all things considered, the expedition reflected no glory upon the British arms.

Mr. Northcote, being detained out of town, returned in the afternoon to find his house in ashes, but after he had been informed of the safety of his wife and child, and still more after a long talk with the former, he did not seem to feel his loss at all keenly. His cheerfulness was still further increased in a few days by the news of his son's safety in Washington's camp at Morristown. Before this time he had always tried to discourage his wife, for women were curious then as they are now, and probably ever will be, from prying into the affairs of her neighbors. But ever after, strange to say, his ideas seemed to change completely, and he was often heard to remark that he knew of a great many vices worse than curiosity. And, in truth, if we "give the devil his due," why should we not render full justice to disobedience and curiosity whenever there is an opportunity, so much the more that the number of them is few?

A HAPPY CHOICE.

Great Declaration, I am glad
Our fathers kept you in their trunk
Until July. 'Twould have been sad
Had April showers wet our punk:

Had Maytime blossoms on the trees,
Or roses sweet that June reveals,
Been burned by matches and fuses
Or scorched by fiery spinning wheels;

Had August's heat, September's cool,
October's crisp, November's joys
Or drear December's time of yule
Been ruined or enhanced by noise;

Had January's blizzard blast
Or February's slush and thaw
A gloom on independence cast;
Had winds in March, so piercing raw,

E'er had the chance to wreak their woe,
And eggs of discontent thus hatch,
By bringing up their fearsome blow,
Extinguishing both torch and match.

Right well ye chose, ye signers great,
From east and west, from south and north,
Had ye preferred some other date
We'd ne'er have had our July Fourth.

NEAR TIMBER LINE.

A FOURTH OF JULY STORY.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

"Whar did that crittur go?"

The words broke the absolute silence of the forest. Around and above as far as the eye could reach stretched the awful majesty of the San Juan range. Towering peaks, sublime domes, yawning chasms, narrow defiles and pines—pines everywhere, through the branches of which stole the soft, murmuring breezes of a drowsy, delicious July afternoon. The scene was one to profoundly move the onlooker. Every move of man might find here an answering echo, for in the heart of the Rocky mountains all emotions, joys, sorrow, anger, awe, hope and peace murmur from the valleys, thunder from the canyons and speak from the heights.

"BENJAMIN!"

Today—this sunny, glorious July day—sorrow and anger only found voices for poor Ben Tribble. He was alone, away up near the timber line, sitting near the mouth of his tunnel, wondering what had become of his dog, the only friend he had left in the world.

Ben was one of the unlucky ones of earth. Since 1879 he had been toiling alone up there in the mountains, hunting a fortune. When he came west from Iowa, with only his dog Jonah and the old rifle Betsy he had carried through the war for company, he had staked out his claim in the San Juan, built his little cabin on the mountain side and gone cheerfully to work, with his pick and hand drill, confidently expecting to strike a lead soon, sell out and go back to his wife and boy with a bag full of gold dust. The letters he got weekly helped him amazingly. They were his incentive, his stimulant. Jonah was faithful, and Betsy was useful. Occasionally Ben would leave the tunnel and the cabin and go down the mountain to Pay Dirt camp, where he soon became popular among the many good fellows. And so at first, while he was strong, ambitious and hopeful, everything went very well.

Afterward?

The years went by, and Ben did not find his silver mine. Not that he was not diligent. Never a man in the San Juan worked harder than Tribble. He staked two other claims besides the original one, and in turns worked all. His stalwart figure began to stoop; the furrows deepened on his forehead; silver besprinkled his long, tangled, red beard, but still fortune was shy. The long summers drifted by his door, and the winter snows hid his tunnels. Every fall he said, "By spring, I reckon," and every spring he said, "I calc'late by fall I kin go hum," but he never went.

His wife wrote regularly the news of her simple village life. His boy was grown up and earning a fair living—his boy, whom he remembered as a little sunny haired youngster stamping about in his first pair of boots. Tribble would sit alone night after night picturing the two he had left behind, wondering about them, dreaming of them, longing for them. Sometimes he started up in a frenzy, crying out that he would go—that day, that hour—back to them. What matter if he had no money? He could tramp over the mountains, the plains, to find Molly and the boy. Then his eyes would fall on the mouth of the tunnel, and mechanically he would shoulder his pick, take his lantern and go back to his dreary search.

Then, one day, Tribble struck a lead! Struck a fair vein of silver! The very next week the silver panic came.

Tribble was dazed. He could not understand. Day after day he groped his way down to Pay Dirt to hear the news from the east. He joined the circle of hopeless, despairing men who sat watching silver go down, down, feeling as if the bottomless pit were yawning at their feet.

Then suddenly Molly's letters stopped. Tribble wrote again and again, but could get no answer. A silence as vast and awful as that which reigned on the mountains swept between him and the two he loved.

Tribble grew morose, sullen and suspicious. After a little he ceased going down to the camp, but dwelt apart from all men, with no friend save Jonah. And now, here on this balmy, heavenly day, when all nature breathed peace and joy, Ben sat alone, deserted by all. Fortune, family, friends—yes, even his dog, for Jonah had disappeared—vanished, and no whistle of his master could lure him from the canyon.

Tribble sat absorbed in bitter reverie when suddenly a crashing in the thicket made him start and lift his heavy eyes. A good humored, smiling face met his—the face of Joyful Jerry, a well known character from the camp below, a lazy, happy go lucky fellow, with few brains and a kindly heart.

"Hello, Ben!" he called.

"Hello!" moodily from Ben.

"Thought I'd pay ye a visit," said Jerry, dropping down upon the ground beside Tribble. "I tell ye, pard, ye're too lonesum up here. Why don't ye come down ter the camp? The boys 'low ter hev a celebrashun on the Fourth. Ye'd orter ter come down. They've sent to Silverton fer fireworks an powder an a cannon. Lord, but they'll whoop things up! Ye'd orter come down."

To Joyful Jerry's pressing invitation Tribble returned no answer, but suddenly and curtly asked, "Ye didn't see nuthin of that thar ornery yaller dorg of mine, did ye, on your way up?"

"I seed Jonah cuttin down the canyon like all possessed," returned Jerry, "Now what on airth's gone an took that thar crittur?"

"Hell knows!" said Tribble savagely.

After Joyful Jerry had taken his departure with a farewell adjuration to Ben to be on hand for the ceremonies and rites of the glorious Fourth, Tribble rose, went into his lonely cabin and sat down on the edge of his bed.

"Fourth of July!" he muttered. "Celebrashuns! Humph! I'd like ter know why I should celebrate? Orter be patriotic, I reckin. Patriotic over what? A country I done my level best fer. I fit fer her, tramped through snow, rain an hail; slept on the ground; et pork an hard tack; faced death over an over fer her, an now she's a-doin her best to let me starve. A d——d fine country! It's only a country fer the east an goldbugs an Wall street—curse'em! I'm played out—old, poor, forsaken by everybody, even my dog. I'll cash in now an let the game go on without me. Come here, Betsy, old gal," taking down his battered, rusty rifle. "I didn't think when we wuz marchin through Georgy I'd ever come ter ye ter help me out of life, but that's what, old gal. I'm tired out—done fer—busted. Ye're my last friend. Give me a proof of your friendship now"——

With his rifle in hand, he stepped to the door of his cabin to take his last look of earth. The sun was just setting. The dying rays were flooding the mountains with lurid light. White and cold, their glittering peaks shone amid the scarlet and sulphur hues of sunset like purified souls emerging from a furnace of fire. The great solemn pines swayed and bent in the evening wind. Mysterious and vague whispers seemed to float from the depths of the forest. The lonely, weary, desolate watcher was strangely moved by the solemnity and harmony of the scene. "Oh, it's purty," he murmured brokenly, "it's purty. I allus wanted Molly ter see them mountings, but she never will. Who'll find me, I wonder, and send her word"——

He started. Sharp and clear on the soft night air, up from the canyon, rose the bark of a dog.

"Why, thar's Jonah!" Ben cried. "He'a a-comin back. That thar ornery —why, thar's voices—who's with him?"

Through the opening, between the cedars, past the tunnel, came two figures —a woman and a dog. The dog—not a handsome animal by any means, but one with an almost human anxiety on his ugly face—bounded forward to Ben's feet, yelping and fawning with delight.

The woman came on slowly and timidly. She was plainly dressed, elderly; her scanty brown hair was thickly strewn with gray; her sad face bore the marks of many a tearful vigil; her ungloved hands showed signs of labor, but the soul that shown from her patient eyes was noble and steadfast; the smile that lighted up her thin face had all the sweetness of the long ago. Love, youth, life itself, came with her as she advanced, holding out faithful, yearning arms to the poor, rough, disappointed old miner standing there, his hand on the trigger of his gun.

"Benjamin!" She breathed rather than spoke his name.

Then, like one who has seen a ghost, Ben Tribble fell face downward at the feet of his wife.

The stars were shining when he opened his eyes and looked up into Molly's face. The kettle was singing on the stove, supper was smoking on the table, Jonah was stretched before the fire, and Betsy was standing in the corner.

"I know all about it, dear Ben," he heard her murmur. "I know how you've worked for years, hoping against hope and all for nothing. I know how you've been disappointed and how your heart's most broke alone here in the mountains. When your letters stopped"——

"My letters?" weakly repeated Ben. "No; I wrote, but yours—Molly?"

"Yes, my dear, I know. Something went wrong. We won't try to figure it out now. All we care for is that we are together again. My poor old man, I shall take you back with me. The boy has got on first rate, Ben. We won't starve. Jonah must have known I was coming, for when I got off the train something tugged at my dress, and I looked down, and there he was, waiting to bring me up to you."

"An I thought he, too, had forsaken me. I thought everybody an everything had gone back on me. Oh, Molly!" and the sobs pent up for years in that worn old heart, burst forth. The two—the husband and the wife—wept together. Jonah crept to their feet and grieved with them in his sympathetic, dumb fashion. And then, when the storm had past, Ben had a cup of Molly's tea and a hot biscuit, while Jonah reveled with a bone. Contentment spread her wings above the little cabin, and peace brooded at the humble fireside.

"What d'ye think of them mountings, Molly?" asked Ben as they stood at the door looking out at the snowy range stretching before them like the portals of paradise.

"Ben, all I can think of when I look at them is that verse in the Bible, 'As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people.'"

* * * * * * *

Next day was the Fourth of July, and early in the morning the boom of Pay Dirt's cannon resounded through the mountains. Molly liked the distant sounds of celebration as she went about the little cabin picking up Ben's few belongings, preparing for the homeward journey, but Tribble had no use for gunpowder nor independence days, he stated, reiterating his grievances against a country existing mainly for "goldbugs" and the east.

In the afternoon Ben went into the tunnel with Molly to show her where he had worked for years. Womanlike, she was full of curiosity and began poking and prying about, picking up specimens and bits of rock here and there. When she came out, her checked gingham apron was filled with her treasures, which she looked over and carefully admired.

"This is a pretty one, Ben," she said, holding it up to him.

He took it, stared blindly at it for a moment, turned white and faltered, "Gold!"

The two gazed stupidly at each other.

"Molly," he said, speaking like one in a dream. "Molly, let me look at the others."

She handed up one after another. He examined them mechanically. "Gold!" he repeated over and over.

Suddenly a tremendous roar of artillery swept up the canyon. It was the sunset salute to a great nation's birthday.

Ben seemed to rouse from his dream. "She's all right!" he shouted.

"Who, Ben?" cried Molly.

"The mine, Molly; the country—everything! I've struck it at last! We're rich, Molly, we're rich! Why in thunder hain't I got some fireworks or gunpowder or somethin?"

He broke off and ran like a deer into the cabin, and presently emerged with his rifle in his hands.

"Brace up now, Betsy," he yelled. "Show some respect to your country—the country ye fit ter save." And then, as the dying salute of Pay Dirt camp rechashed up the mountain side, Ben Tribble raised Betsy to his shoulder and answered it.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS.

WHEN FIRECRACKERS WERE A LUXURY AND COST A CENT EACH.

How a Bunch Was Divided at the Country Store—The Man Who Still Keeps Up the Old Time Celebration of the Fourth From Early Morn Until Night.

IT IS my opinion that the true value, the overpowering splendor, so to speak, of the firecracker is not usually appreciated and comprehended. It is almost a sealed mystery to the boys. It is, in fact, known to none but those youngsters who can only partially satisfy their desire for the snapping red and yellow paper cylinders, and men who were once such boys and have not forgotten the days when they were young.

I know several such boys who understand the subject perfectly, but of all my grownup acquaintances there is but one man who has ever shown thorough knowledge thereof. This man is past middle age now. He owns mills and railroads and landed estates. He is, in fact, rich enough to buy shiploads of firecrackers if he should so desire. His standing in business and society is of the best, and for 51 weeks of every year his face wears an expression of such gravity that you would never suspect him of being frivolous enough to own to a weakness for firecrackers. I am not sure that it is proper to use the word weakness in referring to his fondness for the Chinese noise and smoke makers. Certainly his passion for them while it lasts is as strong as any other of his visible characteristics. It begins to manifest itself about a week before Uncle Sam's birthday, increases with every 24 hours till the dawning of the glorious Fourth and then dissipates itself in a fusillade of crackers lasting all day and half the night, at the end of which my friend is tired, sleepy, grimy and almost invariably with little holes burned in his clothes where stray sparks have found lodgment. But he does not mind his weariness, his blackened appearance or the holes in his clothes. He is always in a satisfied, not to say ecstatic, state of mind when at last he gets to bed on the night of the glorious Fourth.

According to the neighbors, the worst of the business is that there is absolutely no stopping in the noise even at mealtimes from shortly after daylight till 10 or 11 o'clock at night.

Even boys get hungry and tired, but when my friend is celebrating the Fourth of July he arranges his juvenile assistants in relays, so that while a portion of them are eating or resting the others are firing away just the same, and as for him that is the one day in the year on which he appears to be absolutely fatigue proof, and if he eats at all on the Fourth it cannot be more than a sandwich hastily devoured now and then.

"OPEN THE PACK," SAID HE.

I met my friend the other day when he was buying firecrackers for himself and more pretentious fireworks for his boys, and he told me the story of his first Fourth of July. After hearing it I have some idea of the reason for his extraordinary fondness for firecrackers if not for boys.

"I liked firecrackers from the first time I ever saw them," he said. "My father was a young man then, and he had not yet succeeded in making much money. There were only three of us—my father, my mother and myself—in the family, and we lived in a little house on the bank of a stream that wound between low hills and was known as Pipe creek. A mile or two away was a hamlet consisting of a store, a blacksmith's shop, a church, a shoemaker's shop and three or four houses. A few days before the first Fourth of July, I remember, my father and mother considered the financial condition earnestly and agreed that, although the times were hard with them, the boy should have firecrackers that year. They cost 25 cents a pack, and 25 cents was a good deal in that house just then, but they thought it would be money well expended if it were used to buy firecrackers for me.

"Now, it so happened that the important purchase was put off until the morning of the great day, and my father and I walked down the road to the store to exchange the quarter for the crackers. A man named John Strait kept that store, and I used to think he must be the richest man in the world, and the wisest and best, too, barring my father. Strait's face fell when we made known our desire for firecrackers. Then he looked at me, and I suppose he saw that I was greatly wrought up on the subject.

"'Well,' he said, 'I've sold out all my firecrackers, but I have one pack saved for my own boy. I promised him that he should have that pack, no matter what happened, but if he's willing we'll divide the pack between the two boys.'

"So young Strait was called in and questioned, my fears that he would not be willing rising every instant. Before the questioning was finished several other belated would be purchasers of firecrackers appeared, and finally the Strait boy made a shrewd suggestion that showed him to have a good business head.

"'Open the pack,' he said, 'and count me out 10. Then I'll sell the rest of the firecrackers at a cent apiece.'

"Ten little rolls of concentrated joy for boys fell to my share. My father paid over the 10 cents and put the firecrackers in his pocket with great care. We went home together full of delightful anticipations for the evening, for they were to be kept until nightfall, that I might not lose a single scintillating flash of brightness.

"My anticipations were fully met by the blazing, popping reality. The evening came off moonless and dark, and not a match was put to fuse until the very last gleam of light had disappeared from the western sky. Then my father took the first of the firecrackers, lighted it carefully and laid it on the big, flat stone that served as a doorstep to our house. It seemed to me when the sizzling of the fuse was followed by the explosion that I would never again see so gorgeous a sight or hear such a ravishing noise. I jumped up and down with delight. My mother, who did not admire firecrackers herself, sat by, happy in the popping and the blaze for my sake.

"We waited five minutes before the next firecracker was shot off, and then with my own hands I struck the match and lighted the fuse of the next one, and again I was electrified with joy. As the five minutes' interval was preserved until the whole 10 of my firecrackers had been exploded, I had just 50 minutes of unalloyed delight.

"Now, I have never got over my pleasure in firecrackers, but I am satisfied that if I had to shoot them without a lot of boys to help me on the Fourth of July there wouldn't be the slightest fun in it. I know that nine boys in ten like them as well as I do, whether they will continue to do so after they are grown up or not. Of course I prefer for helpers boys who can't have firecrackers if they have to buy them themselves. That's why Sim Smith's boys and Tom Dooley's and all the rest of the crowddown on the side street near my house are always invited to celebrate the Fourth with me. I don't allow myself a great deal of recreation during the year. My business is too exacting. But I get enough fun out of the firecrackers and the boys on the Fourth to last me till Thanksgiving day. There is one thing about firecrackers that is in their favor, unless you buy the big giant and cannon firecrackers, which I never do, and that is that they are much less dangerous than guns or toy pistols, and they make more noise and flame and smoke for the money than any other sort of fireworks that I know anything about. I think," he added, turning to the salesman, "that you may make my order an even five dozen boxes instead of 50. I propose to rather outdo myself this year."

My friend lives on the same street that I do, and I have accepted his invitation to be present with him and the other boys this year and help burn up his 60 boxes full of firecrackers.

THE OBJECT LESSON.

A FRESH VIEW OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

How It Differed From All Others That Preceded It—The Blossom of the Tree of Liberty—A Marvelous Inspiration—The Gonfalon of Progress.

The United States has celebrated its birthday for 118 years with a boundless profusion of firecrackers, both Chinese and rhetorical. Grownup folks, a little weary perhaps of the resounding racket, while watching the urchin at work with punk and powder, will ask themselves, "What makes the Revolution of 1776 tower like an Alpine peak among historic revolutions?" One cannot answer this by saying that the immediate result was the biggest fact which the historic yardstick measures. That was their good luck, growing out of the vast unknown resources of the continent, to which the colonies were as blind as were George III and his parliament. One cannot settle it by saying that the Declaration of Independence was the greatest charter of human rights ever penned. That Declaration contained nothing essential but what had been fairly written before in declaration and proclamation and protest, each paper of which had been sealed blood red with thousands of lives. It was just the old story inscribed afresh with a pen of fire by a mind of consummate sagacity.

The celebrated Russian musician, Rubinstein, once said to the writer: "You Americans will never have a distinct national style of music. Only nations with a childhood can ever have this. Your people never had a childhood—you were born full grown." This last sentence packs an essay in 10 words and cuts close to the bone. The time had come in the evolution of things for the Anglo-Saxon hive to swarm. There was not enough elbow room in the old political hive at the beginning of that last quarter of the last century, and the bees determined to set up fresh housekeeping. The new swarm felt themselves just as wise, as capable and as self sustaining as the others of the family. They had inherited all the traditions, the customs, the accumulated experience, the instinct for self government, inherent in a race which has beaten the world in the keenness of its political genius.

It was but the difference of 5, 10, 20 years or whatnot. If it had not been "navigation laws," "writs of assistance," "stamp act," "tax on tea," at which the colonists grumbled savagely, like true Englishmen, it would have been something else a little later. These things were wrongs, to be sure, but they would have been ultimately righted in the natural course of things and were not a whit worse than many afflictions which beset the man of Yorkshire or Kent. The American colonist, on the whole, was as free in the enjoyment of social and political privilege as any king's subject that then walked the green earth—perhaps even had larger liberty.

His large measure of freedom indeed made the homespun yeoman on this side of the Atlantic, whose fathers had shot the arrow flights which won Cressy and Agincourt, and who had charged in Crómwell's ironsides at Naseby and Worcester, feel the smart the more keenly. So came the swell of the race instinct, first embodying itself in the sword-like epigram, "No taxation without representation," then after a seven years' successful war getting itself crystallized in a magnificent system of home rule, biform in its relation to state and federal affairs, and bringing the direction of matters most intimately connected with the citizen's hearth and home as close as possible to him, in fact. In the triumph of a great principle England as well as the whole world won when Cornwallis delivered his sword to Washington. Englishmen over the sea have been swarming off from the parent hive ever since. Canada and the Australian dominions are essentially as free as the United States in self government and only need their own wish to be as free in name.

Comparing the American Revolution with the three active great revolutions of modern times, we see how wide the swing of its pendulum as compared with theirs. The heroic rising of the Netherlands under William of Orange had its root in religious oppression, and though it ended in severance from Spain no such project stamped its outset. The English revolution of 1640, which rolled a king's head in the sawdust, trampled out the theory of the divine right of royalty and enforced the fact that thenceforth in that land monarchs should only rule with the assent and co-operation of parliament. It was one great step in the growth of the English constitution. The French cataclysm of bloodshed and horror, typified by the guillotine, whose ghastly head shearing sometimes reddened four hours a day, was the natural reaction of long centuries of caste robbery and misrule. The flame caught from the American torch, but the fuel had been seasoning for ages, and the conflagration lit the world under its glare. Out of the savagery, cruelty and misery with which these great crises reeked was wrought immortal good, for in this world all permanent spiritual gain is—

Iron dug from central gloom
And heated not with burning fears,
And dipped in baths of hissing tears
And battered with the shocks of doom
To shape and use.

But of all they have bequeathed to humanity nothing blossoms with promise so rich as that tree of liberty which bourgeons into 44 commonwealths. Its object lesson is an incarnate fact, exemplifying the truth that every political community and every individual in that community is entitled by God's birthright to the fairest, most unfettered field of self development. "And the leaves of the tree shall be for the healing of the nations." That is the gonfalon of the progressive world today. That was the practical work of July 4, 1776. G. T. FERRIS.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever, after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

ANNEXATION.

MAYOR GILBERT MAKES AN ENCOURAGING PREDICTION.

Says North Plainfield Should Be Considered in the Sewerage Matter Because Consolidation Is Coming Very Soon—The Dog Ordinance in Process of Amendment, Abolishing Frisbie's Office.

A short meeting of the Common Council was held last evening, Councilmen Stockton, Fisk and Westphal being absent.

A petition from Thorpe & Ivins, coal dealers, of 311 Watchung avenue, was referred to the Fire and Building Committee. It asked for permission to build a bow window out to the street line and a 9x10 addition on the rear. Samuel Dreier's application for a pawnbroker's license was also referred. The Building Committee were instructed to consider the request of M. C. Bird for permission to erect a grain shute across the sidewalk at 125 East Fourth street.

Ernest Thompson asked for the return of the assessment of $59 29 which he had paid towards the proposed extension of Watchung avenue, and his petition was referred to the Finance Committee. Reports for the month from the city treasurer and collector were received and filed. Referred to the Finance Committee was the letter of City Assessor J. A. Hubbard, who complained that the safe purchased to preserve the tax accounts was full of old books. Safe storage was also thought desirable for the valuable and only official assessment map.

The following letter from the Mayor was read:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., July 2, 1894.

To the Honorable Common Council.

GENTLEMEN:—In order that there may be no unnecessary delay in making a contract for the construction of a sewerage system, it is highly important that the location of the filtration bed should be decided upon at the earliest possible moment. This is a very important matter, not only to Plainfield, but to the inhabitants of the borough as well, and it seems to me that it will be very unwise to select a location without giving full consideration to the future needs of North Plainfield.

The probability that at no very distant time the two municipalities will be merged into one, is so great, that in building a sewerage system for ourselves, we should look upon the borough as a district into which, sooner or later, this system will have to be extended. If consolidation should never take place, North Plainfield will, in self defense, be compelled to produce sewers at an early day. How impossible it is that the two systems should be so near to each other that the sewage from both places can be carried to the same filtration bed. Looked at from a sanitary standpoint the interests of the two places are identical and it will be a great oversight to act in the matter without first making an effort to secure the co-operation of North Plainfield. Should we co-operate will eventually mean two filtration beds, one on each side of the river, which should be avoided, if possible.

In view of the importance of this subject, permit me to suggest that a committee be appointed by your honorable body to confer with the authorities of North Plainfield relative to it. Respectfully submitted,

A. GILBERT.

The suggestion of the Mayor was adopted, the Sewerage Committee being instructed to consult with the borough government in regard to the matter.

The report of the directors of the public library was received and filed, as were the two reports of City Judge Coddington. According to the statement of cases during the quarter ending April 1, 148 persons were brought before the court. Of these 59 were fined, 24 committed, 12 discharged or dismissed, three held under bonds, and 50 released under suspended sentence.

Policeman Giese's request that he be allowed four weeks leave of absence because of illness, was granted. Appropriations of $1,000 for the fire department and of $500 for the poor fund were made. The $300 assessment paid by the Y. M. C. A. for the proposed extension of Watchung avenue was ordered returned. The clerk was authorized to pay Ernest Thompson's similar claim of $57 29 if that amount was found to be correct. An opinion was read from Counselor Charles A. Reed in regard to the runaway of the engine horses in Second street June 28. He thought it would be well for the city to pay $15 to William H. Spencer, the farmer, whose wagon was damaged. On motion of Councilman Dumont the matter was referred with power to settle to the Finance and the Fire and Buildings Committees.

A new ordinance concerning dogs, was unanimously adopted on second reading. It tends to abolish the dog-pound, offices of the pound-master and the dog-catchers; and leave in force only the provision demanding the muzzling of unchained dogs under a penalty of $10 fine. The clerk was instructed to notify Chief Grant and Dog-catcher Frisbie of the proposed change.

The committee reporting favorably, permission was granted to Thorpe & Ivins to build the additions specified in their petition. The clerk was authorized to spend $20 for a case in which to keep his maps. The street commissioner was instructed to place a curb in front of the city's lots, 301 and 303, on Plainfield avenue, the cost to be $65. Chief Grant's request for stationery was approved and the committee was authorized to have the necessary printing done. A number of bills were ordered paid and the council then adjourned.

PLAINFIELD HOLDS HER OWN.

She Does Her Duty by Uncle Sam in Postal Matters.

Hon. T. F. Lane in his Washington Letter to the Summit Herald, gives the following interesting statement about the post offices in this county district:

The annual receipts of the various Presidential Post Office in New Jersey, present some rather curious statistics. There are ninety-four such offices now in existence and their total receipts aggregate $1,477,984.60, while the total salaries paid to postmasters is $169,000. The effect of the business depression is seen in the falling off in receipts in many offices to so large an extent in some cases as to reduce the grade of the office. The most notable instances of this are in Elizabeth, which is reduced from a first to a second class office, Dover and Westfield, which are reduced from second to third-class, and Irvington, which is reduced from the third to fourth-class. The following are the receipts and salaries in Union County postoffices:

Post Office	Salary 1893	Salary 1894	Receipts
Cranford	$1,300	$1,500	$ 4,149.70
Elizabeth	3,800	2,900	38,824.56

FOR SICK BABIES.

Plainfield Little People Helping a Noble Charity.

A lawn festival and sale was held at the home of John M. Duck, 89 Jackson avenue, yesterday afternoon and evening. The young people who arranged and managed the affair worked to aid the sick babies of New York city. The proceeds were about $25. Tables had been placed under the large tree by the house. In the evening Chinese lanterns were used in illuminating.

Those in charge of the tables were:

Candy table—Ada Woolston and Emma Vetterlein.

Fancy table—Harry Needham.

Flower stand—George Ecker.

Cake table—Florence Buck.

Ice-cream table—May Linbarger, Lulu Weiser, Carrie Duck, Eddie Duck, Fred Martin, Sadie Holmes, Axia Holmes.

Lemonade well—Nellie Martin.

Leander Gets Off Easy.

Leander Brown, who was arrested last Wednesday for conducting a gambling resort in Fairchild's alley Monday, June 25, had a short trial in the City Court yesterday afternoon.

He admitted that he had played cards at his home with two other colored men, Reuben Ray and Henry Lee, but denied that the game was for money. The way he explained the presence of coins and cards together on the table was that the three had raised a fund to rush the growler with. None was anxious to go to the saloon, so they went into Brown's house and started to play a game of seven-up to see who would get the beer. Brown thought it ridiculous that he should be suspected of gambling near an open window with the door of the house unfastened.

Judge Coddington said the evidence was not strong enough to warrant his holding Leander, so he suspended sentence with a warning.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Olaf Sangstad's new 20-pound Union arrived yesterday.

The cycling world makes the Crescent Oval its mecca again tomorrow.

Barnett is gaining in speed for short distances, and, it is said, has ridden a quarter in 32 seconds.

It is estimated that in the counties of Monmouth and Ocean there are 1,600 bicycles owned and ridden. Plainfield has almost as many as that.

To think that on a track supposedly level a bicycle will coast nearly one-third of a mile. The other day a Massachusetts man raced to the start line, then removed his feet from the pedals, and his wheel carried him about 1,420 feet.

Daniel Page and George Firstbrook report having traveled 91 miles on their bicycles Sunday, from Plainfield to Dover by way of Morristown. They left Plainfield at 6 a. m. and returned home about 7 p. m. with a great change of color. The distance from here to Morristown was made in one hour and a half.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

All young people who wish to spend a pleasant and profitable evening may do so by attending the Christian Endeavor missionary service at the Park Avenue Baptist Church, Friday evening of this week. Mrs. Pond, a returned missionary from Bulgaria, will address the meeting, and there will be other interesting features. All will be made welcome.

The Westfield Christian Endeavor Local Union will send John L. Clayton of Westfield as delegate to the International Christian Endeavor Convention to be held in Cleveland, July 11-15. Mr. Clayton is one of the most active men in the Union, and will represent the societies well.

NEWS OF NEAR NEIGHBORS.

Fanwood.

Several boys encampments will materialize tonight and great rivalry exists as to which will have the honor of the first salvo of artillery on the morning of the Fourth.

Frank Quereau returned yesterday from Pittsfield, Mass., to which place he accompanied his daughter, Florence, who is to take a two-years course at the Henry Bishop Third Memorial School for Trained Nurses.

A flag raising at Frank Quereau's at sunrise will be a feature of the celebration and Captain Hamlin promises a surprise for the neighbors. As the captain has recently produced an explosive to which dynamite is an infant, Plainfielders will undoubtedly know when that flag ascends.

While escorting a Central Railroad official to the station the other evening, a resident apologized for the roughness of the sidewalks by saying that when they were rolled down the surface would be smooth as a floor. "Oh, I understand all about it", said the railroad man. "George Kyte will probably put steamer coal on next, as I understand he is now interested in a shoe factory."

Harry Robinson and family left Friday for their Summer residence on Lake Champlain. Dr. Herold of Newark has taken Mr. Robinson's Fanwood house for the Summer and evidently intends that the children shall enjoy their Summer outing, he having erected a tent and placed his croquet set on the lawns for their benefit. His elegant equipages are greatly admired.

On Friday Captain Charles M. Hawkins, Quartermaster of the Third Regiment, called on Judge Moore at Fanwood and demanded a search warrant to recover uniforms of the National Guard unlawfully withheld by William E. Clum of Scotch Plains. Upon the proper papers being prepared Captain Hawkins accompanied a constable to Clum's residence where the State property was obtained and Clum arrested. When taken to court the prisoner admitted having received an order to turn in the property over a month ago, but plead ignorance of the law and agreed to pay the costs of the proceedings. At the solicitation of Captain Hawkins the case was adjourned to Sept. 1, to enable the defendant to settle the costs.

Sunset of a Busy Life.

(Correspondence of Bound Brook Democrat.)

In a ride through Warren and Bernards townships one day last week we ran across some old-timers who have carried the history of this county in their hats for several years past and with whom a profitable hour can be spent.

Daniel Cory was seated on the porch of his residence, and beside him was his charming young wife. On the brow of this old county statesman you could see peaceful and happy thoughts pass and repass in repeseful bliss. Mr. Cory is over eighty-six years of age, and is now passing the sundown of his life in the old Cory homestead amid all the surroundings that a devoted and painstaking young wife is capable of furnishing.

ONE CITY'S TRIUMPH.

APPARENTLY INSURMOUNTABLE OBSTACLES OVERCOME.

How the City of Springfield, Ills., Stopped Paying Rent and Built Its Own Home. Revenue From Street Franchises—Municipal Control of Waterworks.

One of the most embarrassing questions that confront many cities has been solved by Springfield, Ills., which dedicated on the first day of last March a newly erected city hall costing $50,000 without adding to the bonded indebtedness of the city and without raising the funds with which to pay cash for the investment.

Operating under the state law known as the general incorporation act, the city of Springfield was hampered with the constitutional inhibition against exceeding the maximum rate of taxation, and the annual assessments of property for taxation were so reduced each year by the state board of equalization as to make the total revenues available for city purposes too low to admit of including a building fund with the current expenses. That the city has found the way in which to overcome such obstacles and by so doing has today a magnificent public building makes the plan adopted for its erection have something more than ordinary interest in these days of "town booming."

On the 6th day of February, 1893, the plan which was subsequently adopted was proposed to the city council by Edward W. Payne, a young business man. He suggested that the city of Springfield stop paying rent and build its own home through the assistance of a local building and loan association. In order to make it possible for the city to undertake the project in the way proposed Mr. Payne offered to organize a syndicate of citizens who should subscribe in their own names for enough shares of stock in a local building and loan association to furnish all the needed capital.

This syndicate, he proposed, should co-operate with the city council in the adoption of plans, the awarding of contracts and in the active work of superintending the construction of the building. They were to be reimbursed for their outlay by the monthly payment from the city treasury of a sum of money slightly in advance of the aggregate expenditure the city was then making for the rent of dingy and unsatisfactory quarters for its public offices in a number of old buildings in different sections of the business district. At the end of 10 years the aggregate of these monthly payments should be sufficient to return to the syndicate their original investment in full, with a reasonable addition for interest on the use of the money. The plan was accepted, and the building is the result.

In order to make their proposition the more tempting the syndicate represented by Mr. Payne secured an option on the most desirable site in the city for such a building and offered it in connection with the main proposition. The city council had previously prepared the way for the ultimate erection of such a structure by establishing a sinking fund to furnish the money for the purchase of a site, and it had available for that purpose the sum of $10,000, which it paid to the syndicate for the title to the land on which the building now stands. The property was deeded to the city, subject to a mortgage which secures the syndicate against any loss of its investment. The result is that within a few days more than one year after the plan was first formally proposed the city is making payments on its permanent home. The city is also negotiating for a municipal electric light plant for lighting the streets and to furnish light to private consumers, and it is considering the same plan by which the new city hall was built as the solution of a problem similar to that with which the council was confronted when it undertook the building project. It is proposed also to require private corporations asking for public franchises to pay annually into the city treasury a percentage on the gross receipts of the business they enjoy from the use of the city streets.

It is expected that this policy will eventually lift the bonded indebtedness of the city and reduce the rate of taxation for local government expenses to a point below the rate in many cities which give franchises away and get no return. In behalf of this policy it is claimed that it is fair and just both to the company that asks for the use of the streets and for the citizens, and also that it eliminates the element of selfishness and gives the citizens a direct and personal interest in the financial success of the companies which furnish necessities to the public.

By assuming direct control of the waterworks system last year the city of Springfield has made that branch of the municipal service more than self sustaining, and the revenues derived during the first year of that control give positive assurance that in a few years the low rates charged for water will yield revenue enough to pay a large share of the bonded debt and help in the reduction of the rate of taxation.

For Advertisers to Consider.

The recoil of ads. loaded with lame logic often breaks the backbone of business.

A verbal "wiggle" to a "business bait" will often catch the eye and interest of a very cautious "fish."

It takes two to make a bargain, but one persuasive ad. well circulated will often make a market.

An appetizing ad. leaves a taste in the reader's mouth which often ripens into a hunger for the thing advertised.

A peculiar verbal twist to an ad. often helps it to draw the cork of pentup prejudice.

A business boom loaded with convincing logic and shot through the columns of a mighty medium will knock piggish prejudice higher than Gilroy's kite.—Newburyport (Mass.) News.

CHAPTER XXI.

"My girl, we can show them the Overtons know how to die."

Dare had indeed found her grandfather with the mob, found him bound and helpless, yet sitting as upright and fearless upon his horse as though for the chase. It had all passed like a dream, the sight of him, the mounting behind one of the leaders, the tramp into the wilderness, from which she had but just escaped. Now the hillmen had halted in front of the house Cleve had chosen for her prison, had hurried the two within it and were deep in counsel outside.

"We can die," Dare echoed, "but we shall die innocent. We have never harmed, but always helped as far as lay in our power, these lawless men. What charge can they bring against us?"

"That we are Overtons," the old man said bitterly. "Overtons," he repeated, "the rightful owners of this which other men wish to sell and buy. At sundown as I sat in my study these fellows came upon me, demanding that I give up my rights. In their phrase, 'Take it or leave it and let men who have money set the wheels turning.' They were tired of waiting and starving if I was not. If I dared to refuse, I must take the consequences. I did refuse, then and forever. I was alone in the house, almost so upon the plantation. Gagged and bound, I was sat upon my horse and headed for this place. I know it well, the loneliest, the wildest spot in all the tract, so wild and lone murder might be done here a hundred times with no risk of detection. All the way I was thanking God that you were safely away. Tell me, my child, how it happens that you, too, are entrapped?"

Dare told him, keeping back nothing save the scene in Jincey's cabin. The more than midnight darkness of their prison house hid the old man's face as he listened, but his hand lay on that of his grandchild, and amid all her stress of feeling she noted the surging leap of his pulse as she told of her peril, her escape.

"Oh, for one more day of life to meet that gentleman!" he said through his set teeth. "My child, my child, it seems I let you go into the very lion's den. Forgive me, my girl. I have not been tender and thoughtful of you. I shall love you more through our little inch of time than in all the years of your life."

"There is nothing to forgive," Dare said, laying her cheek softly against his hand. A quiver of lightning played along the floor and showed her big tears dropping from the brave old eyes.

"I have not shed a tear before since Margaret died," the old man said, with a gulp over the name.

"You must not cry now. We need all our spirit," Dare said, nestling closer. "Keep a good heart, grandfather. These men surely dare not murder us outright, and help must come before long."

"You don't know them as I do, daughter," Major Overton said, with a sigh. "They have gone too far to draw back now. Our lives are the price of their own safety no less than their prosperity. My wonder is that they have not given us shorter shrift—indeed that we came into this room alive."

The hillmen themselves wondered not a little. In truth, there was a division of opinion among their heads.

"I tell ye, both must die, er we'll swing for it," said the man Dare had recognized. "I tell ye, ye might 'a' knocked me down with a feather when I seen thet thar gal in ole Jincey's cabin an she spoke up so, 'Why, this is Mr. Hensley!' I'd ruther take er year's whippin 'an tek tetch her rough, but what's er man ter do? She knowed me. I tell ye thar ain't no safe way but the bloody one."

"An I tell you, you fool," said a deeper voice, "if harm comes to her, ter so much as a hair of her head, we'll all have our trouble fer our pains. The feller dat's got most er de money we're so anxious he should spend here is plumb crazy about her. The man dat touches her is as sure ter swing fer it as de spendin of a million dollars can make him. I know, fer H——, yo' know who, told me dat was in de game. Ef he don't git her, most lik' he'll quit de country. I say de thing ter do is keep 'em here, keep 'em comfortable, treat 'em lik' fightin cocks, but keep 'em close till they're willin ter agree ter hold their tongues."

"That'd be cenabout always. Man, yo' don't know them Overtons. Bad as I hate 'em fer their high headed, high handed ways, I know they're game, ain't afeared o' man ner devil and wouldn't budge a hair from what they said was right fer all dis world, with de next thrown in. Talk about makin terms! Put it ter vote, I say. Fix er hat, somebody. All in favor of makin a sure thing o' dis job put crossmarks on their tickets. Dem ergin it, leave 'em white."

A little time, and 30 men came past the hat, over which hung their solitary lantern, each dropping from his hand a fluttering slip whose import was life or death.

"Mr. Somebody didn't think whut his letter wus ter be used fer when he writ it," Hensley said, with a grim smile, as the ballots fell in.

"Reckon it wouldn't 'a' bothered him much if he had," his opponent remarked. The teller raised a hand, saying laconically:

"Ye better be fixin. Thar's 20 crosses."

"We'll draw lots who's ter do de job. De rest kin go erway," Hensley said, speaking thickly in spite of his sense of necessity. "'Twon't take but two—one erpiece, ye know." Inside Major Overton talked in low tones to Dare.

"It was a miracle, your escape, and to think you are thus brought back," he said, breathing hard.

"There is fate in it, I am sure," Dare answered. "Do you know, grandfather, I believe Jincey had made the path I found tramping to this place. What motive could possibly have brought her so often over such a weary way?"

"Maybe we will know soon. Jincey was a mystery always. We are at the gate of mysteries. I wonder why they are so slow?"

Dare pressed his hand hard and said in his ear:

"Hush! I hear hard breathing. Some one else is in the room."

"If it is the scoundrel who lured you here, let me throttle him before I die, and death will lose half its sting," the old man cried aloud.

of a dark lantern in Royal Cleve's hands. Weary with his fruitless search for Dare, he had come back and at last dropped into sleep so sound that only within the last few minutes had he awakened from it. He walked directly over to Major Overton, saying as he held out a revolver:

"I deserve that you should shoot me, sir. But pray postpone it until I have paid my respects to those scoundrels outside."

"You do well to turn against them, sir, after inciting them to their present course," Major Overton said, with curling lip. "By contrast with yourself they are almost respectable. They have at least the palliation of ignorance and necessity."

Cleve fell back in amazement.

"Can you think, believe," he asked, "that I had any hand in, any knowledge of, this outrage?"

"Why not? You are guilty of worse," the other said, with a deep frown. Dare laid a hand on her grandfather's arm and said, half timidly:

"I think, sir, Mr. Cleve is innocent of this. I know, too, he will save us from all harm if only we do not thrust his help aside."

"Whether you will or no," Cleve said, striding to the door. "Open, open," he shouted. "Open, you villains, or the last one of you shall hang."

There was a noise of unbarring, a rush and intrampling of many feet, a volley of shots and shouts and curses, but no foot came inside. Royal Cleve had barred the way, and as they recoiled from his rapid fire swung the door to, calling huskily:

"The bar, the bar! Keep them back! They shall not touch"——

Quick as thought Dare sprang to his side, shot the inner bar in place and called aloud:

"Help, grandfather, he is falling!"

"He is—dead—almost," Cleve said, reaching for her hand. By the lantern's glimmer Major Overton saw that blood was pouring from his breast. Outside a babel of rude speech, more than one deep groan, undervoiced the wild roar of a swiftly coming storm.

"Listen! I hear horses galloping. You are saved," Cleve said as Dare bent above him, trying to stanch the blood. He went on huskily, "Throw—the light on—her face. I have not much longer—to see it. Let me—see it plain."

"Throw the light on her face. Let me see it plain."

"Don't talk," Dare said, pressing her hand hard against the welling blood. Slowly, painfully, Cleve laid her fingers upon his mouth and panted rather than spoke the one word "Forgive!"

"I do forgive you fully, freely, as I hope God will forgive me at the last day," Dare said; then, answering the appeal of his eyes, put her mouth to his in a tender kiss.

A thunderous knocking fell on the door. Mr. Hildreth's voice called:

"Major Overton! Major Overton! Can you open the door?"

As it swung wide Royal Cleve smiled softly and said in gasps:

"Dare! Now I am dead—and you—safe—you won't take back your forgiveness?"

His soul went out with the last word.

CHAPTER XXII.

"This caps the climax of villainy, but I see Hawkins in it all," Mr. Hildreth said when a few minutes' rapid speech had made him master of the facts.

"How did you happen to come thus in the nick of time?" Major Overton asked. Dare had risen, but stood with eyes still fast on the dead man's face.

"Ask those two," Hildreth said, with a shrug, pointing to Vance and Allen Fauntleroy. "All I know is that they came upon me like a whirlwind about dark, had me sworn a special deputy, had a posse all ready for me and then rode either side of me, telling me: 'Go fast! Go fast!' We went first to Ridgeley. It seems they had got an inkling of what your danger was. There we found ourselves three hours too late, but with a plain trail to follow, which, thank God, we did not lose. But I tell you it was rough experience, pushing through these hills, this tangle, and never knowing but the next hollow might lead you into ambush. Our beasts are so blown that, little as I like the place, I think we must stay here till morning. Luckily that is not far off. It must be 2 o'clock now."

"Later," said Vance. "But, Fauntleroy, why don't you speak? Major, it is all his doing. He has been watching your enemies, and as soon as they were ready for this grand coup he was ready with checkmate for it."

"I thank him deeply," the old man said, with his stateliest courtesy. Dare went impulsively forward, saying, with quivering lips:

"Oh, Mr. Fauntleroy! I hope you will never know how it feels to be snatched from the very jaws of death."

"I did nothing," Allen said. Then in a low whisper: "Dare, I envy that dead man. Whatever his sins, he truly died for you."

"Hear the wind, the thunder! This is a storm to remember," Vance said, with a shiver. "Suppose we were out in it on those black hills again!"

Nobody answered him. The room, lit here and there by a smoky glimmer of lanterns, was weirdly spectral. In their light the dead man's face seemed to mop and mow as though the soul had come back and sat there mocking its fellow.

Allen drew Dare to him.

Vance laid a handkerchief over it and motioned to two of the posse standing huddled about the door to lift the corpse to the long table at one side.

One came forward readily enough. The other hung back, whispering:

"Wait, wait! Don't ye know lightning'll strike ye if ye try to move a dead man while it's thunderin this way?"

Truly the rush and roar of wind, rain, thunder, were appalling. The windows of heaven seemed to be open, the eternal hills to be cracking about their ears. Still Vance bent above the dead man, looking almost in pity at the face, so white, so stirless, so goodly. Two or three others came forward and made to lift the poor clay from the floor, where it lay so inert.

Slowly, slowly they raised it, laid it fair and straight. Before a hand fell to the side there came straight overhead an appalling flash, a deafening noise. The old house shook and quivered, groaning through all its timbers as its big stone chimney toppled half to earth.

"I knowed it. I told ye, but ye didn't believe it," said the man who had shrunk from laying hands on the dead man. The rest stood silent, in awed expectance of they knew not what. It might be even a deadlier flash. But the storm king had done his worst. Very shortly the wind sobbed itself out; the rain ceased; the thunder drew away to the river valley. As the east reddened for dawn, stars were peeping in the sky through veils of lacy mist.

"Thank God and my friends for daylight! I never thought to see it again," Major Overton said fervently, his hand on Dare's shoulder. Suddenly Vance gave a sharp, low cry. He stood at the room's end, critically contemplating the lightning's work. As the rest turned to look he darted across the wide hearth, caught something that lay amid the masses of loosened rock, waved it in front of them, crying out:

"The record, the record! Major, no matter who saved your life, I have as good as found your fortune."

There indeed was the missing volume, released by the lightning stroke from its 50 years' entombment.

"Open it quick, quick," Major Overton almost shouted. Vance hurriedly turned leaf after leaf, then silently held the book before the old man's eyes.

Then a fine hubbub broke out, for there, plain to view, undisputed, indisputable, the Overton claim was fully confirmed upon those yellow pages.

"How on earth did it ever get here?" asked Hildreth.

Major Overton thought a minute, then said slowly:

"I remember now. They were building this chimney when the first hint came that our title was in dispute. Bruce Stirling no doubt stole the book and gave it to old Ike to hide for him. Ike as a conjure man easily terrified the black chimney builders into putting it here. No doubt it was in a sort of niche, where, if need were, it could have been reclaimed. Dare was right. That accounts for the path. Jincey knew and all these years has come here to gloat over her secret."

"She repented at last. See what she gave me," Dare said, laying in the lawyer's hands the papers from the bottom of the chest. After one glance he said:

"The day of miracles is not past, major. With the deeds, the record, our case is won. You, Miss Dare, are the greatest heiress in the state."

Allen Fauntleroy came forward, holding out a hand to the major and to his granddaughter. Both were eagerly clasped, though Dare drew her hand quickly away, noting that it bore yet the stain of Royal Cleve's blood.

"Heaven only knows how glad I am that this wrong is righted at last; that, after so many, many years you are to come into your own," Allen said, looking full into the old man's humid eyes. Major Overton half turned away his head, saying:

"Sir, in the presence of death we forget much, very much. I am an old, old man; you just upon the threshold. Into your hands I commit both the fortune that is mine and the woman to whom it must rightfully descend. I do not say, 'Take care of them.' Your conduct for the last month proves to me that you could do nothing else."

Allen drew Dare to him and led her out into the fresh, dripping morning. As they crossed the threshold where their fate had so strangely culminated he said, looking over his shoulder at the rigid figure they left behind:

"Dare, darling, I do not envy him any more. Poor fellow! He loved and lost you! And though he died for your life, it is my privilege to live for your happiness."

Dare said, "I love you, Allen," but she, too, looked back at the dead, and her sigh was half a sob.

STRIKE MORE SERIOUS

Troops at Oakland Refuse To Check the Riots.

California Strikers Running Things High-Handed—President Debs Declares That Civil War Will Follow the First Shot—Not Worrying About Federal Indictment—The Blockade Extending—Situation at Chicago and Other Points.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 5.—The strikers are acting in a high-handed manner in Oakland. They are holding up local trains and pulling off firemen and brakemen.

The militia are getting ready to take the field.

At Sacramento the troops refused to disperse the strikers and finally marched back to their armories without accomplishing anything.

DEBS' PREDICTION.

Civil War, He Says, Will Surely Follow the First Shot.

CHICAGO, July 5.—So far as any action, official or otherwise, on the part of the American Railway union is concerned, the great strike is apparently no nearer its end to-day than it was yesterday. By the same token the members of the General Managers association having secured knowledge that the presence of Federal troops would hold the strikers at bay and prevent any attempt at destruction of property, have been content to maintain a comparatively passive attitude. But their supreme effort to regain control of the business will be inaugurated to-day, and it is recognized by both sides as a certainty that the crisis must and will be reached by the end of this week.

Those of Chicago's citizens who are jealous of its good name and profoundly interested in its happiness and prosperity are breathing easier to-day. While no pronounced scare can be said to have found a foothold, it cannot be denied that the ushering in of the 118th anniversary of the national independence brought with it a feeling of uneasiness and apprehension on the part of the supporters of law and order concerning what the day might bring forth. With business of all kinds absolutely suspended, and an army of toilers, 100,000 members of trades organizations, in possession of a holiday and free to follow their own inclinations, there was a fear expressed in undertones and whispered, but none the less strong, of the bringing about of some demonstrations of sympathy, that no matter how well intentioned the motives of the promoters, might be the precursor of serious trouble.

The very opposite proved to be the case. The masses manifested in their appreciation of the holiday and their patriotic reverence for the Fourth. The parks were thronged in the daytime and at night the residence district was ablaze with fireworks and bonfires. The streets in the business section were even more deserted than on the average Sabbath.

Less Talk of Arbitration.

Around the headquarters of the union there is less talk of arbitration or mutual conciliation.

Speaking of the acts of lawlessness on the Fourth, Lieut. Morrissey, who, with 60 policemen, was detailed to the point of trouble, said:

"I do not believe there were half a dozen A. R. U. men in the whole crowd. The fact is it was a crowd out for a celebration, and they took this way to do it. If the railroads had waited until to-day before trying to move trains, there would not have been a minute's trouble—all these people would have been at work."

"The first shot fired by the regular soldiers at the mobs here will be the signal for a civil war. I believe this as firmly as I believe in the ultimate success of our cause. Bloodshed will follow, and 90 per cent. of the people of the country will be arrayed against the other 10 per cent. And I would not care to be arrayed against the laboring people in the contest or find myself out of the ranks of labor when the struggle ended. I do not say this as an alarmist, but calmly and thoughtfully." Such were the remarks made by President Eugene V. Debs, of the American Railway union, to a United Press reporter this morning. Mr. Debs had received news of the trouble at the stockyards and the arrests at Blue Island. He severely condemned the course pursued by the railway managers in misleading the government officials and causing them to order out the regulars to protect trains and overawe the strikers and their sympathizers.

"I deprecate the action of the authorities in yielding to the wishes of the managers." Continuing, Mr. Debs said:

Troops Not Needed.

"Our men have in no way acted riotously, and the city and county officers will bear me out in the statement that they have at all times been able to control the few hot heads who, either as outsiders or in disobedience of strict orders, have acted an unlawful part. They know as well as I do that there was no necessity for government troops, and, as I understand it, neither Chief Brennan or Sheriff Gilbert has hesitated to condemn the action and assert that they were amply able to preserve the peace and protect property at any and all times.

"It is unfortunate that the conditions have become such as to force the laboring people into active resistance to the encroachments upon their personal rights, but it is corporation greed and avarice alone that has brought us to the verge of a revolution. If blood is shed in this struggle it will be the managers, and the officials who were misled by them, who are to blame.

"Yes, I certainly feel the responsibility resting upon me in this struggle, and it is but natural that I should have an anxiety as to what may precede the final result, which cannot but be in our favor. But we cannot recede.

"Yes, I do believe there is a chance to bring about a settlement of the trouble before the final struggle is on. I think there is a probability that the trouble may be averted. It rests solely with others than us to bring it about, however. One thing is certain; the general managers must and shall succumb. The business men and stockholders have awakened to the seriousness of the situation, and, I have no doubt, will from this on take a more active part in forcing a settlement. When they realize the position taken by the managers they will insist on a recession on the part of those gentlemen, and it is unnecessary to state that such a pressure cannot be resisted, even by a general managers' association.

"The presence of troops, so far as our own men are concerned, does not worry me in the least, now will they, until some ill-advised action on the part of the officers or the authorities precipitates a conflict which will be the signal for a far more serious trouble than that occasioned by any act of the American Railway union.

"We have violated no law and care nothing for the action which has been taken, really in order that the managers might have a legal excuse for calling out the troops. After the service of the papers and before any violence whatever was done, the general managers rushed to the authorities with the false statement that the injunctions had not been observed and that federal protection was imperative.

"I care as little for proposed grand jury indictments as I do for the injunctions. I have ordered no boycott or strikes personally and have merely acted as the servant of my organization. I will fight for the union to the last, and as I have no intention of violating the laws of the country, I stand in no fear of the federal grand jury. I have no idea what the result of the proposed grand jury session will be, but it is not of half the importance to me just at present as other and more pressing business."

President Debs said further that in company with Vice-President Howard and Director William Burns, who have been selected to act for the board, he will call upon Mayor Hopkins, at the latter's request, to-day, when it is expected to meet with the council committee, and in all probability with representatives of the general managers' association. As yet the union officials are not looking upon the meeting as anything but one called in order to meet the council committee, and not until the managers are present will any other view be taken.

The expected action of District-Attorney Milchrist in calling a special session of the federal grand jury under instructions from Washington to indict President Debs and his associates under a section of the federal law which can be made use of, is looked upon with much foreboding and doubt by the more thoughtful and conservative. The dangers arising from an arrest and detention of Debs are regarded as too serious by many.

CHICAGO, July 5.—The work of getting the troops to the stock yards was a matter of extreme difficulty, owing to the riotous conduct of the dense crowds that pressed upon them from all sides. Several small riots were started, but they were quickly suppressed.

The women took a hand in the turmoil by uncoupling the cars that carried the soldiers, thus delaying supplies for the troops for several hours.

The representatives of the general managers declare that there will a decided improvement before the day is over, but will not say how.

BLOCKADE AT BLOOMINGTON.

The City Looking After the 2,000 Detained Passengers.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., July 5.—The strike on the Alton remains in statu quo. The number of delayed passenger trains on the switches here is now 14, and the number of passengers is fully 2,000.

The city authorities and various committees have looked through the trains and taken care of the indigent and sick. Of the latter there are but one or two cases, and these are not serious.

Troops are expected to-day to raise the blockade.

No Trouble Yet at New York.

NEW YORK, July 5.—There is nothing new to-day in the strike situation so far as New York is concerned. Trains on all the roads using Pullman cars came and departed on time, and there was no sign of a break in traffic arrangements at any of the stations in Jersey City. The only sign so far in this part of the country of the strike is the shutting off of the supply of certain kinds of meat which the New York markets get from Chicago. Charles Dodge, who is engaging men in this city to take the places of the striking switchmen in the west, is at work, as usual, at the United States hotel to-day. Not many candidates are presenting themselves for work, but Mr. Dodge says he has 100 men on hand who will be sent west to-night. The price of meat in this city is practically unchanged to-day.

Two Passenger Trains Tied-up.

ST. LOUIS, July 5.—The southwestern limited passenger train on the Big Four road, which left here at 8 a. m., is still tied-up at the bridge junction at East St. Louis and there is no prospect of its immediate release. The tie-up was caused by the engineer and firemen deserting the locomotive and allowing the train to stand on the main track. No engineer and fireman can be secured to take charge of the train. The west-bound passenger train on the Big Four, due here at 7:30 a.m., is still tied-up at Mattoon, Ill., and the railroad people are unable to say when it will reach here.

Effect of the Strike in the South.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 5.—As a result of the railroad tie-up in the west, shipments of fruits and melons have congested in Atlanta to such an extent that they are being sold here cheaper than ever known. On account of the shortage of western meat shipments, the local markets are already making preparations to kill domestic, instead of western beef, for use.

Growing Worse at Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, July 5.—A majority of the freight conductors of the Chesapeake & Ohio and Louisville & Nashville roads have gone on strike, refusing to haul freight switched by non-union men. The situation on the C. & O. road is decidedly bad. Fifty United States deputy marshals from Columbus are distributed among the various railroad yards.

Soldiers at Grand Crossing.

GRAND CROSSING, Ill., July 5.—Two companies of United States infantry, under command of Capt. Humphrey, are quartered in cars here. Everything is quiet, but no effort has been made to start the trains, and there is no telling when an effort will be made.

Indiana Strikers Enjoined.

VALPARAISO, Ind., July 5.—Upon application of the Grand Trunk, Judge Gillett granted an order last night which restrains the strikers and all others from offering violence or intimidation anywhere and from soliciting employes to quit.

Troops Moving in Michigan.

MARQUETTE, Mich., July 5.—The detachment of Michigan national guards stationed here has left under orders to report to Col. Lyon, in command of the Fifth regiment, at Ironwood without delay.

No Men To Run Santa Fe Trains.

TRINIDAD, Col., July 5.—No trains are running on the Santa Fe for lack of men to handle the cars. Troops are on duty with no trouble to meet.

Troops at Sioux City.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., July 5.—The Fourth regiment, except one company, arrived here last night. All is quiet, but the blockade remains unbroken.

IS SHE A "JONAH" SHIP

Serious Mishap to the Montgomery.

Cylinder Head Blown Out and the Cylinder Completely Wrecked on Her Trial Trip—Will Lay Her Up for Three or Four Months—Other Improvements To Be Made.

NORFOLK, Va., July 5.—After spending 24 hours at sea the U. S. S. Montgomery, the pride of Secretary Herbert and all Alabamians, met with a mishap which will lay her up for three or four months and possibly take her out of commission during that time. It was ideal weather when the handsome vessel left Hampton Roads Monday morning for her final trial of 48 hours' run at sea.

The course of the vessel laid out by the board was up the coast as far as Winter-quarter light and then return as far south as Currituck light on the North Carolina coast, reaching Hampton Roads on her return Wednesday morning.

When the capes were reached the Montgomery's head was turned northeast, and about 1 o'clock the trial of the guns was begun. During the firing of the big 5-inch guns the vessel behaved in a manner to make the representatives of her builders and the board proud. The jar of the ship was hardly perceptible during all this firing.

Every gun on board worked splendidly.

Then began the inspection of the electric plant, including wiring. This was found in good condition and according to specifications.

On Monday night the powerful search lights were tested, and it was the unanimous opinion that they were as good, if not better, than any in the service at the present time.

Tuesday was set apart for the trial of the machinery and steering apparatus and early in the morning everybody on board was astir. The vessel was faced south and made several complete swings, backing and in fact all the evolutions required in modern warfare and proved the helm admirable. It was the intention of Commander Davis to give her a speed test from a bearing off Cape Henry to a point off Currituck. The engineers had just received orders to start the vessel up at full speed and were turning the steam to the port high pressure engine when a terrific explosion was heard, followed a moment later by the sound of escaping steam.

The hissing sound lasted for only a moment. The engineers jumped for their throttles and shut off the steam and then began an examination of the machinery. The damage was even greater than was anticipated.

The cylinder head had been blown out, and the cylinder was a complete wreck. In the opinion of the officers, it will take at least three months to repair the damage. A nut on the crank-pin end of the connecting rod had become loose while steam was being turned on for the speed trial, and under the heavy pressure the cylinder head gave way. The new parts necessary to repair the damage will be a cylinder casing, cylinder cover, new liner to cylinder, new crank-pin, cap, brasses and bolts and steam chest. The patters for all of these parts are possibly in Baltimore, if they have not been demolished. The mishap brought the trial to a rather sudden close, and the vessel came into Hampton Roads under her starboard engines.

Officers of the Montgomery seem to think that an improvement can be made in the arrangement of her armor. Her bow sets down in the water about 18 inches below her stern, and it is probable that this defect will also have to be remedied. Some of the crew seem to think that the Montgomery is a "Jonah" vessel, and they point to the several accidents in substantiation of this belief.

COXEYITES CELEBRATE.

Brown, Wearing a Yellow Wig, Impersonates the Goddess of Liberty.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—The Coxeyites celebrated the Fourth with a street parade and speechmaking at the Peace monument at the entrance of the capitol grounds. Carl Brown, clean-shaven and wearing a wig of long yellow hair, impersonated the Goddess of Liberty. He rode a small white horse, from the back of which he addressed a crowd of some 200 or 300 people.

At the conclusion of his address, the "army," headed by several mounted police, started on the return march to their headquarters at Bladensburg, Md.

Challenge for British Canoeists.

LONDON, July 5.—W. W. Howard, the American canoeist, has addressed to British canoeists a challenge in which he expresses his readiness to meet any member of any British club on a triangular course, one mile to the side, and the first mile laid to windward, the winner to finish first in two out of the three heats over this course.

C. P. Railway Earnings.

MINERS' FAMILIES SUFFERING.

Money Collected for Their Relief Misappropriated.

MASSILLON, O., July 5.—The miners of this district have been thrown into a state bordering on panic by developments in connection with relief work in the last few days. The relief committee has been taking care of about 80 families, and it has been only through the most strenuous efforts that their charges have been kept from actual suffering.

Last week the officers of the committee resigned because individuals had been collecting funds and supplies in the name of the committee and devoting the proceeds to their own use. Now the rank and file are after Secretary James Brown and Treasurer Edward Miller, accusing them of having failed to give an account of their stewardship.

Charges and countercharges are being made, and sensational developments may follow. Since the resignation of the relief committee there has been no provision made to prevent the needy ones from suffering, and some are on the verge of starvation.

Falcon To Sail Saturday.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., July 5.—The steamer Falcon will come off the dock to-day, preparatory to starting for Greenland with the Peary auxiliary expedition. She is to sail Saturday night. It has been decided to take the steamer's deckhouse, as the cabin accommodations are inadequate for the requirements of the voyage. It is expected, however, that there will be considerable overcrowding on the return voyage, as the deckhouse must be destroyed to make room for Peary's Arctic house.

For New York's Postoffice.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Postmaster-General Bissell has considered and approved the report of the commission appointed to investigate the needs of New York city's postoffice, and has added allowance for a station letter carriers at a cost of $46,800; additional clerk hire, about $40,000; for new stations, equipping the same, sub-stations, stamp agencies, package boxes, and package box service, about $25,000. Total, about $110,000.

Died of Starvation in New York.

NEW YORK, July 5.—Otto Heine or Herre—he was so weak he could not speak distinctly and his name as he had to be guessed at—died at Chambers street hospital last evening of starvation. He was 58 years of age and had been a commercial traveler in his better days. He lost his place because he was getting old, and finally drifted into the ragged ranks of the outcasts of the city and ended his days on a park bench where he was found sitting in a daze by an officer.

The Recent Plot Against the Czar.

LONDON, July.—A dispatch from Berlin says that the newly discovered mine which was intended to blow up the Czar was laid near the Memorial church in Borki, which the czar was expected to visit shortly. It publishes also a paragraph to the effect that an infernal machine was found recently in a cellar near the St. Petersburg palace. Several arrests have been made and two cabinet officials are said to be connected with the plot.

THE DAY WE FEEL PROUD

Incidents of the Many Celebrations Yesterday.

United States Ambassador Bayard and Consul-General Collins Give Receptions at London, as Does Also Wayne McVeagh in His Official Capacity of Ambassador to Italy.

LONDON, July 5.—Thomas F. Bayard, United States ambassador, assisted by Mrs. Bayard, Miss Florence Bayard, Mrs. S. D. Warren and the staff of the embassy, held a Fourth of July reception at his house in Princes gardens, between 5 and 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon. About 800 persons were present.

From top to bottom the house was decorated with the stars and stripes, and in the corridor and main room the walls were almost hidden with flags.

The most notable part of the light refreshments was a Fourth of July punch, brewed by Mr. Bayard's chef under the ambassador's personal supervision.

Lord Rosebery called to pay his respects to Mr. Bayard earlier in the day.

Among the callers were Andrew Carnegie, the Danish minister and Sir Charles Dilke and their wives, Viscount Wolseley, Sir John Pender, M. P., Judge Andrews, Mme. Albani, Grace Hawthorne, T. P. O'Connor and Mrs. O'Connor, the Duchess of Manchester, Mme. Macchetta d'Alleger, Mrs. Frank Leslie, the Baroness Burdett-Coutts and many United States consuls and consular officials.

All the hotels frequented by Americans and many public resorts hoisted flags in observance of the day.

Boston's Fourth of July Recreations.

BOSTON, July 5.—The programme of sports and entertainments arranged for the Fourth by the city authorities was of such varied character that all classes were enabled to find enjoyment, and the streets were filled with residents and strangers all day and far into the night. The programme included fantastic parades, literary exercises in Boston theatres, athletic sports, hurdling, bicycle, rowing and sailing races, veteran firemen's playing contest, children's entertainments in different parts of the city, and fireworks on the common in the evening. There were no large fires or accidents reported during the day, and nothing to mar the pleasures of the crowds.

The Day at Washington.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Appropriate observance of Independence Day occurred at the Washington monument. The Washington Light Infantry and Battery A, D. C. N. G., headed by the United States marine band and the Mount Pleasant drum corps, marched to the monument from the Arlington hotel as an escort to the participants in the programme. Gen. J. C. Breckinridge, inspector-general of the army, was master of ceremonies, and after the battery had fired a salute he introduced Rev. Dr. Elliott, who made the invocation. E. B. Hay read the Declaration of Independence, and Senators Sherman, of Ohio, and Jarvis, of North Carolina, made speeches.

Tammany Hall's Fourth.

NEW YORK, July 5.—The Tammany society celebrated the Fourth this year in the usual manner, with a big meeting in the Fourteenth street wigwam. Mayor Gilroy, the grand sachem, presided. The principal orator of the day was United States Senator Walsh, of Georgia, and there was no lack of other speakers. During Mr. Walsh's speech, Richard Croker appeared on the platform, coming direct from the steamer Majestic, on which he returned from England. He was given a grand ovation.

Consul-General Collins' Dinner.

LONDON, July 5.—The dinner given at the Savoy by the Hon. P. A. Collins, United States consul-general, in celebration of the Fourth of July was a great success. Sixty guests were present, thirty of whom were consuls. There was an elaborate menu and the dining room was beautifully decorated with a profusion of stars and stripes. An orchestra gave a varied programme, American airs, however, forming the chief part.

Nathan Hale Statue Unveiled.

HUNTINGTON, N. Y., July 5.—The unveiling of the Nathan Hale memorial statue at Huntington was attended by several thousand people. Yesterday's exercises followed the celebration which began on Friday evening by a reception tendered Hon. Stewart L. Woodford by Robert L. Belknap. WHY IT WAS REFUSED

Mme. Carnot's Reason for Declining the Pension.

Says France Has Paid the Only Homage Worthy of the Nation and Her Late Husband—President Casimir-Perier Makes Some Changes at the Elysee—Other Foreign News Items.

PARIS, July 5.—The widow of the late President Carnot has written as follows to his friend, Deputy Mellne, regarding the proposed pension for herself and her children:

"I and my children are very much touched by the proposal, but we think the French people, in giving the late president with such unanimity such magnificent obsequies, have paid the only homage worthy of France and of him."

President Casimir-Perier has resolved to make various changes in official life at the Elysees. He will reduce the military household and will create a civil one, over which the former secretaries, Lafarge and Taigny, will be placed. They will be charged to represent the president in the lobbies of the senate and the chamber of deputies. The president thinks that, in view of the ministerial crisis, he ought to be informed daily of the state of feeling of parliament independently of his ministers. The president has not been represented in the chamber since the constitution was altered in 1875.

Wish Gould's Yacht Success.

LONDON, July 5.—The Standard says: "Messrs. Carrol and Gould have set us a great sporting example in sending their yachts to British waters. All are unanimous in wishing Mr. Gould luck and in hoping that he will take a fair share of the prizes in the contest. It is pretty certain that he will do this and more, and it is to be hoped that his success will induce other Americans to enter our regattas."

Comment on Our Tariff Bill.

It cannot last. Every well wisher of America must hope that the passage of the new bill will be the beginning of the end.

Even Russia Urges Peace.

Nothing xtra for stamps.

The delightful serial "The Overton Claim" ends in The Press today, and we reluctantly part from the people of it and turn to new friends. The new story, to be soon begun, is by Margaret Lee, and is called "The New Isabella". Mr. Gladstone speaks highly of Miss Lee's work, and the new Press serial needs no other recommendation.

A. VanDoren Taylor has begun the publication of The Angler, a bright and newsy paper devoted to New Jersey's ever beautiful Lake Hopatcong. Mr. VanDoren has embarked in a good, a pleasant, and, we trust, a profitable work. He has a splendid tutor, R. B. Sinclair, Westfield's honored citizen, editor of Harper's Weekly, who is resting at the Lake, and who generously gives the Angler the benefit of his experience.

A boon to mothers—that describes our new Children's Clothing Page, prepared by Olive Harper. It contains three columns for girls and three for boys, with diagrams which make the clothing of the children an easy art. The secrets of dressmaking are here exposed by an expert. Grateful testimonials are sure to come from appreciative mothers who will welcome this expose because it means money in their pockets and good clothes, pretty and substantial, on the young people's backs. The three columns for girls will be published in The Press tomorrow, and the three for boys will follow.

Mr. Scott reported to The Press yesterday that the suggestion that private citizens donate the use of their carriages for the good of the town in showing the editors about, next Monday, had already brought gratifying responses from prominent and public-spirited people. The prospects are that there will be on hand for the use of the newspaper men some very roomy and some very fine turnouts. There can't be too many, however, and the residents who have horses and are willing to put them to this splendid service should make known to Mr Scott the fact at once. The rigs will be required only about an hour, and will not be in active service all that time. The idea is to have them at hand so that the editors can take a half-hour drive immediately on their arrival. The hackmen are expected to loan their services also; they will never miss the hour, coming as it does at a time of day when they are ordinarily inactive. Everyone ought to lend a hand (or rather a horse) for the resultant good to the town. It is n't every day Plainfield has a chance to show herself to the moulders of public opinion and the rulers of the nation. Trot out your horse!

TENNIS TOURNEY.

A Day of Good Play at the Hillside Courts.

It is seldom a holiday occurs in Plainfield without something interesting taking place at the Hillside Tennis Club, and yesterday was no exception to the rule. From 9 a. m. until dark there was an ever changing crowd of people who came ostensibly to watch the tennis, to see and to be seen. Yesterday the tennis was well worth watching as some of the best players from the clubs at Elizabeth, Bergen Point and Jersey City contested for the prizes in the first invitation tournament that has been given by the club. There were 16 entries and only singles were played. Jersey City and Elizabeth each sent 4 representatives, Bergen Point sent 3 and the home club had 5 men in the field.

The prizes were, first, a three-handled silver loving cup engraved with the event and name of the winner and runner up, a pair of silver-backed military brushes similarly engraved. The playing continued almost continuously from 9 a. m. until 8 p. m.

The morning audience was composed almost entirely of tennis enthusiasts who were intent on watching the game, but late in the afternoon the social faction was more in evidence and the sides of courts were densely packed with spectators, who showed a remarkable interest considering how few of them really understood the game.

Mrs. Robert L. Burnett was the hostess for the club. She was assisted in receiving by Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., and Mrs. J. Parker Mason. The girls pouring tea were: Miss Lawrence, Miss Marion Dumont and Miss Maude VanBoskerck.

The tea and lemonade tables were decorated with sweet pease.

The play in detail was as follows:

FIRST ROUND.

Coyne, Elizabeth, beat L. H. Ferris, Jersey City, 6—4, 6—3; C. S. West, Hillside, beat Doubleday, Bergen Point, 6—1, 6—4; A. J. Post, Jersey City, beat Seymour, Bergen Point, 6—2, 6—1; J. P. Thomas, Elizabeth, beat C. F. Walz, Hillside, 6—3, 6—1; F. K. Fish, Jr., Hillside, beat H. D. West, Hillside, 7—5, 6—1; E. Carleton, Elizabeth, beat Moore, Jersey City, 6—1, 6—3; S. L. Smith, Bergen Point, beat F. E. Ferris, Jersey City, 1—6, 6—1, 7—5; Charlock, Elizabeth, beat Archie Cox, Hillside, 6—1, 8—6.

SECOND ROUND.

C. S. West, Hillside, beat Coyne, Elizabeth, 6—3, 6—4; J. P. Thomas, Elizabeth, beat A. J. Post, Jersey City, 6—1, 6—1; Fish, Hillside, beat Carleton, Elizabeth, 7—5, 6—4; Smith, Bergen Point, beat Charlock, Elizabeth, 6—0, 5—7, 6—4.

SEMI-FINALS.

Thomas, Elizabeth, beat C. S. West, Hillside, 6—1, 6—1; S. L. Smith, Bergen Point, beat Fish, Hillside, 6—3, 7—5.

FINALS.

J. P. Thomas, Elizabeth, beat S. L. Smith, Bergen Point, 5—3, 6—0.

An odd fact, showing how much depends on the drawing in a tournament was that C. F. Walz, who was beaten by Thomas in the first round, won more games from him than did Smith the runner up or any of Thomas's adversaries.

Considering the number of people that are out of town the attendance in the afternoon was very large.

Among those present were: Major and Mrs Robert L Burnett, Mr and Mrs J Parker Mason, Mr and Mrs B A Hegeman, Jr, Mr and Mrs W L Saunders, Mr and Mrs James L Anthony, Mr and Mrs Josiah P Brown, Mr and Mrs G P Mellick, Mrs Agustus Schuyler, Mr and Mrs DeWitte C Ivins, Mrs Fox, the Misses Davis, Mr and Mrs Irving Brown, Mr and Mrs G Harry Squires, Miss White, Miss Helene White, Miss Talmadge, Miss Lawrence Miss Maude Van Boskerck, Miss Marion Dumont, Rev and Mrs S P Simpson, Miss Simpson, Rev W R Richards, Mr and Mrs C W Burke, Russel Burks, Clinton Burke, Henry Talmadge, the Misses Whiton, Miss Carrie Vail Miss Abbott, Wesley Abbott, Albert Simmonds, J P Murray Dexter O Tiffany, Mr and Mrs Henry Bogert, Miss Bogert, Miss Corlies, Miss Lockwood of Philadelphia, David Wotherspoon, Howard Corlies, Fred Walz, Miss Walz, James Middledith, Ralph Opdyke, A D Shepard, Jr, Mr Sykes, J S Anthony, Percy Stewart, Walter Stewart, Miss Elizabeth Stewart, the Misses Ellis, Mr and Mrs J B Dumont, Clifford McGee, L E Waring, Walter Murray, Dr Hedges, Mr Patterson and many others.

HOME TESTIMONY.

Mr Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly. They were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 144 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOS. CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact, it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

Dr. Lighthill

Question—How can they be made and sold at such prices—these excellent TURKISH TOWELS! But here they are, and we have sold more towels in one month than in any previous five years.

Fancy good bath towels 1⅓ yard long selling at 25c; and then those thick rough-and-soft towels at 75c to $1.00.

As to quality, they are superior to those commonly shown in the dry goods trade, as you may easily see.

THE CRESCENT RACES.

Good Sport Draws Another Large Crowd to the New Oval.

A large attendance and good riding made the Crescents' races yesterday successful. Over 2,000 people were present. A track record of a mile in 2:17 1-5 was made by Charles Brown of Elizabeth in the final of the one-mile handicap. The track was in good condition, but the strong breeze made it hard work to sport at the finish. High gears held their own on the back, only to drop behind when the windy turn was reached.

In spite of the tendency to ride in bunches, the day was free from serious accidents. In starting from the hundred yard mark in the mile handicap, Rosenberg of Brooklyn fell, but escaped with a bent crank. In the second heat of the two-mile handicap Frank Allsopp of Newark, (200 yards), fell on the long turn. Monte Scott went over him and Goodman struck the two. Allsopp was bruised and scratched, Scott was uninjured and Goodman had his knees and elbows scraped. Scott started off, taking Goodman's wheel by mistake in the hurry and excitement. Goodman grabbed Allsopp's wheel and went on, but he had lost time and his father stopped him. Scott spurted and got a place in the final. The cuts on Allsopp's face were sewed up by Dr. J. T. Fritts.

The races were well managed. Most of them were exciting, and the crowd was much interested in them all. The only change in the programme was the substitution of a stop-watch for the Pope Manufacturing Company's gun in the mile handicap prizes. At the next meet Class B races will be run and it will be offered in one of them, as permitted by the rules. Class A prizes are limited to cycling implements.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

WITH THE PARK CLUB.

A Scene of Beauty Illuminated by the Magic of Pyrotechnics.

The natural amphitheatre of the Park Club grounds was the setting for a charming scene last night, when the club gave its annual exhibition of love of country and of the beautiful. On the tennis courts had been arranged a lavish amount of fireworks, and the invited guests of the club held comfortable colgns of vantage on the roofed platform, at the windows, and along the terrace.

There was a delightful vivacity about the gathering of society people, and the white gowns and sea of faces were well contrasted by the dark green of the lawns and trees. Outside the grounds a large crowd assembled, and enjoyed with the more favored the excellent exhibition.

Well had the committee worked. Over the entire arrangements the master-hand of B. A. Hegeman, Jr., had exercised thorough control. The house had been attractively decorated by direction of George C. Evans. Over the grounds swung many gay Japanese lanterns, ropes of which climbed in graceful curves to the top of the flagstaff; this branch of the preparations was in charge of Charles A. Reed. The fireworks themselves were in charge of Henry D. Brewster, and the dance that followed the display was under the direction of William J. Roome. The finances of the affair were in the judicious hands of George P. Dupee.

Under all this efficient guidance the celebration was bound to be a repetition of the club's former successes. It was a triumph of good taste and good management.

As the darkness gathered the sky of night was illuminated with a salutation of aerial maroons, which burst into flame at a height of 500 feet. Then peppered forth, the rattle and the bang of ten thousand thunderous crackers such as delight the fancy of the Chinese mandarins. For ten minutes thereafter the detail of the scene was aglow in the tinting of a scarlet illumination, in which curtains of illuminated vapors gave the effect of an Italian sunset.

Manhattan Beach and World's Fair tints were shown in the colored exhibition of rockets, and mines were fired releasing stars and serpents in midair. Then fountains poured upward a mass of fiery flowers, and a miniature falls was shown. Bomb shells were thrown into the azure of the heavens, bursting into trees of laburnum, wisteria, and yew. Aerial contortionists were set in motion, and Indian jugglery of colored effects amazed the beholders. A blazing weeping-willow waved its branches, and twinkling stars were floated about by parachute rockets. Weeping-willow rockets were fired with branches reaching to the ground. Dragons' nests crackled and snapped. A ten-minute illumination of emerald, and a flight of colored star rockets, were succeeded by a wondrous reproduction of the passion flower, fifteen feet in diameter. Floating star rockets and national streamer rockets preceded the discharge of a series of gigantic gatling batteries of colored bullets. A huge revolving wheel and comet, pink, emerald, lilac and scarlet bombs, electric star and fiery waggler rockets, and prismatic fountains of jewelled fires, delighted the onlookers; and colored geysers gushed forth umbrellas of fire, and golden columns crowned with jewels. Then the sun was rivalled by a mammoth eight spoke wheel, followed by a flight of 12 bombshells. Appreciated novelties were the hanging chain and World's Fair special rockets, which released floating and changeful constallations of stars, the combinations rivalling the Pleiades.

Golden columns, jewelled top, revolved in prismatic whirlwinds. The devil got among the tailors, and everybody saw more stars than are down in the books. A jack popped out of his box. A cross of Malta revealed its glory. A final flight of rockets went up, and the fireworks were but a lingering spark in the sky, a pleasant memory.

The pyrotechnics were not the chief delight of the evening. The picture itself was a joy—this scene of gallant men and lovely women, the ripple of laughter, the approving exclamations, the breeze-kissed foliage taking on chameleon hues from the varied fires. And when from the casements of the club-house there floated out the stirring melody of "My Country 'Tis of Thee", every bosom thrilled with pride of patriotism and every eye glistened with the pleasure of the thought that the love of country was still a green bay tree in the breasts of American men and American women.

The song was led by the stalwart voice of William Runyon, and the dames and maidens of the club grouped about him in effective chorus.

Tenderness was in the song, and tenderness was in the brave hearts of the committeemen when they bade the orphans of the Children's Home come and see the glory of the nation's birthday. The little ones were all there, revelling in the fiery wonders, and laughing at the good American humor that pervades even the fireworks of the Fourth. They gave wholesome "Ahs!" at the magnificence, and laughed at the snappy jokes of the tailors and of the crackers. And all the people laughed and applauded with them. And when the sputtering sparks showered down on their heads that was all the more fun.

If the outdoor frolic was great, the indoor pleasure was no less. There was exquisite music by Isler of Newark, and the dance was light and free. Everyone of social note was there, and the whole town looked on. The cozy club-house was again taxed to its limits to hold the eager throng. It will have to be enlarged before another such event. The Park Club proved its patriotism and its ability to delight its friends. That means the people, the whole people.

Ed Nelson Breaks His Wrist.

Ticket Agent Edward Nelson is disabled from counting tickets and change by the fracture of a wrist. He was in Demarest's grocery store and stepped behind a counter to take down a package from a shelf. A cellar stairway was in front of the shelves, and he stepped into the opening. He was taken at once to Dr. Fritts, who found a bad fracture and set it. Mr. Nelson had a similar fracture several years ago.

COL. KING'S HOSPITALITY.

Hotel Albion and Its Famous Dinners.

The Press has been hearing a good deal lately about the delights of living at Hotel Albion, and yesterday a representative gave the hospitable host, Col. A. H. King, and his estimable wife, a surprise call, and found that all that has been said said in praise of the house is true. The appointments of the hotel are perfect, and the table is unsurpassed. Yesterday a grand Fourth of July dinner was given, which all the guests pronounced a veritable triumph of the art culinary. To were too long to tell all the good things served; suffice it to say that the feast was as sumptuous as any served at three times the price in the metropolis. The season's best offerings were wholesomely prepared, and served in excellent style. The much traveled wheelmen who were at the table said it was the most enjoyable meal they had ever eaten, and that is a common verdict at this hotel. The dinner bills yesterday were of special and beautiful design, and were eagerly kept as souvenirs.

The Albion is most pleasantly situated, and its rooms and verandas are breeze-swept even on the hottest days. The parlors and dining-rooms are charmingly fitted up, and every comfort is faithfully looked after. In Hotel Albion the people of Plainfield have a hostelry to be proud of, and tired New Yorkers will find it a haven of health. There's no need of Plainfielders leaving town in search of rest, when they can have every comfort so well provided for at this popular family hotel.

Bonfires, Bells and Boom.

Hotel Grenada front was beautifully illuminated with gay Japanese lanterns the evening of the Third and Fourth, and the great day was ushered in on North avenue by the explosion of fireworks and a huge bonfire in front of the Press office. Another big bonfire possessed the street in front of the Fire Department Headquarters. Two big cannons were hauled about town, and made roaring music. Rockets were sent up in front of the City Hotel and at the corner of Front and Somerset streets. A brass cannon held a crowd together at the Westervelt avenue bridge, and kept the neighborhood awake. At midnight the borough fire-gong was turned loose and the old fire bell helped usher in the Fourth. Trinity Church bell did its duty as ever, and other bells rung were the Seventh-Day Baptist, the Crescent Avenue, and the First Presbyterian.

Were Glad to Help Newt.

Patriotic H. Newton Spencer had a hole dug in front of his house on Somerset street, Tuesday, to receive a flagpole to float Old Glory. At sunset while he was off looking for guy ropes and poles to boost it up, his good friends gave him a happy surprise by pitching in and getting the pole planted before he got back. L. E. Barkalew engineered the job, and the borough Samson, John Goodwin, was an able lieutenant. With a boom and a hurrah the pole was set firmly in the ground, and at the top the Stars and Stripes floated during the Fourth. The pole is the stanch tamarack, smoothed and painted. A glit ball surmounts it, and a weather-vane shows which way the wind blows. And there's always a breeze in the borough.

ARCADIA ON THE HEIGHTS.

Delightful Celebration of the Fourth at Hotel Netherwood.

NETHERWOOD, JULY 4.

(Special to The Press.)

One of those bright crispy days for which this section of picturesque Jersey is justly noted ushered in the glorious Fourth at this noted resort. The usual display of day fireworks, music, and all that goes to make the day a glorious success, happened at this Arcadia on the Heights of fair Netherwood.

The Netherwood's register shows a large assemblage of prominent families and others sojourning here, from principal cities. The booking for this season compares favorably with former years, and there is no question that the season of '94 will be one of the most brilliant in the annals of this home-resort.

The grand full-dress hop, given by Proprietor Frank E. Miller to the guests and their friends, was a great success from start to finish. The excellent orchestra, under the direction of Professor Stoelzer, rendered charming selections which gladdened the hearts of the happy votaries of terpsichore, as well as others. An excellent collation given by Proprietor Miller to his guests and their friends was served at 10:30 p. m. The large salon was filled with brave men and fair women. The brilliant costumes worn by the fair participants were simply dreams of loveliness, displaying the exquisite taste of their fair owners.

Fully 300 visitors were present at the festivities this evening, and the event stands recorded as one among the most brilliant at this favorite resort.

Plainfield and the cottagers residing hereabouts were well represented at the fete, and were warm in their praises of the event.

Mrs. Frank E. Miller, the charming wife of the proprietor, whose exquisite taste in the line of decorations is well known, designed the decoration for the dinner menu, a tri-colored ribbon forming a bow knot, from which was suspended a lovely Jack rose. The guests all expressed their admiration for the dainty affair. A fine display of fireworks on the lawn during the evening, was a great success.

This makes the seventh year of your correspondent at this delightful home on the Heights, and from present indications the season will be all that could be desired.

J. AUG. HINCHMAN.

A Fanwood Celebration.

D. A. Schierenbeck, of Terrill road, Fanwood, celebrated the Fourth in a picturque manner. The spacious lawns in front of his residence was beautifully decorated with flags and Japanese lanterns. A New York band was placed in the Summer house, and played during the afternoon and evening. A large number of guests were present, including Mr. and Mrs. Forsyth and sons, from New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Burrows and daughters, formerly of Bayonne, but now residents of Terrill road. All had a delightful time. Refreshments were served on the lawn at 10 p. m. Those who did not care for dancing amused themselves watching the setting off of the fire works. All went home very much pleased with the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Schierenbeck.

Big Battle Flag.

One of the most patriotic decorations seen in Plainfield yesterday was the residence of Mrs. F. Tiemann Horn, 318 Central avenue. The house was festooned from peak to ground with a battle flag thirty-eight feet long and over twenty wide. The flag was presented to Miss Fay Horn by the officers of Fort Preble, Maine, where her brother, Lieut. Tiemann N. Horn, is stationed.

The Deadly Turn-Table.

Samuel Howarth, aged 30, was taken from Bound Brook to Muhlenberg Hospital early Tuesday evening. He had been struck by a turn-table and injured in the back. His case is not serious.

A WOMAN'S LIFE.

SOME THINGS MEN DON'T CONSIDER

Thousands of Women Suffer Daily for Years without Complaining.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Men cannot know the sensibilities hidden in the delicate organisms of women.

Thousands suffer without knowing why, and die the death daily for want of knowledge that relief is so close at hand.

Lydia E. Pinkham will forever stand highest in the love of suffering women.

Because she discovered the cause of woman's weakness and suffering, and found the means to remove it.

Diseases of the Uterus and ovarian troubles are most universal; you can see their ravages in pale faces; it is inicated by halting steps, dizziness, faintness, irritability, melancholy, extreme lassitude, nervousness, sleeplessness, and disturbances of the stomach.

You will hear your friends speak of the dreadful "backache," the crushing sense of "bearing down."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for twenty years has saved women from all this. Hear this woman speak:—

"No man ever suffered a single pang like unto woman.

"Women, therefore, gladly turn to a woman for sympathy, counsel, and help in their peculiar troubles.

"Lydia E. Pinkham deserves the confidences showered upon her by thousands. Her Vegetable Compound has done more for women than any other remedy.

"The great cause of woman's misery is in her womb. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound goes direct to the source of trouble, drives out disease, and cures backache, fainting, despondency, bloating, ovarian troubles, and leucorrhœa.

"I would have been in my grave if I had not taken Mrs. Pinkham's medicines."

FIRES OF THE DAY.

Hensey's Barn and Smith's Paint Shop Destroyed.

The first fire alarm of the Fourth was sent in from Box 16 at 3:15 for a fire in the barn on John Hensey's place 746 East Second street. The cause was a cannon which was discharged toward the building. The waddi g went through a crack and set the hay afire. The barn was almost completely burned. It was a small building owned by Jacob Voehl and was insured. Hensey loses about $25 on the uninsured contents.

While on East Second street near the new Headquarters, the snap on the harness of Gazelle's hose cart pulled out, the collar fell off and Driver Daly was almost dragged from the wagon. Frank Hart ran out into street and bravely stopped the horse, however.

Passengers on Car 1 at 11:15 last evening discovered fire in the barn in the rear of Painter Ferdinand O. Smith's house, 686 West Front street. Garrett Drier went on to Box 43 and sent in an alarm.

Fred Huff and Walter Smalley notified Mr. Smith and brought the horse and the two wagons from the barn. They had no time to go back for the harness before the building was filled with smoke and flames. Two lines of hose were stretched and the firemen had the fire out by 12. The paint and oils stored in the building made it a bad fire to fight. Part of the stock exploded but several barrels of oil were saved. But little of value is left of the barn. Mr. Smith had $100 insurance on it. The cause is not known.

Engine 2 did not leave the house. The right trace broke and the team plunged to the left. The wheel struck the door and damaged it slightly.

CHURCH CHIMES.

Members and friends of the Grace M. E. Church choir spent yesterday pleasantly at Washington Rock. They say the atmosphere was full of ozone and patriotism at that historic spot.

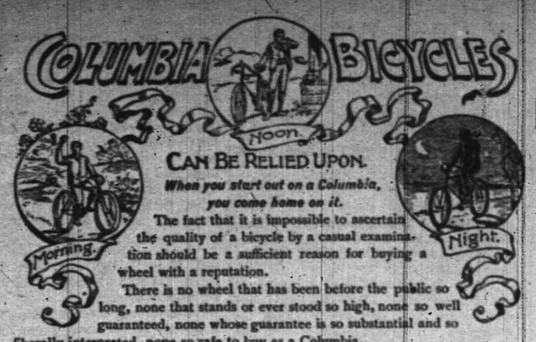
COLUMBIA BICYCLES



CAN BE RELIED UPON.

When you start out on a Columbia, you come home on it.

The fact that it is impossible to ascertain the quality of a bicycle by a casual examination should be a sufficient reason for buying a wheel with a reputation.

There is no wheel that has been before the public so long, none that stands or ever stood so high, none so well guaranteed, none whose guarantee is so substantial and so liberally interpreted, none so safe to buy as a Columbia.

With Columbias listed at $125, few riders will be so unwise as to invest in lower grade bicycles.

The Overton Claim.

BY MARTHA McCULLOCH WILLIAMS.

COPYRIGHT BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION, 1894

CHAPTER XXIII.

"We must bring him here and at once. It is the only thing to do," Vance said to Major Overton as the struggling daylight fell full on the tall, dead man, so straight and stock and still. The old man nodded, saying:

"Yes. It will take half a day to get out of this wilderness. Besides we could never carry him, and to come back"—he stopped with a half shudder—"is impossible and impolitic," Vance finished. Even as they spoke came a noise of pick and shovel outside. Dozens of rusty tools lay under the rotting sheds about, and willing hands were plying them to put out of sight the poor, reckless creature, who had paid the fullest penalty of his sins. By time the sun was above the tree tops a long grave had been scooped in the little glade back of the old house. Dare at the springside, her face, her hands, refreshed and spotless, turned to Allen, saying softly:

"Ask them, please, grandfather and Mr. Hildreth, if we may line the grave with boughs and put others above him."

"Surely we may," Allen said, pressing her soft palm to his cheek. "My Dare, it is like you thus to do good to them that despitefully use you. We will make together for our enemy a green bed and give him a pillow of flowers."

Hand in hand they went about the wood plucking sheaves of goldenrod, stalks of cardinal flower, of iron weed and early asters. Allen had spoken a little apart with the gravediggers. Already they had torn flat, leafy boughs from the thicket and covered with their green all the dank cold clay. Across the western end of the narrow yawning pit Allen laid the flower sheaves fresh from Dare's hand. And down in that cool and flowery darkness they laid Royal Cleve, his two hands folded peacefully under more green leaves, to await the summons at which all life must answer for the deeds done in the body.

Then, as though a weight had been lifted from all souls, the cavalcade made its way out of the wilderness. Major Overton's horse had been left behind, so precipitate was the flight of his captors. Dare rode upon an improvised pillion behind her lover when the steep hill road did not make it necessary for both to dismount. They said little, those two. The silence of overful hearts lay between them. But Major Overton talked and smiled with his friendly lawyers in a fashion none had ever seen before.

"Oh, for an hour of Hawkins now!" Hildreth said to Vance as they found themselves nearly at the outer edge of the iron land.

"You will hardly ever enjoy it, I fear," Vance returned. "Plague on that storm! But for it I meant to try to get at him before he learned the miscarriage of his scheme. As it is, he has no doubt heard it in time to quit the country."

"Do you think so?" Hildreth asked, with an odd smile. "Man alive, there is no think about it. Hawkins is as far from being a fool as from being an honest man. After this—why, it's a hanging matter with the proofs we have."

"No doubt, if we don't use them," Hildreth said. "You forget he had a partner in all this—one, too, who will make it possible for him to go scot free."

"Do you mean—it cannot be Mrs. Townley?" Vance said.

Major Overton leaned from his saddle to say very low:

"Gentlemen, good friends, please forget that—that you have spoken. Whatever we may know, Dare has no suspicion of the treachery of her own blood. Pray do not make it necessary that she should be saddened with such knowledge."

"Agreed, on one condition, major—that you let us settle with Hawkins. He is not the man a gentleman can touch. I know you want to shoot him, but that would result in some awkward explanations," Vance said, laying a hand on Major Overton's arm. Still Hildreth smiled queerly, looking a little over his shoulder to where Allen and Dare walked in blissful company. At last he said:

"Major, here we are at the back side of Exeter. I move that we go in and breakfast with Mrs. Townley, or without her."

Major Overton sat up very straight, saying: "Excuse me, sir. I cannot break bread there. The sight of that woman"——

"Major, I ask it as a personal favor," Hildreth interrupted. Vance looked at him hard.

"In that case I have no choice after last night," Major Overton said, with a shade of the old techy stateliness. Hildreth said only, "Thank you."

Five minutes later Black Patsey was crying out: "De lawsy, Miss Dare, yo' des done foun yo'sif des too late, Miss Mel, she des done got ma'rid ter dat er crank mouf Mr. Hawkins an drib 'way lickety split wid libery stable horses—say de got ter ketch de train. But she know somehow yo' was comin, comin hyer, tole me git breakfast ready, an hab it good, an gib her love, an say she wish yo' well, an she gwine write ef she cain't wait ter see yo'. De preacher, he's in de parlor room yet, an how come it yo' got sech er many gentlemens ter fine an fetch yo' outen dat dar coalin's place?"

"I'll tell you, Patsey. There's another wedding on hand," Vance said, his eyes twinkling; then as he got down from his horse: "Let me help you a bit, major. I think you will be the better for breakfast and six hours of rest." Major Overton waved him back a trifle impatiently and made to dismount in the old alert fashion. But even as he swung himself from stirrup a pallor overspread his face.

He tottered and hung limp across the saddle.

Kind hands lifted him reverently thence, bore him inside and laid him in the wide dim hall. Dare knelt at his side, chafing the nervous, veiny hands that were learning thus late in life what it was to tremble.

"Drink this. You are overspent," Hildreth said, holding to the old man's lips a draft of milk and brandy. Major Overton drained it; then, as his face grew less gray, beckoned to Vance and half whispered:

"I know what it means, the beginning of the end. I must live a few hours longer though. Dare—Allen—she must not"——

"What is it that you wish, major? We will do it or hang, but never think of dying. You are good for years yet," Vance said, trying to speak in his old cheery voice. Major Overton's lips moved, but hardly a sound came from them. Allen, hurrying to his side, caught the old man's eyes of appeal. Kneeling, he took Dare's hands within his own, then laid the two clasped across the other nerveless palm. Instantly Major Overton's eyes brightened. He whispered painfully, "Yes, take her—now." Dare laid her cheek softly to the withered one on the pillow and said, sobbing: "Oh, grandfather, surely you do not want to be rid of me. Let everything go until you are well again."

"I—am—well—now. Life has—been—a fever," the old man said in a strange, husky whisper. Hildreth touched Allen's arm.

"I have sent a swift messenger for a license," he said half under his breath. "In two hours it will be here. You must marry Dare at once. It is what the major wishes and the only thing to do. Poor old fellow! He has lived on his hope and courage this 40 years or more. Now that the strain is ended, no wonder he has broken down."

"I am more than ready to do as he wishes," Allen said in the same hushed voice. "But Dare—can she bear further excitement after all she has undergone?"

"Ask her," Hildreth said, stepping to the bedside. There he took Major Overton's hand in his and said aloud: "Now, major, all is as you would have it. The minister is here; the license soon will be. You must drink some more brandy and go to sleep until we wake you for the wedding."

"Yes," said Vance as the old man almost smiled, "but first let me tell you that Miss Dare is even more an heiress than we thought. Our friend, the parson, has just put into my hands a deed of gift to Exeter and all it contains, executed by Mrs. Hawkins within five minutes of her marriage. It may not be quite valid, but I think it will stand."

"No. I fear we have lost Hawkins for good and always," Hildreth said as Major Overton's eyelids fell in sleep.

Two hours later, robed all in white, with a white rose in her hair and another at her breast, Dare gave her hand to Allen Fauntleroy, standing just where her mother had made her bridal vows. They had flung wide door and windows. Outside the summer sun fell golden; the summer winds laughed softly through the leaves. Within the heavy tarnished splendors kept still their note of gloom, though Patsey had done her faithful best to brighten them with feathery asparagus, sprays of scarlet trumpet vine and white August lilies.

Stretched helpless upon a rich faded couch, Major Overton looked through tears at the last of his line, given thus at his own wish into the keeping of her hereditary enemy. But they were not bitter tears. Though Dare's eyes were modestly downcast, happy blushes chased one the other eloquently over her face. Allen's countenance said even more plainly that he had come through storm and stress to his heart's dear desire.

"I pronounce you man and wife. What God hath joined together, let no man put asunder," the minister said sonorously. And with one thought the wedded pair turned from him to kneel in front of Major Overton and bow their heads for his blessing.

He had seemed past speech and motion, but with a last flash of the will that had never quailed he half raised himself, laid his hand on Dare's head and said, with clear distinctness, "God bless my children and keep their hearts full of love."

"Amen!" said the minister, and every listener only echoed it. Then a solemn hush fell on them all, for the old face,

"God bless my children and keep their hearts full of love."

the old eyes, were radiant; a smile lay about the parted lips, through which came the swiftly shortening breath. Outside a thirush began singing loud and clear. The wind dropped. A vagrant sun ray slipped into the room. It fell on Dare's head as she stood too rapt for tears, her eyes full upon the dying face. Before it mounted to the wall the gasping breath was done. Francis Overton slept with his fathers. He had won a lifelong fight, and the hour that brought victory found also death.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.

Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make is True.

To those who do not already know this there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Elmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

DR. STARKWEATHER.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays 4 to 6 p. m.

Those living at a distance can consult the Doctor by letter.

LABOR'S GREAT BATTLE

Riotsers in Full Possession of the Situation at Chicago.

Federal Troops Now There Utterly Unable To Cope With the Mobs—Freight Cars Overturned on the Main Tracks, Others Set on Fire, Switches Broken, and Troops Jeered and Hooted—Railroad Officials Personally Clear Away the Wreckage—Situation in General.

CHICAGO, July 6.—The great railroad strike has just entered upon its second week, and the fact was celebrated by an inauguration of mob law against which the troops at command were apparently powerless to contend. Cars to a total of a score or more were thrown across the tracks, effecting a temporary blockade; switches were rendered useless; signalmen driven from towers, and the property of various railroads were menaced with the torch. To-day the mob, and not unreasonably, is claiming victory.

The wild scenes of yesterday were enacted on a stretch of railroad territory occupied by the tracks of the Lake Shore and Rock Island and running south some three miles from the board of trade structure in the heart of the business district. Within this strip, hardly more than a block in width, and fringed on either side with tenements or the humble homes of railroad men and other wage-workers, a mob that aggregated 25,000 men, women and children had complete control.

The riotous demonstrations began about noon at Thirty-ninth street and the Lake Shore tracks, at the crossing of the Union Transit lines over which trains from the stock yards are connected with the Michigan Central on the lake front for the east. Word came to a mob that had gathered there that, with the aid of the cavalry and deputy marshals, a heavily loaded cattle train for the New York Central & Hudson River road had been moved out of the yards and was on its way over the Transit line. With a yell that was heard blocks away, the mob, at this time about 2,000 strong, moved west two blocks on Thirty-ninth street to Stewart avenue, where several empty freight cars stood on the main track.

The mob needed no machinery nor tools nor battering ram for this purpose. Its leaders possessed a strength born of frenzy. There was a rush for the freight cars, and in the twinkling of an eye one of them had been turned completely over, tracks upward, effectually blocking the tracks over which the approaching cattle train was making its way.

The train was not in sight, and so the mob retraced its steps eastward to the tracks of the Rock Island and Lake Shore. Here it proceeded to overturn cars by the wholesale. Two were placed across the crossing of the Belt line, in order to rivet the obstruction to the cattle train in the event of the blockade further west being raised.

Then other cars were turned over on the Lake Shore and Rock Island tracks at the rate of two to a block for nearly a mile southward, while the mob hooted and yelled and cheered the crash made by each car as it turned a somersault.

At Fortieth street, one of the string of freight cars was fired. A call was turned in, however, by a tradesman on the corner, and on the arrival of the department the flames were soon extinguished.

Fuel was added to the strikers' fury about 2 p. m. when three Rock Island trains, one bringing the troops and deputy marshals from Blue Island, and the others day and Pullman coaches filled with through passengers, were seen in the distance.

No obstructions on the main track were encountered south of Thirty-ninth street, and here the forward train came to a full stop. Half a block ahead two empty freight cars were lying on the track.

The passengers on the trains in the rear were advised of the situation, and with one accord they concluded to disembark there and trust to the cable cars to reach their destinations.

In the meantime the regular troops, comprising companies C and D, of the Thirteenth infantry, under the respective commands of Captains Conrad and Cornish, had left the first train and were drawn up on either side of the cars.

The mob, which by this time had gotten itself outside of the fences, greeted the troops with stolid silence.

Telegrams were sent to the yards for a wrecking crew, but the reply came quickly back that not a man could be had for love or money, and so the group of officials that had met the train at this point, and which included General Superintendent Dunlap, Vice-President Purday and Superintendent of Terminals Hubbell, of the Rock Island; Division Superintendent New, of the Lake Shore, and several attaches of the law and order and other departments of the same road, set themselves to the task of raising the blockade. It was hard work, especially for men not accustomed to laborious undertakings, and it did not improve their tempers to have the on-looking mob hoot and jeer whenever they made an effort that failed to pan out.

Just as the first car had been cleared off the tracks, a mighty shout was heard a few blocks north, and immediately after a rumbling hollow noise told the story that more obstructions had been placed in the passage of trains. At the request of Marshal Donnelly, Captain Conrad started off at double-quick time at the head of company C, but by the time the troops reached the scene the mob had cleared itself from the tracks to the roadway on either side, and the soldiers were treated to a round of ironical applause by way of recognition for their trot.

Captain Conrad kept his men around for a few minutes, and then with the remark that it was like climbing up a tree and down again, ordered a march back to the train.

It was nearly an hour before the main track had been cleared of the two overturned cars, and then the three trains proceeded until Thirty-fifth street was reached. Here it was the same story over again.

The officials took off their coats and went to work with a will. Mayor Hopkins, with Chief Superintendent of Police Brennan, Lieut. Kipley, and 100 officers put in an appearance at this juncture, and the officers did good work in guarding the crossings and keeping the tracks clear of the mob.

The work of removing the obstructions was kept up until the trains finally reached the Van Buren street depot at 9 o'clock. It had taken 15 hours for a trip usually made in one hour.

The result of the day's movements at the stock yards is a practical acknowledgement by the United States troops here that they are utterly unable to cope with the mob that now holds complete sway in the district. Despite the best efforts of the grizzled warriors, who have faced situations far more serious without quailing, trains were stopped, engineers and firemen dragged from the engines, cars overturned from the tracks, switches thrown, and the law hooted at and openly set at naught.

Arson was added to anarchy, and it was proved conclusively that the police and soldiers were as helpless to preserve the peace as a regiment of two-year-old children.

Marshal Arnold's chief deputy, J. C. Donnelly, in an interview with a reporter of the United Press, declared that nothing short of placking Chicago under martial law will end the trouble at the stock yards.

ALTGELDT PROTESTS.

Says That Federal Troops Are Not Needed at Chicago.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The president, Secretary Lamont, Attorney General Olney, Postmaster General Bissel and Gen. Schofield remained at the white house until midnight this morning. Many telegrams were received and sent during the course of the evening, Gen. Ruggles bringing one over to Gen. Schofield from Gen. Miles.

When the conference broke up Secretary Lamont, acting as spokesman for the president, announced that there was nothing to make public except the telegram from Gov. Altgeld, of Illinois, and the president's response thereto.

Gov. Altgeldt protests against the presence of United States troops in Chicago. He says the troops were not called for and are not needed. The state troops, he declares, are able to cope with the present trouble, and that the state of Illinois is not only able to care for itself, but stands ready to-day to furnish the federal government any assistance it may need elsewhere.

To this the president responds:

"Federal troops were sent to Chicago in strict accordance with the constitution and laws of the United States, upon demand of the postoffice department that obstruction should be removed. . . . To meet these conditions, which are clearly within the province of federal authority, the presence of federal troops in the city of Chicago was not only proper, but necessary, and there has been no intention of thereby interfering with the plain duty of the local authorites to preserve the peace of the city."

'FRISCO CUT OUT.

No Way Now To Reach the Golden Gate by Rail.

BOSTON, July 6.—Speaking with reference to the effect that the big strike is having on the sale of tickets in Boston for western points, an official of the Grand Trunk said to-day:

"We are selling all the tickets we can between Boston and Chicago. There is no block whatever between here and that city. But further west things are different. This morning word came to sell no tickets over points covered by the Northern Pacific, for that road is all ablock, and the boycott there seems to have had the effect of delaying all traffic. Otherwise we are in no way affected. However, we fear that a few hours may change the situation, as the boycott seems to be working east."

At the Boston & Albany office a prospective purchaser of a ticket to the Pacific coast was told that orders had been received not to sell any tickets to California points, except on the purchaser's own r isk. Ogden to San Francisco, and San Francisco by way of New Orleans, two ways of reaching the Golden Gate, are blocked. At present it is impossible for passengers to get through by these two routes, and the only other outlet to the coast is by way of the Northern Pacific, and orders have been sent to all the agents that this road is now blocked.

MAILS BY STEAMER.

If the Railroads Cannot Transport Them Perkins Line Will.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Unless there is a favorable turn in the strike situation within the next few days it is probable that the postoffice officials will effect an arrangement for the transportation of the mails along the Pacific coast by the Perkins line of steamers, which have on other occasions been pressed into service.

Reports received at the department from the coast are not full and complete enough to warrant the postmaster-general at this time making an immediate arrangement with the Perkins company, but should the railroads be unable to transport the mails arrangements will be made to continue the service along the coast by steamers. As there are no representatives of the company in the city it will necessarily take considerable time to effect an arrangement between the government and the company for the contemplated service.

SPREADING AT DETROIT.

Lake Shore Practically Tied Up—Men Out on Other Roads.

DETROIT, Mich., July 6.—The railroad strike is spreading in this city. All the switchmen and freight handlers of the Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee at the Brush street depot are out and the trains are moved with difficulty, the switching being done by the trainmen and yardmasters.

All the switchmen, freight handlers and engineers and firemen of the Lake Shore road at this point are also out and that road is practically tiedup. It is expected that the engineers and firemen on the Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee will also go out.

MILES HAS FULL POWER.

He May Order Soldiers To Fire Without Instructions from Washington.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—At the war department Gen. Schofield's adjutant general stated that no telegrams had been received from Gen. Miles confirmatory of the Chicago dispatches as to the serious nature of the situation there.

Especial doubt was thrown on the statement that Gen. Miles had said he was without authority to fire unless instructed from Washington. Gen. Miles is clothed with full power to act as his discretion dictates and both the president and the general of the army have full confidence in his judgment, courage and firmness.

Peary Party Celebrate the 4th.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., July 6.—The members of the Peary Auxiliary expedition were entertained by Commodore Curzon Howe and the officers of the British warship Cleopatra at dinner aboard that ship the evening of the 4th in honor of American Independence day. The most hearty good feelings prevailed. The toasts were of the usual order and all expressed their hopes for the success of the expedition.

LOSS OF THE VALKYRIE

Different Views as to the Cause of the Collision.

Onlookers Declare That the Satanita Ran Into Lord Dunraven's Yacht While Endeavoring to Keep Out of the Way of the Sightseers' Vessels—Vigilant Better Than Britannia.

GLASGOW, July 6.—Yachtsmen declare that the collision between the Satanita and the Valkyrie yesterday, as the result of which the Valkyrie was sunk, was caused solely by a small boat getting in the way of the Satanita and the altogether too great crowding of steamers and other craft around the racers.

Captain Cranfield, of the Valkyrie, however, persists that the Satanita was on the wrong tack. He says that the loss on personal effects to him and the crew amounts to about £700.

The Royal Clyde Yacht club course, sailed in the Mudhook regatta, is 50 miles long, and in shape is similar to two triangles with their points meeting. The yachts started from an imaginary line drawn between the Royal Clyde Yacht club's headquarters and mark boat No. 1.

The start was made in a stiff southerly breeze, but in a blinding mist. Britannia crossed the line three lengths ahead of Vigilant.

Then came the accident of the day, which threw out of the race, and out of racing for some time to come, Valkyrie and Satanita.

Valkyrie and Satanita, while preparing for the start, became locked together, and in a few minutes Valkyrie settled down and sank, and Satanita was so badly damaged that she had to retire.

Some time passed before the people ashore fully realized what had happened. Satanita, it appears, was luffing from the start, and was unable to get out of Valkyrie's way as the latter was coming up on the starboard bow, owing to a boat that was in the way, and she could not move in the opposite direction because of the large number of vessels of all descriptions, filled with sightseers, that occupied every available inch of water at the starting line.

Valkyrie's bowsprit ran across Satanita's foresail, and the collision, which immediately followed, carried away Satanita's bowsprit and topmast, leaving her a wreck covered with tangled rigging and collapsed sails.

The force of the collision cut Valkyrie down to the water's edge, and she slowly settled and sank in three minutes in 25 fathoms of water.

Ashore, owing to the mist, exactly what happened, beyond the fact that Valkyrie had gone to the bottom, could not be determined, and it was thought, owing to shouts of the crew, that some had been drowned, but this was not the case. Only two of all those on both boats were injured. One of Valkyrie's seamen had his leg crushed, and the cook of the Satanita had an arm broken.

Valkyrie, if she is raised at all, will have to be raised in pieces, as her crew declare that she was practically cut in half.

During all this excitement Vigilant and Britannia, which had not observed the accident, kept on in the race. Vigilant kept well ahead until within seven miles of the finish, when the wind fell, and Britannia gradually overhauled and passed Vigilant, winning by 35 seconds.

Vigilant should undoubtedly have won with a minute or two to spare, and would have done so, but for the sudden falling of the wind, which served Britannia so well.

It was admitted on all sides that Vigilant was the better boat, and that she had the hardest kind of luck in losing.

House To Alter Nothing Material in the Tariff.

A Suspicion, However, That the Sugar War May Be Revived—The Bill Will Come Up To-Day and the Conference Committee, Probably Numbering Seven, Will Be Appointed.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The tariff bill as passed by the senate, having been presented to the house yesterday, will come up in the regular course of business to-day. A conference committee—probably of seven—will be appointed, which, together with a committee from the senate, will go over the amendments made by the latter body. It is generally understood that the work of the joint committee will be speedily finished and that no changes of material consequence will be attempted. However, there is a suspicion that the sugar war may be revived.

When Secretary Cox, of the senate, announced in the house yesterday afternoon the passage of the bill there was loud applause by the democrats. Comment by republicans was confined to the single remark "collars and cuffs" by ex-Speaker Reed.

After the tariff bill had been received the house took up the bill introduced by Mr. Cooper (dem., Ind.) permitting states and territories to tax greenbacks and treasury notes the same as other forms of money and personal property was taxed. This was discussed until adjournment.

Earlier in the day a bill was passed granting a right of way through the Indian territory to the Arkansas & Texas Central Railroad company; also a joint resolution, reported from the committee on appropriations by Mr. Sayers (dem., Tex.), authorizing the secretary of the navy to employ until July 31 the mechanics and laborers in the navy yards recently dismissed because of the secretary's doubt of his authority to continue them at work under the blanket resolution passed last week extending the appropriation bills of last year to cover expenditures during the month of July.

"I may hold my nose and vote for a conference report that I don't like, but it will probably gag me," said Representative Beauchamp Clark, of Missouri, in speaking of the tariff bill as it passed the senate.

"Suppose the conferees report that they have agreed to leave sugar as it now stands in the bill, what is the house likely to do with it?"

"That is pretty hard to say. Over here we want free sugar and we are going to get it if we can. If the conferees will put coal, iron, lead ore, lumber and salt on the free list and reduce woolen manufactures, we shall be pretty well satisfied with it. But we are far from satisfied as the bill now stands."

"Do you think a conference report agreeing in the main with the senate amendments will pass the house?"

"It may, but there will be a terrific opposition to it. As I say, if so many of our men were not so anxious to get home, and it was earlier in the session such a conference report would be agreed to."

While Mr. Clark's sentiments are shared in by a great many members of the house who hold an advanced position on the tariff question the conservative element—and this element is both large and influential—is disposed to get the best bill possible.

Those who were spoken to with this morning expressed great confidence in the ability of the house conferees not only to reflect the sentiment of the house properly but to secure consessions which would restore the measure to its original form, to a fair extent at least. Whatever conclusion the conferees reach regarding the items in dispute is likely to be adopted by the house, although not probably without a spirited and somewhat acrimonious debate. The lateness of the session, however, and the hot weather, will be among the potent factors looking to a prompt disposition of the bill.

Chairman Wilson has called the ways and means committee together for a session beginning this afternoon.

PHILLIPSBURG, Pa., July 6.—Several hundred miners went to Coaldale, No. 4 mine, yesterday to bring out the men in that mine who have gone to work at 40 cents a ton, and the only mine in this part of the state working below the compromise rule. PRESIDENT DEBS TALKS

Issues a Statement Anent the Great Strike.

Excuses the Action of Labor on the Ground of the Oppressive Conditions Under Which the Pullman Employes Existed—Says Corporations Must Bear the Responsibility.

CHICAGO, July 6.—Eugene V. Debs, president of the A. R. U., has issued a long statement in justification of the great strike in which he is the central figure. The article is addressed "To the public," and reads in part as follows:

The Pullman employes who struck on May 6 last did so entirely of their own accord. The officers of the American Railway union used all their influence to pacify the employes and advised them repeatedly not to strike, but to bear patiently their grievances until a peaceable settlement could be effected. To the truth of this statement the employes themselves will bear willing testimony.

But the grievances of the employes, men and women, had become so aggravated, so galling, that patience deserted them, and they abandoned their employment rather than submit longer to conditions against which their very souls rebelled.

The Pullman company, be it understood, owns the town of Pullman, owns the homes of the employes, controls the light and water and other necessaries of life; and wages are so adjusted to living expenses that in a majority of cases the employes are barely able to support their families.

At the time they struck the employes were in arrears to the Pullman company $70,000 for rent alone. Wages had been repeatedly reduced, but rent and other expenses remained the same.

The employes from the beginning have been willing to arbitrate their differences with the company, but the company arrogantly declares that there is nothing to arbitrate. If this be true, why not allow a board of fair and impartial arbitrators to determine the fact?

Committee after committee awaited upon the officials of the Pullman company, but all their advances were repelled.

Finally, on June 12, the delegates of the American Railway union, representing 425 local unions of railway employes, located on the principal lines of American railways, discussed the Pullman trouble at Chicago, and as a last resort, the delegates determined that unless the Pullman company could agree to do justice to their employes within five days the members of the order would decline to haul Pullman cars. This action, be it remembered, was not taken until the strike had been on six weeks.

Up to this point the trouble was confined to the Pullman company and its employes. How then did the strike extend to the railways? Let the answer be given in accordance with the facts. The day before the order of the delegates declining to haul Pullman cars went into effect the General Managers association, representing the principal western railways, met and passed a series of resolutions, declaring, in substance, that they would uphold the Pullman company in its fight upon the employes, that they would haul Pullman cars and that they would stand together to defeat the American Railway union. Every good citizen must view the outlook with grave concern. Something should, something must be done. The American people are a peace-loving people—they want neither anarchy nor revolution. They have faith in their institutions—they believe in law and order—they believe in good government, but they also believe in fair play. Once aroused they will not tolerate arbitrary and dictatorial defiance, even on the part of an alliance of rich and powerful corporations.

What can be done to dispel the apprehension that now prevails, and restore peace and confidence? The American Railway union, by whose authority and in whose behalf this statement is made, stands ready, has from the beginning stood read, to do anything in its power, provided it is honorable, to end this trouble.

It simply insists the Pullman company shall meet its employes and do them justice. We guarantee that the latter will accept any reasonable proposition. Let them agree as far as they can and where they fail to agree let the points in dispute be submitted to arbitration. The question of the recognition of the American Railway union or any other organization is waived. Let the spirit of conciliation, mutual concession and compromise animate and govern both sides and there will be no trouble in reaching a settlement that will be satisfactory to all concerned. This done, let the railway companies agree to restore all their employes to their situations without prejudice, and the trouble will then be ended.

I have now clearly and briefly as possible stated the position of the American Railway union, as it was at the beginning of the trouble—as it is now.

The statement closes with these words:

"If the corporations refuse to yield and stubbornly maintain that there is 'nothing to arbitrate,' the responsibility for what may ensue will be upon their own heads, and they cannot escape its penalties."

MAY REACH PITTSBURG.

A. R. U. Organizers To Address a Mass Meeting There To-Night.

PITTSBURG, July 6.—There is now an intimation that the railroad strike may reach Pittsburg. Charles Naylor and J. E. Roe, the organizers of the A. R. U., who came to Pittsburg Tuesday, night, stated this morning that they expected some action in support of the strike from the railroaders' union here. A mass meeting will be held here to-night, which will be addressed by the visiting organizers and local labor leaders.

Mr. Naylor received a telegram last night from President Debs, stating that by to-night all organized labor of Chicago will be idle in support of the railroad men.

Tie-up on the Nickel Plate.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., July 6.—The firemen, engineers, brakemen and switchmen on the Nickel Plate are out on both the eastern and western divisions, and the engineers refuse to work with non-union men. The east-bound vestibule train was "killed" here last night, the strikers pulling the pins and refusing to let it go out. The west-bound mail train was also held, but succeeded in getting out about 5 o'clock, four hours late. The passenger coaches were cut off, and nothing but the mail cars and engine were allowed to go on.

BABY'S LIFE IN THE BALANCE.

The Simple Preventive of Cholera Infantum That Is Worth More Than All the Medicines in the World—Lactated Food.

Now infant lives tremble in the balance Heat and food that fails to nourish cause cholera infantum and the exhausting diarrhoea that carries off so many babies in July and August. Other deaths shrink to insignificance at this season beside the fearful returns of infant mortality under 5 years.

Where mother's milk is defective or insufficient in nourishing quality, lactated food best supplies the need; for lactated food most closely resembles mother's milk; the basis is sugar of milk in both cases.

Whenever baby's weight fails to show a steady increase the nutrition is for some reason imperfect. Lactated food at these times should be used either altogether or to supplement the natural milk. In all such cases there results a rapid gain in weight and indications on every hand of a healthier, livelier, more hearty existence.

The efficacy and nutritive quality of lactated food is today acknowledged by every one.

As a preventive of cholera infantum it is worth more than all the medicines in the world.

As a strength giver to growing infants nothing can compare with it. As a food that is easy to procure and prepare, and is liked by the little ones themselves, too much cannot be said for it.

It has saved the lives of thousands of infants within the last few years. It has been the food of hundreds of babies who have never been sick. Above is the picture of the one-year-old child of Mrs. Edward Newcom of Logansport, Ind., which was received the other day, accompanied by the following letter from Mrs. Newcom:

"Our baby had to use artificial food on account of no nurse. We tried several diffrent kinds of infant foods, but none agreed with him until we commenced the use of lactated food. Now he is perfect healthy. We are still using the food and recommend it to all our friends.

This is the experience of hundreds of mothers in this vicinity and will be the experience of hundreds more.

The Pittsfield players have joined other teams, and the Albany club has retired. The Kingstons and Poughkeepsies will continue and play exhibition games, these clubs being well supported at home.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents their terrible development. The symptoms, while almost attendant cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

HOME TESTIMONY.

Mr Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly. They were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 144 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOS. CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact, it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

At New Market, Tuesday evening, near Dantz's Hotel, a dispute arose between Aaron Brower and Wm. Brokaw, and before it was settled the men came to blows. Brower was severely punished and at 11:30 went to Constable George Huff's house to secure the arrest of Brokaw. The constable has as yet been unable to find Brokaw, as he made his escape very quietly.

Scotch Plains and Fanwood.

A merry stageload of people from the Plains went to Papino to spend the Fourth, and a joyous time they had. The participants were Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. George Collins, Miss Grace Robison, Miss Ella Frantz, Miss Bartlett, Miss Wilson of Plainfield, Will Noble, Will Hazell, Frank Allen and T. B. Collins.

The flag-raising at Frank Quereau's at sunrise, July 4, was a most successful affair. Promptly on the second "Old Glory" was flung to the breeze. While the bugler hailed the approach of day, the drummer skillfully managed the halyards and Adjutant Quereau fired the salutes, the ammunition for which was prepared by Captain Hamlin. Forty-four explosions resulted at one-minute intervals, but after the twenty-fifth, the adjutant was obliged to retire as the violent concussions were beyond the limit of one man's endurance. Mrs. Quereau, Miss Randolph and other [illegible] witnessed the ceremony from the [illegible]s and then all assembled [illegible]n singing the national anthem. The boys then retired to their quarters but whether much sleeping was indulged in is a question, as all were in command. At day break the assembly call was responded to by every man, camp broken and three cheers given for William E. Pen'z, in whose honor their camp was named.

A party was given at Jack Benner's "Wheelmen's Rest", Fanwood, last evening in honor of the fourteenth birthday anniversary of Mr. Benner's son. CHURCH FAIRS, TAKE NOTICE.

A Movement Is Under Way to Indict You for Lotteries.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—There appear, from time to time, in the newspapers, accounts of "drawings" to be had at meetings, some religious and some secular. Not long ago the Plainfield newspapers all contained an account of a large number of articles which were chanced off, including a commutation ticket to New York. In store windows, bicycles are exhibited with a placard on them, "This will be chanced off at", etc. Just at this moment my eye meets: "A grand organ", "portieres", "a large book of Gospel collections and many other articles ARE TO BE DRAWN FOR during the festival."

All these are lotteries as defined by the ruling of Chief Justice Beasley of this State and followed by other judges, and it is made under the law, the duty of the Grand Jury of the various counties to indict persons who sell these tickets or have any part in such drawings.

It is only right that the Press of the State should inform the public that these things are lotteries within the purview of the law, and, as I happen to know that Justice VanSyckel has been asked to charge the Union Grand Jury in reference to some cases similar to the one last referred to above, there is special reason for calling attention to the law in Plainfield. AN ATTORNEY.

Cyclers who attended the Crescent meet seem to have no great fear of their wheels being stolen. Only 300 of all the bicycles there Wednesday were checked.

The Victor Wheelmen met last evening and settled up the affairs of their last entertainment. The club will probably run to New Brunswick Sunday, July 22, with guests from Newark and New York.

Inventor Decker of Orange was on the track with his new fangled gear and a pace-maker. He made fairly good time for a mile on his 55 gear special built wheel. When 12 good riders have testified to the efficiency of the new apparatus it will begin to place the article on the market.

People who went to the track by stage Wednesday paid 10 cents each way. The Crescents say they had arranged for a 5-cent fare with Capt. William Hand, but that he took his stages elsewhere. Other drivers seized the opportunity, and a sight of the races from a good seat Wednesday cost altogether 85 cents.

CHURCH CHIMES.

The theme in the Seventh-Day Baptist Church tomorrow morning will be "The Personal Regard of Christ for Each One Who Follows Him". Service begins at 10:30.

A grand dedicatory fair and festival will take place in the New Emmanuel Baptist Church, Fillmore avenue, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, July 18, 19 and 20. On Wednesday evening, taes place festival and fair. Thursday evening, children's exhibition and cross tieing. Friday evening, national drill and promenade, at which time women will be arrayed in costumes representing the various nations.

Base-Ball.

An interesting game of ball was played at Berkie Heights, July 4, between the Berkley Eights and Scotch Plains teams. The feature of the game was the battery work of E. Rogers and Frank Dodge of the Berkies striking out fifteen in seven innings. The score:

Berkleys	1	0	2	0	0	2	1	1	1—8
Scotch Plains	4	0	0	1	0	1	0	1	0—12

Batteries: Berkleys — Lyons, Kane, Rogers, Dodge. Scotch Plains—E. Hand and Erickson.

In the afternoon the Berkleys defeated the Bernardsville crack club by the score of 12 to 7. Batteries: Berkleys—Rogers and Dodge. Bernardsville—Abrans and Bonnell.

Y. M. C. A. WORK.

Edifying Report for the Month of June.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. was held last evening. Vice-president E. L. Bonny presided in the absence of President Murray, and John Valiant acted as secretary pro tem, in the absence of Recording Secretary F. W. Yates. The following is the report of the General Secretary for the month of June:

	Total attendance.	No. of meetings.	Average.
Young men's meet'gs..	155	4	39
Bible Training Class....	12	3	4
Boy's Bible Class.....	3	1	3

Three meetings have been held at Washingtonville and three at Mt. Pleasant.

The Boys' Department have had meetings on four Tuesday evenings. One was for business, another for the semi-annual election of officers, and at the last two meetings talks were given by J. C. Bates on Temperance and Gold Mining. The Boys' Bible Class will not resume its Sunday morning meetings until the Sunday-schools meet in afternoon session. The Boys' Singing Class, which has a membership of 10, meets twice a week. Two boys have decided to attend the N. Y. and N. J. State Y. M. C. A. Camp to be held at Westport on Lake Champlain beginning July 6.

June 2 two of the instructors in the Educational Department, with the General Secretary, visited the Pratt Institute in Brooklyn for the purpose of examining their educational work.

June 6 the President, Treasurer and General Secretary attended a reception at the Orange Y. M. C. A. rooms which was tendered to John T. Swift, International Y. M. C. A. Secretary for Japan.

June 5 and 14, meetings of the Building Committee were held.

June 9, a meeting of the Educational Committee with the Instructors was held at the residence of Chairman Cahoone.

June 10, Jubilee Meetings were held in the First Methodist Episcopal and Crescent Avenue Churches.

June 11, your General Secretary in company with the chairman of District Committee visited Somerville interviewed pastors and secured a committee through whom it has been arranged to hold a District Convention at that place October 13 and 14.

The Corresponding member from Westfield has also been conferred with and written to about a Y. M. C. A. Sunday there.

At a meeting of the State Committee June 15, it was decided to hold the State Convention at Plainfield, February 8 to 11, 1895.

June 17, one of our men visited Trenton and addressed their Sunday Meeting.

June 18, letters were sent by the Chairman of the Educational Committee to the heads of four of the factories.

June 19, we were visited by the State Secretary who inspected our new building.

June 23, the Summer Outing and Conference of Committeemen was held at the home of C. T. Kissam.

June 28 a Conference of Ladies from the various churches was held with a view of raising funds for furnishing the new building.

On June 30 the ninth annual Conference of the College Students opened at Northfield. President Murray, F. H. Andrews, E. L. Walz, Jr., F. Wilbur Cornwell and Harry McGee are in attendance. Plainfielders have been present at all of the Conferences since 1886 when they were first organized.

June 1-7 our Association was represented by A. C. La Boyteaux at the World's Conference held in London.

Three men have been temporarily assisted and others have been counseled. Two have been provided situations and one with temporary work.

Upon invitation, Mr. Clemens visited the Chairman of the Sub. Committee on Educational Work of the State Y. M. C. A. in regard to educational work and at his request has furnished an outline of the work of our Association along educational lines. It may be of interest in this connection to state that the total attendance upon the Educational Classes of the Association for the seven months in which classes were held was 1,452 and the enrollment was 142 and of this number there were 97 different students. These men were classified as follows: Office men 11, Students 23, Mechanics 75, General tradesmen 17.

The following matters have required special attention during the month: The make-up of Committees, the matters pertaining to the furnishing of the new building, Jubilee meetings, Northfield and the Boy's Camp Delegations and the new building.

Berry Rogers's Badge.

A badge of which the owner is very proud is the one which was presented to B. B. Rogers by the other members of Engine Company No. 2 at their special meeting this week. Mr. Rogers has been in the company six years, being the foreman the two years ending with the last election. The esteem in which the ex-foreman is held was testified to by Willett Marsh in his graceful speech of presentation. The badge is of gold with a diamond pendant, and, with the spread eagle, the hose and the fire hat engraved on it, is a symbol of patriotic sentiment and fraternal feeling. The time chosen for the presentation was especially appropriate.

HIS FRIENDS CLING TO HIM.

Business Associates Declare Their Unwavering Faith in Henry Hoffman's Integrity.

For the information of his friends in this section who have seen only the one side of his difference with Mrs. Hoffman or Mrs. Thomas Bothe of Terrill road, Henry Hoffman of the coal trade desires The Press to print the following from the editorial columns of The Financial Review and Building Record, a representative business men's paper of New York. It is to his mind a complete answer to the charges that have been made against him. The Review and Record says:

The proceedings in which Henry Hoffman, the well known Superintendent of the Berwind-White Coal Mining Company, has figured so prominently, have assumed a complexion altogether favorable to that gentleman. The woman, the chief instigator of the trouble, failed to appear at the examination of the case, and has therefore failed to substantiate her allegations, though Mr. Hoffman was on hand fully able and anxious to refute all her allegations.

Since then he has adopted every means and exhausted every legal resource to induce the complainant to present her cause in court, but up to the present time without avail. She studiously keeps in the background and undoubtedly regrets her previous action in this matter. And this goes to show not only the weakness of her case but its totally unjustifiable character, as well as establishes the truth of Mr. Hoffman's defence.

Mr. Hoffman has been too long before the public, and his reputation as a man of honor is too high and too well established, to be considered capable of pursuing a course of the character indicated, and in view of this fact it is not surprising that the charges should have been laughed at or denounced as malicious. As affairs stand at present he is master of the situation, and has effectually turned the tables on his persecutor.

Our reporter interviewed many of our most prominent business men upon this subject, and they one and all declared there could be no truth in the charges. They spoke in the highest terms of Mr. Hoffman, and the incident has only served to raise their opinion of that gentleman.

He has shown not only that the charges preferred against him were false, but that the motives underlying the same were malicious and selfish, making it apparent that they would not have been brought at all had the man at whom they were aimed been less prominent and wealthy.

A man in Mr. Hoffman's position is naturally brought, in the course of his business, in contact with all sorts and conditions of men, and the circumstances under which he is placed are often of a trying nature, but his conduct has always been of the most exemplary character, singularly devoid of reproach. The present attack upon him, if is asserted, is in the nature of persecution, invented and pursued for monetary reasons alone.

We congratulate Mr. Hoffman upon the common-sense course he pursued in this matter, and trust it will be emulated by others when placed in similar circumstances. He accepted the issue in a manly, straightforward way, and completely confused his accuser, and this is the only effective way to treat incidents of this kind. As a result he stands higher than ever in popular estimation, and has justified and emphasized the high reputation he has so long possessed as an honorable and enlightened business man.

The Mercantile and Financial Times also takes Mr. Hoffman's part in the matter, saying:

Mr. Hoffman is a man whom we have known for many years past, and we are intimately acquainted with some of the business men with whom he has been most closely associated for some considerable time, and we are satisfied that when the matters in dispute are properly ventilated before a judge and jury Mr. Hoffman will be completely exonerated from even so much as a suspicion of wrong doing or dishonorable conduct.

A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, creepy sensation that existed in my arms, hands and legs. I had to rub and beat those parts until they were sore, to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a strange weakness in my back and around my waist, together with an indescribable 'gone' feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis, from which, according to their universal conclusion, there is no relief. Once it fastens upon a person, they say, it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the sufferer dies. Such was my prospect. I had been doctoring a year and a half steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvelous as it may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me, and there has not been even the slightest indication of its return. I now feel as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I was before down from 170 to 132. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recommendation, and it has been as successful in their cases as in mine."—James Kane, La Rue, O.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opium or other dangerous drugs.

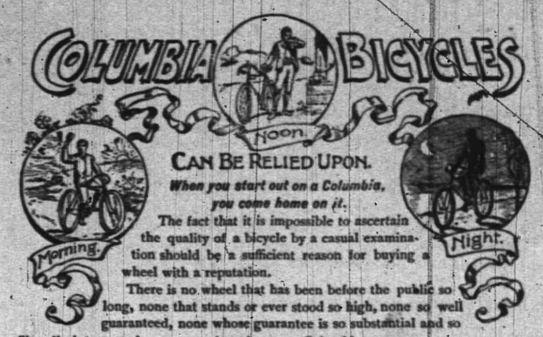
COLUMBIA BICYCLES



CAN BE RELIED UPON.

When you start out on a Columbia, you come home on it.

The fact that it is impossible to ascertain the quality of a bicycle by a casual examination should be a sufficient reason for buying a wheel with a reputation.

There is no wheel that has been before the public so long, none that stands or ever stood so high, none so well guaranteed, none whose guarantee is so substantial and so liberally interpreted, none so safe to buy as a Columbia.

With Columbias listed at $125, few riders will be so unwise as to invest in lower grade bicycles.

HOW TO MAKE GIRLS' CLOTHING.

Simple Instructions For Home Work.

JACKETS, BASQUES AND DRESSES.

A Suit For Either Sex—Waist For Girls of From Ten to Fifteen Years—Plain Skirts. The Half Long Skirt—Model For Eton Jacket.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

In the line of dressmaking for children it is really more difficult to get good effects in garments for very small children than for those of larger growth. There is a time in the children's lives when boys and girls dress very nearly alike, and a suit that will be useful to mothers of such little ones is presented here with diagrams and full instructions how to make it. It consists of two garments, a belted frock and tiny jacket to wear over it in the front. Fig. 1 shows the back, 2 the front, 3 the vest and 4 the sailor collar. The sleeves are not portrayed, as they are to be bishop of girl and plain coat for boy. The mark down the front of the jacket shows where a facing of contrasting color is to go, and it should be like the sailor collar and vest. No. 3 slides under the figure 2 until it joins properly at the neck and then is sewed securely. It closes with small buttons. Then the back and front are sewed together, the neck bound and the sailor collar sewed on the ends meeting in a point. The sleeves are added, according to their kind, and the little jacket is finished. But before the back and front are sewed together the large back piece (Fig. 5) is plaited on to Fig. 1 and the plaits tacked tightly to the belt line and from there left loose. Fig. 6 is sewed up where cut down and the plait laid in and hemmed, and this is basted under Fig. 6, the arm size and shoulder coming exactly. Then the whole is sewed up, which makes one garment of two, and the skirt is hemmed and finished off. The sleeves are put in after the final seaming is done. This composite garment can be made of almost anything and requires one yard of goods 44 inches wide and half a yard of other material for collar and facings for a child of 6. In this it requires neatness and accuracy. The belt can be of stiffened material or for a boy of leather.

Making a Model Waist.

The second diagram shows a model waist for girls from 10 to 15 years. The figure at that age is so immature little opportunity is given for a stylish fit, and for that reason much drapery and many plaits or gathers are seen on such gowns. The primary movement is to draft a lining. To do this, measure with a tapeline from throat to waist line and make dots on a piece of paper at each end of the length found. Then measure from top of shoulder, joining the neck to waist line, and dot these figures at an equal distance with that between the middle of the throat and the line from the shoulder. This gives the measure for the curve in the neck in front. Then measure from the middle of the front to the seam under the arms, and that gives the exact width of the front. The measure from under the arm to waist line and from the shoulder seam, where the sleeve goes in, also dotted as fast as measured, gives the slope of the arm size and the shoulder, and by following diagram Fig. 1 a perfect front may be drafted that is sure to fit. The darts can be taken in deep or shallow, as the case may demand. The side fronts, the side backs and the center backs can all be measured in the same manner. They are to be sewed together—the lining in order, 2, 3 and 4 first, and then 4 and 1 are to be joined under the arm and on the shoulders and tied on, the seams on the outside. Any slight fault may be rectified. When it fits, rip the lining apart and cut the outside after Figs. 7 and 8, cutting out a portion in front to leave a square, which is to be filled in with a gathered vest. Seven is the front and 8 the back. The crosses show where the material is to be gathered to fit the lining. The waist can be made open in front or in the back, as best suits the wearer. Fig. 6 is half of a strap beetelle of some material contrasting with the dress. Fig. 5 is half of the turn-down collar. If the dress opens in the back, the collar has to be split there as well as in front.

When the vest front has been laid on and stitched down, gather the outside of the waist and baste it to the lining, which should have the darts taken in and the four back pieces all sewed together and the two side pieces sewed to the fronts. When it is all basted firmly, try it on again, right side out this time, and adjust the gathers and then sew the seams and finish off the waist. The sleeve is a plain balloon puff, with the lower portion plain, and the upper gathered and sewed on at a point just above the elbow and brought upward to the shoulder seam, where it is sewed in. The waist can be finished with a draped belt, or it can be plain and have a piping.

MODEL FIVE GORED SKIRT.

Skirts for girls of these ages are usually perfectly plain and gathered either to a band or sewed to the dress. This is by far the better way. For gathering these skirts the old manner of gauging them is considered the neatest. This is done by turning down the edge and taking long even stitches with a thick thread that must not show on the outer side. Sometimes three gauging threads are set half an inch apart and the stitches set exactly opposite each other, which gives them a fluted appearance. To sew a gauged skirt to the waist, take one stitch in the outer portion of each fold of the fluted edge and sew it tightly to the under edge of the belt or waist.

Making a Straight Skirt.

In making a straight skirt the seams should be clipped at a distance of a quarter of a yard through the selvage and the seam pressed apart. The hem must be turned evenly and be neatly sewed, so that the stitches do not show on the outside. Straight skirts are worn by girls up to 16 and often afterward, but gored skirts are not often put upon girls under 15. When they are, they are the "five gored," or rather five pieced, for the two back breadths are quite straight. The diagram shows how they are to be placed. When the material will admit of it, the front and two side breadths can be cut from one fold of the cloth, one up and the other down. If material 54 inches wide is employed, there need be but two lengths, as the two back pieces come from one and the three front ones form the other when there is no nap or figure.

Diagram 1 represents the front breadth doubled, 2 the two side gores and 3 the two back breadths. They are to be basted together, beginning all seams from the top, and any irregularity comes at the bottom, where it is to be trimmed off. The skirt can be lined throughout and then faced up with one thickness of bias wigan, covered in turn with alpaca or dress material, or it may be faced up only. It is more satisfactory to line it and press all the seams neatly. Then sew the facing around in a seam and turn it upward, leaving the dress material a little longer than the facing. Baste this up firmly and press it well before catstitching the facing down. The pressing of the facing at this stage brings it solidly into the right position, and it will never wrinkle or sag. The skirt should not be too stiff nor yet too clinging. One thickness of wigan and the facing will be enough. No braid is required as long as the dress does not reach the ground. The gores should be two-thirds larger on the bottom than the top.

How to Make Waists.

When girls begin to don half long skirts, regularly made waists are in order. Their figures being yet unformed, the waist must be cut with a direct reference to that fact, and the diagram showing a model for all sorts of waists and basques as well as princess gowns and tight coats will show at a glance just where the benefit is. Fig. 1 shows the back lining, Fig. 2 the side back, 3 the side front and 4 the front. The measurements are to be taken in the same manner as described above and the lining fitted in the same way after the pattern is drafted, but the dressmaker must take particular notice of the darts, which, it will be observed, are rounded slightly on one side and much on the other, while the opposite sides of the darts are cut quite straight. This gives a grace to unformed figures that could not be given in any other way and is one of the secrets of Worth's success in making gowns for too slender figures. When the lining fits, the outside is to be cut and basted firmly all around every seam, and the outside material is to be held a little snugger than the lining, that it may not wrinkle. The seams are to be sewed from the top always, and great care should be taken to get the side back pieces in without pulling or wrinkling.

This model is the sure foundation of a perfect waist. It can be cut off at the waist line if desired, and by carrying the lines on downward it can be lengthened into a princess dress. The same shape is suitable for a habit basque. It is the basis and model for all tight waisted gowns for the young and slender. There is no sleeve added, as sleeves are matters of personal taste. The proper collar is the rather high choker. Any kind or style of trimming or drapery can be added to the basque or waist. To finish it, all seams are to be trimmed neatly and bound with dressmaker's tape, and then they should be well pressed apart. Bone casings are to be run in all seams except the side back, and rather flexible bones set in. The fronts should be finished off with hooks and eyes or buttons, and the collar made and put on, the case belt set in and the lower edge trimmed off and faced or piped, and the sleeves made and sewed in. It should receive then a final pressing, and three large hooks should be sewed to the case belt to fasten to as many eyes on the skirt band to support it from the shoulders and keep it from sagging.

For a Princess Dress.

If the model is to be used to cut a princess dress, the back breadths should be left square from the waist line on both sides of the back pieces, so as to fold in for additional fullness in the back of the skirt. All the rest of the pieces can be sloped gradually in a natural manner until the required length is obtained, and six inches more allowed, as princess gowns take up in the making.

Yoke frocks are pretty for small girls, and to make a yoke one has but to cut a pattern of the front and back portions marked on the diagram and sew up the shoulders and add a collar. The rest of the dress is then to be shirred and sewed to the yoke, from whence it falls to the bottom. There should be a very little space hollowed out of the lower portion to complete the arm size. There is practically no end to the changes that can be made with this model for a starting point, and the home dressmakers would do well to cut a perfect pattern of it after having drafted, cut, basted and fitted the model to the figure, by means of pins set in the seams, until it has become molded to the figure. When it has, it should be removed carefully, all the seams pulled apart a little to show just where alterations, if any, have been made, and then the pattern should be copied in cloth and saved for future use.

For a Figaro Jacket.

In the fifth diagram will be found a new design for cutting a figaro jacket all in one piece. It should be cut so that the fold of the goods comes down the middle of the back, and the shape of the arm size, the shoulders and neck can be traced after the same parts of the model basque. The arm sizes in a figaro must be large enough for the arm to have perfect freedom. The lining is cut on the same pattern, the two edges, outside and lining, are to be sewed together on the wrong side and turned and pressed before anything else is done. The shoulder seams, outside only, are sewed after having stitched the arm sizes on the wrong side and turning them with the other part. The shoulder seams being pressed flat, the lining is sewed neatly down over it. The neck also is sewed and turned with the other seams, so that there are no raw edges. The jacket is trimmed to suit, the most common way being soutache braiding in metal braid. It requires goods as wide as the bust measure for this jacket, as there are no seams.

Making an Eton Jacket.

The Eton jacket model is also drafted from the model basque, but has three pieces only—two fronts and a back in one piece. Eton jackets are made of any kind of goods, sometimes even cotton, in duck and pique. The draft should be made first, the pattern then cut and tried on, having the arm sizes loose. The under-arm seams are then sewed and the lining stitched to the outside and turned. The shoulders are then sewed and the lining felled. Braid or breloques are used for trimming. It requires three-fourths of a yard of 36 inch goods to make this jacket.

WEARINESS in women, that nervous, aching, worn-out feeling, comes to an end with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It restores your strength; it puts new life into you; it brings you back into the world again.

It is a powerful general, as well as uterine, tonic and nervine, especially adapted to woman's delicate wants. It regulates and promotes all the natural functions, and builds up, invigorates, and cures.

Creston, Iowa.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Sir—My wife improved in health gradually from the time she commenced taking "Favorite Prescription" until now. She has been doing her own housework for the past four months. When she began taking it, she was scarcely able to be on her feet, she suffered so from uterine debility. I can heartily recommend it for such cases.

Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make is True.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 19: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

DR. STARKWEATHER.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. MAGIC

IRON-TONE

For Nerve, Brain and Blood.

MAGIC IRON-TONE is an ideal summer drink. Served at fountains with soda it is incomparable. It must be remembered that the average summer drink is just so much syrup and water, having no medicinal properties, and which only serves to provoke instead of to assuage thirst. But MAGIC IRON-TONE not only quenches thirst, it gratifies the longing for "something that will go to the spot;" it sparkles and bubbles along the palate and the throat; it gratifies the parched stomach and immediately clears the films from the brain. It dispels the despondent, depressed feeling inseparable from weariness and overwork; it lightens the load the system seems to be carrying, causes the eye to flash, the mind to spring into activity, and the nerves and muscles to jump from a flaccid to an elastic condition.

MAGIC IRON-TONE EXTRACT FOR HOME USE.

CIVIL WAR THREATENED

Troops in Chicago Cannot Cope With the Frenzied Mobs.

The Whole City Is in a State of Wild Terror—Hundreds of Cars Burned, Switches Broken and Tracks Obstructed—Station of the Combined Roads Also Destroyed by Fire—Altgeld Sends Another Sarcastic Letter to the President—Strikers Stone and Seriously Injure Policemen Who Had Arrested One of Their Number—Eastern Points May Be Involved To-Day—Reported That the Knights of Labor in New York State Have Been Called Out.

CHICAGO, July 7.—It is reported at the headquarters of the A. R. U. that General Master Workman Sovereign has issued an order calling out the Knights of Labor in the state of New York, where the organization is said to have a membership of 200,000.

The members of the A. R. U. in Buffalo, New York and Pittsburg have been ordered out by the board of directors.

President Debs has not been seen around the headquarters for several hours, and it is said that he is en route to Buffalo for the purpose of soliciting the general support and co-operation of the employes of all the roads centering at that point.

Many persons here believe that civil war is threatened.

The town of Pullman is guarded by a company of state militia in anticipation of an attack by the mob.

RIOT AND INCENDIARISM.

Troops at Chicago Unable To Cope With the Wild Mobs.

CHICAGO, July 7.—The scenes in the city are to the old residents a vivid reminder of war times. The broad expanse of lawn on the historic lake front, from the Chicago club to far south of the Auditorium hotel, is dotted with the white tents of the regulars from Forts Sheridan, Leavenworth and Brady, while sentries patrol the broad sidewalk. A few blocks north a big crowd surrounds the armory of the Second regiment, where ten of its companies, together with two regiments of the Second brigade, are quartered. Company C, of the Thirteenth regiment, from Fort Sheridan, is camping in the rotunda of the result of orders issued by Gen. Miles.

The regulars number 1,200 men, and the National guard 5,000 men. In addition, the entire police force, including the reserves, substitutes and new men, a total of 3,500, is ready for special emergency call. This makes a total of 10,000 armed men that, at less than an hour's notice, can be placed in the field against a mob.

Mobs Hold Sway.

Notwithstanding this strong force a mob of about 2,000 people has held almost complete sway in the territory including the towns of Kensington, Burnside, Fordham and Grand Crossing, on the outskirts of the city along the Illinois Central tracks, for the last thirty-six hours. Two men were shot by a railroad detective, who was with difficulty protected from the infuriated mob. Upwards of three hundred cars, some of them Pullman sleepers, were burned. These depredations continued for several hours, the force of deputies and the one company of regulars under command of Captain De Jamar being totally inadequate to afford protection to the immense amount of railroad property to which the incendiaries had free access, where reinforcements were hurried to the scene of trouble the mob had disappeared, renewing their work of destruction in other quarters.

Two hundred and twenty-five freight cars on the Pan Handle tracks between Forty-fifth and Fifty-ninth streets, a distance of about one mile, were totally destroyed by fire between the hours of 6 and 8 o'clock last night.

Shortly after 5 o'clock immense crowds of men, women and boys were seen coming from the stock yards toward the network of tracks at the crossing of Forty-seventh street. The mob was augmented every minute by a seemingly never-ending string of the strikers and their sympathizers, and about 6 o'clock fully 4,000 people were massed along the tracks from Forty-fifth street south. They were the stock yards crowd and intent on destruction, and the few police who remained on duty were utterly powerless. They were not even noticed by the mob, who went to work at once.

The Torch Applied.

"Down the tracks," was the cry, and with a rush the mob started southward. Bunches of waste were stolen from switchmen's shanties and soaked with the "dope" used in oiling the cars made an excellent torch. At Forty-seventh street five cars standing on the Grand Trunk's line were the first to meet destruction. Some of them were loaded.

This did not deter the frenzied crowd from their work and the seals were broken and the doors slid back. A bunch of the burning waste was thrown inside, quickly igniting the contents, and in less than ten minutes the five cars were blazing fiercely.

Without waiting to see that their work was complete the crowd surged on. They kept to the Pan Handle tracks and at Forty-ninth street came upon six more cars. These were fired in a twinkling and on went the crowd.

In the Garfield boulevard yards of the Pan Handle four tracks were full of freight cars more than half of which were loaded. At this crossing is located a switchman's tower and this was first fired.

Then the mob turned its attention to the cars on the sidings, but for some reason fired but one of them—a car of dressed beef which had been started eastward several days ago.

Tore Up Switches.

They suddenly stopped their incendiarism and turned their attention to tearing up switches. After a number had been rendered useless the mob continued on its way southward. At Fifty-eighth street is situated the station of the combined roads. This was fired and quickly destroyed.

A strong wind was blowing, and the flames were quickly spread across three or four tracks, which were filled with cars. The railroad people say that there were 50 cars there, 40 of which were loaded. All were soon a mass of flames. About 30 of the cars were filled with coal, and the heat was intense. Fifteen of the cars contained meat from the big packing houses of Armour, Swift and Nelson Morris.

By this time the fire department had been advised of the fires further north on the tracks and had sent their forces there. But on learning of the seriousness of the situation at Fifty-eighth street they abandoned their fight further northward and came to the scene of the conflagration, which threatened to be serious.

Upon the approach of the fire and police departments the mob turned about and started for the city. On their way to Forty-seventh street they set fire to all the cars that they had missed on their hurried trip southward. No water could be obtained near the Garfield boulevard yards, and the cars were slowly burned up.

Skies Aglow from Burning Cars.

At midnight a mob of 300 or 400 began burning cars in the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy yards at Hawthorne, seven miles out. Many were destroyed. There is absolutely no police protection there beyond one or two officers, and the militia is several miles away.

All night the sky was lighted up with the glare of the flames from the 2,000 or more freight cars that were burning in the Eldson yards on the Grand Trunk road. The loss to the Grand Trunk will be enormous.

For the first time since the American Railway union declared the strike in actual operation a feeling of fear and alarm permeates the entire community. In business circles it is the one absorbing topic, to the exclusion of everything else. It is just such a condition of semi-suppressed alarm and anxiety as Paris experienced in the hours that immediately preceded the initiative demonstration of the commune.

The railroads, toward which the animosity of the mob has been mainly directed, are playing a waiting game. The experience of yesterday had made it certain that no attempt to raise the embargo at the stock yards could be successful without the aid of additional troops.

A gang of men sent out by the Lake Shore company to repair the tracks above Thirty-fourth street was set upon by a mob and unmercifully beaten.

A patrol-wagon load of policemen who had arrested a striker was stoned by a mob and several of the officers seriously injured.

STATE TROOPS ORDERED OUT.

Altgeld Preparing To Show His Resentment of Federal Interference.

CHICAGO, July 7.—Acting in pursuance with orders issued by Gov. Altgeld, Brig.-Gen. Wheeler, of the First brigade, reported at the office of Mayor Hopkins at 10:45. The mayor, with his advisers and legal staff, immediately went into a conference with Gen. Wheeler.

The orders are to call out the entire First brigade, consisting of three regiments of infantry, one troop of cavalry, and battery D. The conference was held for the purpose of deciding upon a plan of are or be covered by the disorderly which result of orders issued by Gen. Miles.

Mayor Hopkins announced to-day that he had called for the troops, in order to disperse the mobs which are becoming a menace to public safety. When asked if he would act in concert with the federal troops or ignore them entirely in sending out the militia, he replied significantly:

"We know nothing about the federal troops. They were brought here for a purpose. They sit on top of cars. We want men who will get down upon the ground and do their duty."

While no clash is expected between the state and federal troops, it is plainly the intention of the municipal and state authorities to show their resentment of federal interference.

ALTGELD AGAIN PROTESTS.

A Somewhat Sarcastic Telegram Addressed to the President.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 7.—Gov. Altgeld has sent another protest to the President in reply to the latter's answer to the state executive's first communication on the same subject, in which the governor says, in part:

"Your answer to my protest evades and ignores the question at issue, that is, that the principle of local self-goverment is just as fundamental in our institutions as is that of federal supremacy.

"Your assumption that the federal executive can order troops into any community whenever there is the slightest disturbance is certainly new, and I respectfully submit that it is not the law of the land. The jurists have told us that this is a government of law and not a government by the caprice of individuals, and further, that, instead of being autocratic, it was a government of limited power. Yet the autocrat of Russia could certainly not possess or claim to possess greater power than is possessed by the executive of the United States, if your assumption is correct."

Cleveland Replies.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—President Cleveland has replied as follows to Gov. Altgeld's second telegram: "While I am still persuaded that I have neither transcended my authority or duty in the emergency that contronts us, it seems to me that in this hour of danger and public distress discussion may well give way to active effort on the part of all in authority to restore obedience to law and to protect life and property."

President Debs Is Confident.

CHICAGO, July 7.—President Debs this morning said: "The situation is more promising for the railway union now than at any time since the Pullman strike began. Trade unions in Chicago and the country over have given assurances of help. In California $100,000 has been raised for us by popular subscription. A mass meeting will be held here to-morrow night to protest against the calling of government troops here. It is an outrage to bring them to this city, and the people will resent it."

Inter-Ocean Compositors Take Action

CHICAGO, July 7.—The compositors employed by the Inter-Ocean newspaper held a meeting last night and passed resolutions denouncing the policy of the paper, and demanding that the resolutions be printed in the paper. W. B. Prescott, president of the International Typographical union, was telegraphed for at Indianapolis and will be here to-night.

General Tie-Up at Detroit.

DETROIT, Mich., July 7.—At a secret conference of railroad union representatives it was decided to tie-up all the railroads entering this city. The Detroit, Lansing & Northern, Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee and Grand Trunk are not yet affected, but the Michigan Central is tied up tight.

All Wabash Trains Abandoned.

PERU, Ind., July 7.—All limited and first-class east and west trains on the Wabash have been abandoned, and no freights have moved for three days. Every mail train is considerably delayed.

SENATE TAKING A REST

Members Believe They Deserve a Vacation.

Propose To Take It Easy the Balance of the Session—Senator Call Denies a Slanderous Newspaper Story. Matters of Little General Interest Being Transacted in the House.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The senate since the passage of the tariff bill has been in session but once, yesterday, and then for only an hour and a half, and has adjourned until Monday. This period of idleness the members consider a just compensation for the long daily sessions during the three months that the tariff bill was under consideration. That they propose to take it easy during the remainder of the session is made evident by the order of yesterday to meet at noon hereafter.

Several bills were passed yesterday during the short time the session lasted, including the one continuing the employment of mechanics and laborers at the several navy yards. The great railroad strike had three separate and distinct propositions directed to it. One was in the shape of a resolution offered by the populist senator from Nebraska, Mr. Allen, looking to the acquisition and operation by the government of all the railroad, telegraph and telephone companies of the United States. The second was a bill introduced by Senator Davis (rep., Minn.), by request, for the settlement of controversies between railroad companies and their employes. And the third was a bill introduced by Mr. George (dem., Miss.) defining the duties of United States courts and of railroad receivers appointed by United States courts, in cases of railroad strikes or lock-outs, and providing that obstructions of United States mails shall be considered such only when the trains do not contain cars for the transportation of passengers or freight. The bills were the resolution went over until Monday next, when it will be entitled to consideration in the morning hour.

Senator Call (dem., Fla.) denied a story sent to a Florida newspaper and extensively published in the press, representing him as coming into the senate one morning some two weeks ago, deliberately removing his shoes, and placing his feet, encased in stockings, on a chair. He denounced the correspondent, of whose identity he knew nothing, as a liar and hired slanderer. He stated that the only foundation for the story was the fact that he had partially but carefully removed his shoe, on account of pain from a lacerated foot. He offered a resolution for the ascertainment and expulsion of the offender, which resolution was referred to the committee on rules.

House of Representatives.

With the utmost informality, and with not even a word of comment, the tariff bill was laid before the house by Speaker Crisp, ordered to be printed and referred to the committee on ways and means. It came about in the regular order of business and was disposed of in only so many words as were necessary to state its time and destination. The committee at once began an examination of the changes made by the senate, and will report the bill back to-day with a recommendation that the house non-concur in the amendments and agree to the conference.

The greater part of the day's session was occupied in the further consideration of the bill to permit states and territories to tax greenbacks and treasury notes. This was passed in an amended form—171 to 41.

Fighting the Price Heirs Now.

TRENTON, N. J., July 7.—The proceedings against ex-Governor Rodman M. Price, of New Jersey, to recover $17,000 alleged to be due to Mrs. Anna M. Forest, of Charleston, Va., which were suddenly terminated recently by the ex-governor's death, have been revived against his estate. A bill has been filed in the court of chancery to restrain the heirs of Mr. Price from collecting a fund of $36,000 which is in the national treasury and ready to be paid over, until the $17,000 owing to the plaintiff is paid. She has a judgment for that amount. The government owes the $36,000 to ex-Governor Price for a plot of California land.

Forest Fires Surround Plymouth.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., July 7.—The forest fires which began Thursday at West Plymouth and were thought to have been extinguished yesterday, have started again, and are now burning on both sides of the Plymouth road.

National Teachers' Convention Closes

SARAFOGA, N. Y., July 7.—The convention of the National Teachers' association was brought to a close yesterday, and St. Louis was selected as the place for holding the next annual convention.

WILL OBEY THE A. R. U.

Sovereign Ready To Call Out the K. of L. Workers at a Moment's Notice.

CHICAGO, July 7.—General Master Workman Sovereign, of the Knights of Labor, arrived here from Omaha and at once proceeded to the headquarters of the American Railway union, where he went into conference with President Debs, Vice-President Howard and their associate directors. The situation was thoroughly canvassed, and Sovereign agreed to issue a general strike call to the knights whenever a request to that end was presented. Regarding the situation he said this morning:

"I am here to render all the assistance in my power to the American Railway union and I shall do whatever the officers of that body determine will be best to serve the interests of the strike. The crest of this great movement is almost reached and, in my opinion, it is imperative that every labor organization put in its hardest work to help win this strike.

"If the result in this prodigious battle goes against the men it is difficult to tell when labor will recover from the effect of the disaster. This is the most critical period in the history of unionism in America. It is the time for every labor leader to rally his forces and join in the struggle for existence.

"This will practically be a battle for self-protection and for future life of every workingmens' body in the country. No one can over-estimate the importance of winning this conflict. Defeat will mean not a temporary set-back alone, but a permanent and everlasting disadvantage to organized honor or honesty among the working people of the land. This is why I am here to-day. That is why I will do whatever the American Railway union thinks best as regards the ordering of a strike.

"As regards a walk-out on the part of the members of all trade unions in the city I will say that I think it might bring about a great good. Certainly it would force upon the people a stronger realization of the necessity for a settlement of these troubles, and the populace would rise en masse in a demand for arbitration.

"Arbitration the laboring man is not afraid of; the capitalist though, will not accede to it. Mr. Debs stands ready to act for a reasonable settlement. The general officers are unanimous in their views. Schofield all over the west, and Maj.-Gen. while he order that may call for action on the part of his soldiers.

The war department has 33 companies of infantry, 44 batteries of artillery and eight troops of cavalry in the east. Most of these these could be drawn on for service in Chicago or elsewhere.

EFFORT TO MOVE MAIL.

Government Endeavoring To Make Contracts for Steamboat Service.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Division Superintendent Try at Chicago has telegraphed the postmaster-general that the rioters had obstructed all the tracks entering Chicago from the south and east so that trains were not now entering the city.

The superintendent of the railway mail service is working hard trying to effect temporary arrangements with steamboat companies in the different states to transport the belated mails to cities where the railroads cannot enter on account of obstructions. This will involve an enormous expenditure of money.

The Situation at Buffalo.

BUFFALO, July 7.—The situation here this morning is one of waiting. Debs is expected to-day. All the railroad superintendents stood ready for a strike at midnight last night, but it is learned from an authentic source that the order to go out will not be issued until after Debs is heard.

Attitude of the Trades Unions.

CHICAGO, July 7.—Final action in reference to ordering a strike of members of all Chicago's trades and labor unions in sympathy with the railroad strike will be taken Sunday night. This was decided at a meeting of local labor leaders held at Uhlrich's hall last night.

Coal and Iron Police Sent to Phillipsburg, Pa., Not Welcome.

PHILLIPSBURG, Pa., July 7.—Sheriff Carton on learning that coal and iron police had been brought to Clearfield county was quite indignant. He informed a representative of the United Press that there had been no appeal made to him for protection and that he positively would not swear in the police that the company now have as deputy sheriffs.

The miners in this region have the reputation of being the most stubborn of fighters, and the fact that they are thoroughly organized leads one to believe that the fight in this region will be a prolonged one.

IN THE FIGHT TO STAY

Federal Troops To Be Concentrated at Chicago.

Every Effort Being Made To Bring About a Compliance With United States Courts' Injunctions—The Question of Finding Available Troops a Serious Problem.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Every effort of the administration, in conjunction with Maj.-Gen. Schofield, is being directed to arranging for the speedy concentration of troops at Chicago. The federal government is in the conflict to stay, and will exhaust every means in its power to bring about a compliance with the several injunctions issued by the United States courts.

A cabinet officer is authority for this statement.

It is further stated that the purpose of the government is not to attempt to control the mobs engaged in rioting in Chicago or elsewhere unless the state authorities fail in this duty. The government troops and the posses of United States deputy marshals will devote their energies to protecting government property, to preventing interference with interstate commerce, and to securing the free transmission of the mails.

One important matter developed at the cabinet meeting yesterday was that the militia organizations of one state could be called on to suppress disorder in another state where the local authorities had failed to enforce obedience to law. Attorney-General Olney said this morning that there was ample constitutional authority for such action, and it is not unlikely that preparations for drawing on state militia for this purpose will be made, although there is no immediate necessity for carrying the policy into effect.

The proper distribution of government troops is causing serious concern at the war department. A high official said today, that 5,000 regulars were needed to suppress the disorders in the west. All the companies of infantry, batteries of artillery and troops of cavalry at western army posts are needed where they are now stationed and are practically resting on their arms. The army authorities are apprehensive that if they are sent to various points where rioting is going on trouble will follow at the places from which the troops are withdrawn.

The failure of the California state militia to preserve order at Sacramento has caused the government to consider the advisability of sending regulars there.

It is not considered good policy to move any regiment at this time, for the absence of the troops at one point might prove the opportunity for riot-ous movements there. Schofield all over the west, and Maj.-Gen. while he order that may call for action on the part of his soldiers.

The war department has 33 companies of infantry, 44 batteries of artillery and eight troops of cavalry in the east. Most of these these could be drawn on for service in Chicago or elsewhere.

NO VACATION FOR MANY

EMPLOYERS PLEAD THAT THE TIMES ARE HARD.

When Escape From Debilitating Summer Is Not Possible, Thousands Will Follow the Example of Mabel Jenness.

Vacations are in sight—for some.

But there are myriads of over-worked men and women who will get no vacation this year, who will stay at home and work and suffer.

Employers plead hard times.

But these tired out, too often uncomplaining men and women need to be told how poor they, and not their employers, really are; they endure the worst kind of poverty, as if it were something there was no use struggling against—poverty of the blood and nerves; and it is not until their bodies and brains break down that they complain and seek help.

Continued headaches, poor appetite, a constant tired feeling and nervousness should convince any reasonable person of the need of a tonic and restorative for exhausted blood and nerves. The ideal invigorator and reconstructive remedy for a "run down" system, for thin, poor blood and diseases of liver, kidneys and stomach is Paine's celery compound. It feeds worn out nerve centres and builds up the strength and elasticity of the body. One takes on new weight with its use; pale cheeks gain color, and the skin, undoubtedly the best index of health, is cleared up and freed from the disfiguring signs of the bad humors that are in the blood.

MISS MABEL JENNESS.

Miss Mabel Jenness, who is celebrated the country over for her successful crusade for physical culture among the gentler sex in Washington.

"I was induced," writes Miss Jenness, "to try Paine's celery compound at a time when I was suffering from overwork and the effect of an accident. I began immediately to realize tonic and blood nourishing effects. I take pleasure in saying that, although opposed to medicine in general, I really consider this an excellent preparation.

"I have not been able to take one day's rest since I returned from my long, hard western trip. I am sure were it not for Paine's celery compound, which has a tonic effect, I should not be able to keep up and work hard.

"I recommended Paine's celery compound to a friend who dined with us yesterday, and on leaving her she went and bought a bottle. I shall do all I can for it, for I believe in it."

So the society woman, whose health and grace are famous the country over, and who is in a position to command the best medical advice, finds in Paine's celery compound the same relief from the effects of overwork and illness that the poorer, harder working woman finds.

And it is within the reach of all.

It's Right Against Common Sense

to suppose that an imitation offers the customer any guarantee like the original does. Take Cottolene for example. But when you come

BOROUGH BUSINESS.

LOTS OF LITTLE NORTH PLAINFIELD MATTERS ATTENDED TO.

To Investigate the Westervelt Avenue Bridge—Side Signs Wanted on Street Cars—Bad Grades of Sidewalks—Sewer Committee Set to Work.

At the regular meeting of the Borough Council held last evening all of the members were present except Councilman Howell. Elmer E. Winckler, appointed councilman at the last meeting in the place of George F. Edwards, resigned, took his seat for the first time.

Borough Magistrate Crosley's report of fines imposed during May and June, amounting to $62, was received and filed. The clerk reported having paid to Collector Spencer $200 34, collected in licenses, fines, dog assessments, and from the sale of dirt from the roads. Clerk Arnold's financial report, given in response to a request made at the last meeting of the council, showed the following totals as a correct statement of the affairs of the borough February 15 when Clerk Vetterlein made his last report:

Fire department balance		$1,877 60
Light account balance		957 50
Road account balance		484 00
	$791 19	$3,319 10
The report at the end of May:
Borough account deficit	$ 3 82
Fire department balance		$ 566 63
Light account balance		565 77
Road account deficit	497 18
	$501 00	$1,132 40
		501 00
Total balance		$631 40

Clerk Arnold stated that these reports agreed with the accounts of Collector Spencer.

Residents of Linden avenue asked for the macadamizing of that avenue between Somerset street and Sycamore avenue, a distance of about 1,800 feet. They subscribed $303. The petition was referred to the Streets and Public Health Committee. Chairman Frost of the city's Sewerage Committee submitted a copy of the letter of Mayor Gilbert to the City Council read at the last meeting, and announced that the committee were ready to confer with a borough committee on the location of filtration beds as suggested in the letter. The appointment of such a committee was asked for. Mr. Lounsbury said he had notified Mayor Gilbert of the appointment of such a committee. Mayor Needham announced the selection of Councilmen Lounsbury, Neal and Peck as members of the committee.

Mr. Peck of the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee reported having ordered a hose wagon and a system of electric fire alarms, covering the borough as reported in The Press of June 23. The Gamewell Company guarantees to keep the line in repair for three years. The money, $2,400, will be paid in three equal annual instalments, beginning December next Of the $460 which is due to the Rumsey wagon, $30 will be allowed for the old truck, not in use at present. The report was received and ordered filed.

Chairman Neal of the Laws, Ordinances and Elections Committee recommended the acceptance of Chief Marshal Pangborn's bond. His recommendation was adopted. In regard to the proposed publication of the ordinances Mr. Neal reported that after careful consideration he had decided that he had been mistaken when he had suggested that a synopsis of the ordinances be prepared and printed. The very laws which should be abbreviated he found to be those which were very particular in their wording, and which were needed for reference in their regular form. While he could not recommend the printing in full at a considerable expense, he thought it best to refer the matter to the Printing and Stationery Committee. The clerk said there were left about 40 of the old pamphlets of ordinances printed in 1888. The new laws could be inserted in the form of three or four printed pages. After a short discussion the Printing Committee was instructed to ascertain the cost of printing the ordinances entire, of those passed subsequent to 1888, and of a number of typewritten copies of the newer ordinances.

On the question of who should be paid for the rent of rooms in the Heyniger Building, used by the borough for election purposes, Mr. Neal thought it best to let the disputing claimants settle the matter between themselves.

Chairman Valiant of the Streets and Public Health Committee reported work done in the scraping of Mountain avenue, the filling in of the extension to Grove street between the two bridges and the laying of pipes furnished by the Township Committee. Several sidewalks had been repaired and new ones laid, but a number of the new ones were of wood. The work of the Printing, Stationery and Supplies Committee, whose chairman was absent, was discussed by different councilmen. A petition for a crosswalk on Chatham street by the Elm Place bridge, was referred to the Street Committee.

Among the bills, Mr. Valiant read that of Clerk Arnold for $25 for extra services in examining the books of his predecessor. Mr. Neal said that the work was well worth the money. Mayor Needham called attention to the fact that the clerk had found several unpaid bills for dirt in looking back, and had collected over $25 on them. The bills were referred to the Auditing Committee. The money being needed at once, the negotiation of a $1,500 loan to be charged to the road account was authorized.

Mr. Valiant said he had been told that the filling in which the city had done on its side of the brook at the Westervelt Avenue bridge threw the water against the abutments on the borough side and threatened to destroy them. The counsel was instructed to investigate the dividing line at that place and report what the borough should do in the matter.

J. K. VanHorn and William Wyckoff were appointed special marshals, their names having been omitted from the list passed upon at a previous meeting. It was decided to borrow $1,000 for borough purposes. On motion of Mr. Lounsbury it was resolved that thereafter no bills should be paid unless they had been presented a week before the meeting at which such action is taken. The proper way in which to notify George W. Feicher, a resident of Morris County, that a sidewalk had not been laid in front of his lots, 96 and 98 Jackson avenue, was discussed.

An ordinance relating to the poles and wires of the Edison Electric Company was adopted on first reading. It gives the company the right to use all of the streets of the borough, and permits the poles now up to remain but defines the exact position with regard to the sidewalk that new poles shall occupy.

M. Lounsbury called attention to a difference of six inches between the walks laid in front of two lots on Grandview avenue opposite his house. Mayor Needham said that the proper grade could be found by referring to the maps of the borough. Mr. Valiant asked if it was the rule of the council to refuse applications for macadamizing if 50 per cent of the amount needed was not subscribed by the petitioners. Mr. Neal said the council had no fixed rule, but he thought it time for it to take a decided stand. In the matter of the Linden avenue macadamizing requested, he thought that the one-fourth subscribed was hardly enough.

On motion of Mr. Lounsbury the Plainfield Street Railway Company was requested to place signs bearing the words "Somerset Street" on the sides of the cars running into the borough. A number of bills were ordered paid. The proposed macadamizing of Myrtle avenue from Willow to Giraud avenues was discussed, residents of the part between Sycamore and Giraud avenues agreeing to transfer their subscriptions to a petition for macadamizing that portion only. It was found that the original offers were made on the condition that the work be commenced in June, so no action was taken by the council.

Mr. Valiant said he had received a map of the Coddington property from Surveyer Gayett, showing the streets he wished to have accepted, but that there had not been sent with it a formal notice from the owner of the land. The ordinance governing the erection of electric light poles was read for the second time and adopted on that reading.

The ordinance requiring cyclers to use a bell and display a light when necessary was adopted on the final reading, after it had been amended by the insertion of the "or lamps" after the section requiring the carrying of a lantern, and the addition of an alternative penalty of 10 days or less of imprisonment to the $20 fine. The ordinance will take effect July 25.

After repairing and passing this ordinance, the council adjourned.

F. L. C. Martin sold a wheel to a man in Ontario, Canada, yesterday.

James Voorhis and Walter Manning of the Crescent Wheelmen have entered the 100 mile race, Saturday, July 14.

I. E. Heuston of Evona rode to the corner of Grant avenue and Front street last evening and left his 1891 Columbia bicycle standing in front of Davis & Stevens's coal office. He rode to town on the trolley cars and when he returned for his wheel he discovered that some one had stolen it. He reported his loss to the police.

Fourteen Plainfielders who ride Spalding bicycles will go tomorrow on the free excursion arranged for owners of these wheels. The party will leave with their wheels on the 6:05 train tomorrow morning and go from New York to Sandy Hook by steamboat. They will then ride to Seabright and Branchport, eat a dinner provided by the Spalding brothers, and return in the same way.

Chance for Bargains.

Among the goods that are advertised are 200 dress patterns of crinkled crepon cloth that will be sold for 59c. per pattern; regular value, $1 25.

Stringing Wire.

The work of putting up the wire for the borough fire-alarm, which is being done by Messrs. Sebring, Brokaw and Cooley of the North Plainfield Electric Light Company, is now rapidly progressing Wire has already been strung through Manning, Westervelt, Mountain, Watchung and Grandview avenues, and up Somerset street to Hudson's lane. The work has been hindered by rain and trees, but is now rapidly nearing completion.

Netherwood's New Postmaster.

Charles J. Noel yesterday received from Washington the commission which makes him postmaster of Netherwood. He has not yet decided when he will take possession of the office.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

HOME TESTIMONY.

Mr. Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.
TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly. They were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 144 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOS. CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Griggs Hill, well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.
TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact, it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 8. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—How men are helped by the Holy Spirit.—John xvi. 7-14.

This passage is taken from Christ's last address to his disciples. His declaration that He must leave them has brought sorrow into their hearts, but He tells them that it is necessary for Him to go away that the Holy Spirit, the Comforter, may come to them, and then he describes to some extent the work of the Holy Spirit. Undoubtedly the Spirit is the most difficult of the three persons of the Trinity to comprehend and understand, because we have nothing similar to Him in our natural lives. God, the Father, can be comprehended, because the relation of father is familiar to us. God, the Son, is easily comprehended for the same reason, but not so the Holy Spirit. Yet the work of the Spirit is very important, and we should pray constantly for Him. In Christ's description of the work of the Spirit He reveals how we may be and are helped by Him:

1. The Holy Spirit comforts men. It was expedient for Christ to go away, for if He did not the Comforter would not come. The Spirit is the Comforter, and it is an important part of His work to comfort the disciples of Christ. This was His first great work with the apostles, and it is still a part of His work. When the Lord Jesus was taken away, God did not leave his children comfortless, but sent the Spirit to console and comfort them. Thus men are helped by the Spirit—helped to bear the afflictions, trials, hardships and discouragements of life.

2. The Holy Spirit convicts men of sin. "And when He is come He will reprove the world of sin, of righteousness and of judgment." To convince men of their sinfulness and consequent need of a savior is a second great work of the Spirit. By this work unbelieving men are helped on the way to salvation, for no one will ever cry out for a savior who does not feel the need of a savior, and in convicting us of our sins and need of a savior the Spirit helps us on our way to salvation. Without His work we would never be saved. Then, too, Christians are helped by this work, helped to bear the discouragment that comes at the slowness of the world to repent and believe. It is the Spirit's work, and we should patiently leave it to Him.

3. The Holy Spirit instructs men. "He will guide you unto all truth, for He shall not speak of Himself, but whatsoever He shall hear that shall He speak, and He will show you things to come." In guiding us into the truth the Spirit instructs us and helps us to understand spiritual things which we could not before.

Cleveland Christian Endeavor Convention.

The Christian Endeavor societies of Cleveland are ready to entertain 40,000 young people if they should come to the international Christian Endeavor convention to be held in Cleveland July 11 to 15. It is confidently expected that, notwithstanding the hard times, at least half that number will be present at the convention. The opening meetings, Wednesday night, will be held in 16 churches of Cleveland. After the opening meetings the sessions beginning on Thursday morning will be held in the immense Seengerfest building, which seats 10,000, and in a large tent which once was used by Barnum & Bailey, which also seats 10,000. The programme is now complete and is even more extensive and attractive than heretofore. Governor McKinley makes one of the addresses of welcome.

The Indian societies will be represented by Jones Spotted Bear of the Santee agency.

President Clark and Secretary Baer have just returned from western and southwestern trips, where they attended a series of Christian Endeavor meetings. They report most enthusiastic meetings, more helpful and larger than they have ever attended.

There are now over 32,000 societies, with a membership of nearly 2,000,000.

"Take Heed How Ye Hear."

There is enough of the gospel preached every year to turn the world upside down. But multitudes have ears to hear who do not hear. Christ emphasized the importance of such a possibility in His words, "Take heed what ye hear," and, "Take heed how ye hear." The "how" of hearing is as important as the having something to hear. The secret of right or wrong hearing and speaking is the same. He who speaks falsely will hear falsely what others say.—Rev. D. O. Mears, D. D.

Christian Endeavor Notes.

At the Idaho convention a paper 1½ yards long containing the names of 168 Endeavorers among the Nez Perce Indians at Fort Lapwai was exhibited.

The Second Reformed society of Muskegon, Mich., has recently built a new sidewalk around the church.

Others will judge you, not by what you can be, but by what you are, but you must judge yourself, not by what you are, but what you can be.—Ivan Panin.

When the juniors become old enough, they graduate into the regular Christian Endeavor society.

Loyalty is one of the characteristics of Christian Endeavor—loyalty to the society, the church, the pastor, the denomination, and, above all, loyalty to God.

Those only die who leave behind no memory of virtue.—Heutz.

The noted English Endeavorer, Rev. Joseph B. Morgan, says the four pillars of Christian Endeavor are the pledge, prayer, the consecration service and committee work.

PLAINFIELD'S MOTHER.

A Press Correspondent Wants to Know Why False Claims Are Set up for Westfield.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Our neighboring town of Westfield has celebrated its centennial. The celebration was an entirely creditable affair—dignified, quiet, and stinguished for good taste and perfection of detail.

The only blot on the occasion is the repeated and strenuous effort of somebody to make Westfield ridiculous by asserting the most preposterous of historical claims for her; claims which can only make her laughed at and hooted at and despised.

Westfield has a history! Union County has a history! The whole State of New Jersey is illustrious in the story of our National life. Within its boundaries the strategy of Washington which forced the enemy out of Philadelphia, New York, and finally out of the whole country, was conceived and carried out and consummated in the course of some thirty-five engagements, and constant raids and skirmishes; until Gen. Kuyphausen complained to Lord Howe that "it was impossible to conquer the Jerseys because every farmer's wife and servant was an enemy's outpost", and so the attempt was abandoned.

It is therefore unnecessary for a Jersey town to manufacture history for itself out of whole cloth; and a newcomer into our midst will find his patriotic zeal entirely unappreciated and extremely unwelcome when he succeeds, (as he finally will if uninterrupted), in putting Westfield into the position of a humbug and a quack among her sister towns! It is hoped that our patriotic neighbors will hunt up this busy person and suppress him before he has ruined their good name beyond their power of apology! Who is responsible, for example, for the statement on page 4 of the Westfield souvenir programme, published and issued by The Union County Standard, that "Back of the old church was encamped near a spring Washington and his troops. It is a tradition how upon the approach of the English and their wily Indian allies the women and children were removed for safety to the mountains"?

Imagine anybody enough of an ass to write that sentence! "Wily Indian allies" in New Jersey—where there had not been a hostile band of Indians for over a century when the Revolution broke out! Imagine the ignoramus who could encamp a whole army "near a spring"! Unless "Washington and his troops" were midgets or Westfield's springs of enormous proportions. Surely the friends of this latest writer on Westfield history ought to take care of him! And this "souvenier" bristles all over with statements which at least make it apparant that no pupil in a Westfield Primary School had anything to do with it. But this will do for present citation.

If the statement on page 5 of this "souvenir"—that these facts are gathered from a publication written by Rev. N. W. Cadwell—means that this Rev. Cadwell, Presbyterian parson, Westfield, is abroad with all this spurious history and bogus information, then I hasten to withdraw my good-natured gibes at Editor Pearsall. But who will muzzle Parson Cadwell ere it is too late?

The Albion is most favorably situated, and is comfortably appointed, making it a pleasant and healthful home. The Press wishes Mr. Bogert success in his enterprise, and success is merited by his capability and energy.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Dunellen and New Market.

Mrs. Harry Hull of Sing Sing is visiting her mother, Mrs. Slape.

Mrs. Maelr and family returned yesterday from a visit to Manasquan.

Miss Fanny Smith returned yesterday from a pleasant visit in Asbury Park.

William Bachman of Newark was cordially received by his many friends about town yesterday.

Ex-Street Commissioner George Angleman of Plainfield enjoyed the exhilarating air of the borough yesterday.

Fred Nelson took a stageload of people from the Nelson House, New Mareet, to the circus in Plainfield last evening.

Fred Haynes and Elmer Blackford of New Market exercise a great deal on their wheels. They rode to Staten Island and back Wednesday.

The meat question has not worried our people much, as all the butchers are very well supplied and an additional supply was received yesterday from Plainfield.

Rev. A. I. Martine started today with his children for Swangunk Range, Ulster County, N. Y. Mr. Martine will return next week, leaving his children there for another week of pleasure.

Pastor Peterson of the New Market Seventh-Day Baptist Church will occupy the pulpit of the Presbyterian Church tomorrow morning in the absence of the pastor, Rev. A. I. Martine.

Robert Lowrie, a resident of North avenue, complains considerably about water running into his cellar, caused, he says, by the overflowing of the gutter. Mr. Lowrie thinks the Borough Commissioners should build a culvert which would remedy the difficulty.

There is an attractive place near Bloomsbury called "Ringing Rocks" and a number of Dunellen people are loud in their praise of it. It is said that one can walk in among these rocks, resulting in a sound exactly like that of bells. Several of our young people intend visiting the place this Summer.

At the regular meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Presbyterian Church held Thursday evening, it was decided that during the Summer months it would be best to combine their service with the Sunday evening church service. The first meeting will be held tomorrow evening. The Christian Endeavorers will have charge of the meetings.

Rev. W. C. Kinsey pastor of the M. E. Church will preach the first of a series of sermons on "Living Issues", tomorrow evening. They will be given each Sunday evening at 7:45. The topic tomorrow evening will be "Law and Order". The local law breakers will be condemned and the Law and Order League will be discussed.

A sad death to record is that of William Gregory, the eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Gregory of Orange. He had been staying with his grandfather, William Blair at New Market Heights, and had not been feeling well for a few days past. His death was caused by inflammation of the stomach which occured yesterday morning. The parents were sent for and arrived yesterday. The funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at 2 from the residence of his grandfather. Rev. Frank Fletcher pastor of the Baptist Church will officiate.

The Law and Order League of Dunellen and New Market met Thursday night in the Lincoln School Hall. President A. A. Lake called the meeting to order and the secretary read the minutes of the last meeting. Rev. W. C. Kinsey and Mr. Nelson were added to the special committee to make choice of counsel for the League, and the committee was continued with power. The Executive Committee consists of the officers of the League: President A. A. Lake, First Vice-president T. Todd, Second Vice-president H. C. Gaskell, Secretary Frank Humpston, Treasurer Fowler Vail, and Revs. F. Fletcher, A. I. Martine, W. C. Kinsey, and Messrs. Pierce and Swackhamer. The last five were added last night. The outline of the work in general was discussed by members of the league for the benefit of the Executive Committee. Those who joined the league Thursday night were Messrs. Vail, Hardingham, B. J. Swackhamer, A. B. Nelson, John Runyon, Robert Lowrie and B. Carpenter. The constitution and by-laws under which the league will work, and which have been adopted, declare: "The object of this League shall be to secure to Dunellen, New Market and vicinity, by arousing a correct public opinion, by disseminating information through the press or public meetings, and by the impartial enforcement of law, such good order and quiet as the laws of the State of New Jersey guarantee at all times, and especially on Sunday."

Sudden Severe Illness.

For nearly twelve years Philips Mitze of New Market has been in the employ of I. H. Boehm, on West Front street, and during that time he has not failed to be present every working day, at his usual time, 7 in the morning.

This morning he was walking over from New Market to Dunellen with his friend Casper Waglow, who works for I. Lederer, to take the train for Plainfield. He appeared to be in unusual good health, and was very lively in spirit.

When they were nearing Rev. F. Fletcher's house, Mr. Mitze gave a loud groan, and fell suddenly to the ground. He immediately became unconscious, and at the same time blood poured from his mouth.

Mr. Waglow hastened to call Mr. Fletcher, who came out. No restorative could be passed the patient's lips, which were tightly closed.

William Randolph who lives near New Market happened along with his horse and wagon, and took Mr. Mitze home, and Dr. Nelson was called, who succeeded in restoring consciousness. Mr. Mitze is very weak, however, and not able to talk. No cause could be given for the sudden illness, as Mr. Mitze has always enjoyed the best of health.

—A V. D. Honeyman will conduct a tour to the White Mountains and Quebec, August 27.

DR. LEWIS IMPRESSES.

Sets Folks Thinking on the Woman Suffrage Question.

WESTFIELD, July 6.

The event of the past month in Westfield was the address given by Dr. J. M. Cuckley at the High School graduation exercises. The audience was a large one, as Westfield audiences go. The people were tired, as people sometimes are in a crowded church on a sultry night. The address did not begin until after 9, and continued nearly an hour. To entertain an audience and to make them laugh under such circumstances is to accomplish something; and this Dr. Buckley did. Of the means by which he accomplished it I prefer not to speak at length. One does not like to be led into saying unpleasant things about the oratory of a man whose fame as a public speaker nearly equals his fame as an editor. And what matters it if people have different views as to the function of the anecdote in public speech?

In his remarks on the higher education of women, Dr. Buckley made no reference to woman suffrage, although he is an opponent of the movement. Some of your readers will probably recall his famous speech against woman suffrage delivered at Chautauqua three years ago.

The latest words spoken in Westfield on woman suffrage were from Dr. A. H. Lewis at the Presbyterian Church, Sunday morning. Perhaps readers of The Press know just what Dr. Lewis's views on woman suffrage are. He certainly has well defined opinions on this as on other public questions. It is possible, however, that some of your readers are not so fortunate as to hear him often. It is with these in mind that I take occasion here to note his views on woman suffrage. Dr. Lewis believes that man cannot justly claim the right to vote merely on the ground that he is a male animal; and that woman should not be denied that right merely on account of her sex. He admits that there are bad women as well as bad men, and denies alike to bad women and to bad men the right of suffrage. He recommends that the ballot be taken away from the lower, or the less efficient half, of the men voters, and given to the upper half of the women. This will, I think, commend itself to intelligent minds as an altogether sane and reasonable view of a much-discussed question. Someone will perhaps say that it is not a new or original view; which would be valid as a criticism if Dr. Lewis or anyone else should claim for it either newness or originality. It is not new, speaking without reference to place; yet in a local sense—if I may so express myself—it is new. Much has been said in Westfield, pro and con, touching woman suffrage. There are the theorists and there are those who distrust the theory, and believe it disproved in experience. The holders of extreme views are unfortunately the ones to whom the discussion has been left. I say unfortunately, not because I would underrate their ability to argue a question fiercely, but because in the discussion there has been a display of that excessive zeal which is not always compatible with sweetness and light. Thus it happens that the spirit of Dr. Lewis's words impresses one as something new in the history of the discussion in Westfield. They are the utterance of a mind tempered by experience and reflection. Yet they are, after all, only the sort of thing that we have been taught to expect from Dr. Lewis. REESE.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Clifford Braider will be the only representative from the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist Church, to the convention to be held in Cleveland next week.

The Christian Endeavor Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist Church held a special missionary meeting in the church parlors last evening. The meeting was led by Miss Spangenberg. Mrs. Bond, a returned missionary from Bulgaria, gave a very delightful talk and exhibited a number of curiosities from that country. Readings were given by Miss Anne Wyckoff and Miss Morse of the Congregational Christian Endeavor Society. The music was led by a double quartette.

—The local machinists belonging to the International Association will meet in Red Men's Hall this evening at 8.

—Charles Conover and Fred J. Pope made a successful fishing trip yesterday, returning with large catches of catfish, eels and carp.

—The Third Regiment Cadets have again changed their place of camping. They intend now to leave for Roesville, Staten Island, next Saturday.

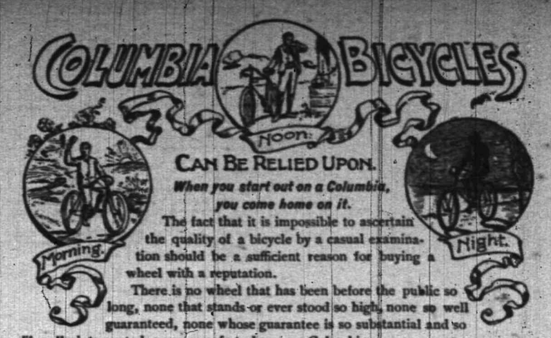
COLUMBIA BICYCLES



CAN BE RELIED UPON.

When you start out on a Columbia, you come home on it.

The fact that it is impossible to ascertain the quality of a bicycle by a casual examination should be a sufficient reason for buying a wheel with a reputation.

There is no wheel that has been before the public so long, none that stands or ever stood so high, none so well guaranteed, none whose guarantee is so substantial and so liberally interpreted, none so safe to buy as a Columbia.

With Columbias listed at $125, few riders will be so unwise as to invest in lower grade bicycles.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.

Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make is True.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

DR. STARKWEATHER.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays 4 to 6 p. m.

Those living at a distance can consult the Doctor by letter.

Send or call for our Book of Testimonials.

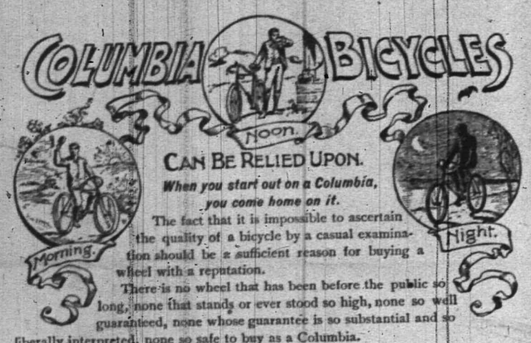
COLUMBIA BICYCLES



CAN BE RELIED UPON.

When you start out on a Columbia, you come home on it.

The fact that it is impossible to ascertain the quality of a bicycle by a casual examination should be a sufficient reason for buying a wheel with a reputation.

There is no wheel that has been before the public so long, none that stands or ever stood so high, none so well guaranteed, none whose guarantee is so substantial and so liberally interpreted, none so safe to buy as a Columbia.

With Columbias listed at $125, few riders will be so unwise as to invest in lower grade bicycles.

Pittsburg Engineers Decide Not To Quit Work.

They Declare That They Will Remain Faithful to the Public and to Their Employers—Sudden Change of Front Disclosed After Discussing Two Propositions from the A. R. U.

PITTSBURG, July 9.—From indications this morning there is not much danger that the railroad men in Pittsburg, especially on the large systems, will strike in sympathy with the American Railway union. The feeling in favor of such a movement appears to have undergone a sudden change, after the meetings of several railway organizations held Sunday, to take some action on the pending trouble on the railroads in the west.

Division 203 of the Brotherhood of locomotive engineers of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago railway at its meeting yesterday unanimously adopted resolutions declaring that the division will remain faithful to its employers and the public, and will not under any circumstances recognize any order from President Debs. This division is the most important one of railroad employes in this vicinity, and between Pittsburg and Chicago.

The purpose of the several meetings called yesterday under the auspices of the American Railway union was not wholly to solicit members for that organization. In addition to this it is understood, the organizers were prepared to take advantage of any sentiment among the railway men in favor of the strike. The meetings were all mixed in attendance. They were held at the halls of the different organizations but admission was not limited to the members of the several lodges. At each meeting there were two propositions. One was to receive the men into the A. R. U., and the other was to secure a promise to obey orders from President Debs, if they would not attach themselves to his organization. Reports from a large number of men at the meeting indicate that neither proposition was received with favor.

Meetings of members of different railway orders of the Panhandle & Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago railroads were held in Allegheny in the afternoon under the auspices of the American Railway union. The organization of the different organizations was discussed by the organizers to defend the position of the A. R. U., and explanations were made to different members that there was no barrier against a suspension of work in sympathy with the striking union. The discussions were animated. The men were not taken with the idea of striking. The members who signified their willingness to strike, it is said, were less than a dozen.

A number of men were seen after the meeting, and they said positively that the railroad men about Pittsburg will not strike or actively assist the A. R. U. They said they had attended the meetings to listen to the proceedings, but the organizers had failed to show how a strike here will benefit the men at Chicago and other points.

It was expected that a meeting of Baltimore & Ohio railroad men would be held at Glenwood some time during the day, but not a railroader went to the hall, and the men in Pittsburg employed on the main line of that road have evidently taken no action in regard to the strike.

It was reported this morning that a number of railroad men employed on the Pittsburg & Western had joined the A. R. U., and officials of that road were on the lookout for trouble.

A meeting of railroad men from different roads was held at Millville in the afternoon. The meeting was addressed by Charles Naylor, an organizer of the A. R. U. After the regular meeting an executive session was held and several names were added to the roll of the new union. This, however, is considered of little importance, and the outlook for substantial aid to the A. R. U. is not encouraging for President Debs.

Methodist Church Dedicated.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 9.—St. Luke's Methodist Episcopal church at Long Branch was dedicated yesterday in the presence of a large gathering from Long Branch, Hollywood, Norwood, Elberon and the surrounding towns. The dedication address was delivered by Bishop Cyrus D. Foss of Philadelphia. Addresses were also delivered by Presiding Elder Strickland, Revs. Dr. Hanlem, R. C. Curtis, James Buckley and others.

Companies Organized To Fight.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., July 9.—Gen. Lew Wallace has organized several large military companies, in view of the threatened trouble by strikers. Gen. Wallace believes that unless the strike is put down at once civil war will ensue. He organized the companies to offer them to the service of the state should there be any call for them. People of central Indiana, especially in the rural districts and towns, are bitter against the strikers.

BATTLE AT HAMMOND

Troops and Rioters Exchange Shots With Fatal Effect.

Desperate Conflict Before the Outbreak Was Quelled—One Man Shot Down, Others Wounded—Illinois Militia Will Act With Federal Troops—Gen. Lew Wallace Organizing Companies To Fight the Strikers—Everything Quiet in the City of Chicago Proper.

CHICAGO, July 9.—The seat of war in the great railroad strike was transferred yesterday to Hammond, Ind., just across the border line, and where, from an early hour, mob violence reigned supreme.

Two companies of regulars were despatched to the scene. Late yesterday afternoon there was a pitched battle between the regulars and the mob. This is the list of the casualties:

Charles Fleisher, carpenter, married, was killed instantly.

W. H. Campbell, shot in the right thigh, probably fatal.

Victor Seitor, shot in knee; condition critical.

Unknown man, shot in right leg.

Trouble commenced at daylight, when a mob, which had been in the neighborhood since the evening before, overturned 15 freight cars on the Chicago & Calumet Terminal railroad between Hammond and East Chicago. Six of the number were thrown cross-wise over the main tracks of the Michigan Central, while two others were thrown across the tracks of the Nickel Plate.

At the break of day the rabble set fire to a Pullman car that had been run on a side track. A call was sent in, and the fire department responded with alacrity, but not before four Pullmans had been badly scorched.

Shortly after daybreak the north bound train on the Monon road reached the depot. Just as soon as it stopped it was surrounded by a mob of strikers, boys and women, and the engineer and fireman were peremptorily ordered to get down from the cab.

Many of the mob were armed with revolvers. Many more held rocks in their hands, and, as a consequence, the two employes were quick to obey.

One of the strikers then took possession of the engine and the train was sidetracked.

A telegram was sent to Chicago asking for military assistance to get the train out. There was no immediate response, but at 11:30 company D of the fifteenth infantry, thirty-three strong, arrived in two coaches.

The regulars disembarked at the depot and marched to the side track, where the Monon train was stationed. The mob fell back on the approach of the military, but hooted and jeered.

The scene was a veritable bedlam.

One half of the company took up its position in the front of the engine and the other half in the rear, and preparations were made to move the train.

Like a flash of lightning, however, the crowd increased, until it numbered nearly 2,000.

Realizing the fact that reinforcements were necessary, a detail was sent to the telegraph station, with instructions to wire to Chicago for more troops.

In the meantime Maj. Reilly ordered Capt. Harts to clear the tracks to the sidewalks with fixed bayonets.

The regulars advanced, the mob retreated, and for the time being was held at bay.

A little before 1 o'clock a train of empty cars was started from the yards, the way being cleared by the soldiers. The mob contented itself with jeers and invectives.

Temporary quiet was secured while Sheriff Fredericks read a telegram which had just been received from Governor Matthews conveying advices that a large force of state troops would reach Hammond from Laporte, Rochester and other points with instructions not only to maintain law and order at all hazards, but to coperate with the federal troops.

The despatch had it that the whole force of the state would be sent to the scene if necessary.

The mob listened to the reading of the despatch in silence, but when the sheriff had concluded, it sent up such a yell of defiance as might be expected to emanate only from an army of redskins on the plains.

The mob went to the adjacent prairie on either side of the tracks for awhile, becoming emboldened by the apparent inactivity of the troops.

The rioters soon returned, and it became necessary for the militia to open fire on them. Only one volley was fired with fatal result, as stated above, but this had the effect of dispersing the mob for the time.

QUIET AT CHICAGO.

Rioters Are Apparently Cowed by the Troops.

CHICAGO, July 9.—Everything was quiet yesterday in and about the Polack-Bohemian settlements on the line of the Grand Trunk between Loomis street and Ashland avenue and Fortieth street, where the scrimmage between the mob and the militia and police occurred yesterday. The anarchistic elements with which the region is mainly populated was thoroughly cowed by the determination manifested by the National guardsmen, and the ease and facility with which they used their rifles and bayonets. Accustomed only to the clubs of the police, and with which, in times past, they have more than once successfully contended, the war methods of the militia proved a revelation to the foreigners and impressed upon them the fact to which they have hitherto been strangers—that "discretion is the better part of valor." It was the quietest day that the neighborhood has experienced in many years. Many of the saloon keepers closed their doors, while those that, following their usual habit, persisted in violating the city ordinances, kept a sentry outside the door or around the corner in order to be forewarned in case of the approach of military or police. In the saloons that were open the frequenters talked in an inflammatory strain, while admitting in the same breath that a repetition of the experiences of Saturday afternoon were not to be desired. Crowds of people visited the corner of Forty-ninth and Loomis streets and stared at the bullet holes on the fronts of the frame cottages running for half a block west of the Grand Trunk tracks, and which bore silent testimony to the efficient manner in which the militia had run the anarchistis to their holes and given them a parting volley by way of a reminder of what they might expect if they ventured forth again. A company of the militia and a detachment of police from the 19th precinct continued on duty in the neighborhood throughout the day, but, beyond the regular patrol duty, their services were not called into active requisition.

Company C, of the Second regiment of the Illinois National guard, commanded by Capt. Mair, which routed the mob on the Grand Trunk tracks Saturday afternoon, was assigned to duty on the Lake Shore and Rock Island tracks between 49th and 60th streets. Capt. Mair is one of the best known militia officers in the city, with a wide acquaintance in outside states, and he was considerably mystified this morning when local friends began to visit him and a few despatches reached him at the tracks from outside points, inquiring into the accuracy of despatches sent out by the Associated Press to the effect that Company C had retreated before the mob, leaving it in full possession of the situation, and also leaving the few members of the police force on the scene at its mercy. After perusing the report sent out by the United Press, Capt. Mair said:

"This statement is accurate and corresponds with the official reports that were rendered to Col. Hotchkiss. So far as running away is concerned, my command did not board the wrecking train until the mob was dispersed and the trouble was over. Such a thing as running away never even entered our heads. Whatever stories have been published to this effect are lies pure and simple. We might have remained at the crossing, of course, and waited until the mob reassembled, if it was in the mood to do so, and then, possibly, we should have been obliged to shed more blood. This, however, was no fault of our detail. We were there not to make trouble, but to prevent it. Our forces were stoned and nearly every man hit before I gave the order to fire. The men had instructions not to fire haphazard into the crowd and to avoid as nearly as possible shooting in the direction where the most women and children were congregated. Had it not been for these instructions I should have given the order to fire long before. There were but few policemen on the scene during the fight and they gave us no material assistance. The odds against us were large, but the one volley which we fired was quite enough to scatter the crowd. The subsequent charge with bayonets finished the matter and when we again got on the train not a rioter was in sight. We did not hurry, but took our time. It should be a sufficient indication that we are not regarded as cowardly by the railroad authorities that we have already been asked to guard another train. This request was referred to headquarters."

Capt. Mair was shown a Washington dispatch, in which Gen. Scofield was quoted as having expressed to a reporter his regret that troops found it necessary to shoot. To this he responded: "I am sorry that General Schofield should have gotten so bad an impression of it. That impression, it is certain, was based upon the erroneous reports sent out. Had he witnessed the scene himself, or had he known the truth we are certain that he would have commended our action—especially as a great military man—instead of condemning them."

WILL SHOOT TO KILL.

Illinois Volunteers Intend To Protect a Coal Company's Property.

OTTAWA, Ill., July 9.—This city is in a fever of excitement over the report that a mob of 2,000 miners, which has been looting stores at Spring Valley, is on the march from that place to La Salle to destroy other coal company property.

Sheriff Taylor and deputies organized a posse of 60 men, and a special Rock Island train carried them to La Salle.

The men are well disciplined, having all been active service in the militia. They volunteered their services. They are all armed with Winchester repeating rifles and 25 rounds of ammunition.

Many leading citizens, professional men and merchants, shouldered a gun and marched to the seat of war. The men are under instruction to protect the property of the coal company at all hazards, and will shoot to kill.

Wouldn't Obey Debs.

BALTIMORE, Md., July 9.—The threatened strike in this locality as a result of the Pullman boycott was not ordered yesterday mainly because James Russell, the secretary of the American Railway branch would not follow President Debs' instructions. Russell received a telegram from Debs ordering their men to stop work, with a view to crippling the eastern divisions of the Baltimore & Ohio and Pennsylvania railroad systems, but Russell said the organization was not strong enough in these parts to warrant the promulgation of such an order unless they were to be supported by the other labor organizations. Of this he had a doubt.

Would Not Be Interviewed.

CLAYTON, N. Y., July 9.—George M. Pullman was visited at his cottage, "Castle Rest," on the St. Lawrence river, by a United Press reporter last evening. He refused to make any further statement for publication concerning the strike situation. He said he was here for a rest and expected to remain until he recuperated or business called him away. He receives telegraphic reports regularly from Chicago.

New York Troops Going West.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 9.—Four hundred and ten officers and men of the Ninth infantry, U. S. A., from Sackett's Harbor, under command of Col. G. G. Bartlett, passed through Buffalo last night, coming on a New York Central special consisting of nine coaches and three baggage cars, and at midnight went west, en route to Chicago on the Lake Shore. They were equipped for field service.

Eastern Men To Fill Strikers' Places.

NASHUA, N. H., July 9.—Quite a party of railroad men, who have been employed by an agent from the west, left this city last night for Chicago to fill the places of strikers. These men are skilled workmen who have been out of work more or less of the time during the past few months.

Will Not Strike.

ROANOKE, Va., July 9.—At a meeting held here of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, employes of the Norfolk & Western railroad, it was decided by that body to remain at their posts and to take no part in the strike.

Biddeford Guards Not Ordered Out.

AUGUSTA, Me., July 9.—The report that the National guards at Biddeford had been ordered to be ready to proceed to Portland on account of the Pullman strike is denied by military officials here.

A GREAT MAN'S FROWN

Wilhelm Is Angry and Berlin Society Trembles.

The Kotze Scandal Causes Such an Exodus from the Kaiser's Court of Prominent People of Both Sexes That There Promises To Be a Dearth of Social Functions.

BERLIN, July 9.—Emperor William has rarely been more vexed than during the Kotze scandal. When he ordered Kotze's release he determined to end also the gossip caused at court by the arrest and inquiry. He instructed the new grand chamberlain, in a despatch accompanying the order of release, to caution all court officials that they must cease talking of the scandal or give up their places in the court circle. The grand chamberlain will soon revise the list of household officials and will undoubtedly cancel the names of von Kotze and von Schraeder. Neither of these gentlemen is likely to appear again in the emperor's entourage. Among the other exiles from the Old castle and New palace will be Prince Leopold, of Prussia, who urged most strenuously the arrest of Kotze, and several conspicuous women of the court, whose private lives suffered severely from the Kotze inquiry. This exodus of social leaders promises to be so great that the next season will be the dullest experienced since the accession of the young emperor.

The notice of his release from arrest was carried to Herr von Kotze by Herr von Wedel, chief of the royal household, and another high court official. After listening to their expressions of regret for his imprisonment, Kotze bowed in silence, and, without further attention to them, walked to the carriage which awaited him at the door of the prison. Three hours later he was on his way to his Silesian estate, where he now has joined his family. It is reported that he will seek permission from the emperor to prosecute the men who caused his arrest. This permission, however, he will hardly obtain as it would involve in trouble several members of the imperial family. The Kleine Journal, the most untrustworthy newspaper in Berlin, says that Frau von Kotze received an anonymous note containing an offer to name, for 5,000 marks, the writer of the scandalous letters, but this story is discredited. At all events, no more revelations are likely as every effort is making to hush the whole affair.

Emperor William is expected to prolong his trip northward, so as not to return before the end of the scandal. The empress left the yacht Hohenzollern Sunday at Drontheim. She proceeded directly to Christiania where the steamer Stein was waiting to convey her home.

Military men here feel that Emperor William has made a serious mistake in removing General von Hobe from his post in the Turkish army. Hobe was among the German officers appointed to go to reorganize the army. He was recommended highly by General Count von Waldersee, and his work gave the greatest satisfaction in Constantinople. His only fault seems to have been that he was very friendly with Herr von Radowitz who fell into disfavor during the Bismark rumpus some two years ago, and was removed from the Constantinople embassy to the embassy at Madrid. Prince Radolin, Radowitz's successor on the Bosphorus, interfered with Hobe's work, was rebuffed and, after a hot quarrel, began an intrigue at the Berlin court against the general, eventually convincing the emperor that Hobe's removal was imperative. Hobe, who is no diplomatist, laid his case before the emperor, complaining that Radolin persistently snubbed him. The emperor's reply was an order that Prince Radolin secure Hobe's dismissal from the Turkish service in order that he might return to Germany. High army officials say that Hobe is merely the last of a series of sacrifices demanded by a small court coterie of intriguers. He is expected to reach Berlin next month, and his friends plan to give him then a big banquet as a protest against the injustice which he has suffered.

Reports of international action against the anarchists have been rife throughout the last week and the journals more or less directly inspired from the Wilhelm Strasse have declared that the government contemplated some new measures. The government has been in constant communication with the powers, and numerous plans of dealing with the revolutionists concertedly have been suggested. All these plans, however, have shattered on opposition in one capaital or another. The most noteworthy of the measures suggested was for an international police bureau, to be organized by the Swiss government with headquarters in Berne or Geneva. The general attitude of the German government toward any exceptional measures was defined by the chancellor in his last reply to communications from Paris, Rome and St. Petersburg. This reply was based largely on the special reports made from the Berlin Central Police office. The chancellor advised more harmonious co-operation of the police of all countries instead of a new organization the basis of international agreement. The Berlin police had found that the London, St. Petersburg and Vienna police acted in such perfect accord in tracing anarchists' movements that they had frustrated all plots of international scope. The Paris and Roma police, however, had not shown any inclination to work with those of the other three capitals. The Paris police had at concerted action. Under such circumstances, Chancellor von Caprivi felt that the formation of an international bureau would be useless. If, however, the governments would move their municipal police forces to drop petty jealousies and combine for concerted action, such a bureau would be superfluous.

You hear a great deal about oatmeals as good as H-O. Do you ever hear that H-O is as good as some others?

Money Believed To Be Safe.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—United States Treasurer Morgan says that, so far as he has been advised, no United States money in transit on the railroads was in any of the cars burned by strikers at Chicago or elsewhere, and he has reason to believe that all government money started east or west was now safely housed in United States sub-treasuries.

New York Baseball League.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., July 9.—A meeting of the directors of the State League Baseball association will be held here to-morrow, when a president will be elected to succeed Mr. Haas, of Albany. The league will be continued, notwithstanding the recent disbanding of the Albany and Pittsfield clubs.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

The Business Portion of Butler, N. J., Wiped Out.

PATERSON, N. J., July 9.—The entire business portion of the village of Butler, which consisted of seven stores, was destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon.

The fire originated in a paint store and was caused by the explosion of a kerosene stove, on which the proprietor, F. H. Penburg, was cooking his dinner. A bucket brigade composed of nearly two hundred men worked energetically, but were unable to check the flames until the entire block was consumed. Seven families were left homeless. The loss is estimated at $30,000, with only about $15,000 insurance on the buildings.

ZIMMERMAN BEATS EDWARDS.

Crooks and Wheeler Also Win Prizes in Paris.

PARIS, July 9.—Crooks, the American wheelman, was second in the race for the Chantilly prize yesterday over a course of three kilometres. A. A. Zimmerman beat A. C. Edwards in the match for 2,500 francs a side. There were to be three heats in this match, but as both the first (of one kilometre) and the second (of two kilometres) were won by Zimmerman, the final heat was omitted. He rode without any apparent exertion, while Edwards seemed to be straining every nerve. Harry Wheeler won the Malines prize over a distance of one kilometre in splendid style.

Rossa Well Received.

DUBLIN, July 9.—O'Donovan Rossa was received enthusiastically by the people and authorities of Nenagh. In response to several addresses of sympathy and congratulation, he spoke at length of Ireland's present condition and hopes of the future. After twenty-nine years of imprisonment and banishment, he said, he found his spirit unchanged. He hoped that the Irish would get home rule, and that they would get it peaceably; if not peaceably, then otherwise. They were trusting English promises, and he hoped that for once these promises would be kept.

The Situation at Pueblo.

DENVER, Col., July 9.—Marshal Israel has issued orders to deputies in Pueblo to fire if any attempts are made to attack or disarm them. The deputies there are patrolling the yards, but the passenger trains at the depot are said to be in possession of the strikers. The federal troops upon their arrival in Pueblo will disperse the mob and place all railroad property in possession of the railroad officials and United States deputy marshals, after which they will push on to Trinidad.

The President's Vacation.

BUZZARD'S BAY, July 9.—Mrs. Cleveland last evening told the representative of the New England Associated Press that the president never contemplated a vacation July 15, nor does he expect to come to Gray Gables, August 1. Advices that she has received from Mr. Cleveland state that he does not expect to come to Buzzard's Bay until after congress adjourns; as that time is so uncertain, no date can now be fixed.

Corbett in Ireland.

DUBLIN, July 9.—James J. Corbett, the pugilist, arrived yesterday. Four bands and thousands of citizens welcomed him at the station. He was carried on men's shoulders from the train, the horses were unharnessed from his carriage, and he was drawn by the crowd to his hotel. He was cheered wildly when he made a speech from the hotel balcony.

It Was Not the Bulls-eye.

JERSEY CITY, July 9.—Walter Pearson, the twelve-year-old son of Detective Pearson, was shooting at a target near his home on Fairmount avenue, last evening, when one of the bullets flew wide of the mark and passed through a stable door, hitting Henry Pellert in the eye, inflicting a dangerous wound. Pellert was taken to the city hospital and Pearson was locked up.

Saddlers' Convention Postponed.

ST. LOUIS, July 9.—The Wholesale Saddlers' convention, scheduled for July 10 to 13 at Detroit, has been postponed on information from Detroit that disturbance to travel makes it expedient to do so. Members will be notified of the future date of the convention.

Prominent Politician Killed.

WELLSBORO, Pa., July 9.—William H. Vermilyea, the best known hotel keeper in this part of the state and a prominent politician, was killed Saturday night in a runaway accident down the mountain road near Galeton. He was 48 years old.

BY THE PRESIDENT

Proclamation Warning the Railroad Rioters.

Must Disperse By Noon of To-day—Those Who Disregard the Warning To Be Treated as Public Enemies—The President's Desire Is To Protect and Save the Innocent.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—At a late hour last night President Cleveland issued the following proclamation:

PROCLAMATION BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Whereas, By reason of unlawful obstructions, combinations and assemblages of persons, it has become impracticable, in the judgment of the president, to enforce, by the ordinary course of judicial proceedings, the laws of the United States within the state of Illinois, and especially in the city of Chicago within said state, and

Whereas, For the purpose of enforcing the faithful execution of the laws of the United States and protecting its property and removing obstructions to the United States mails in the state and city aforesaid, the president has employed a part of the military forces of the United States.

Now, therefore, I, Grover Cleveland, president of the United States, do hereby admonish all good citizens and all persons who may be or who may come within the city and state aforesaid, against aiding, countenancing, encouraging, or taking any part in such unlawful obstructions, combinations and assemblages; and I hereby warn all persons engaged in, or in any way connected with such unlawful obstructions, combinations, and assemblages to disperse and retire peaceably to to their respective abodes on or before 12 o'clock on the 9th day of July instant.

Those who disregard this warning and persist in taking part with a riotous mob in forcibly resisting and obstructing the execution of the laws of the United States, or interfering with with the functions of the government, or destroying or attempting to destroy the property belonging to the United States or under its protection, cannot be regarded other than as public enemies.

Troops employed against such a riotous mob will act with all the moderation and forebearance consistent with the accomplishment of the desired end, but stern necessity that confronts the will not with certainty permit discrimination between guilty participants and those who are mingled with them from curiosity and without criminal intent. The only safe course, therefore, for those not actually unlawfully participating is to abide in their own homes, or at least not to be found in the neighborhood of riotous assemblages.

While there will be no hesitation or vacillation in the decisive treatment of the guilty, this warning is especially intended to protect and save the innocent.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed hereto.

By the president.

(Signed) GROVER CLEVELAND.

(Signed) W. Q. GRESHAM, Secretary of State.

The proclamation was communicated to General Miles by Secretary Lamont who telegraphed as follows:

"In view of the provisions of the statue and for the purpose of giving ample warning to all innocent and well disposed persons the president has deemed it best to issue the accompanying proclamation. This does not change the scope of your authority and duties, nor your relations to the local authorities. You will please make this known to Mayor Hopkins."

AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

Numerous Conferences Between the President and His Advisers.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—All day long yesterday conferences were held at the white house between the president and his official advisers. Secretary Lamont and General Schofield came early and remained late, while Postmaster-General Bissell and Secretary Gresham spent some time with Mr. Cleveland. Secretary Carlisle paid a brief visit. It was altogether a red-letter Sunday at the white house, and the waiting carriages and constant comings and goings of officers of the government made it obvious that something unusual was taking place.

From an early hour in the morning Secretary Lamont and Gen. Schofield were in close consultation with the president. Gen. Schofield brought his morning despatch from Gen. Miles, and its tone was so pacific that the anxious president was considerably relieved. Gen. Miles said that the night had passed quietly, and that there was every indication of a peaceful day. Saturday night, over the telephone, he explained to the president how matters stood, and his predictions for a Sunday more peaceable than anticipated were emphasized in his despatch of the morning. A direct wire between Gen. Miles' headquarters in Chicago and the white house has been established, and communication between Gen. Miles at one end and the president, Secretary Lamont and Gen. Schofield at the other is now carried on without delay. The chances for another outbreak of violence in Chicago were thoroughly discussed by the president and his advisers, and there was an unanimous agreement of opinion that the great improvement of affairs augured well for a day of little disorder. The president expressed himself exceedingly gratified at the turn things had taken, and he was joined by his associates in the belief that the sermons on the strike which Chicago pastors would preach would have an excellent effect on a large number of people. A great deal of praise was accorded Archbishop Feehan for his circular letter to the priests of his diocese, directing them to counsel their congregations to observe the law and not participate in rioting.

The re-inforcements of regular troops sent to Gen. Miles are not to be distributed about Chicago, but will be kept at Fort Sheridan, just outside the city, as a reserve force. When Gen. Miles asked for them he stated that he did not need them to actively assist him in keeping order. Fort Sheridan is the central distributing post for troops in the department of Missouri, which General Miles commands, and he thought it well to have a sufficient force of regulars there so that they could be despatched to Ohio or Pennsylvania or Indiana or Missouri or to any place where trouble might occur, in the quickest possible time.

The president's office looked like the headquarters of a general directing the movements of his army. Telegrams fresh from the hands of the white house operator were brought in frequently and carefully read. Major-General Schofield offered suggestions and told about the distribution of troops in Chicago. Adjutant General Ruggles was also present to furnish any information about the army.

END OF KELLEY'S ARMY.

Knocked to Pieces by Militia in West Virginia.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., July 9.—Kelley's band of commonwealers who took possession of the Chesapeake & Ohio freight train in Kentucky, were stopped as soon as they entered West Virginia by two companies of militia from this city, who surrounded the hoboes and kept them in captivity until the arrival of Gov. McCorkle in a special train yesterday. The men were then separated in three different companies—two being sent into Ohio and one into Kentucky, the balance, 73 in number, being brought to this city, and will be escorted out of the city to-day.

This virtually knocks out the commonweal army of Kelley.

Model Newspaper Work.

(From The Asbury Park Journal.)

Outside of Asbury Park no daily has given as much prominence to the Editorial Convention and the Good Roads Congress as the New York Times. From one to two columns has been the daily average, and the reports have been commended for accuracy and completeness. W. S. McKean, and Hugh Hastings of Plainfield, represented the Times, and their work speaks for itself. They have treated Asbury Park liberally in commendations for its hospitality and the ability to handle any kind of a convention in the present or future.

STREET SPRINKLING.

How to Apply the Water So That the Best Results May Be Obtained.

The subject of street sprinkling is of interest to all, for no one enjoys a cloud of dust, and who has not been annoyed by the mud on a recently sprinkled street? It sticks to the carriage wheels and is thrown upon the passengers. The following solution of the difficulty is suggested by a writer in Good Roads:

Don't sprinkle both sides of the street at or near the same time. It is a simple rule, but full of good results. First, all cyclists and most drivers will use the dry side to avoid getting their vehicles muddy. Second, if not tracked up as soon as applied, the water soaks in and does a deeper good than if tracked up and carried off as soon as applied. (Note how nice the streets are next morning after a shower late in the evening.) A heavy sprinkling late in the evening is worth two next forenoon. Third, mud makes a rough street, and, fourth, the many surfaces exposed by the rough mud permit it to dry quickly, and as soon as crushed it becomes the objectionable dust.

If we desired dust, we could not get it much faster than to track up mud, hasten its drying thereby and then crush it. If let stand still, it soaks in, the moistening effect goes deeper, and the dirt rolls down and packs solid and gives us a good street in the place of a mudhole.

It is difficult to gain a great portion of these results. Whereas now, the sprinkler drives up and back on the same street and renders it unfit for use by cleanly people, let him drive up one side and back on some other street. When he has completed the circuit, let him take the other side of the same streets. This will keep down the dust better, will force no one to go in the mud and will cost no more time, money or water. Use this method in the daytime and drench the streets every evening after travel has ceased, and the improved results will be satisfactory.

An Ideal Residence.

Suppose you have an acre of ground and are making a home. Here is a model: Set the house well back to the west, we will say, and nearly midway between the north and south lines. The street or highway is to the north. The stable is in the southwest corner. The driveway enters at the north and passes out to the right of the front of the house. It is bordered on the hither side with flowering bulbs, small evergreens and lilies or roses. Beyond it, along the south border of the acre, are heavy evergreens, maples, pin oaks and tulip trees. All along the west border plant a hedge of untrimmed lilacs and hemlock spruce. Set the northeast corner with evergreens and birches.

PLAINFIELD.

Review of Its Glories, on the Occasion of the National Editorial Visit.

Plainfield is essentially a city of lovely homes. Favored by nature with a porous soil, a pure dry atmosphere, and a perfect water supply, it meets the requirements of those seeking pleasurable and healthful living, and man has developed its native attractions by rearing homes in this garden spot commensurate with the indigenous advantages. The streets are ample in width, and hard and smooth of surface. The lighting is entirely by electricity, and the lights are burned all night and every night, whether the moon is supposed to shine or not. Fire hydrants are plentifully distributed, and the pressure is such that hose is the only requirement in case of fire, the pressure being great enough to throw a stream over the tallest building in town. The water is obtained from a system of wells in Netherwood, the northern outskirt of the city. These are enclosed, and connected with the engines of the pumping station. The water is pumped into a standpipe 150 feet tall, and distributed through the city by underground mains. The State Health Inspector has analyzed it, and pronounces it pure and wholesome; its temperature is 55 degrees.

A singular discovery was made in testing for water to drill the wells. A current was found to run under the city from the mountains at the north, southward, and dredging produced glistening, rounded pebbles, as from the bed of a stream. The news of this find caused a sensation for the metropolitan papers, which take an active interest in Plainfield affairs, and Plainfield's underground river became the topic of the day. The water supply seems to be practically inexhaustible, and could if necessary slake the thirst of all New York. At the rate Plainfield and its contributory outskirts are growing, a population really equaling New York's present figures will in a short time be drinking from this reliable subterranean fount. Already Fanwood, Westfield, Cranford, Roselle, Elizabeth, and North Plainfield wells, and Bayonne City is to take the water soon, through a trunk main laid under Newark Bay, two miles across.

A model fire department is Plainfield's. Its houses are substantial and equipped with the latest modern devices for quick response. The engineers and drivers are paid, and always on duty. They live and sleep in the houses, together with a picked number of hose handlers and hook and ladder men. The alarms are sent in from automatic boxes of the Gamewell system, and an electric circuit sounds the blows telling the number of the box, on both the house gongs and the huge steam whistle that can be heard miles away. The location of the fire is thus readily determined by anyone counting the taps.

When an alarm comes in, the horses spring from their stalls, the patent harness is snapped tight, and away they speed with the apparatus that is to save property and lives. The time made by the Plainfield firemen has won the commendation of chiefs from various big-city departments.

The equipment of the department includes the best of hose, and plenty of it, steamers for use where hydrants are remote and wells or brooks have to be depended on, light and strong modern hose wagons, chemical extinguishers which save water-destruction at incipient fires, and a splendid ladder-tower truck, easily operated by a crank which throws the ladders up to any required height, and which can be manipulated with the men actually at work upon its dizzy top.

The sidewalks of Plainfield are of bluestone flagging, that being compulsory unless the owner of the land prefers to lay some better concrete composition. The streets are macadamized throughout the populated districts, and the chief highways into other towns are paved with crushed stone so as to form a part of the county road system. These county roads are also of macadam, and connect with the macadam roads of Essex, Morris and Passaic counties. Thus Plainfielders are blessed with a superior system of driveways, reaching out into the loveliest country in the State, and fine horseflesh and elegant turnouts continually grace the streets. Driving in Plainfield is a Schoonmaker, of the New York press; and many others prominent in the metropolitan business, banking and professional world, have delightful homes, and many of them homes of splendor, in this the Colorado of the East. That is the name that Plainfield has acquired as the result of physicians' practice in sending invalids to Plainfield to benefit by the dry and invigorating atmosphere.

Three streams flow through the town—Stony, Green, and Cedar brooks; they give power to fur and grist mills, and make pretty lakelets on private grounds. The flour mill on Somerset street, known as French's, was the first grist mill of the country for miles around, dating back to 1760. The old-time hatters of Plainfield were famous in their day; only two are left of the originals, and they are among the oldest inhabitants.

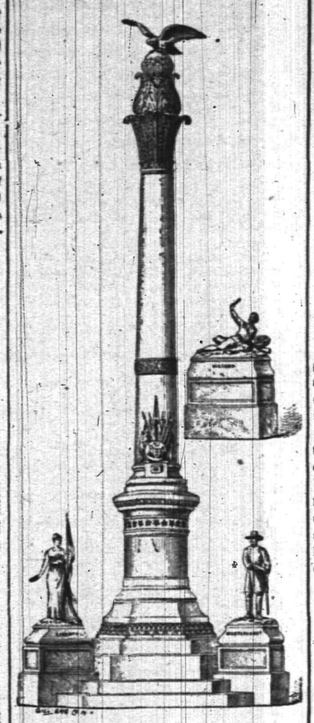
The interesting history of Plainfield begins with the coming of the Friends. Their quaint meeting-house, still well preserved, and used by them today as over a century ago, stands at the corner of Watchung avenue (old Peace street) and East Third street. Today Plainfield has 33 houses of worship, of all denominations.

Famous schools are those of Plainfield. The late Dr. Charles H. Stillman was their founder, and the Plainfield school was the first free public school in all New Jersey. He conceived the system, and secured the legislation which has proved such a blessing in giving all an equal chance to develop latent faculties. The schools of Plainfield today are unsurpassed in record of scholarship, and are so far-famed that the number of tuition pupils from a distance is large and constantly increasing, materially aiding in the expense of operation. Besides the six large schools of the public system, Plainfield has a flourishing parochial school, a number of private kindergarten and higher-advanced schools, a large seminary for young women, "The Chestnuts", and two important college-preparatory schools for boys. A public art gallery is stored with rare treasures. The free general library contains 13,000 volumes, and has 3,000 card-holders. The number of daily visitors to the reading room is 400. The Babcock Free Scientific Library is a funded institution. The Y. M. C. A. reaches every department of work effectively. Its new home contains thoroughly equipped gymnasium and deep swimming pool.

Music has long been the proud boast of Plainfield people. Two flourishing societies, the Choral and the Melopoia, give subscription concerts of ambitious compositions each season, while opera and high-grade drama are well patronized. Illustrated lectures form another series of popular amusements. The societies of the town, and there are many, are noted for the high grade of lecturers they secure along their different lines. The best authors and the best talkers are a familiar part of each Winter's programme, and all the people are given full opportunity to meet and profit by the presence of the leading men and women of the age. Besides the ordinary lodges and societies, of which the town has its full complement, there are the Union Country Club, famous for its dinners, dances, and amateur theatricals; the Park Club, whose powder balls and Fourth of July celebrations are a romantic reproduction of the Colonial past; the Monday Afternoon and Sub Rosa clubs, exclusively women's organizations, where everything that delights the feminine heart, from tea to fashions and suffrage, is discussed; the Hillside Tennis Club, popular for its tournaments; the Current Events Club, all that its name implies; the Four-Leaf Clover Club, dramatists; various whist clubs; the Crescent Wheelmen, whose base-ball team was champion of the State and supplied leading players for the League teams this year, and who built and own the fastest and best cycling track in this part of the country, a $5,000 oval, where all the great riders from everywhere, and all the lesser riders from miles around, assemble in monthly meets. There is a gentlemen's driving park, and a riding rink. Bowling alleys and clubs abound.

Good roads is the secret of Plainfield's preeminence in cycling. All the town rides. Besides the Crescents, there are numerous bicycle clubs, not forgetting the Women Wheelmen, and the Plainfield Lady Cyclers. These women's wheeling clubs have runs and songs of their own, and in the Winter play cards and drink tea and long for the ides of June. The town reporters gather their news awheel, the plumbers carry their kits of tools on cycles, and the clergymen all ride the steel steeds about among their parishioners. When a Plainfielder is unable to buy a wheel, his friends give him one to keep him in the swim.

Cycles and good horses and electric cars carry Plainfield commuters to the best local-traffic railroad on the face of the earth. About 1,500 men and women of the place do business daily in New York, and the Central Railroad of New Jersey, whose efficient, energetic and public-spirited General Passenger Agent is H. P. Baldwin, supplies them with sumptuous cars of the latest fashion, run at the highest speed known to railroading, over a roadbed that is unsurpassed. The immense and lightning traffic is fully protected by the automatic block signal system, operated by electricity and compressed air, by which each train sets its own danger and safety signals, and keeps its following train always at least two half-mile blocks behind. The fare to New York is low, and for a slight advance one can join a club and have a reserved seat and private locker in one of the specially equipped parlor club cars. These are sectioned for smokers and non-smokers. Plainfield started the club car idea, and its newest club car was a prize-winner at the World's Fair in Chicago. The Jersey Central commuter takes especial delight in the Plainfield expresses, which run both ways with no intervening stops, and in the beautiful and refreshing trip across Newark Bay, by the two-mile bridge from Elizabethport to Bergen Point.



ACCEPTED DESIGN FOR SOLDIERS MONUMENT.

Do not suppose that because so many of Plainfield's interests are in the metropolis the town has no local trade; on the contrary, the business section of Plainfield is a thrifty and growing feature. The columns of The Daily Press testify to the number and to the enterprise of the merchants of Plainfield, and it is true that the stores of Plainfield afford housewives as great a variety to select from, as do the big-city establishments; and the prices are so low that it is a positive advantage to trade at home. George H. Babcock, the lamented fellow-townsman whose genius gave to the engineering and mechanical world so many valuable inventions, and who left in Plainfield a millionaire's fortune and a revered memory, was the celebrated lime king, and his nephew Ernest R. Ackerman is successor to the management of the immense business, and is a congressional possibility. The Ackermans include in their ownership the elaborate homestead, and the delightful Summer resort of Glenside Park, the famous Deserted Village magically transformed. Its scenery and its breezes attract many Newarkers and New Yorkers, and its glen cleaving the mountains is a romantic spot that invites lovers' confidences.

POSTMASTER JOHN M. TFIELD.

Plainfield was originally what its name implies, a plain and level field. It is flat of surface and uniformly fertile. Its natural setting is the undulating Heights of Netherwood, the site of the far-famed and mammoth hotel of that name, and the Watchung range, a part of the Blue Mountains, against which the populated district nestles, and which it will eventually scale and hold. The mountain top is already traversed by macadamized roadways, and fine homes have been built. The range has its picturesque gorges, its beautiful woodland, its wild and roaring Wetumpka Falls. Just back of the town, on the crest and face of the mountain, is the superb lookout from which Washington scanned the operations of the enemy while his troops were encamped in the valley back of the range. Washington Rock is famed the country round, and other features of the range are Chimney Rock, a pinnacle resembling a big old-fashioned chimney rising from lofty rocky gable; and foaming and churning Buttermilk Falls.

The mountain-top is broad and flat, and from each end of this half-mile stretch the range curves backward, leaving Washington Rock, a towering sentinel, jutting out to the front, and giving the eye of the observer on the peak a vast outlook, a prospect of exhaustless attraction.

The extent to which the vision reaches is limited only by the curve of the earth's surface at the far-off horizon. One stands at the edge of the high plateau, and gazes for hours, drinking in the delights of this matchless panorama. It is a witching scene. Skirting the woodland of the mountain range as the waves of a pacific sea gently lap the sloping stand, is the boundless plain. It stretches away as level as a dancing floor, till lost in the dim haze of distance. Fertile fields are these—meadows rich in waving grasses or golden grain, or green with thrifty corn or fruitful orchards. Well-kept farmhouses and capacious barns dot the green of the rural landscape. Country roads wind from hamlet to village, to town. Yonder are larger settlements, residence and business growths of magnitude—Plainfield, Bound Brook, New Brunswick, Elizabeth. New Brunswick is miles away, yet one can distinguish prominent buildings, and can trace the silvery windings of the picturesque Raritan past the busy Sayreville brick yards. In the distance is Raritan Bay, met by the Raritan at the Amboys. The waters glisten in the sunshine, and the light craft scudding before the breeze give forth a jaunty gleam from their white sails. The bluffs of Staten Island loom up beyond the Sound, and afar off is New York Harbor, with the shipping easily discernible, and the Statue of Liberty and the East River bridge piers distinguishable by the naked eye. There is no end to the beauteous sights of this immense painting—Nature's masterpiece; and as one inhales the loveliness of it all his heart throbs with exultant bound, for the serenity and delight of such a scene as this is an oasis of bliss in the dusty and wearisome land that shuts in the toil-burdened creature of the work-a-day world.

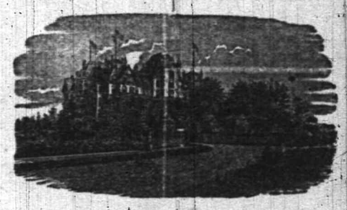
When one ascends to Washington Rock, his vision is fairly astounded by the sweeping view across the plains to the Highlands of the Navesink, and in other directions. The country is rich in tree-embowered towns and villages of the level land, which stretches out at one's feet for a distance of twenty-five miles each way. The cares and worriments of life's humdrum existence drop from the pilgrim's shoulders and go bounding down the steep. Here one is free, unfettered, in body and mind. There is an exhilaration in the balmy atmosphere. The breeze never ceases blowing, but cools the heated brow and fans into healthful flame the fair blush-rose that the great stifling city was robbing from that lovely cheek. A place for the gods is this, and the gods are good to have revealed their garden to human sight, an to have granted to mortals its privileges.



HOTEL NETHERWOOD.

While one has been reveling in the natural beauties and evidences of mankind's thrift and the advance of civilization at the front of the mountain, he has been turning his back on other delights in the valley stretching from Washington Rock to the second range. From many spots on the range may be had this double view, this insight into the witching ideas

WOMAN'S WORLD.

MISS TITUS, THE FIRST WOMAN ADMITTED TO THE NEW YORK BAR.

Society Women on Bicycles—The Case of Miss Hicks—Natural Philosophy and the Parasol—Equipped For Accidents—Flower Girls In Uniform.

Miss Mélie Stanleyetta Titus of 131 East Eighty-second street, one of 80 applicants for admission to the bar of this state, was present yesterday morning in the general term of the supreme court when it was announced that she had successfully passed the examination held on Saturday, June 16, and that after being sworn in on Tuesday she would be entitled to practice.

The list of successful candidates was read off, and when the name of Miss Titus was reached a great cheer was sent out by the 79 young men who were candidates. It was the first time that a woman had been admitted to the bar in this department. Miss Titus flushed vividly and half rose, bowing. Then she waited until the rest of the names had been announced. After that she was surrounded by her friends with congratulations, and when she left the courtroom she was smiling happily.

Miss Titus is about 23 years old, but she appears older when she talks, because she is so earnest. She is of medium height, has large dark blue eyes and light brown hair, which she brushes from her forehead. When she smiles, she looks very jolly and shows white, even teeth. When she doesn't smile, she looks terribly serious, and there is a suggestion of a frown over her brows. She has a firm mouth and a firm jaw, and she also has an argumentative way of poking her chin out when she talks earnestly.

That is her main superficial indication of a legal habit of mind. Otherwise her manner is marked by extreme womanliness, almost diffidence. It strikes you that she'll keep in the background until the opportune moment, and that then she'll get to the very front row without delay. She is rather quick in her movements and decided, and her speech does not hesitate.

"What first put it into my mind to become a lawyer," Miss Titus said to a Sun reporter, "was the fact that our family had long been involved in some legal difficulties. Besides the bother there was the expense, and I determined to know some law for myself. That was my first idea. I had a good chance to carry it out then, too, because my father was ill and somebody had to sit up with him. I thought it would be a great thing to do my studying while I was sitting by his bedside at nights. So I got some lawbooks, and that's the way I began. I found law interesting, and I soon began to like it very much. After awhile I came to the conclusion that as I had started the thing I might as well go through with it, so I determined to take a regular course. I entered the woman's class at the University of New York in October, 1891, and was graduated in April at the head of the class. In the following October I entered the junior class of the law department of the university. While in that class I won the faculty prize of $100. The next year, in the senior class, I was taken very ill with the grip and was unable to attend lectures for eight weeks. However, at examination I stood fourth in a class of 105 men and 5 women, and I received my degree of LL. B.

"What do I intend to do now that I'm admitted? Well, I'm going to do the first thing that comes along. I've studied real estate law a good deal, but I'm not going to confine myself to that by any means. I've the promise of a lectureship in a law school, but the only part of a promise I look at is the fulfillment, so that doesn't count. My mother wouldn't like me to go into criminal law, but I think I should like it very much. I think a woman could have no better advocate or defender than a woman.

"I'm a member of the Society of Friends, so of course I'm strongly opposed to capital punishment. Instead of the death penalty I should like to see solitary confinement for life, with no pardon. However, I'm neither judge nor jury.

"I long to see a jury of women. Of course I'm an ardent woman suffragist. I've worked for the cause for years and shall always work for it. I believe that woman should vote and that she should be active in politics."—New York Sun.

Society Women on Bicycles.

Women of fashion are taking up bicycling in earnest, and the men who are looking after money in this world are, as usual, meeting them half way. A school has been started up town which is patronized by women of unquestioned social standing and to which women who are not prominent socially find it impossible to get tickets. It is in a big hall, the instructors are quiet and respectful, and the women are not handled familiarly, but by means of a belt and a long strap and handle.

The handle is perhaps the most curious contrivance the instructor uses. It is about 3 feet long and is attached to the belt which the pupil straps around her waist. The instructor, by means of the handle, which is nearly as long as a cane, and by a strap attached to the handle of the machine, can maintain the rider at an even balance and can keep her moving around in a circle without running rapidly himself. Very low machines are used by beginners, and if the pupil is unusually stout—and the truth is a majority of the society women who are taking up wheeling are fat beyond belief—two instructors are detailed to teach the preliminary rules. It does not make any difference how fat or awkward the pupil may be, it is impossible for her to fall with a man on either side of her with the new gear which has been invented for the purpose of steadying beginners.

A course of 20 lessons is prescribed, but the younger and more athletic women usually venture out in the park after eight or ten lessons, though several cases are reported of women bearing famous names who are still afraid to venture forth, though they have taken several courses of instruction. The costumes are old gowns of no particular beauty. Men are not admitted to the school.—New York Sun.

The Case of Miss A. M. Hicks.

The case of Miss A. M. Hicks is attracting considerable attention in western Kentucky. For 20 years she had been principal of Clinton college and had made a reputation second to none in that section. In recent years she has become wedded to the faith cure idea, which greatly displeased the trustees. They notified her at the conclusion of the term this year that she would either have to give up the school or cease advocating her new faith. She chose to quit the college, and of her retirement and the reasons for it the Hickman Courier says:

"During the commencement exercises of Clinton college a few weeks ago Miss A. M. Hicks, who has been principal of that institution for the past 20 years, tendered her resignation, and in doing so made the following remarks: 'I believe in the doctrine of divine healing, by which I mean that the many promises such as "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do," "If ye shall ask anything in my name, I will do it," mean just what they say; hence we may ask for the healing of the body on the same ground that we ask for any other blessing. It was stated to me that, if I held these doctrines, I must either be silent with reference to them or they would be the destruction of Clinton college. I shall not willingly be the cause of the destruction of the school for which I have for 20 years labored to build up, and I certainly will not be silent in reference to a truth which I believe to be plainly taught in the Scriptures. While I love Clinton college as a mother loves her little child I hold still more loyally to God and his truth. I go out from Clinton college for the sake of liberty of conscience and freedom of speech.' She has been succeeded by Dr. K. Chandler of Boston."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Natural Philosophy and the Parasol.

A bright Washington woman has just made a discovery. For some seasons she has been in the habit in summer of carrying a parasol to keep the sunbeams from her head, and she has been wondering of late why it was that she seemed to be just as warm when she raised her shade as when she forgot it and allowed it to remain unopened.

The other day she was walking along Pennsylvania avenue, and acting upon the impulse of her habit she raised her parasol as soon as she emerged from a store. Then she noticed that her breathing was difficult and that her face was burning. Suddenly it dawned upon her she had noticed this before, and she set to work to reason out the cause. For a time she pondered, growing warmer with each step, until she moved in the shade of a tree and snapped her parasol into its folded state. In a moment her face was bathed with fresh, cool air, and she was immensely relieved. It then flashed across her that she had been unconsciously imprisoning all the hot air rising from the sidewalks and asphalt pavements beneath the domelike top of her shade, which, instead of acting as a protector, as intended, was really serving as a hood to surround her face with the hottest atmosphere of the street. As long as she held her parasol up the air had no chance to circulate, and this was the more unendurable because she persisted in holding it quite low. So she experimented, and as a result found that she was really more comfortable when she walked with her parasol folded than when she opened it, and now she has quite tabooed that dainty article except as a means of defense against dogs and cows and other wild beasts.—Washington Star.

Equipped For Accidents.

The summer girl of this season sets out on her travels with something entirely new. Her pet hammock, her tennis racket, her spoon oars and all the other pleasure paraphernalia may be stowed into the baggage wagon, but this "something new" will never be let pass from her keeping any more than her cardcase or her pocketbook. It is the new black tin case of the New York Society For First Aid to the Injured, which has its offices in the United Charities building, at Fourth avenue and Twenty-second street. All the young women who have had lessons during the winter and on examination have won the right to wear the red cross badge of the society are hastening to equip themselves with the tin case to carry with them on their travels.

It contains everything necessary to afford relief and avert danger until a doctor can be summoned, and when it is remembered that all its possessors are thoroughly posted in the matter of primary dealing with broken bones or arteries or the distinction between a fainting fit, sunstroke or apoplexy, the sight of that little black case with the red cross on faroff coast or camping ground will often be blessed this summer. Within are lint, triangular and roller bandages, splints, antiseptic tablets and absorbent cotton, with boracic acid, ipecac and ammonia, in bottles fitted in neat leather cases, and all in sufficient quantity to cover more accidents in a small colony than it is to be hoped will happen."—New York Herald.

Flower Girls In Uniform.

In room 28 of 7 Warren street 12 pretty girls stood at a long table at about 8 o'clock yesterday morning up to their ears and eyes in roses, pansies and sweet peas, which they swiftly sorted and formed into buttonhole bouquets. These boutonnieres, when finished, were placed in wicker baskets ready to be carried out and sold.

A new idea was put in practice yesterday in New York. The bouquet company, superintended by F. C. Clark and managed by Mr. Hamilton, scored a tremendous success in San Francisco last year, and if things turn out as brightly here we will soon see uniformed flower girls in all parts of the city.

The young girls employed live at home and are to be paid regular salaries, according to their worth as saleswomen. The entire company is run on strictly military principles. At present there are two captains, Misses Wagner and Haine, who will receive $7.50 a week; the lieutenants' salaries will be $7, sergeants $6.50 and the privates $6 per week. Later will be added inspectors and superintendents, according to the promotion of the young soldiers, which depends entirely on the amount of sales made, conduct and executive ability.

After $2.50 worth of bouquets are sold the successful ones receive 20 per cent of the amount taken, and this will be added to their regular salaries.—New York Herald.

Matthew Hale Set Right.

The Boston Transcript says: "One of the most excited of the male 'remonstrants' in New York is the lawyer, Mr. Matthew Hale. In the June Forum he attributes to women 'an irrepressible tendency to extreme exaggeration.' As a glaring illustration of the peculiarly feminine tendency he mentions that a New York woman suffragist is reported as saying, 'We have but one slave nowadays, and that slave is woman.' He seems not to be aware that the New York woman was merely quoting a famous saying of a distinguished man—Victor Hugo. The use of the word slavery as synonymous with deprivation of political rights is somewhat rhetorical, no doubt, but masculine literature bristles with it from the day when the Scottish bard wrote:

> "Now's the day and now's the hour.
> See the front of battle lower,
> See approach proud Edward's power—
> Edward! Chains and slavery!

"But it is not necessary to go back to Burns. If Matthew Hale thinks the use of highly colored rhetoric is peculiar to women, let him take a course of modern campaign speeches."

When the Grate Is Closed.

To destroy the sooty smell that often fills a room after an open grate has been closed for the summer I have used newspapers and coffee. Last week I found the library filled with a peculiar odor, as I have described, from the grate. I had the girl make a fire with newspapers, mixing freely ground coffee with kindling wood and paper. There was at first a decided smell of paper, but the coffee soon began to burn and acted as a disinfectant. The whole atmosphere of the room was seemingly purified, and after a half hour's airing it was the most pleasant place in the house. I closed the doors and windows and opened the jar containing the rose potpourri, shook up the leaves, and in another half hour the library was ready for you to enter, and I would have been greatly disappointed had you not made some exclamation of pleasure as you met the delicate perfume.—Housekeeper.

The Monocle.

The monocle has appeared in the shops of New York, and the ultra fashionables are adopting these little fastidious affairs. It has a short handle and a gold or silver rim. Many of the fashionable women who have decided to gaze at the world through a monocle are displaying great originality in the frame which they select for the little round glass. A young woman in bereavement screws into her left eye a monocle framed in a narrow rim of black enamel, and if she uses one with a handle this will also be in black. A favorite monocle has a silver handle and rim, inlaid with turquoise.

Women Teeth Cleaners.

A firm of London fashionable dentists has introduced the occupation of "denticure," which, in plain English, "is the art of cleansing the teeth." Young women are sent out from the office to visit customers daily, like manicures, and properly and personally, as it would seem from the reading of the account, perform the office of brushing the teeth. So sanguine are the introducers of the new scheme that they assert that "many a gentlewoman who hitherto has been unable to find congenial employment will, in denticure, secure an occupation at once interesting and remunerative."

A Queen In White.

Not long since Queen Margaret of Italy asked her royal consort for his opinion as to whether she was still young enough to wear her favorite costume of white muslin. His majesty replied, "This matter requires reflection." Two weeks later a box was carried to the queen's apartments. When it was opened, the box was found to be filled with white gowns which King Humbert had ordered.—Rome Correspondent.

HIP-JOINT DISEASE.

Elizabeth, Harrison Co., Ind.
At the age of eight years I became afflicted with "Hip-Joint Disease." For a year I suffered as much as it was possible for any man to be living to suffer. My physicians told me I would have to wait patiently, but my father procured me some of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and I found my failing health restored. I can cheerfully say that I believe I owe my life to the use of that valuable medicine.

HOW TO MAKE BOYS' CLOTHING.

Directions For Cutting and Fitting at Home.

SUITS FOR ALL AGES AND SIZES.

How to Make a Blouse Suit—Short Trousers, Long Trousers and Knickerbockers. The Norfolk Coats and Reefers—Finishing and Pressing.

(Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.)

The first suit of clothes for a little boy is comparatively easy to make, as it is usually cut with a sailor blouse, and that is extremely simple, the collar being the most difficult portion to adjust. The trousers are of three kinds—the long and flaring ones, the tight knee pants and the knickerbockers, which are gathered to a band at the knee. This latter kind is preferable, as the fullness relieves the strain, and the garments do not wear out half as fast.

Making a Sailor Blouse.

It requires 1¼ yards of blue flannel 36 inches wide for a sailor blouse for a boy from 4 to 6 years old and more if the boy is larger. The measure should be taken from the top of the shoulder to the waist line and then allow six inches deeper for the hem and for the part that falls over. The little white blouse shirts to wear under the short jackets are cut by the same pattern. To cut the blouse, fold the cloth so that the two selvages come together and lay the pattern so that the center of the back comes on the fold. There should be no seam in a blouse except on the shoulders. See that the nap, if there is one, runs downward, and pin the pattern securely, so that the lower edge of the pattern is even with the end of the cloth, and then cut it out.

There is no exact rule to give in regard to drafting a pattern for a sailor blouse, as it is so very simple. There should be a tape measure, and this should be the guide. A loose measure should be taken around the chest under the arms, and this will give the width of the blouse. The length should be taken on the boy, or at least on some garment that will give the waist length from the shoulder at the top and under the arms. The arm sizes can be hollowed out, the form following the diagram. The arm size does not want to be too low, or the blouse would soon tear out. A good guide would be to have the lower edge of the arm size about one-third the length of the whole. A fold should be allowed for a hem on each side. The fronts can be cut so as to come up to the throat, and for an everyday blouse it is better so and less trouble. Or it may be cut away, following the dotted lines on the diagram.

To finish it, sew up the shoulder seams, hem it in front and on the bottom. The bottom hem should be an inch wide and have an elastic or tape run in. Two small pockets are stitched on the sides in front as nearly in the center as they can be, and sewed with a double row of stitching. The corners are to be solidly staid, with arrowheads if possible.

Down the front on the left side a box plait is to be sewed to cover the buttonholes. If the blouse is to be high in the neck, there should be a narrow band set around it, covered with braid, white or black, as is preferred. The sailor collar, which is marked No. 4 on the diagram, is then sewed on, following the line of dots. It should be pinned and basted, beginning in the center of the back of the neck, the wrong side turned upward. When it is sewed and turned over, it will come right. The large end is the back of the collar and is marked with crosses. The smaller end reaches a point in front where a black ribbon is tied. The sleeve, which is marked No. 1, is to be sewed in the rounded top, placed at the shoulder seam and slightly gathered. No. 8 is the cuff. No. 5 shows the front of the vest, which is to be worn under the blouse when open in front. The back is so nearly shapeless that it is not necessary to give it. The outline marked upon it shows a lining stay to go on the under side. This vest is bound with braid at the top and may be trimmed with cross bars of braid, white, red or black, or an anchor or other device can be worked on it. It is cut in one across the chest and buttons on the side. Every seam should be carefully pressed on the wrong side.

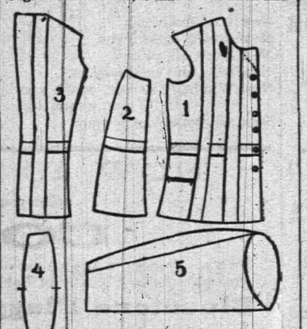
How to Make the Trousers.

Fig. 6 shows the back of the long trousers, 7 the front, 8 the strap across the back, 9 the piece that is stitched across the top of the back portion, and it has two slits worked upon it and an opening for the pistol pocket. The dotted line shows where it is to be placed. Fig. 10 shows the fly. There are to be two of each of these small pieces. If the trousers are "busheled" before the cloth is cut, it will make them last longer, and they will not shrink if they get wet. To bushel cloth is easy. Stretch it out, folded double, and then wring out a sheet or towel in cold water and roll it up with the cloth inside and rolled in with it. Leave it so 24 hours, and it will have shrunk all it can. Then lay the cloth flat and put the pattern on and secure it firmly and mark the outline with soapstone or chalk, having the outside edges of the pants at the outside edges of the folded material, first being sure that what nap there is runs right. In cutting this way there is quite a large though irregular piece of cloth left, out of which come the flies, bands and straps and perhaps a piece for mending. The bands are to be cut on the straight, the flies and straps also. It matters less about the pocket facings. There are no side pockets in sailor trousers. In cutting, care must be taken to get the proper flare at the bottom, and to cut the V-shaped notch in right, and 2½ inches deep by 1½ across the top. That insures the fit over the hips. A dotted line shows where a lining is to be overhanded in the seat. The length will depend upon the legs of the boy. The proportion is easy to maintain, as the front to the point is just one-third the length of the whole. The back is a little longer. The two bands are cut out, faced with some pretty material and interlined with wigan or buckram. The latter washes better.

The pattern being cut, the edges of the seams are to be overhanded, then basted. All the bands flies, and pockets are to be sewed to their places and finished before the legs are sewed up, and every seam neatly pressed. Then baste and sew the sides, beginning at the top. Some stitch the seam down from the outside; others press it flat. The seat is then sewed, and last the inside leg seams. If the pants are long, they are to be finished off like a pair of men's trousers; if knee pants, with a very narrow bias piece of buckram, firmly catstitched to the under part of the hem. The edge is then bound with soft cloth, cut bias, and the edge of the binding hemmed to the outside in invisible stitches. The gathered pants are cut to reach 4 inches below the knee and 2 inches wider in the leg, which fullness is gathered by means of an elastic sewed into the hem or by a band of the cloth fastened on the outside, with a buckle and strap. To shorten this model to knee pants, the same outline is preserved in the upper portion, and the lower portion should be measured a little longer than is needed to allow for the "takeup."

The Short Pantaloons Suit.

After the sailor suit come the jacket and short pantaloons. The diagram for a belted jacket will give at a glance the salient points of difference from a blouse. This jacket has three pieces aside from the collar. The back has a slight curve at the bottom in the middle and side seams. Fig. 1 is the sleeve, 2 half of the back and



NORFOLK JACKET.

3 half of the front. Places are marked for the pockets. The dotted lines show where the corner turns over for the lapel, and the line drawn down shows the lap for the buttons. The collar is to be sewed to the coat when all else is finished the mark coming to the seam in the back. A belt of the same is to be stitched to the jacket. The front lining may be wadded, but the back should not be. All seams must be pressed as fast as sewed to insure good appearance. The collar should be faced with sateen and interlined with buckram.

Fig. 4 shows an underwaist of very stout cloth, to which the pantaloons are buttoned when the shirt waist is made blouse fashion, so that the jacket can be removed if desirable. Figs. 5 and 6 show diagrams for boys' plain knee pants. The notch is to be taken in, and the general instructions for making sailor trousers are followed, except that there is a strong band of drilling with six buttonholes sewed inside the top of these to fasten on the underwaist. Some prefer eight buttonholes. There should be set three or four buttons on the bottom of the outside seam. The flap is to give a solid foundation for them. Fig. 5 is the back and 6 the front. They lap over to the right.

The norfolk jacket is a favorite coat for boys from 7 to 15. It is suitably made of tweed, cheviot, corkscrew and mixtures, and it is a satisfactory garment for amateurs. The same general rules for measure and treatment of material given above will also apply in drafting and cutting this jacket. The best tailors now do not attempt to lay the folds in the jacket, but they apply them after the rest is cut out. With postiche folds it requires 1¾ yards for a boy of 12. With the folds laid in, it would require nearly double the quantity. Fig. 1 shows the front, with the folds sewed on and marks to outline the belt. The front of a norfolk jacket is cut like any other. The folds are stitched on the edges and fastened loosely but firmly to the jacket, leaving space unsewed for the belt to pass under. Fig. 2 is one side piece, which is plain save for the belt. Fig. 3 is half of the back. There are four folds on the front of the jacket, two on each side, but only two in the back, one on each side. The belt passes under these also. The belt should be stiffened with buckram, and the folds look better if rather stiff. Fig. 4 is the collar, which is sewed to the coat like all collars and well pressed. Dots mark the lapel. All seams and parts must be pressed flat as fast as sewed; otherwise the effect will be amateurish. The sleeve should reach to within one inch of the bottom of the jacket, and that reaches from four to six inches below the waist line, according to the size of the boy. The pockets are set below the belt, and a small one may be set high on the left side. The gathered knee pants are oftenest worn with the norfolk jacket.

The norfolk jacket is lined or not, according to the season, but in all cases the sleeves must be lined with silk or fine silesia, that they may slip on and off easily, and in any case the front fold where the buttons go must be lined with buckram or canvas, so that it will hold firmly. If the coat is not lined, the hem should be covered with a band of silk or cotton tape on the inside. There are no possible means in an article like this to give exact dimensions, but a general rule would be to enlarge the diagram six to eight times, which would bring the size about right for a boy of 12. It could be trimmed off if too large. It is better to draft off the pattern first on paper, then on some old stuff, which should be basted and slipped on, for the norfolk jacket fits the figure quite snugly, though it does not appear to on account of the plaits. A little pains in fitting a rough lining will not be labor thrown away, since it insures perfection. One word should be added about buttonholes. They should first be overcast, then barred and then worked with good twist. Tailors use thick black linen thread for the barring and overcasting. The outer end of the buttonhole is better worked round, and the inner is to be fastened off strongly by several stitches.

How to Make an Overcoat.

If the maker of the jacket has taken a model after drafting the jacket, she will find it useful in cutting an overcoat, for all there is to do is to lengthen the skirt, leaving out the side pieces and making both front and back pieces an inch wider. All overcoats must be lined and therefore cut wider and longer to allow for the thickness. The same rules for busheling and cutting of the goods must be observed, and even more attention paid to the details of basting and pressing, as the overcoat needs to be a perfect garment. The overcoat has but seven pieces—two fronts and backs, two sleeves and the collar. If preferred, the back can be cut in one piece. Down the front on the inside there are to be two pieces of the goods as facing—from top to bottom and about 6 inches wide at the top, tapering to 2 at the bottom.

When the lining is basted securely in this, facing is basted around, wrong side out, and sewed, turning the corner that forms the lapel sharply. After it is sewed turn it back, baste it down, stitch it half an inch from the edge and then press it well. After this the edge can be bound with dressmaker's tape, or some prefer to hem the lining onto it. The sleeves should have a double row of stitching around the wrists about three inches above the edge. The sleeves should be lined with satin. There are three pockets, and each has a lid bound with braid or lined and stitched. The collar may be and generally is of velvet. A lining and interlining of stiff material are quilted together, and then the outside is sewed on wrong side out and turned if of the stuff of the overcoat. If of velvet, the velvet is lapped over on the under side and catstitched down snugly. The ends of the collar should reach the point marked on the fronts and be fastened down invisibly in the neatest manner. Every seam should be well pressed. A reefer jacket is made in the same manner, the only difference being that the fronts are made wider to lap over in a double breasted style, and the pockets are set higher and the coat cut shorter. The finishing up and the pressing are the most important points in the successful making of boys' clothes.

A Dry Shampoo.

Many women who have luxurious tresses and who take cold easily are obliged to forego washing them as often as they would like because of the difficulty of getting them dry quickly. For such a dry shampoo is the next best thing, and if carefully and thoroughly done it removes the accumulated dust and dandruff almost as well as washing. The hair should be shaken loosely out over the shoulders and the head manipulated with the fingers till all foreign matter is well loosened and scattered through the hair, which should then be parted in different places all over the head and the parts cleansed with a stiff brush, after which the entire head and hair should be very thoroughly brushed in sections till the dandruff is brushed out as much as possible, when some good hair tonic or scalp cleanser may be rubbed on and the snarls engendered by the whole process gently combed out, and the ends of the hair clipped. This last should always be done once a month to promote the growth of the hair.—Hairdresser.

George Sand Seldom Wore Gloves.

The hands of George Sand, the great Frenchwoman, were seldom idle for any length of time. They were much too busy in transmitting her rare logic to the world of women. When not writing, she was performing some office of the household she adorned or perfecting herself in some of the arts, being a skillful painter, a talented pianist and a sculptor of no mean ability. In all her life, after she had "grown up," she never wore out more than a dozen pair of gloves. One of Mme. Sand's friends asked her why she did not wear gloves more than she did. "My hands are never idle long enough," replied the great novelist, "and if they were I should not think of spoiling their appearance by wearing gloves. I wear gloves only when a social engagement requires it."

Cabbage and Rice.

Boil a small spring cabbage and in another saucepan boil at the same time a couple of ounces of rice. When the latter is cooked, drain and leave it on the side of the stove till some of the moisture is absorbed. Then drain the cabbage well and chop it up, mix it with the rice, add an ounce of butter, some salt and pepper and stir over the fire till hot. Dish and serve at once, garnished with fried croutons. A gill of cream and a spoonful of grated parmesan can be added if liked.

HOME TESTIMONY.

Mr Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly. They were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 144 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOS. CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J, and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

and comeliness of the country on both sides of the mountain. It is as if one were perched upon a floating cloud of fairy-land, with a prosperous and radiant plain on one hand and a most luxuriant and peaceful valley on the other. And beyond the valley are the endless emerald hills, undulating far away towards the north.

The superb, the matchless view, is not the only attraction of Plainfield's mountain range, though sufficient, since travelers who have visited every famous spot on the globe are enthusiastic in pronouncing this the finest pastoral panorama they have ever seen in any country. But to him who builds his home in the midst of these glories, the joys are countless.

Among the honored men whom Plainfield is proud to call its sons are Bishop John H. Vincent, Chancellor of Chautauqua, and his co-worker, Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut, editor of many Methodist Episcopal publications. Chautauqua had its Literary and Scientific headquarters for years in Plainfield, until Bishop Vincent moved to Buffalo, and the substantial brick block known as the Chautauqua Building is the home of The Daily Press and of The Weekly Constitutionalist, its mother paper. Plainfield has a Board of Trade, and has been an incorporated city since 1869. It and the Borough of North Plainfield, just across Green brook, are practically one community, having common interests, and keeping pace together in advancement. Both are striving for consolidation. The population is about 17,500, and the rate of growth is expressed in the number of handsome new buildings, both dwellings and stores, with all improvements, continually going up. The building loans of the town make it possible for the workingmen to own their homes, and manufacturing section is filled with thrifty and pretty houses and gardens. The entire municipality has a flourishing appearance; there are no back streets nor dirty alleys. The Board of Health promptly quarantines all cases of contagious disease, no matter how ordinary. The sick and suffering are well cared for; there are two sanitariums, and beneficent Muhlenberg Hospital gives prompt and perfect attention to local and railroad cases. Order and cleanliness prevail; Plainfield's experience is that it costs no more and is better for property interests, health, and morality, to have all the town decent and attractive, the modest sections as well as those more pretentious.

One of the leading industries of Plainfield is the Scott Printing Machine Works, of which Walter Scott is the head. Mr. Scott's inventions have revolutionized modern printing, and his latest improved color machines are the wonder of the profession. The Pond Machine Tool Works have built up a thrifty settlement of New Englanders in the West End. The clothing manufactory of C. Schepflin & Co. is one of the old established concerns; there are several lesser factories and mills, and ordinary businesses are plentifully represented. The first hat factory was built in 1808, and in 1812 there were 12 of them, supplying $60,000 worth of hats each year to the trade of New York and Philadelphia.

The publishing interests are covered by three daily newspapers, two of them publishing also a weekly. Of these, The Constitutionalist is the oldest, and The Daily Press leads in circulation and advertising patronage. The Royal Craftsman, Masonic monthly, is published in Plainfield, and near The Press office is the home of The New Jersey Law Journal Publishing Company. Several of the churches publish local monthlies.

The sanitary sewerage system on which the city fathers have been zealously at work, under the faithful guidance of Mayor Gilbert, will be completed early next Spring; the intermittent filtration system has been adopted as the most modern and healthful. Few mosquitoes ever get from the Elizabeth marshes to Plainfield, as the prevailing winds are west, and from the mountains. There being no swamps in the district, there is no malaria. The Winter is usually temperate, and the Summer nights are cool.

Is it any wonder, in view of all these and many other attractions, that Plainfield is already one of New York's chief breathing spots, and growing in importance all the time? Is it any wonder that capitalists are laying sure foundation for future prosperity by investing in Plainfield? The superior electric railway system now traversing the Plainfield streets is about to be absorbed in the electric line to connect Philadelphia and New York, and Plainfield will be one of chief tributaries. Rather different, that, from 1800, when Plainfield was a small country village, of 250 straggling inhabitants, a relay station for the "Swiftsure" line of coaches from New York to Philadelphia. This stage service was revived this Spring as an interesting diversion by the monied men of leisure.

The greater Plainfield is at hand, a Plainfield as broad and powerful as it is beautiful and big-hearted. The whole world is welcome to enjoy her comforts and privileges. She's a cosmopolitan town, with room for men of every grade of fortune. All that's required of a man is integrity.

Robbery was committed at Walter E. Smith's store, North avenue, Saturday, about 2 in the morning. The operators were evidently three men. They attacked the front door, breaking the lock off, and tearing part of the door away. Mr. Smith has a burglar alarm, which rings a large bell in his room. He was very tired and slept soundly, while the thieves were helping themselves. Mrs. Reusch, wife of the baker, heard a noise, but did not think anything about it. The intruders helped themselves freely, taking three alpine hats, three pairs of trousers, three pairs of shoes, underwear, stockings, two dozen scarf pins, neckwear and shirts, amounting to about $35. They left their old hats, and Mr. Smith thinks he knows the owners. The safe was chiseled and finally opened, and the papers were strewn around the floor. No money was taken, as none was found. The robbery was discovered at 6 in the morning. Mr. Smith sent telegrams all over the State, and also to New York.

A PRETTY HAT.

It Is Made of Black Lace Shirred on Wires and Edged With Jet.

Somebody has lately raised his voice for the purpose of disillusioning us and destroying the poetical associations of our hats. He says that neapolitan braid—that fine, lacy material, made of horsehair—is not Neapolitan at all, but was invented by a man in New York who gave it that name because he could not think of anything else to call it. So goodby to all dreams of Vesuvius and the bay of Naples in connection with our bonnets. Thus are most of our idols—and idyls—shattered. We dress our salad with olive oil, nominally the product of sunny Tuscany, only to discover later that it is made from the domestic peanut. We eat Mediterranean sardines, ascertaining by and by that they were caught off the coast of Maine. Our Brie cheese is made in Orange county; our French wines come from California; our spaghetti never came near salt water until it was cooked. Since, as it appears, we must use our own products, why not announce to the world in general that we really are sufficient to ourselves and honestly call American goods by American names, thus avoiding the payment of duty on imported titles?

BLACK LACE HAT.

Black hats, neapolitan and others, are much worn this year and are often profusely trimmed with ostrich plumes, which are again in full vogue. They are a perishable sort of decoration, although very beautiful, for the least dampness in the air destroys the lovely curl that is their chief charm and make them stiff and flat, and recurling never restores them to their pristine beauty. The spangled plumes are especially sensitive to moisture, their frost vanishing before a fog as natural frost does before the sun.

Moire ribbon shows no decline of popularity as a trimming for hat and bonnets. It combines well with jet and spangles and has the glitter which is this season conceived necessary to a fashionable effect. Yellow and black is a popular combination, and a very pretty gold colored straw braid has been brought out, wide and glossy, but light. It is fragile in spite of its coarse weave and will not bear rough usage.

A sketch is given of a large round hat made of black lace shirred on wires. It is edged with jet spangles and trimmed with chantilly lace which forms two large wings in front. These serve as a background to two jet wings fastened together in the middle by a knot of ribbon from which springs a jet aigret.

A FLAVOR OF SENTIMENT.

Decorative Touch to the Practical Idea of Womankind.

"A woman's greatest charms are those least easily analyzed."

"A woman is not truly beautiful until the angel of sorrow has touched her with his wing."

These are two of the innumerable prettily expressed fancies with which the French nation adds a flavor of sentiment to its practical everyday life as it adds a decorative touch to the ubiquitous negligee morning sack by means of a bow of ribbon. We in America have still something to learn from the older countries, although not perhaps on the points upon which we are most willing to receive instruction. We are so scientific and so progressive that we leave no room for sentiment in our life and are in danger of settling down into a sort of highly moral materialism. Sentiment, even if it occasionally degenerates into sentimentality, is a genuine relief from the utilitarianism which is the atmosphere in which we exist as a people. The French are scientific and even more thrifty than ourselves, but they contrive to take life with the bloom on it and make living in some sense an artistic pleasure, whereas half of us live because we must and are constantly conscious of the fact that it is very tedious work indeed. We are inclined to ignore our emotions and afford them no escape valve, so permitting them to concentrate their force until they break out into serious demonstration. Perhaps we shall never improve in that direction, and if so we can only lay it to the climate, which already bears the responsibility of our nasal accent and our restlessness.

The climate is just now particularly torrid and suggestive of thin gowns, an illustration of one of which is given. It is of the shade of green called tilleul, and the lower skirt is of taffeta, accordion plaited. The second one is of crepon to match, cut in a large point back and front and trimmed with a flounce of white point de venise. The Eton jacket has revers of lace, which part to show a full vest of taffeta. The full elbow sleeves are finished with a lace flounce and a band and bow of black satin, and the waist is encircled by a black satin belt.

Fourteen members of the Crescent Wheelmen went on the Spalding excursion to Seabright yesterday. The whole party that left New York numbered fifty. The Crescent delegation was the largest from any one club.

Monte Scott of the Crescents won his heat in the 1-mile handicap race on Manhattan Field Saturday in fine form, but did not feel well enough to enter the final event.

LINENS ARE IN FORCE.

To Look Cool Is Half the Battle In Hot Weather.

Fashions are not an inspiring theme in the heat of summer. Theoretically they are always equally important, but practically the interest in them diminishes during the time when clothing, except of the most primitive sort, seems a burden. There are women heroic enough to lace tightly and wear velvet and fur during the warm season, but their days are evil, if not few—evil days seldom do seem few in number—and the effect is not pleasing enough to make it worth the suffering. To look cool is half the battle in hot weather, and that requires thin, loose garments.

Linens appear in force this season. A plain heavy weave is shown in colors guaranteed fast, tan, blue of various shades, green, rose and red. This makes ideal blazer costumes alone or used as trimming for white linen duck. Cotton duck suits are seen in still greater variety of tints, black and navy blue, with hair stripes of white, being particularly neat. A thin lawn blouse may be worn under the blazer or a snug, bright colored vest, which is less cool, but smarter. With flowered dimity for house and country gowns and china or thin glace silks or grenadine for more elaborate toilets the fashionable summer wardrobe may be amply furnished without the aid of airtight satins and velvets. There is no limit to the possibilities of thin stuffs this year since ruffles, puffs, ribbons and lace are the accepted trimmings and allow of a thousand different arrangements and combinations. Black or white lace beading sewed on in bands forms a pretty decoration for muslins and may be left plain or threaded with baby ribbon matching the color of the goods. Lightweight wool crepons are shown in delicate shades, which are almost as cool as cotton goods and are more serviceable for seaside wear, as dampness does not affect them.

But we are supposed to discuss what is as well as what ought to be worn, and although the thin materials just mentioned are in vogue heavier ones are also fashionable. Those women who wore skating costumes open at the throat during the winter will probably be the ones to appear now in thick silks and standing collars in spite of the fact that the mercury has taken "excelsior" for its motto.

An illustration is given of a costume of two shades of satin. The plan skirt is of myrtle green satin, and the round bodice of the same shade is covered with lace, as is the lower part of the tight green satin sleeves. The sleeve puffs and folded belt are of almond colored satin, and the accordion plaited satin collar, forming four points, is of the same color and is bordered with marabout.

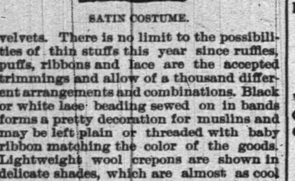
LAWS OF ANATOMY.

Some of the Pointed Tapestries Are Fearful and Wonderful.

Painted tapestry for curtains, wall draperies and screens is very much in vogue at present, and some of the specimens shown are marvels, not of beauty, but of ignorance of all laws of anatomy and artistic effect. Figure subjects are almost invariably chosen by the tapestry painter, and nine times out of ten he or she, as the case may be, proudly produces a picture that would be a libel on a sawdust stuffed wax doll. If you want a piece of painted tapestry, do not buy it until you have consulted some capable artist friend, and thus avoid the chance of burdening yourself with an anatomical anachronism that will make the well informed person chuckle in his sleeve every time he sees it. Courtesy often compels him to listen in silence to the blastings of the possessor of some outrageous piece of so called artistic work, and he is divided between a desire to be appreciative of the thing shown him and his inability to truthfully praise it.

Speaking of painting, one of the latest ideas is the selling of the backs of hand mirrors, hair and clothes brushes and the handles of combs made of fine white china.



LINEN TRAVELING BAG.

These are to be decorated and fired and then fitted with glass or bristles. The thought is an excellent one and affords an opportunity for making unique, valuable and useful gifts.

Small detached Japanese heads have been lately introduced for use in fancy work. Both men and women are represented with long narrow eyes and real teeth and hair. The heads are fastened to wooden pegs, which serve as a means of attaching them to thermometers, penwipers, pincushions and similar articles for which they are employed as a decoration.

An illustration is given of a traveling bag of Flemish linen. It is embroidered with black or red crewels in a cross stitch pattern. The round ends of the bag are kept in shape by circles of cardboard, over which the embroidered linen is stretched. Plain linen forms the lining and body of the bag, which is gathered on double drawing strings. A leather handle is fastened to each side of the embroidered portion by which to carry the bag.

A VETERAN'S VERDICT.

The War is Over. A Well-known Soldier, Correspondent and Journalist Makes a Disclosure.

Indiana contributed her thousands of brave soldiers to the war, and no state bears a better record in that respect than it does. In literature it is rapidly acquiring an enviable place. In war and literature Solomon Yewell, well known as a writer as "Sol," has won an honorable position. During the late war he was a member of Co. M, 2d. N. Y. Cavalry and of the 13th Indiana Infantry Volunteers. Regarding an important circumstance he writes as follows:

"Several of us old veterans here are using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, Heart Cure and Nerve and Liver Pills, all of them giving splendid satisfaction. In fact, we have never used remedies that compare with them. Of the Pills we must say they are the best combination of the qualities required in a preparation of their nature we have ever known. We have none but words of praise for them. They are the outgrowth of a new principle in medicine, and done up the genius wonderfully. We say to all, try these remedies."—Solomon Yewell, Marion, Ind., Dec. 5, 1893.

EXERCISED THE POLICE.

Sunday Vagrant Persists in Making Trouble for Himself in Plainfield.

Harry LeCount, a young man who says he came from Shermansburg, Pa., was arrested for vagrancy several weeks ago and was ordered out of town by City Judge Coddington. Special Policeman Meyers found him begging on Richmond street late yesterday afternoon, and started to take him to the lockup. LeCount resisted, and the assistance of Janitor S. R. Hope was called into service.

The man kept wrenching himself away from his captors, and when his coat sleeves were beginning to be torn to pieces he made a final stand on East Second street near Church street. He grasped a fence picket and started an argument with the large crowd which had assembled, on his own fighting ability and the injustice of the police in general. The janitor at last persuaded him to go on. Policemen Cooney, Vanderweg and Kiely approached, and LeCount was safely lodged in a cell in the lockup.

LeCount was sent to Elizabeth for 60 days by City Judge Coddington this morning for being disorderly and resisting an officer.

FUMES, NOT FIRE.

Plainfield Has Excitement Over a Leaking Cargo of Acid.

A westbound freight train was stopped at the North Avenue station shortly after 9 Saturday evening, and a still alarm was sent to the Fire Department Headquarters. Firemen responded with No. 2's hose wagon, and found dense fumes of acid pouring from a box-car. One of the doors was opened, and the car was soaked with water. The fire extinguisher which one of the firemen brought to the "fire" was not considered a practical thing to use in fighting the flames.

The car was No. 7509 of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railway, and contained 20 drams of mixed acid, each weighing 1,500 pounds, on the way from the Grasselli Chemical Company of Tremley to J. H. Hand, Hemlock, Warren County Pa. One of the heavy iron casks had evidently begun to leak. The car was left on the track near Richmond street for a short time and then transferred to the switch by the oil-cloth factory. Meanwhile the stifling vapors were being carried by the wind into the neighborhood to the southwest. The car was watched during the night. All the acid in the defective drum leaked out. The remaining packages seemed to be perfectly sound.

DOING UNTO OTHERS.

Golden Rule Circle Raises Funds to Provide a Free Nurse for the City Sick.

A successful festival and sale was held at the corner of Somerset street and Manning avenue Saturday afternoon and evening, by the Golden Rule Circle of King's Daughters of Grace M. E. Church. The attendance was large, at both sessions, and the amount realized will be used in paying for the proposed city nurse. The room was prettily decorated, and Chinese lanterns shed tinted light over the scene. The lemonade well was a rustic bark-covered affair, and the old oaken bucket was also covered with bark. It was the loan of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church.

Edward Gardner took tickets at the door, and the following were the capable servitors who made the place so attractive:

MISSING SINCE CIRCUS NIGHT.

What Has Become of This Plainfield Youth?

Freddie Frey, aged 15, of 213 Plainfield avenue went to the circus Friday night and did not return. As he was still missing Saturday morning, his mother, Mrs. Catharine Frey, thought he might have run away with the show and reported the matter to the police. The boy is said to be quite a clever dancer. His elder brother, William Frey, went to Orange Saturday afternoon and asked the circus people if Freddie was with them. They said they knew nothing abott him.

NOTHING TO ARBITRATE

The Pullman Company Decides Not To Compromise.

"A Principle Involved in the Matter, Which Will Not Be Surrendered," Says Vice-President Wickes. This Action of the Company Precipitates the Great Trades Strike—Over 100,000 Employes in Chicago Will Go Out To-Night—The Outlook Becomes More Ominous Than Ever—Both Sides Confident.

CHICAGO, July 10.—It is war to the knife, and the knife to the hilt. The powers have spoken and the most tremendous strike known to history will be inaugurated when the evening whistles blow, not to return until the Pullman boycott is settled.

Yesterday was the most quiet day Chicago has experienced since the great Pullman boycott was declared. But it was the quiet that precedes the storm, and beneath the strange stillness the ear of the close watcher of events could catch the ominous rumblings of an industrial cyclone, threatening dread disaster and fearful destruction, a storm whose awful portence none may read and whose vast consequences none may forecast.

The strike which paralyzed traffic on the railroads for the past few weeks and wrought loss beyond computation to every interest in Chicago will be augmented by the practical cessation of all industry and the almost complete paralysis of commerce in and about the city. All night Sunday and until the gray hours of Monday's dawn a great meeting composed of delegates from all of the trades unions in Chicago sat in Uhlich's hall and wrestled with the problem confronting it. The question before the committee was: Shall the trades unions of Chicago strike in sympathy with the Pullman boycott to the end that the principle of arbitration may win? It was a gathering of thoughtful men, and their deliberations were marked for their calm earnestness. The gravity of the situation was fully apprehended. It was determined that a last attempt be made to get the Pullman company to arbitrate its differences with its workingmen, and a committee of seven was appointed to call upon the mayor with a view to securing the co-operation of prominent business men in securing from the Pullman company the concession asked for—arbitration. A brief meeting was held in the mayor's office, which adjourned to another meeting with the city council committee on arbitration. At the last meeting Alderman McGillen, chairman of the council committee, made the suggestion that a committee be appointed who should investigate and determine whether the Pullman company's statement that there was nothing to arbitrate was true and just; that the committee be composed of two members named by the Pullman company, two to be named by the judges of the circuit court of Cook county, and the fifth by the four first chosen. The suggestion was adopted by the joint committee and a sub-committee appointed to present the proposition to the Pullman company. This committee was composed of the council committee—Aldermen McGillen, Mareney, Muelhoefer and Powers, and Messrs. Elderkin, Ryan and Lindholm, representing the trades unions. The subcommittee repaired at once to the office of Vice President Wickes, of the Pullman company, and requested an interview with that gentleman. It was granted, and then followed a scene which bids fair to rival in historic interest and importance any event in the history of labor.

"Do you come as an official of the city?" Mr. Wickes asked the Alderman.

"I do," replied Mr. McGillen.

"Do you represent the mayor in this matter?" inquired the Pullman official.

"The mayor will endorse our action here," the alderman replied.

Alderman McGillen was the spokesman. He addressed Mr. Wickes and placed before him the proposition as authorized by the full committee. Once, as the alderman halted for an instant, Mr. Wickes said: "The company cannot recede from the position it has already held."

The interjection aroused Alderman McGillen and he eloquently portrayed the situation in all its bearings and the inevitable consequences unless a settlement was reached. Mr. Wickes listened attentively. He seemed touched by the appeal, and when the spokesman had concluded, retired with Attorney John S. Runnels, of the Pullman company, for consultation. The delay was of brief duration. When he returned ever one present read in Vice-President Wickes' stern face the fateful answer he would make. The feeling was intense and the little throng, composed of committeemen and members of the press and news associations, waited breathlessly for him to speak. Addressing Alderman, Mr. Wickes said:

"The Pullman company has nothing to arbitrate."

Then there was a painful silence. Alderman McGillen seemed paralyzed for a moment. He could not believe the Pullman company would assume a responsibility so tremendously grave. "Am I to understand," he slowly said, "that the Pullman company refuses this slight request made at so grave an hour, and upon which so much depends?"

"The Pullman company has nothing to arbitrate," reiterated Mr. Wickes.

Alderman McGillen said with great impressiveness: "Mr. Wickes, your company demands the police protection of the federal government, the state of Illinois, the county of Cook and the city of Chicago, and yet you utterly ignore a fair request made by the city, a request the fundamental idea of which is the preservation of peace. We have come to you as conservers of the peace and you have assumed grave responsibility in thus refusing the request we make—a responsibility greater, perhaps, than even you are aware."

"There is a principle involved in this matter," said Mr. Wickes, "which the Pullman company will not surrender. It is that employers must be permitted to run their business in their own way and without interference from their employes or from anybody else. We shall not allow any one to tell us how our business shall be conducted and we shall not consent to arbitration. Our business is our own private affair and we want no interference from federal or state, or any other government."

There was nothing more to say. One hundred thousand men will quit work tonight for an indefinite period, trusting that in their contest for the principle of arbitration they will win.

NATIONAL LEGISLATION

Naval Appropriation Bill Passed by the Senate.

Two New Steel Cruisers To Be Constructed at a Cost of $2,750,000 Each—Mr. Peffer Offers Resolutions Looking to Government Control of Railroads.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The naval appropriation bill was passed in the senate with very little friction or delay. There was one amendment offered which might have led to considerable debate, and that was for the construction of two new steel armored cruisers at a cost not exceeding $2,750,000 each. Mr. Gorman (dem., Md.), who was in charge of the bill, requested that the amendment should be withdrawn on the ground first, that by 1896 the 13 cruisers now in course of construction would be completed and would furnish a very respectable navy; and, second, that in the present depressed condition of business and in the existing state of the treasury finances it was desirable to keep down expenses. Mr. Daniel, (dem., Va.), who offered the amendment, recognized the force of the suggestions, and in accordance with Mr. Gorman's request, withdrew the amendment.

The blind chaplain of the senate, in his opening prayer, had invoked divine restraint on the violence of lawless men who set themselves up against the statutes of the country, and immediately afterward the populist senator from Kansas, Mr. Peffer, offered resolutions which went over without action looking to the government control of all railroads engaged in inter-state commerce; to uniformity of transportation rates for freight and passengers throughout the country; to the government (or state) ownership and operation of coal beds; to the supply of money by the government alone; to a uniform rate of interest and to raising all the revenue of the government by taxes on real estate.

Mr. Blanchard (Dem., La.) denied that he had played the part of conspirator in connection with the vote on the passage of the tariff bill, and contradicted the published statement to that effect.

The senate at 4:30 adjourned until to-day.

House of Representatives.

The committee on affairs of the District of Columbia held the attention of the house and succeeded in passing a bill to provide for the triennial assessments and equalization of real estate in the district for the purpose of taxation. An attempt to pass a bill to change the name of one of the Washington street railways and increasing the powers of the corporation, occupied an hour and a half of the session and was finally abandoned.

A bill was passed for the relief of the heirs and assigns of John P. Martigny and W. H. Danton by correcting an error in the survey of the Jefferson Barracks reservation at Carondalet, Mo.

The house at 4:55 adjourned until to-day.

Narrowly Escaped Lynching.

NEWARK, N. J., July 10.—John Polofski, a Hungarian, had a narrow escape from lynching at South Orange, for attempting to assault a 10-year-old girl by the name of Elsie Schenck. Polofski worked for the girl's father and while father and mother were temporarily absent he made the dastardly attempt. The mother returned just in time to save her child and Polofski fled. Her cries attracted a number of farm hands, who started in pursuit of Polofski and would probably have killed him if Marshal Hickling had not arrived and placed him under arrest.

Asked To Be Retired.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The flagship Baltimore has arrived at Nagasika, Japan, and in reporting her arrival to the navy department Rear Admiral Joseph Skerrett sent an accompanying dispatch asking to be placed on the retired list. The request is in accordance with a plan recently formulated by Secretary Herbert for relieving the stagnation in naval promotions. Orders placing Admiral Skerrett on the retired list and ordering him to return home have been issued.

New Companies Incorporated.

ALBANY, July 10.—The following companies were yesterday incorporated by the secretary of state: The Eldridge Electrical Manufacturing company, to manufacture electrical appliances and apparatus and engines, boilers and machinery, in Eldridge, Onondaga county; capital, $10,000. The Downing and Lawrence Dry-dock company of Brooklyn, to build, dock and repair water craft of all kinds; capital, $10,000.

Chinese Smuggling.

NEW YORK, July 10.—One more Chinaman has has been arrested charged with being mixed up in the alleged smuggling of Chinamen into this country via Burlington, Vt. The latest prisoner was Harry Lee King, of No. 11 Mott street. He was arrested by U. S. Deputy Marshals White and Grant and was admitted to $1,000 bail pending examination by U. S. Commissioner Fields.

Closed the Church.

READING, Pa., July 10.—Foreigners opposed to Father Januskiewicz, of St. Mary's Catholic church, made another attack on the parsonage. Several were arrested and the authorities have decided to close the church, allowing no more services. A riot is imminent between the opposing forces any moment. One man was terribly beaten. The priest is to be arrested also.

Largest Ever Transported.

PHILADELPHIA, July 10.—The total anthracite tonnage carried over the Philadelphia & Reading railroad last month, which reached 1,247,297 tons, was the largest ever transported by it in any month, being 73,173 tons more than the tonnage of the largest previous month, which was November, 1893.

Large Internal Revenue Receipts.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The heavy receipts from internal revenue, caused by the increased tax on whiskey in the new tariff bill are making themselves felt in the improved condition of the treasury's balance which was yesterday $121,508,000, less $7,000,000 paid on interest. Of this balance $64,241,000 is in gold.

Reward of 2,000 Lire.

ROME, July 10.—The Italian government has offered a reward of 2,000 lire for the capture of the man who killed the editor of the Leghorn Gazette on July 1. The assasin is known to be an anarchist.

BRITANNIA'S THIRD VICTORY.

Again Defeats the Vigilant in an Exciting Contest.

GLASGOW, July 10.—The Vigilant and the Britannia started in the principal race of the regatta of the Royal Clyde Yacht club at Hunter's Quay, the Vigilant crossing the line at 10:30:20 and the Britannia at 10:30:25.

The course was the same as that sailed over on Saturday—distance 50 miles—and the prize contested for £75. The starting gun was fired at 10:30. The Vigilant got the better of the manœuvring and was the weather boat in crossing the line. The weather was gloomy and the wind moderate from the south.

Immediately upon crossing the line the Vigilant hoisted her jib header. Reaching Duncon, half an hour later, the Vigilant had a good lead. The winds decreased as the boats rounded Skelmorlie mark, the Vigilant turning at 12:14:18 and the Britannia at 12:15:24. Off the Ascog at 1:50 the Vigilant lost the wind completely, and the Britannia, catching a puff, passed her.

The Britannia rounded the Ascog mark at 1:13:31 and the Vigilant at 1:17:11. After rounding the mark the Vigilant got a fresh current of wind and overhauled the Britannia off Toward Light. Inellan was reached at 2 o'clock, the Britannia leading by three lengths.

The Vigilant passed the Britannia at 3:10. Both boats then became becalmed.

The yachts reached Kilcreggan at 3:30 p. m. The wind was very light and fluky. At this point it looked as though the Britannia had the worst of it.

The Britannia rounded Kilcreggan mark at 4:29:15, and the Vigilant 4:45:10. The wind had so completely died away that the boats were scarcely moving.

The Britannia crossed the finish line at 5:34:05.

The finishing time of the contestants was as follows: Britannia, 5:34:05; Vigilant, 5:43:40.

Still Think the Vigilant Can Win.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Yachtsmen here were inclined to feel a little blue when the news of the Vigilant's third consecutive defeat reached here. Nearly all, however, are still of the opinion that when the Britannia and Vigilant come to race on the outside courses the American boat will win. It looks now as if in all of the races on the inside courses the chances were greatly in favor of the Britannia being the victor. American yachtsmen still believe, however, that the Vigilant is the better boat, and are confident of her victory on such courses as the Cherbourg course.

THE BEAR'S GOOD WORK.

Timely Assistance Rendered to Sailors by the Revenue Cutter.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Captain Healy, of the revenue cutter Bear, on her way to Point Barrow, Alaska, reports to the treasury department that on May 30, when near Cape St. Elias, Alaska, he came up with the American schooner Johawker, leaking badly, and the crew of two men had been drifting for six days without provisions. He supplied their wants, and the schooner after being temporarily repaired started for English bay, a few miles distant, to be beached and the leak repaired. The Bear also rendered timely assistance to the crew of the James Allen. This bark struck on a rock off Amelia island on May 11 and sank at once. The crew took to the boats and saved nothing. One boat reached Aika island with eight men. The captain and 16 men reached Umnak island after four men were drowned and three had died of exposure. Leaving the rest of the crew on this island the captain and six men rowed 130 miles amid ice floes to Unalaska, arriving June 15 in an exhausted condition and badly frozen. The Bear took the men on board and started at once to get the men left on Umnak island. This was reached June 14. One of the men died in the meantime and the others were in a weak and famishing condition. All the men were sent to San Francisco by steamer Crescent City. The Bear proceeded on her way and was at Unalaska June 17 and the Corwin was at Port Elchas June 16. No mention is made of any mishap of any kind to the Bear since she left San Francisco.

MOBS AGAIN WARNED

Second Proclamation Issued by the President.

Must Cease Rioting by 3 O'Clock of To-Day or Troops Will Fire. Executive and Advisers Confer. Failure of Arbitration Negotiations Discussed.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The president last evening followed up his first proclamation by issuing another of the same tenor, but more general in its application. The proclamation is as follows:

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA—A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, By reason of unlawful obstruction, combinations and assemblages of persons, it has become impracticable, in the judgment of the president, to enforce by the ordinary course of judicial proceedings the laws of the United States at certain points and places within the states of North Dakota, Montana, Idado, Washington, Wyoming, Colorado and California and the territories of Utah and New Mexico, and especially along the lines of such railways traversing said states and territories as are military roads and post routes and are engaged in interstate commerce and in carrying United States mails;

And whereas, for the purpose of enforcing the faithful execution of the laws of the United States, and protecting property belonging to the United States or under its protection, and of preventing obstructions of the United States and of commerce between the states and the territories, and of securing to the United States the right guaranteed by law to the use of such roads for postal, military, naval and other government service, the president has employed a part of the military forces of the United States;

Now, therefore, I, Grover Cleveland, president of the United States, do hereby command all persons engaged in, or in any way connected with such unlawful obstructions, combinations and assemblages to disperse and retire peaceably to their respective abodes on or before three o'clock in the afternoon, on the tenth day of July, instant.

In witness thereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be hereto affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this ninth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and nineteenth.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

By the President.

W. O. GRESHAM,

Secretary of State.

The decision to issue such a proclamation was made during the morning and part of the day was given up to arranging its terms. Saturday night Secretary Lamont, Attorney-General Olney, Postmaster-General Bissell and Major-General Schofield met the president at the white house and expressed satisfaction with the scope of the manifesto in which they had a share in perfecting.

The conference was devoted largely to a discussion of the new phase of the situation consequent on the failure of the arbitration negotiations and the decision of the trades unions to join the American Railway union in its strike.

The president has received another certification from the governor of Idaho respecting the necessity for federal troops to maintain order in that state. This was supplemented by semi-official dispatches to the Idaho senators from Judge Beattly, the United States judge for the district of Idaho, and from other prominent persons in the state, requesting them to urge upon the president the need for troops in the Cœur d'Alene region. Senators Shoup and Dubois took these dispatches to the White House last night and had a talk with the secretary of war and Maj. Gen. Schofield on the subject. It seems that Gov. McConnell's dispatch to the president, received yesterday, was not quite in accord with the requirements of the constitution in such emergencies, but troops will undoubtedly be despatched from Fort Sherman to the scene of the troubles.

Would Not Trust the Banks.

FORESTVILLE, N. Y., July 10.—John B. Kinsley received $800 in cash in part payment for his farm. He would not trust the bank, but took the money home and placed it in an old teapot on a shelf above the bed. Some time during the night burglars entered the house and placed a sponge saturated with chloroform over Kingsley's nose. Then they departed with the money after securely tieing their victim.

Many Drowned.

ODESSA, July 10.—The Russian steamer Vedadimer, from Sebastopol for this port, collided in the Black Sea this morning with the Italian steamer Columbia, from Eupateria for Nikolaieff. She went down almost at once with all on board. A few persons were picked up by the Columbia, but between fifty and seventy-five, mostly passengers, are said to have been drowned.

Noted Turfman Dies Suddenly.

ELIZABETH, N. J., July 10.—William R. Babcock, superintendent of the Linden Park Blood Horse association, dropped dead at his home in Linden Park. Mr. Babcock was stricken with apoplexy while returning from a field where he had been superintending a gang of men. He was one of the best known men on the American turf.

Shot Through the Heart.

BROCKTON, Mass., June 10.—Allen E. Packard, 35 years of age, married, son of Ellis Packard, a wealthy and respected citizen of this city, committed suicide last night by shooting himself through the heart with a revolver at the residence of H. F. Borden, on High street. Mr. Packard was a stock broker. No cause is

THE STRIKE SITUATION

Freight Blockades on Several Roads Raised.

Managers' Association Says the Backbone of the Strike Is Broken—The Men Do Not Think So—U. S. Grand Jury Will Be Asked To Indict Debs and Others.

CHICAGO, July 10.—On the majority of roads having their terminals in this city through passenger as well as suburban trains are moving on time. There is no indication within the city limits that the railroad strike or boycott is in existence.

The freight car blockades on the Northwestern, Burlington, Lake Shore & Rock Island and Pan Handle roads were also materially raised. The members of the Railroad Managers' association are claiming that, so far as the local situation is concerned, the backbone of the strike has been broken and that success in the immediate future is ensured.

At the headquarters of the leaders of the strikers it is admitted at a late hour that from the railroad point of view the situation has materially improved, but it is also contended among the strikers that, notwithstanding the conditions that may be brought about in and about the local depots it will be impossible for trains to run with any degree of regularity either south, west or north until a settlement with the striking employes has been effected.

The rumor was started that it had been decided to move the headquarters of the Pullman Palace Car company from Chicago to a point hereafter to be designated in New Jersey, and that, in consequence, the Pullman establishment would be abandoned.

The rumor went further with the declaration that a site on the outskirts of Newark, in the "foreign" state had been selected for the new Pullman colony. Printed in the evening papers and industriously circulated, the report created something of a sensation until it was emphatically denied to a reporter of the United Press by First Vice-President Wickes, and who was more than indignant over the fact that the story quoted him to the extent of several paragraphs as saying that no matter how the strike ended the Pullman shops would not be reopened, but that they would be removed to a point in New Jersey as a state where the company would be assured of protection in the prosecution of its business and official protection from lawlessness of all kinds.

The United States grand jury that has been specially empaneled to consider indictments against the leaders of the striking element assembled to-day. Nine-tenths of the membership of the body is composed of residents of the agricultural districts in the extreme northern and eastern sections of the county. District Attorney Milchrist and Special United States Consul Edward Walker were busily engaged to-day in preparing the evidence to be submitted to the body and upon which indictments will be asked. Almost without exception the witnesses will be United States deputy marshals who were cognizant of the stoppage of mail trains and of interference with trains coming under the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce law. The grand jury will be asked to return indictments against President Debs, Vice President Howard, Secretary Keliher, John Logan, the man who ordered the strike on the Great Northern, and several other members of the board of directors of the A. U. R.

The men arrested by United States deputy marshals at Blue Island and on the Lake Shore and Rock Island tracks at Forty-third street will be indicted for conspiracy to delay and endanger the passage of mails of the United States.

It was stated at Uhlich's hall that numerous offers of bail had already been voluntarily extended to Debs, Howard and Keliher. It was stated that one of the volunteer bondsmen, and whose assistance will be availed of if the necessity arises, is a millionaire merchant of Chicago whose reputation is international.

The United States regulars enjoyed a day of rest upon the lake front while the majority of the state militia took things easy in Battery D, and in the commodious warehouse on Wabash avenue that had been seized under orders of Mayor Hopkins for provisional barrracks. The tracks in the stock yards district were jointly patrolled by regulars and state militia, until it became evident that mob violence had been deferred if not abandoned and except at one or two points where a few men were left as a precautionary measure, the troops were called off. The reports of the General Managers' association for the day indicated a decided improvement in the movement of trains, both passenger and freight.

The majojity of the roads reported that passenger trains were being run with a fairly close adhesion to schedule time and that the freight blockade was being gradually lifted.

A detour of the various depots by press representatives indicated that these statements were fairly well founded.

Malican Will Go Slow.

BUFFALO, July 10.—President Malican, of the local branch of the A. R. U., was seen by a United Press reporter, and in reply to inquiries as to the prospects for an immediate strike on the Buffalo roads, in response to the telegram of President Debs, he said: "As far as I am concerned I shall not order any strike at present. The situation does not warrant it and on occasions like this it is well to go slow."

Protection Assured.

CLEVELAND, O., July 10.—A conference was held here between the managers of all local railroads, Marshal Haskell and the city authorities. The railroad officials stated that they had all the men necessary to operate trains, if they were guaranteed protection from the strikers. Assurances of the necessary protection were given and the railway officials announced that they would start trains to-day.

Engineers To Return To Work.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., July 10.—At a meeting of engineers of the Chicago & Grand Trunk here it was decided by a majority vote to return to work. A number say they will not return, and the strikers claim enough men are loyal to keep the road tied up.

B. & O. Men Ordered Out.

PITTSBURG, July 10.—Local Union No. 9, A. R. U., composed of B. & O. R. R. employes, numbering about 350 men, received an order from President Debs, ordering them to cease work. It is not thought that the order will be obeyed.

SITUATION AT PITTSBURG.

Another Request from President Debs for Aid.

PITTSBURG, July 10.—To-day will likely decide definitely whether the railroad men in Pittsburg and vicinity will recognize the call for assistance from President E. V. Debs of the American Railway union.

John D. Cole, president of the local union of the organization, received the following telegram from Chicago:

"You are hereby requested to assist us in the present strike by having all employes withdraw from the service. Elect good committees and wire the name of the chairman of each road. Commit no violence. All employes of all roads will stand together. None will return until all return. We are gaining ground rapidly. Pledge full protection to all, whether members or not. (Signed) E. V. DEBS."

Gigantic Labor Meeting.

CINCINNATI, July 9.—A labor demonstration held here last night was one of the most gigantic affairs of the kind known in Ohio. Ten thousand men were in line, and after the parade all that could do so packed every foot of the Music hall. The resolutions passed criticised the president for sending troops to Chicago. Col. Hunt, of the first regiment, had 200 men on guard at the armory. The strike situation is urged. Trains come and go with more or less regularity without molestation.

Want the Military Withdrawn.

HAMMOND, Ind., July 10.—Seven hundred and thirty militiamen guarding the railroad tracks, depot and cars here to-day were more than enough to subdue any lawless spirit which possessed the railroad and other strikers at this point. City officials and prominent business men, however, insist that the depredations were committed by men who do not live in Hammond and want the military force withdrawn.

Extinguished the Fires.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 10.—President Debs telegraphed D. W. Davis, local secretary of the American Railway union, asking him to assist in the present strike. As a result every engine on the Kanawha & Michigan arriving here was called in and the fires extinguished. This afternoon not a wheel will be moved in the freight service. The mails are not interfered with.

Working Against the B. & M.

SALEM, Mass., July 10.—An agent of the A. R. U. has been along the Boston & Maine railroad the past week trying to work up a sentiment against the company, especially as Mr. Pullman is one of the directors. The engineers, firemen and conductors would give him no encouragement, but some of the freight hands and switchmen encouraged him.

Decided Not To Go Out.

AKRON, O., July 10.—In response to a telegram from President Debs asking them to consider the question of striking in Akron, members of the local branch of the A. R. U. held a meeting. There were about 200 present. The meeting resulted in a decision not to go out. All men accordingly went to work as usual this morning.

Getting Rapid-Fire Guns Ready.

FORT MONROE, Va., July 10.—Colonel Frank, commandant, received orders to get all the rapid-fire guns at the post in readiness for immediate shipment in case they are needed in Chicago. Captain Willard, subsistance department, is ordered to Chicago.

Pennsylvania Baseball League.

PHILADELPHIA, July 10.—At a meeting of the State Baseball league here Philadelphia was admitted and the Altoona club was transferred to Lancaster. The Harrisburg management has decided to play out the season at Harrisburg.

Endorse the Proclamation.

BOSTON, July 10.—The proclamation by the president caused a great deal of discussion in this city. The lawyers, in particular, were very much interested in this act of authority, and among them the sentiment was unanimous that the President had done just the right thing, and many of those whose opinions were asked hastened to quote the authority by which such action could be upheld.

Well-Known Woman Dead.

BOSTON, July 10.—Mrs. Jane Anthony Eames, widow of the late Rev. Dr. James A. Eames, for many years rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, Concord, N. H., is dead of paralysis. She was one of the most widely known women in the state. She was born in Providence and belonged to the Anthony family of Rhode Island. Mrs. Eames had traveled extensively and had written much for the press.

Set on Fire by Strikers.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., July 10.—Two large tenement houses at the H. C. Frick Company's Valley works were set on fire at 11 o'clock last night by unknown persons. Strikers were recently evicted from the houses and they were unoccupied. The fire attracted 500 strikers, who cheered with delight. The loss will be $5,000; partly insured.

SEWERS ONWARD MARCH.

Important Transactions of the Plainfield Common Council.

The Common Council held a short meeting last evening. Councilmen Fisk and Bird were the only absentees. Mr. Stockton appeared in the council room for the first time after his trip abroad.

The sewer ordinance was read for the second time by Clerk MacMurray, and ordered engrossed and advertised as about to be passed on final reading. On motion of Mr. Frost the Sewerage Committee was authorized to have a preliminary survey of the whole or any part of the proposed work made at a cost of not more than $2,500.

An ordinance presented by Mr. Ginna was read twice and ordered advertised. It provides for the establishment of the grade on Kensington avenue between Putnam and Prospect avenues. A low spot on the avenue will be filled, preventing further damage by water to private property. The clerk was authorized to purchase two copies of F. A. Dunham's new atlas of the city and borough, one for the use of the Street Committee and the other for the Fire and Buildings Committee.

Clerk MacMurray read a resolution, presented by Mr. Frazee, giving the owner of the lots 501, 503 and 505 Plainfield avenue the right to lay a cement sidewalk in front of his property. In explanation Mr. Frazee said that the owner was Patrick Whalen, an unemployed mason who wished to save money by putting down a cement sidewalk himself, instead of having one of blue-stone flagging laid. He had been notified to flag his walk by the street commissioner.

Mr. Dumont asked if Street Commissioner Meeker had any right to send out thirty-day notices without the authority of a special resolution of the council. A discussion followed in which the commissioner read the ordinance which says that "The street commissioner is hereby authorized to serve notices in writing upon the owners or occupants of said lands requiring the necessary specified work to said sidewalks to be done by said owners or occupants within a period of not less than thirty days from the date of service of said notice". On the amendment of Mr. Dumont, the matter of giving Mr. Whalen the desired permission was referred to the Street Committee with power.

The resignation of Dog-catcher James H. Frisbie was read and accepted. Samuel Dreier was licensed to conduct a pawnbroking business at the corner of Front street and Madison avenue. The meeting was then adjourned.

She is only two years and six months old, but she has already learned that she must not put anything in her mouth before her mother has told her she can. It was because of this accomplishment that she did not die yesterday.

A box of Paris green fell from its place on a beam in the shed which adjoins Mr. Grannatt's house. Baby Maude found it and began to play with the poisonous powder. It covered her dress and was scattered on the floor when the little girl's mother found her at 4. Mrs. Grannatt at first thought she must have swallowed some of it and was overjoyed to find that she had not even tasted it.

BREAKING OF RECORDS.

What Science Can Do in This Line When She Tries Hard.

Steamship captains, horse owners, bicycle riders, and a lot of other people, are making strenuous and untiring efforts to "break the record". The great public looks on at the game with good-natured interest.

Once in a while sober science does a little record-smashing on her own account. One of her latest and great achievements is the discovery and application of a process for artificially digesting food, so that it is absorbed immediately by the system, without imposing the least labor on a weak stomach. This food is called Paskola. It restores the debilitated, and gives fat to the thin, because it is starchy. Only starches add real, solid lasting flesh to the body. Oils and fats don't and never will.

H. O Mahood, of Emlenton, Venango County, Pa., says: "I was so weak and run down that I thought I would have to give up my business. I could not eat nor sleep; after one bottle of Paskola I began to gain at once and I have gained over fifteen pounds in less than three weeks and I now feel like a new man."

No wonder.

Mrs. S. C. Stanch, of Wellington and Dauphin streets, Philadelphia, writes: "I have been sick nearly three years, at times suffering terrible burning pains in my back and then cold in the lower part of the bowels. Sometimes I thought I should die. All this time I was constipated. When I first began taking Paskola, I was tempted to give it up, thinking it would do me no good, because I had taken so much medicine. I feel Paskola beginning to do me good, and today I took a longer walk than I have been able to take in three years. I am much stronger. I am taking my fifth bottle of Paskola, and I eat almost everything now. I am 56 years old, and was always active, having worked hard."

Paskola may be bought of any reputable druggist. An interesting pamphlet on food and digestion will be mailed free, on application to The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Beade St., New York.

FENCES SHOULD GO.

Neither Useful Nor Ornamental In the Streets of a Town.

Fences have their uses and in certain localities and conditions are well nigh indispensable. For instance, on the farm they are necessary to keep horses, cows, pigs and other stock from entering the fields which the husbandman has planted with grain and vegetables, or to exclude them from prematurely enjoying the harvest of grass in meadow and upland which is destined for their winter sustenance. But in the town no such conditions prevail, and in the interest of beauty they should be relegated to the domain to which they belong.

There is no use or reason for a fence in the streets of a town. In days of yore, when cows and pigs wandered at will through the highways and byways, they were necessary only because the ordinances respecting cattle in the town were not enforced. But times have changed, and people no longer tolerate the man who permits his domestic animals to gain a livelihood at the expense of his neighbors' lawns and gardens.

A foolish custom it is, that of maintaining ill looking fences in front of residences. Remove them and note what a difference. The street has a much broader appearance, the houses appear to have more room, and, what is worth considering, an item is taken from the expenses of the householders. Laws are not necessary to do away with the fence. Once the movement is started they will quickly disappear. The penalties provided in the town ordinance for stray animals is amply sufficient to protect lawn and shrubbery from their depredation.

DISPOSAL OF CESSPOOL SEWAGE.

Plan For the Separate Treatment of House and Surface Drainage.

The town council of Norristown, Pa., has under consideration a proposition for the construction of a separate sewerage system for that borough for house and cesspool drainage exclusively. For this system vitrified clay pipe is proposed. The interior surface is of glassy smoothness, facilitating the flow of matter entering the sewer. At the dead ends of pipes will be located flush tanks operating automatically, completely flushing the entire system every 12 hours, the period required for filling the tanks, while they empty in 22 seconds.

It is intended that all sewage be carried into a conduit constructed along the Schuylkill through the low lying section of the borough to a point beyond the borough limits, where it will discharge into the Schuylkill. Inasmuch as it is believed to be only a question of a few years when the emptying of sewage into streams affording water supplies or creeks tributary to them will be prohibited, the conduit will terminate at a point where, when it becomes necessary, a reservoir may be constructed to receive the discharges from the sewer system. The deposits will be chemically treated at regular intervals, precipitating the solids, which, after the liquid has been pumped off, will be removed and devoted to fertilizing purposes. The water pumped from the reservoir will be allowed to thoroughly filtrate before flowing into the river.

It is estimated that about 20 miles of sewer will be required. The cost will be about 68 cents per lineal foot, to be borne wholly by property owners, at the rate of 34 cents per foot for either side of a street. A syndicate proposed to supply such a sewerage system, charging property owners $3 per year for 30 years, at the expiration of which period the system was to become the property of the borough without cost. This plan is so much more expensive than the scheme to introduce the system by council and tax the cost direct that it will not be considered. With a separate sewage system in operation, the surface drainage can be handled at comparatively small cost.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Moral.

There was a man in a faraway town
Who thought him wondrous wise.
He swore by all the fabled gods
He'd never advertise.

His goods were advertised at last,
And thereby hangs a tale.
The ad was set in nonpareil
And headed "Sheriff's Sale."

Progress In Australia.

"In Victoria, the most progressive of the Australian colonies, the telegraphs, railways and irrigation works, which in the United States are in private hands, are owned and managed by the state," said F. W. Billings of San Francisco, recently returned from a visit to Australia. "So far as telegraphs are concerned, they are in control of the government in England, but the rates are much lower in Victoria than in the mother country. Of course the panic has knocked things into a cocked hat in Australia, but when the times were normal the Victorian railways paid 4½ per cent on the capital expended and would have made much larger returns were it not the policy of the colony continually to lower fares and freights so as to encourage industries and render service to the people. This principle is carried so far in New South Wales that school children are conveyed free of charge on colonial railways, while in Victoria fares are remitted to special classes of students."

Pioneer of Newspaper Advertising.

The first newspaper advertisement appeared in Mercurius Politicus, a paper published in England in 1652, and read thus:

"Irenodia Gratulatoria, an Heroic Poem. Being a congratulatory panegyrick for my Lord General's late return, summing up his successes in an exquisite manner. To be sold by John Holden in the New Exchange, London. Printed by Theo. Newcomb, 1652."

HOME TESTIMONY.

Mr. Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.
TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly. They were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 144 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOS. CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.
TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact, it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

EDITORIAL EXCURSION.

National Delegates Well Pleased with Plainfield, and Delightfully Entertained by Walter Scott, H. P. Baldwin, John H. Starin, and E. B. Harper.

The excursion of the National Editorial Association yesterday was a triumph of good management and good humor. The visit to Plainfield was a delight and a revelation. The utmost admiration was expressed for the city and its lovely homes. "What beautiful gardens!" "What wonderful yards!" was a frequent exclamation. The city was well reviewed, through the courtesy and enterprise of the wide-awake citizens who so generously donated the use of their horses and carriages. All had a fine drive through the principal streets, and saw the city at its best. They viewed the operations of the famous Scott printing machines, and were so highly pleased that in spite of the fact that Mr. Scott protested that he did not wish to talk business, several insisted on giving him orders for new presses then and there. He made a speech of greeting to them, and provided a substantial lunch, consisting of choice dishes served by Caterer Stephenson. The number of carriages on hand spoke well of the results of Press agitation. The Daily Press began the crusade for the drive, and kept at it, in spite of the fact that another paper of the town insisted that there would be no drive and that no such scheme could be worked. The Press had faith in the people, that they would accept this rare chance to show the place effectively to the nation's leaders. The people did their duty nobly, and the town will be materially the gainer.

The visit of the editors to Plainfield was due to the personal energy of Walter Scott and of his right-hand man, Albert L. Thomas, who originated and consummated the excursion as a crowning glory to the annual convention in Asbury Park. They secured the co-operation of H. P. Baldwin, the traveling public's friend; of John H. Starin, the whole-souled steamboat and amusement king; and of E. B. Harper, the liberal and brainy President of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association. Mr. Scott had the right of way in the matter, and Mr. Thomas was a most faithful lieutenant in carrying out the plans.

THE VISIT TO THE WORKS.

For the benefit of the editorial delegation Mr. Scott had on exhibition in motion ten representative presses of the 70 different styles manufactured in the works. Other machines were shown in all stages of construction. For use in the office of the country weekly was a cylinder press with a hand-power attachment and a capacity of 1,500 per hour. Flat bed presses, made to print from 2,000 to 4,000 papers an hour, were shown in several styles, some perfecting and some with roll feed.

Of special interest to the representatives of larger papers was a rotary web press, fed from one roll. It prints and folds four-page papers at the rate of 24,000 an hour, and eight-page papers at half that speed. For the metropolitan dailies were the enormous inserting presses, with three feed rolls. They produce as much as three large presses, printing and folding papers of 12 pages or less at the rate of 25,000 an hour, and larger copies, up to 24 pages, at 12,000 an hour. Presses of the same pattern, but of twice the size, were also shown.

Mr. Scott's greatest exhibit was the largest printing press in the world. It will be sent, when finished, together with several others, to the Philadelphia Inquirer. Its weight will be 60 tons. It is a sextuple press, doing the work of six ordinary machines, and is fed from three double rolls. Its maximum speed per hour with papers of different sizes will be: Six pages at 100,000, eight pages at 75,000, 12 pages at 50,000, 14 to 24 pages at 25,000. It turns out copies cut, pasted, folded and counted out in fifties.

The editors were well versed in the operations of the presses, and looked at these perfect products of Plainfield workmanship with an intelligent interest. A number of Plainfielders who took advantage of the opportunity to inspect the works found much to wonder at in the way the mammoth presses handled the rolls of paper.

Carriages for the use of the excursionists were furnished by Walter Scott, J. T. Vail, Charles Hand, E. H. Cook, Plainfield Water Supply Company, VanBuren & Timpson, A. S. Huff, Mason W. Tyler, J. E. Townsend, George W. Rockfellow, Albert Krouser, J. A. Taylor, William J. Boome, W. J. Nelson, A. M. Runyon, William Hand, Daniel Roberts, J. M. Bettman, Peter Peterson, George Feller, William C. Smith, Captain Hubbard, James Manning, John Blimm, T. F. French, Dr. O. L. Jenkins, L. V. F. Randolph, James Clark, George C. Evans, George Belcher, Adam C. Blair, E. R. Pope, Frank Day, R. H. McCullough, Alfred Smalley, O. F. Pearson, A. B. Thorne, Henry DeMott, P. M. French, Edward White, L. M. French, Frank Hand, Benjamin R. Western, A. N. Dunster, A. D. Thompson, Albert Hedden, Dennis O'Brien, L. W. Serrell, Mahlon Vail, A. J. Winckler, Samuel Milliken, Andrew Love.

THE DAILY PRESS EXTRA.

The train was scheduled to leave at 11:45, and just at the moment for departure representatives of The Daily Press swung aboard with a big bundle of copies of the Editorial Special, for free distribution among the excursionists. The people were so eager to get copies that the manager had no immediate opportunity to notify the conductor and Mr. Thomas that he and the Presses were aboard, and as they had arrived and boarded the train on the opposite side of the track, and had not been seen, the conductor and Mr. Thomas obligingly held the train to await their expected coming. As soon as it was learned that The Press was aboard, the train pulled swiftly away. Not a stop was made till Jersey City was reached, and the run was quick and delightful. The cars were largely Pullmans, and all remarked the ability of the Jersey Central to transport the public with comfort and speed. The chief topics of the trip were the charms of Plainfield and the enterprise of The Daily Press. All praised the paper for its achievement, and preserved as souvenirs the copies they had received. When it was learned that the heavy work of getting out such an edition had all been accomplished since daybreak, the experienced editors declared that it was one of the best pieces of newspaper work they had seen achieved outside the great cities. The excursionists were all liberally supplied with the papers, and the circulation of them will be thorough through the country, thus adding largely to Plainfield's fame through the nation.

The Plainfielders on the excursion, and there was a goodly delegation, were uniformly proud of their favorite paper, in its successful effort to boom the town, and were warm in commendation. T. W. Morrison of The Plainfield Evening News freely congratulated the publisher of The Press, and one appreciative friend declared it was a coup de maitre. The Press was said to have made the biggest stroke of enterprise in the history of local journalism. H. P. Baldwin received a copy in Jersey City, and said "That 's splendid."

THE TRIP TO THE ISLAND.

On the boat to Glen Island new arrivals were supplied, and The Press was also circulated at the Island, Plainfield receiving the biggest advertisement in its career.

The steamer Sam Sloan conveyed the excursionists and their friends to Glen Island, through the courtesy of Mr. Starin, who certainly won full appreciation for his extraordinary liberality. Not only was transportation free, but provisions were supplied in abundance; they were delicious, and no one could spend a cent for them: everything was as free as air. Mr. Starin's generosity was unparalleled in the memory of all other similar trips of the Association.

So fast was the Sam Sloan that she easily overhauled and passed the regular excursion steamer to the Island, which had started considerably before. Two hours were enjoyed at the Island, and then a return trip was quickly made.

Landing was made at the foot of Murray street, and the party marched up that street and Broadway to the new building of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association, at Broadway and Duane street. The editors and their wives were received by President E. B. Harper and Mrs. Harper on the fourth floor. The entire building was lighted from basement to roof.

The officers of the company showed the guests throughout the building, and when they reached the roof, which was brilliantly lighted with Chinese lanterns, they could not say too much of the beautiful scene presented by the lighted cities of New York, Brooklyn and Jersey City, and the views of the rivers and the bay. At 8:30 the guests were summoned to dinner, which was served on the second floor. President Harper presided at a circular table in the centre of the room with the guests of honor. The other guests were seated at tables which ran parallel with the walls of the room. All of the 600 guests occupied the seats provided for them. The room was handsomely decorated with bunting and flowers.

THE BANQUET AT THE MUTUAL RESERVE.

On President Harper's right at the central table sat Gov. Hughes of Arizona and on his left was Walter Williams, President of the National Editorial Association. Other guests at the table were A. B. Bunnell, President-elect of the Editorial Association and editor of The Dansville Advertiser; L. Young James, G. Gibbe, J. M. Page, B. B. Herbert, John A. Sleicher, E. W. Stevens, A. B. White, William H. Haine, W. F. B. Milliken, F. A. Burnham, John Jay Burke, A. Willis Lightbourn, George W. Wooster, and Charles Fulton.

At the close of the dinner Mr. Harper proposed a toast to President Cleveland and expressed his hope that the assembled editors and proprietors of newspapers would sustain and guide his hands in this hour of trial. This was received with vociferous applause, and cheers for the President were given with enthusiasm. The Russian Imperial Band then played "Dixie", which met with hearty applause. This was followed by the "Red, White and Blue", which every man present joined in singing.

President Harper's toast was the keynote to the speeches of the evening. Walter Williams said that President Cleveland's proclamation to the railroad strikers was justice and law. "We will renew the covenant of human liberty and law", he said, "and having renewed it, we will cling to it as a shipwrecked mariner clings to his last plank when night and tempest gather around him".

A. Willis Lightbourn of The Mail and Express spoke for the press of the North and East and A. B. Whitney for the South. Judge Young of Iowa also spoke.

During the dinner photographs were taken of those in attendance as a memento of the occasion. The Banquet Committee consisted of George H. Worster, Chairman; George D. Eldridge, and John A. Sleicher. L. Steinfeld was the general manager of the occasion and pleased all of the guests.

The expense of the entertainment by Mr. Harper was said to be $7,000, and from the magnificent scale of everything that figure is not much out of the way. The edibles were all that the most fastidious epicure could desire, and the wines were various and of the choicest vintage. All that good taste could suggest was there, and two hours were spent in the enjoyment of the following menu:

The dinner itself was not the only great enjoyment of the occasion; it was a treat to inspect the conveniences and luxuries of such a complete and elegant structure as this costly new home of the great Reserve Fund. Mr. Harper's own genius and splendid management made the success and splendor of this wonderfully prosperous Association, and the structure (the tallest in all New York) is an imperishable monument to his ability and indomitable energies.

The Plainfielders who enjoyed the day with the Association were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott, Mr. and Mrs. T. Logan Murphy, Miss Murphy, Clarence Murphy, P. M. French, ex-Postmaster E. R. Pope, ex-Councilman Millington, Noah W. Pike, Rev. C. E. Herring, Miss Pansy Herring, W. W. Coriell, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin R. Western, Miss Hellwig, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Morrison, Miss Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Force, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Irving Clarke.

Costly and handsome souvenirs were given to the women of the party at the dinner, consisting of a painting of the building, set in a frame of silver.

About 11 o'clock the guests started on their return to Asbury Park, their departure being marked by a display of fireworks.

Miss Bininger of Newark is a welcome guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Milliken.

Mrs. John Tingley has gone to Somerville to visit her brother, Jacob Boice, who is ill.

Mr. Churchill, who is stopping in Ocean Grove, was in town yesterday on business.

A dressing of fine stone was spread on North avenue yesterday. It was needed very much.

Mr. Evans and family of Brooklyn have rented the Smith property in New Market for the Summer.

Leroy Sprowl has returned to Jersey City after a pleasant visit at the home of A. M. Randolph.

Herbert Williams and Victor VanColt of Bayonne were the guests of the Misses Staats, Sunday.

Miss Adams of Yonkers finds the pleasures of New Market all to be desired, at the home of her friend, Miss Evans.

Mrs. Henry VanMiddlesworth of Plainfield, who has been visiting relatives in the borough, is now visiting friends in Bound Brook.

Miss Ethel Palmberg, Miss Maud Titsworth, Miss Anna Larkin, and Howard Wilson of New Market, compose a party now enjoying life in Asbury Park.

The Methodist Church and Sunday-school left town at 7:20 this morning for a day of pleasure in Asbury Park. They accompanied the First M. E. Church of Plainfield.

Somebody has been stoning the signal towers at the railroad crossings. Several panes of glass have been broken, and if the offenders are caught they will be severely dealt with.

The Young Ladies Orchestra of New Market will give a picnic at Boynton Beach Saturday, going by stage. Each member is allowed to invite one guest. Dancing will be a feature.

Allan Wilson has been appointed borough marshal. He will see that the laws are enforced, especially those relating to bicycle riding on sidewalks and to the restrictions on dogs.

The Dunellen tennis courts are not well patronized these days; most of the members find attractions on the New Market courts. The absence of members of the fair sex is said to be the cause.

William Milliken, as a delegate from the Presbyterian Christian Endeavor Society, left Dunellen for Cleveland last evening. He will spend three weeks in the West, during which time he will enjoy riding on the wheel which he took with him. He intends to wheel from Cleveland to Springfield.

Fanwood.

A musical was given at the residence of Danby Darke on Quality Hill Saturday evening. Cornetist Bartow of Bound Brook was the soloist. Many New York guests were present.

Dr. F. W. Westcott and Mrs. Fancher were quietly married at Mrs. Fancher's residence Saturday morning. The happy couple, accompanied by little Lilly Fancher and Mary Westcott, took the noon train at Westfield for New York.

About 8 Saturday night a drunken man attempted to board a coal train near the Fanwood station; he fell and the train men thinking he was run over stopped the train when it was found that he was but slightly bruised. Judge Moore who witnessed the accident called on Ben. Hawkins to arrest the man and bring him to the station. Benjamin performed that little duty admirably, and although the fellow became very violent and abusive, controlled him until the arrival of Special Officer Corsa who escorted the prisoner to Elizabeth under commitment of Judge Moore to serve a term of thirty days. "My, that was a greasy fellow"—said Corsa on his return.

Scotch Plains.

Miss Geneva Day was married Friday last to Harry G. Coutin of Westfield. Rev. Dr. Parks performed the ceremony.

THIRD TRIAL.

This Jury Disagree in the Case of Daniel McCarthy.

The case of the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company against Daniel McCarthy for the possession of lots on South avenue was tried again in Justice Mosher's Court yesterday. The decision for the company in the same court before was thrown out in Trenton because the papers were not made out properly.

Justice Mosher called the case at 11:15. Testimony for the plaintiff was given by Sheriff Kyte and his niece, Miss Alice Kyte, and for the defendant by Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy and Wm. Diltz. The counsel for the company was ex-Judge Wm. R. Codington, and for Mr. McCarthy Counselor Charles A. Reed.

The jury went out at 1. The jurymen were E. P. Curtis, Charles Lyman, John Flynn, James Whalen, Edward Harding, William Frey, Jeremiah Cash, Henry Smith, P. W. Klyne, Joseph Angerbauer, Henry C. Smith, and William Sullivan. They were not able to agree upon a verdict by 4 in the afternoon, so Justice Mosher discharged them.

An Invalid Brought Home.

The need of an ambulance in Plainfield was emphasized this morning when nothing more comfortable was found than an express wagon to convey an invalid from the Central Railroad to her destination in the borough.

She was Miss Hulda Ptaschinski, a trained nurse from the Mary Drexel Home, Philadelphia, and a sister of Mrs. Charles Smith. A year ago she finished her course of instruction in the Home and chose to remain there. She was then in good health, but is now suffering from consumption. The sick woman was taken from the 11:01 train this morning on a mattress and carried to the home of her father, Martine Ptaschinski, in one of A. E. Hoagland's wagons.

War of Races.

Frank Nelson, alias Gamey Nelson, colored, and Thomas Fayhe, Irish, were before City Judge Coddington this morning. From their statements it appeared that Gamey had entered a saloon on Liberty street last evening at 9:30 and there met Thomas.

The Irishman remarked that Gamey was only a "nigger". Gamey bet drinks for the house that Thomas could not produce ten cents from his pockets. Thomas showed a dime, and Gamey had to set them up. Then Thomas hit him, for some unknown reason. Both were arrested. Gamey was released under suspended sentence, and Thomas was fined $3

Shelley Out Again.

Thomas Shelley of Fanwood was released from the County Jail yesterday, $500 bail having been obtained for him. He has engaged Attorney George DeMezis to defend him in the Fall, when he will be tried on a charge of assisting Shay and Adams in assaulting Mrs. Furey.

Freddie Still Missing.

Freddie Frey, the Plainfield Avenue boy who disappeared the night that Forepaugh's circus showed here, is still missing. His brother William is searching for him.

—For a good old-fashioned family picnic with excellent music and arrangement, go to Boynton Beach.

A WOMAN'S POWER.

IT IS THE GREATEST ON EARTH.

It Establishes Thrones and Destroys Nations.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

The influence of women upon the civilization of the world could never be measured.

The flash of her eye, the touch of her hand, and we have the marvelous power of women, glorious in the possession of perfect physical health. Lydia E. Pinkham, by her wonderful discovery of the Vegetable Compound has done much to place this great health power in the hands of women. She has lifted them out of the misery brought by displacement of the womb, and all the evils that follow diseased uterus.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restores natural cheerfulness, destroys despondency, cures leucorrhœa, backache, strengthens the muscles, restores the womb to its normal condition, regulates menstruation, removes inflammation, ulceration, and tumors of the womb, etc.

Here are two women who speak from experience, and for the benefit of others.

Miss Helen Smith, 43 22d Place, Chicago, Ill., says:—"I was troubled with irregularity and leucorrhœa. I followed Mrs. Pinkham's advice, took her Vegetable Compound, and used her Sanative Wash. I now feel like a new woman, and am perfectly healthy."

Mrs. E. Fox, Woodstown, N. J., writes:—"I had been sick 10 years with womb trouble and leucorrhœa. Doctors could not help me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did. Employment of any kind does not trouble me now, and I can stand nearly all day and not feel tired. I cannot thank you enough. I recommend the Compound to every woman who has any weakness."

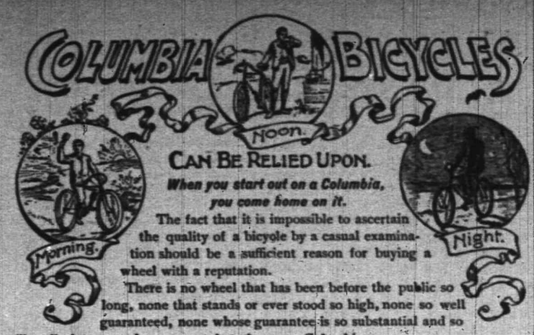
COLUMBIA BICYCLES



CAN BE RELIED UPON.

When you start out on a Columbia, you come home on it.

The fact that it is impossible to ascertain the quality of a bicycle by a casual examination should be a sufficient reason for buying a wheel with a reputation.

There is no wheel that has been before the public so long, none that stands or ever stood so high, none so well guaranteed, none whose guarantee is so substantial and so liberally interpreted, none so safe to buy as a Columbia.

With Columbias listed at $125, few riders will be so unwise as to invest in lower grade bicycles.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

Holland's Queen at Fifteen.

The young queen of the Netherlands is very rapidly passing out of childhood and becoming a young lady. She will be 15 on the 31st of August, and it will require only three years more to make her so much of a woman that, were she an American, it would be time for her to "come out," have a big tea and meet all her mother's friends, and then start on a round of assemblies and patriarchs. As it is, she will proably have enough to employ all her time.

Queen Wilhelmina is a well grown girl, fair and rosy, with a democratic enthusiasm for sport and romping games. Her regimen of life is as simple as that of many young women whose worldly position is not nearly so high and far simpler than that of the American children of millionaire parents. She will gain every promised virtue that comes to those whose habit is "early to bed and early to rise," for she is at her lessons by half past 8 every morning. After three hours of study comes play with her dogs or pigeons or a drive behind her beloved white ponies. Two more hours of study come after luncheon, and then more play in the open air when the weather is good. Dinner comes at half past 6, when Wilhelmina dines usually alone with her mother, and bed is not long after dinner.

Wilhelmina has grown up in the atmosphere of the bourgeois Dutch court to feel thoroughly Dutch in spirit and sympathies, and the costume in which the picture shows her is that of a peasant farmer's wife. One of her favorite costumes in which she has never been photographed, is her uniform as a colonel of the Second regiment of Westphalian cavalry, to which the German emperor appointed her two years ago.

Dorothy at the Wedding.

Little Miss Dorothy Drew, Mr. Gladstone's favorite granddaughter, has been interviewed on her experiences as one of the bridesmaids at Miss Margot Tennant's wedding.

Dorothy, or "Dossie," as she is called, said:

"Yes, I went to Margot's wedding. I was one of Margot's little maids, and I wore a rosy bonnet and a white satin frock, with lace on it."

"Miss Tennant was your godmother, was she not?"

"Was she? Well, she doesn't look like it, does she? She gave me this beautiful brooch for the wedding. You may just look at it, but I cannot have you take it off, because it is my own. After the wedding I went to Margot's house and had strawberries and sponge cake and a slice of peach."

"No," interrupted the nurse; "I do not think you had peach."

"Oh, yes, I am very sure I had. Very likely it was before you came."

"And were you very good at the wedding?"

"Yes, because I had on my pearl cross, and that made me be good."

"Did the church look beautiful, and did you like the singing?"

"They did not give me a paper, so I couldn't sing, but the big bridesmaids had books. I wish they had 'Onward, Christian Soldiers,' because I know that," and here Miss Dorothy started to sing this hymn in the prettiest treble possible.

Sunshine and Rain.

"All sunshine makes the desert" is an old Arab proverb. It would be well to remember this when a downfall of rain prevents some picnic or other enjoyable excursion that you have planned, for the very rain that you for the time find so annoying may help to make some desert place to bloom and be fresh. The sun never goes away for a very long vacation. He only slips behind the clouds to rest, and there are sure to be plenty of bright days before school takes up again. Think of this and smile in spite of postponed picnics.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Two Little Turtles.

Two little turtles on a rock
Watching the sun arise,
Snapping a meager breakfast up
Of drowsy morning flies.

One fly more luscious than the rest
Goes slowly flying past;
One turtle stretches out his neck
And gains the prize at last.

But reaching over in his haste
He makes too hard a dash,
And falling head first in the lake
The turtle goes—kersplash!

Not Quite Perfect.

Little Dot—I wish my doll didn't have such red cheeks and such a round face.

Mamma—She is very pretty.

Little Dot—Yes, but when I play she is awful sick an mos' dyin; she always looks so fat an healthy I can't feel worried over her a bit.—Good News.

SHE RUNS A CANALBOAT.

Miss Lizzie Campbell Has Demonstrated Her Ability as a Captain.

Woman is gaining in the industrial pursuits and has invaded nearly every branch of industry in the cities, but it remained for Miss Lizzie C. Campbell to demonstrate the ability of woman to cope with the various and varied difficulties of canal navigation.

Her father, James C. Campbell, was for many years a canal captain and ran his boats from New York to Buffalo with some degree of profit. When he died three years ago, he was the owner of two boats—the Silver Gloss and the James Campbell—both of about 300 tons burden.

This property he left to his wife, an aged and invalid woman, and to his daughter Lizzie, a young woman of 25.

There was neither brother, uncle nor cousin who could be called upon to undertake the captaincy of the boats when Mr. Campbell died, and for a time the two women were in a quandary.

An old canalboat has very little value intrinsically, but furnishes a most comfortable income when properly managed.

Miss Lizzie decided to keep the boats and ran them herself for three years. She has attended to all the details, hired the men of the crew, bought her own stock and made arrangements with the shipping agents.

Besides all this, she lives aboard the boats, cooks all the meals for her mother, herself and the crew, does the family washing, and withal is cheerful and contented.

Miss Campbell is a large, pleasant faced woman, who looks as though she thoroughly enjoyed her novel business. In a short interview I had with her in her neat but small cabin, while she was preparing the dinner for her crew of four men, she said:

"Yes, I've been in this business for three years for myself, but am an old canaler. I was brought up on a canalboat, and of course when it became necessary for me to take hold of the management of our boats I knew a good deal about the way of doing business. Still I had lots to learn, but after a few trips managed to pick up all that was needful.

"Of course when I first went to an agents' office things seemed a little queer, and the agents evidently thought it queer also, but both they and myself have grown accustomed to the conditions and get along with as little friction as do the men folks, though some of them, I believe, claim they do not like to do business with a woman."

All along the canal I found that all the boatmen and shippers were loud in their praises of Miss Campbell's abilities as a boat owner.

She has the reputation of being an exacting captain, demanding full labor from her help, but withal just. She keeps her men to the mark and knows immediately what work has been left undone, or if her mules and horses have not been properly cared for, and if necessary can harness and attend to these adjuncts of a canalboat herself.

The shippers recognize her business capacity, and in appreciation of the active supervision she exercises over her cargo give her the highest rates on freight, both going west or coming east.

There have been many chances for Miss Campbell to change the name in which her property stands, but so far none has been accepted, and the two boats and the snug bank account, from all indications, will remain for some time to come in her maiden name.—New York Herald.

"Vindicating" American Womanhood.

I observe that in a recent letter to a Chicago paper Major Moses P. Handy refers to Mrs. Potter Palmer as "vindicating," by her success at the great fair, "American womanhood."

I esteem Major Handy as an accomplished journalist and viveux, but when, in the name of Mary, the mother of Washington, did American womanhood become in need of "vindication?" In the eyes of foreign flunkies, toadies and decrepit aristocricies? Every one will join in the finished eulogium pronounced on the estimable president of the "ladies'" board of managers, but when the lounging and luxurious major talks of Mrs. Potter Palmer or any one else "vindicating" our peerless American womanhood I think he deserves to be called down. Don't you?—American in New York Sun.

An Economical Creation.

For that light, everyday piazza wear that demands the appearance of a wrap to satisfy the scruples of anxious mamma, and yet must not disarrange or destroy the effect of the dainty toilet, an ingenious young woman has devised an economical creation. She buys the cheap crepon tulle which comes in white and other delicate tints, has it accordion plaited across the width and fitted into a neckband of the same. This fashioned about the throat with either a bow or tying ribbons is the fleeciest and most becoming sortie de soir that can be fancied, and two or three of them give a harmonizing choice for many toilets. If only two can be had, select a black one and a white one, and if but one keep to the white.—New York Correspondent.

Silver Shirt Buttons.

Babies' buttons, as every mother knows, come on cards—three in a set. Now there are cards of buttons for bachelor girls to wear in their shirt waists, but instead of three chained buttons there are six, seven or eight on a card. There are collar buttons, studs for the front and studs and buttons for the cuffs. They are made in silver and gold, plain, chased and enameled, and cost anywhere from 60 cents to $20. Some of the designs are very neat, and some are very flashy and inelegant. It is beginning to look as though pins, machines, needles and thread and plain sewing were losing their usefulness. New styles in ladies' furnishing goods have buttonholes, but that's all. For fastenings studs only are recommended.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—For some six or seven years my wife had been an invalid. Becoming convinced that it was her only hope, we bought six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and "Golden Medical Discovery." To the surprise of the community and the joy of myself and family, in a week my wife commenced to improve, and long before she had taken the first bottle she was able to do her own work she had not been able to do it before for seven years; and when she had taken the last of the medicine she was soundly cured.

MRS. STIMPSON.

Yours truly, Rev. T. H. STIMPSON.

For women suffering from any chronic "female complaint" or weakness; for women who are run-down or overworked at the change from girlhood to womanhood; and, later, at the critical "change of life"—"Favorite Prescription" is a medicine that safely and certainly builds up, strengthens, regulates, and cures.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following ordinance has been introduced before the common council, read the second time and ordered engrossed and advertised preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the common council to adopt the same.

All that's Yellow is not Cottolene

There's hardly a housekeeper in the country but has heard of Cottolene the new vegetable shortening. It is a strictly natural product; composed only of clarified cotton seed oil, thickened for convenience in use, with refined beef suet, pure and sweet. So composed,

COTTOLENE

Was bound to win, and to drive out lard from the kitchens of the world. When housekeepers wish to get rid of the unpleasant features and results of lard, they should get Cottolene, taking care that they are not given cheap imitations with vegetable names, spuriously compounded to sell in the place of Cottolene.

It's easy to avoid disappointment and ensure satisfaction. Insist on having Cottolene.

IN THE LAW'S GRIP

Debs and His Associates Put Under Arrest at Last.

Conspiracy is the Charge Against Them—Released on $10,000 Bail Each—The Leader Takes His Arrest Nonchalantly—A. R. U. Headquarters Ransacked for Evidence—Mr. Debs Denounces the Seizure as an Outrage—Labor Strikes Back at the Indictments—Sovereign's Appeal to the K. of L.

CHICAGO, July 11.—Eugene V. Debs, president of the American Railway union; George W. Howard, Sylvester Kelliher, M. W. Rogers and J. S. Merwin have all been indicted by the grand jury for conspiracy to interfere with the United States mails. Debs was arrested at the Leland hotel at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and Kelliher at Uhlich's hall half an hour later. Bail was fixed at $10,000 in each case. The penalty is a fine of from $1,000 to $5,000.

Around town the news of the arrests, while it intensified the strained feelings referred to, failed to produce any pronounced manifestation either of approval or indignation. People that had been assuring one another that the arrest of Mr. Debs would be the signal for a movement by the masses upon the building in which he might be temporarily confined proved themselves false prophets. Although the announcement of the arrests was spread broadcast by word of mouth, and through the extras of evening papers, the interior and surroundings of the government building presented an appearance little different to that of the usual rush and bustle that characterizes the hour preceding the closing of out-of-town mails.

Took Arrest Calmly.

The arrested men took the situation in a nonchalant mood. No glittering of steel bayonets or tramp of military forces marked their progress to the government building, nor were any handcuffs brought into requisition. They came like free citizens, joked and laughed and enjoyed the hospitality of the district attorney's office while waiting for bail, put their signatures to the bonds as a matter of personal recognizance and then returned to their headquarters to resume the work that had been temporarily interrupted. Their reappearance was the signal for enthusiastic cheers and greetings from the crowd in waiting and which in the meantime had been venting its fury over the arrests by denouncing the action of the government and hurling maledictions upon the heads of those of the federal officers responsible for the proceedings.

Bail Given.

The bonds for the men in the charges above mentioned were made out shortly after their arrest, but the brief delay in the appearance of the bondsmen caused the appetite of Chief Clerk Burnham to get the best of him, and he disappeared for supper.

In the meantime Marshal Arnold's men had been busy collecting evidence. A subpœna duces tecum had been issued for J. G. Haines, who is one of Debs' assistants in the A. R. U. headquarters. Deputy Marshal White was given the paper to serve and the marshal's office effected a junction with the postal authorities to make a clean sweep. Major James Stuart, chief inspector of the Chicago postal division, accompanied the group of deputies.

Confiscated All Papers.

On entering Room 423 of the Ashland block, where the office business of the American Railway Union is conducted, the deputy read the subpœna and then the search began. The officers had a mail sack and they gathered everything in sight. Records, letters, circulars and telegrams and miscellaneous matter were thrown in a heap and then the private correspondence of the office was gathered in. The place looked as bare as a garret when the officers finished their cleaning up, and with a warning to Haines to appear before the United States grand jury to-day at 10 a. m. without fail they departed.

The mass of confiscated matter was taken to the federal building in a hack and was carefully deposited in the vaults of the district attorney's office to be used in the trial at the October term of court.

District Attorney Milchrist, in discussing the legality of the seizure, declares that all Debs' personal letters will be returned to him immediately and without an attempt to pry into the secrets, but that official matter will surely be offered in evidence against the officers of the order.

When Mr. Debs heard of the raid on the correspondence at his office he was wrathy and denounced the affair as a high handed outrage.

The Arrests Expected.

Although, to some extent, it had been anticipated, the arrest of President Debs and his associates caused a sensation yesterday. The president of the American Railway union and his colleagues were brought in quietly and without any of the lurid outbursts of popular indignation that sensationalists had predicted. The federal grand jury, composed almost entirely of out of town residents, occupied less time than had been expected in reaching the decision that the evidence presented for its consideration was sufficient to justify the return of true bills against the leaders of the union. No other result had been expected by those who listened to the charge of Judge Grosscup, and while although denounced with fury at the headquarters of the various labor organizations, is generally commented upon in commercial and professional circles as a masterly exposition of the line between the legal and justifiable methods of trades organizations, and defence of the laws, or rebellion against the authority of the United States.

Man's Right To Work.

The jurists took the ground emphatically that while the right of labor to organize could not be successfully attacked and that while it was the imperishable right of white man to work or quit work as he saw fit, and that while moreover he was entitled to all the fruits and strategy of work yet that, at the same time, trades organizations are subject to the same laws as other associations; that their leaders are also subject to the same laws governing all other men and that no organization, nor the leaders of such organizations could with impunity violate the laws enacted for the government of interstate commerce or the protection of the mails.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

It was a memorable scene, when, looking straight ahead, with finger uplifted, and speaking in clear cut tone, as though he would drive his words like a dagger of steel into the hearts of the jurymen, Judge Grosscup said that the present emergency was to vindicate the law and that only, and that if that law had been violated there should be quick, prompt and adequate indictment.

When the jury turned towards its consulting chamber there was not a man within reach of the judge's voice that had not already made up his mind that a return of indictments against the leaders of the union would be as quick and prompt as those responsible for the putting into operation of the machinery of the federal courts could possibly desire.

Labor Strikes Back.

Organized labor was prompt to strike back at the latest manifestation of federal power and authority. Hardly had the word been flashed across the half a mile of intervening ground between the government building and labor headquarters that indictments had been returned and warrants for Debs and his associates placed in the hands of the officers of the law when the committee appointed by the trades and labor associations of the city to urge upon the Pullman company the desirability of submitting the dispute with its employes to arbitration, and which had been endowed with autocratic authority in the event of a refusal being returned, attached its signatures to the order calling out every union man in the city from midnight.

Sovereign's Appeal.

Almost before the ink was dry on this document General Master Workman Sovereign, of the K. of L., placed the official seal of the order upon a manifesto addressed to members of the organization throughout the country, declaring that a crisis had been reached in the affairs of the nation that endangered the peace of the republic, that the flames of discord were being purposely fanned by the railroad corporations at the risk of the life of the government and appealing to the order and through it to the whole people to lay down the implements of toil for a short season and under the banner of peace and patriotic impulse to create through peaceable assemblage a healthy public sentiment in favor of the amicable settlement of the issues involved.

PRENDERGAST WILL HANG.

Friday Next Is the Day Unless the Governor Interferes.

CHICAGO, July 11.—Unless the governor is appealed to and grants a respite, Patrick Eugene Prendergast will hang next Friday between the hours of 10 and 12 a. m. The last legal resource, the supreme court of this state, has been appealed to without a stay. Judge Bailey, after twenty-four hours of mature deliberation, declined to direct the writ of error or issue a supersedeas. He found no substantial error in the records and so told Messrs. Darrow, Harlan and Gregory, the assassin's attorneys, who met the judge in chambers. The attorneys would not state whether they would appeal to the governor or not, but in the light of their past hard fight for their client it is expected that such action will be taken.

Another Jersey Mystery.

CAMDEN, N. J., July 11.—The Camden county authorities are investigating what will probably be added to the long list of capital crimes committed in that county. Anton Croggy, a berry picker, mysteriously disappeared on the night of July 3 from the farm of George Starn, at Pensauken, and everything points to his having been murdered. He is supposed to have been beaten to death, although his body cannot be found. Ernest Kohler and Joseph Smith have been arrested, and Caris Weinemeyer, who says Croggy was beaten by these men, has been detained as a witness.

LONDON, July 11. — A Russo-German named Rengarten, of Riga, will start in August to walk around the world. He will cross Asia, embark in Japan for Southampton, proceed to New York, and thence sail for France. He intends to give six years to the task.

An Old Carriage-Maker Dead.

NORTHPORT, N. Y., July 11.—William Ackerly, who was formerly a carriage-maker in New York and said to be the builder of the first carriage in the city of New York, is dead at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Mortimer, aged 80 years.

Madam,

NEW YORK PREPARED.

Plans for Quelling Any Disturbance Arranged.

NEW YORK, July 11.—Upon receiving the news that Grand Master Workman Sovereign was preparing a call summoning all knights of labor to strike, an important conference was held in the mayor's office between Mayor Gilroy, Brig.-Gen. Louis Fitzgerald and Supt. Byrnes.

After the conference the conferees decided not to make public what had been under discussion. The conference, it is certain, had to do with making arrangements whereby, in case of a strike and consequent disturbances in the city, the police and militia shall co-operate in the most effective manner possible.

The fact seems to be that plans for quelling any disturbance just as soon as it shows itself have been fully matured and carefully arranged. No interference with the rights of workmen will be tolerated any more than will any interference with the rights of other citizens be permitted.

TROUBLE FEARED AT PULLMAN.

Armed Men Will Be Taken from Hammond.

PULLMAN, Ill., July 11.—The feeling that there will be trouble at Pullman on account of the refusal of the railroad magnate to arbitrate differences with his employes continues to grow here. From 350 men, to which the force has gradually been reduced in the last few days, the number of armed men will to-day be swelled to 1,200. The men will be taken from the stock yards and Hammond. Every precaution is being taken to guard against an uprising, but outsiders are feared more than the residents of the town. No secret is made of the belief that the town is likely at any minute to be attacked by an armed mob.

Will Not Help the A. R. U.

PITTSBURG, July 11. — Representatives in this district of the Brotherhood of Locotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Switchmen's Mutual Aid Association and Order of Railway Telegraphers held a meeting last night and decided not to participate in the strike now being waged by the Americad Railway union.

Foreign Press Comment.

LONDON, July 11.—The Daily Chronicle says: "American corporations and capitalists set at defiance the conditions of human life and the laws of civilized society. The labor war is the result. Sooner or later the American people had to realize a strike of this nature, the effect and causes of which they must patiently and sympathetically discover and remove."

What Gen. McCook Says.

DENVER, Col., July 11.—Gen. McCook says that the proclamation declaring martial law in Colorado practically settles the strike. He will use every effort to enforce it. Gov. Waite, when told of the order, simply said: "Let it come."

Military To Aid Strikers.

STOCKTON, Cal., July 11.—A military company of 150 men has been organized here to aid the strikers. Every man has agreed to obey orders no matter what those orders might be.

FOUR TIMES THE VICTOR.

The Britannia Wins the Clyde Corinthian Cup Race.

GLASGOW, July 11.—Yesterday's contest for the Clyde Corinthian cup, valued at £60, while ostensibly sailed by amateur skippers, was practically a professional event. Mr. W. Jamieson was at the tiller of the Britannia, and Mr. Nat Herreshoff manipulated the tiller of the Vigilant, but they were advised by the racing skippers of their craft.

The Britannia was again victorious, but the winds were mostly very light and variable, and it was really almost as inconclusive a battle as that of Monday. The gentle force of the wind is indicated by the fact that the Britannia covered the 50-mile course in 7 hours, 45 minutes and 5 seconds. There was much light air sailing, some drifting, and a bit of real racing in a modest breeze.

Britannia won the cup by 6 minutes and 30 seconds, elapsed time, and 9 minutes and 30 seconds, corrected time.

It is regarded here as improbable that, in ordinary weather, the Vigilant ever will be able to worst her antagonist over the fifty mile course with eight turns, where success depends so largely on quick handling and jockeying.

The hope of the Americans is that they will have a chance soon to meet the Britannia in an outside race to windward and back or the reverse. They think that they have the better boat, but they are too unfamiliar with the erratic Clyde course to do much on it unless they have a rattling breeze and and a lump of a sea.

Convocation Postponed.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 11.—On account of the strike in the west announcement is made by Grand Secretary Fox that the triennial convocation of the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, appointed to be held at Topeka, Kan, on July 19, is postponed by order of the general high priest, subject to further notice.

Priests in Retreat.

TROY, N. Y., July 11.—Bishop Burke and half the priests of the Roman Catholic diocese of Albany have entered into a retreat at St. Joseph's Provincial seminary in this city. Rev. Father Casey, S. J., is conducting the retreat.

Coldana-Pulitzer Suit Settled.

PARIS, July 11.—The libel suit brought against Joseph Pulitzer by Prince Galatro-Colonna has been settled.

Approved by the President.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—The joint resolution providing for the resumption of work in the construction departments of the various navy yards has been approved by the president.

Tricycle Record Broken.

LONDON, July 11.—F. T. Bidlake, beat the 50-mile road tricycle record yesterday by 12 minutes. His time was 3 hours, 25 minutes and 5 seconds.

THE TARIFF CONFEREES

Still on the Threshold of the Subject.

Proceedings So Far Have Been Harmonious—None of the Big Schedules Have Been Taken Up—It Is Expected that a Report Will Be Made in a Few Days.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—The tariff conferees took a rather unexpected recess yesterday afternoon and there were a number of brief and hurried conferences immediately following the recess. All sorts of rumors were current, the most important being that the committee had been unable to agree, and that after a very warm discussion over some of the points of differences they had broken up in a rather unamiable disposition. There appears to be no ground for such statement and anything approaching this is denied by the members of the committee. There is some trouble in the committee, however, for as soon as possible after adjournment Senators Blackburn and Gorman were consulted and an impromptu conference was held in the rear room of the committee on appropriations. Enough is known to show that the senate conferees are holding out for the senate bill and that no receding from the amendments passed by the senate will be considered for a moment. If there had been doubt on this score it was dispelled after the conference with Mr. Gorman and his colleagues. The senate conferees were warned that nothing but the senate bill (changed if need be, only in immaterial points) could be passed by the senate, for it is understood that the managers of the bill in the senate appreciate the fact that the danger point has not been passed and that any effort to give away in conference the amendments made in the senate would cause the loss of votes that were held in line by the amendments that were put on the bill.

It was given out by one member of the committee that the proceedings up to this time had been of the most harmonious character. Mr. Voorhees was quoted by one senator as saying that he had never sat down to a conference table with a set of men more agreeable and more prone to consider the situation in the light of all the facts that produced it.

Mr. Vest was also quoted as saying that he believed the democratic members would be able to call in their republican colleagues not later than this week, while Mr. Harris was in the most pleasant frame of mind and, contrary to his usual custom, permitted himself to be interviewed, although he declined to answer any of the questions put to him in a way that afforded any satisfaction to his interrogator.

It is known positively that the committee has not attempted to take up any of the big schedules containing the material points of difference between the two houses. Monday, it is said, the glass schedule was completed and the house agreed practically to all the amendments made by the senate.

Immediately after adjournment Mr. Montgomery, of the house conferees, went to the house and spoke to Speaker Crisp in a somewhat excited frame of mind. The two at once left for the speaker's private room. Later Mr. Montgomery was in conference with Mr. Catchings. It is said that he told these gentlemen that nothing had been accomplished, and that the conferees were as yet still on the threshold of the subject. A number of gentlemen of the house, who have been anxious to leave the city, have been warned not to go, as it is expected the conferees will make their report in a very few days and all the votes will be needed when action is taken on the report. A careful canvass of the situation in the house shows that there is a disposition there to accede to the senate amendments, for the reason that the belief has been impressed upon the leaders that such a line must be followed, or the fate of the bill in its entirety will be imperilled. There may be two or three days of impassioned debate, and several gentlemen will put themselves on record, but after that is done the report will be adopted. One member who has been very close to the leaders and who took an active part in the construction of the present bill said this morning that he believed that the opposition would be short, but sharp, with the result outlined above. There were, he said, fifty democrats who thought the senate bill represented the sentiment of the whole country better than the house bill and who would be glad to see it become a law. The only question with them was how the republicans would treat the subject and whether they could be counted upon to assist in adopting the report.

PRAISES HIS BEAUTY.

How Arthur Boyd Was Affected by the Editorial Banquet.

(From The New Brunswick Home News.)

Letters of regret were read from prominent newspaper men all over the country by John A. Sleicher of The Mail and Express.

In the midst of Mr. Sleicher's letter reading, Thomas W. Morrison, the Adonis of the New Jersey Association, and the well-known editor of the Plainfield Evening News, interrupted him to propose three cheers for President Harper on behalf of the New Jersey contingent, which was at that juncture compelled to leave for the train. The cheers were given with a will.

There were many prominent people present from Plainfield as guests of Mr. Scott, the printing press genius, including the family of Rev. Dr. Murphy, of the Church of the Holy Cross. Arthur H. Boyd was present from The Home News.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

STRICKEN IN ASBURY PARK.

A Plainfield Excursionist Suffering from Paralysis.

Mrs. Richard Fisher of 206 West Fourth street received a slight paralytic stroke while in Asbury Park yesterday on the Methodist Sunday-school excursion. She went with her husband and passed the morning very pleasantly. At 1:30 in the afternoon the two left a pavilion to make a trip on the electric cars.

They had scarcely entered the car when Mr. Fisher noticed that his wife was ill and spoke to her. She could not answer. With the assistance of several men, for Mrs. Fisher is a heavy woman, he succeeded in taking her to the railroad station. A local doctor was summoned. He decided that she had been stricken with paralysis, and gave her medicine which seemed to relieve her.

Mrs. Fisher was brought home on the excursion train, being made as comfortable as possible. At the North Avenue station she was removed to a cot and carried to her home. She was slightly improved this morning. Her right side seems to be affected more severely than the other. This is the third attack of the kind that she has suffered, and the physician in attendance, Dr. S. D. Keeney, said last night that she would probably recover as she has done before. Mr. Fisher feels very grateful for the assistance he received from the men who carried his wife from the station.

She was resting better this afternoon, but otherwise her condition had not changed. A correct diagnosis cannot be made until the woman has recovered from the shock of the journey.

NEW ARRIVALS AT THE ALBION.

The popularity of Hotel Albion under the new management is already attested by the fact that the list of new arrivals keeps increasing. Among the latest guests are the following:

J. A. Robb, M. B. Ketcham, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Abbey, Miss L. H. Nickerson, Hon. W. L. Abbey, S. Leach & Bro., L. R. Dunham and wife, and John L. Linsley, of New York; C. R. Honey, of Newark; E. G. Putnam, of Brooklyn; G. H. Dunster, and G. F. Odiorne, of Plainfield.

Quarantine Removed.

The quarantine card was removed from the home of Theodore VanNest, corner of Central avenue and Third street, today, after the place had been fumigated. Mr. VanNest's little daughter had the diphtheria in a very light form and is now entirely well again. The probable cause of the disease, and of the death from diphtheria of Mr. VanNest's young son last winter, is thought to be the unclean condition of a neighbor's yard, a nuisance which was ordered removed today.

LATEST DESPATCHES.

NO GENERAL STRIKE.

Failure of the Orders Sent from Chicago—Sovereign Countermands His Strike Order in a Later Despatch.

(Special to The Press.)

CHICAGO, July 11—The general labor strike which was to have been started this morning to force arbitration of the Pullman strike failed to materialize today.

Of all the trades which had threatened a strike the Seaman, the Cigarmakers and the Carpenters were the only unions which signified their intention of stopping work today. Reports from these trades are awaited, but their action one way or another was regarded as only a drop in the bucket.

Throughout the city this morning there was little evidence of the business paralysis which has been so confidently predicted by labor leaders. Every street car line in the city was running, the elevated roads carried the usual number of trains, and the early morning crowds of workingmen on the way to their shops and benches seemed undiminished.

CLEVELAND, July 11—A telegram was received at the headquarters of the Knights of Labor from Grand Master Workman Sovereign at Chicago, last night, as follows: "Do not strike. See press reports".

THIN GOWNS.

Fashionable Combinations of Muslin or Lawn With Lace.

If you have any old fashioned wide lace collars, now is the accepted time to bring them forth and wear them. The greater the number the better, for instead of making one collar do for several gowns, as was formerly the rule, as many as can be obtained are used for the trimming of one costume. They form epaulets, cuffs, basques and yokes and are ruthlessly cut to better adapt them to the particular purpose for which they are used.

Heavy qualities of lace are preferred, but a great deal of valenciennes edging and insertion is employed to trim thin stuffs, such as muslin and lawn, for which guipure and kindred makes would be too coarse. Ecru or yellow lace with white goods is a fashionable combination and gives a pleasing effect for a change, especially if the white material is thin and is made up over a lining of the same color as the lace. White muslins are shown having a small embroidered dot of pink, blue, lavender, yellow or black, and these, too, are charming over a tinted lining. The costume may be so constructed that the lining is separate from the muslin, which of course simplifies the laundering of the latter and gives the gown a wider usefulness. Several pretty ways of making muslin costumes are seen. In some cases the full unlined skirt is fitted to the hips by means of a sort of yoke composed of rows of shirring, the puffs being separated by bands of lace beading, through which narrow ribbons are run. More often a lace edged flounce is sewed around the lower part of a plain skirt to simulate a round or pointed overskirt. The round bodice is full and is gathered in at the waist under a belt. It is decorated with a bertha, bretelles or a scarflike trimming, or it may be made with a yoke or crossed over serpentine fashion. Elbow sleeves are often seen, although the unlined gigot sleeve appears on many transparent gowns. Of course, when short sleeves are used for out of door costumes it is necessary to wear gloves long enough to meet them.

Silk is greatly favored for summer attire and in the thin varieties is appropriate enough, but moire and peau de soie seem rather too thick and firm for warm weather wear. However, they are worn, witness the costume of which a sketch is given. The first skirt is of pale green taffeta covered with white lace; the second, of peau de soie to match, trimmed with black moire and caught up on the left side by black moire ribbons. The blouse corsage is of peau de soie and is mounted on a black moire yoke. The epaulets, figaro and belt are of white lace, the sleeeve puffs of black moire and the deep cuffs of peau de soie.

ROSE HUED REFLECTIONS.

Light From Festive Scenes Strained Through Pink Shades.

Decorators and furnishers, persons who give entertainments and persons who go to them, have all come to the conclusion that the light shed upon festive scenes must be strained through pink shades in order to be becoming as well as cheerful. Blue is out of the question, green is too melancholy, red too demoniacal, yellow too trying to the complexion and white too cold. Pink is the one and only tint universally suitable, and the desired rosy tinge is obtained by means of numerous little devices not necessarily expensive. It is not needful to discard white and crystal globes and replace them by others made of pink glass, for an equally good effect is obtained with shades constructed out of pink cambric or silk. For electric lights a leaf shaped shield of rose colored paper is provided, which falls in front of the light and mellows its rays to the right degree. A woman who has ever carried a pink parasol knows what power lies in light so filtered to brighten and transfigure the complexion, so she will at once appreciate the delightfulness of a ballroom thus illuminated. But why should such a charming effect be left entirely to public functions?

Pink is a pretty color for other things besides cheeks, however. It cannot be worn by a sallow person or one with a rough skin, but its various tones are becoming to many different types of women if the shade be carefully selected with regard to the individual characteristics. A sketch is given of a costume of rose colored taffeta and crepon. The first skirt is of accordion plaited taffeta; the second, of embroidered crepon slightly draped on the left side under a choux. The bodice, belt and basque are of crepon, while the sleeves and bolero are of taffeta.

Will This Discourage Them?

A New York paper, commenting on the suffrage fight now going on in that state, says: "See what women will lose if the word 'male' is stricken out from the state constitution. They can bring no breach of promise suits, all husbands may abandon their wives, and no support will be awarded by the courts. All right of dower will fade away, there will be no difference in the causes of divorce of women and men, as now provided in the code of civil procedure, and no civil or criminal consequence shall accrue. This is the programme of a leading member of the constitutional convention. It is in consequence of woman suffrage, office holding and participation in politics. She must enjoy no exemption or privilege not held by man. In the new century, if she votes, she will be compelled to perform the same public duties as man."

What Made Them Mad.

The women of Louisiana are mad—at least some of them are. A committee of them went to Baton Rouge to "petition the legislature," quite a new departure for southern women. And they told the governor what they wanted very pluckily and very explicitly, only to be told by the governor in response that "women were too good to be dragged into politics." And that is what made them mad. Small blame to them, for whether one is in touch with their demands or not one can recognize that when a woman asks for bread—politically leavened—she does not care to be supplied with sugar plums and metaphorically told she is a pretty child. The governor of Louisiana was gallant, but not up to date.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

HOME TESTIMONY.

Mr Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly. They were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 144 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOS. CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact, it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

PARKER OF PLAINFIELD.

CAPT. JIM GETS A BIG POLITICAL PLUM.

His Appointment by President Cleveland as New Jersey District Attorney Causes a Political Sensation.

President Cleveland's nomination of Capt. James Parker, for several years a prominent citizen of Plainfield, and well known by all the old residents here, as United States District Attorney for New Jersey, has caused a political sensation through the State.

Capt. Jim owes his nomination to Senator McPherson and Congressman Geissenhainer.

Senator Smith's candidate for the office was Gen. William C. Heppenheimer. Mr. Heppenheimer had also the backing of Congressman Fielder. Mr. Parker's papers were signed by Senator McPherson and Mr. Geissenhainer. Senator Smith had refused to indorse the Perth Amboy man's candidacy.

There seems to be little doubt that President Cleveland gave the office to McPherson and Geissenhainer in lieu of the Collectorship of Internal Revenue, and that, as a result, the Collectorship will now go to Senator Smith.

The office has been before the President for nearly a year, but on account of numerous other things requiring attention nothing definite was done towards fixing on the person to occupy it. Both Senators McPherson and Smith were united in selecting ex Gov. Ludlow, of New Brunswick, but he declined to accept. After that but little attention was paid to it. Senator Smith had no particular choice beyond Ludlow and the matter was left to Senator McPherson. It was then that ex-State Comptroller Heppenheimer and George L. Record, of Jersey City appeared in the field. Both had what might be termed big political pulls, and Mr. Heppenheimer's seemed to be the longest and strongest. Edward F. C. Young was behind Mr. Heppenheimer. It was understood that Miles Ross, of Middlesex, would have to be given the indorsement of any candidate selected for this office and Messrs. Young and Heppenheimer managed to receive his consent to the latter's nomination. When this had been secured Mr. Heppenheimer felt very easy in his mind. Mr. Young also felt sanguine. It occurred to neither, however, to see Senator McPherson and have the appointment rushed through.

That was where Capt. Parker got in his fine work. The Captain had started in with much fear and trembling, but, like a true veteran, the display of strength from the other side did not dismay him. He went at his work briskly and sharply. It was only two weeks ago that it was known even in Washington that he was an aspirant. Then he walked into the Attorney-General's office and fired his first broadside by filing his application. The application was indorsed mostly by prominent men, residents of New York as well as of New Jersey. William R. Grace and Frederic R. Coudert were among the signers. Senator McPherson had also signed it, but in the case of the Senator that would n't necessarily indicate that Capt. Parker was the man he would actually recommend. The Senator never disappoints office-seekers by refusing his signature to their petitions. So Capt. Parker had the Senator's signature all right.

Capt. Parker did n't rest after filing his application. Having taken his bearing on the Attorney-General's office he trained his guns on the Executive Mansion. The bombardment was persistent and Capt. Parker, kept piling up new ammunition. Senator McPherson helped him all he could. In the mean time Mr. Heppenheimer w s taking things easy at home, assured of his appointment at the proper time, but doing nothing to hasten it along, while Mr. Record was still trying to strengthen his "pull".

The President could n't stand Capt. Parker's bombardment. He longed for relief. He decided to make that appointment right away. He turned to the files. There was Capt. Parker's application, nicely drawn up and numerously signed, and indorsed by Senator McPherson. No other was there. Mr. Heppenheimer had not yet filed his. Capt. Parker, he argued, must be the man, and so Capt. Parker it became.

That 's how Capt. Parker of Perth Amboy defeated William O. Heppenheimer, a General in the National Guard, ex-State Comptroller, and a very active and influential young man.

Capt. Parker has been a resident of Perth Amboy for the past sixteen years. He is a nephew of Cortlandt Parker, the well-known Republican, of Newark. He was born June 15, 1833, at Newark O., his father being Judge James Parker of Cincinnati. He entered the navy in 1846, becoming a naval cadet at Annapolis. Admirals Kimberly, Gherardi and Braine were among his classmates. He served in the Mexican War, and made his first cruise in the Gulf of Mexico in the old sailing sloop-of-war Saratoga, commanded by Admiral Farragut. He graduated from the Naval Academy in 1852, and made a cruise in the Mediterranean in the old sloop-of-war St. Louis, under Capt. D. N. Ingraham. He resigned from the navy in 1856 and took up the study of law under the late Chief-Justice Salmon P. Chase, in Cincinnati, O. At the opening of the rebellion he re-enlisted in the navy, receiving back his old position. He served with distinction and won special honors at Fort Fisher. At the end of the war he settled in New Jersey, living in Westfield and Plainfield. He again studied law, and has since made that his profession. He is a member of the New York Marine Society and of the Legion of Honor. He is said to be an authority in matters pertaining to maritime law.

HERE THEY COME.

Newspapers Everywhere Spreading Plainfield's Fame, as a Result of the Great Excursion.

The Philadelphia Inquirer devotes a column to the visit of the editorial excursion to the Scott Works, and speaks as follows concerning the largest press ever built, which was shown to the visitors, and which is to be placed in the Inquirer building:

When the machinists drew the levers and started one of the great machines at full speed an outburst of admiration arose from the spectators as two gleaming, ceaseless torrents of white paper sped from the ponderous machine into the folders, a second later to be snatched from the receptacle in the form of a daily newspaper, although devoid of ink, and to be kept as a souvenir of the visit.

There is a peculiar fascination to be found in watching the intricate and delicate machine at work, and perhaps the attraction was even greater to the men who understood the making of a newspaper than it would have been to outsiders. There was not an experienced newspaper man in the party but was ready to congratulate The Inquirer on the superior facilities it will soon possess, and which will give it an immeasurable advantage when delayed editions are necessary.

"There'll be no need to worry over early mails with those presses," said one veteran editor, the significance of his remark being that the paper with such equipment could go to press at the latest possible moment without any necessity for discarding news received at a very late hour.

Besides the 35,000 capacity press, which had been in operation, another machine of somewhat greater power was in the shops, boxed up and addressed to The Inquirer, awaiting the readiness of its foundations before it will be shipped. Under the guidance of Superintendent Weseman many of the visitors inspected the great plant, which includes pattern shop, foundry, blacksmith shop and every department which is necessary to the production of the machine.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott gave the most hospitable attention to their guests, and many of the citizens of Plainfield placed their carriages at the disposal of the ladies of the party, who enjoyed the attractions of one of the prettiest and most prosperous towns in New Jersey.

THE BATTLE OF WESTFIELD.

The Only One in Its History Is This Literary War Now On.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Here are more Revolutionary items from Dominie Cadwell of Westfield. I trust they will settle his rank as a historian for all time, and relieve me from paying him any further attention:

"In June of 1777 the enemy under Howe and Cornwallis advanced in force from Amboy to attack Washington at Morristown. Sterling's Brigade engaged them at Scotch Plains and drove the Britishers back. The enemy then moved to Westfield but merely passed a night here, finding the place too strongly guarded to attack successfully".—Westfield Centennial Souvenir, page 5.

As you are aware, "the enemy" was not at Amboy in June, 1777. Nor, when there, were they under command of Howe and Cornwallis. Nor did they advance, etc., to attack "Washington at Morristown"—(the topography, not to mention the geography, of New Jersey would have prevented any such lunacy; unless, indeed, they had proposed to travel by carrier pigeon!) Nor did General (Lord) Sterling command a brigade; nor did he "engage" the enemy at Scotch Plains; nor did he "drive them back"—(according to Dominie Cadwell himself—"they then moved to Westfield". If General Sterling drove them at all then, he drove them not back to Amboy, but forward to Westfield). As it happens, however, the enemy "did not" then move to Westfield; nor did they "merely pass a night there"! Nor was Westfield "too strongly guarded, etc". What, pray, is Dominie Cadwell's idea of an army, a march or a battle? Or what is his idea of the intellectual state of his audience? How does he manage to have the British "merely pass a night" at Westfield if Westfield was "too strongly guarded". And who guarded Westfield on that interesting occasion? Was that the occasion on which "Washington and his troops were encamped near a spring at the back of the old church"—(Ibid p. 4.), or on which a band of Indians armed with scalping knives is discovered by Dominie Cadwell in a country which for 164 years had been settled by Englishmen?

But here is another "corker":

"While the Revolutionary war was in progress the (Westfield) church passed from the hands of the settlers into the hands of the British over and over again."—Ibid p. 4.

Neither the American nor the British armies was ever nearer Westfield than the village of Springfield five miles away; and on neither of the enemy's visits there (Wednesday, December 17, 1776, and Friday, June 23, 1780) were Howe and Cornwallis in command of the English or Washington of the Americans. Nor on neither of these occasions did either army march through or anywhere in the direction of Springfield. In both the enemy came via Elizabeth, ElMora (as now called), Connecticut Farms, (now Union), and on the latter the Americans under Greene came down from Morristown to meet them. No English troops ever visited Westfield, for there was no object in their doing so—no soldiers to disperse and no supplies to capture.

The only visit the Hessians ever made to Westfield was on a raid for forage, and then the old church was set on fire by one side or the other and burned to the ground. How then, in the name of Cadwell, could that old church have passed back and forth between the opposing armies who were never in Westfield at all "over and over again"?

But here is "corker" number three:

"Troops were constantly marching between Westfield, Springfield and Scotch Plains."—Ibid p. 5.

This is, perhaps, the most astounding proposition yet! As the British were in New York and the Hessians on Staten Island, and as their object was to get up to Morristown to destroy Washington's stores, and as the only passes to those mountains were at Springfield and the Short Hills, it certainly paralyzes comprehension how even Dominie Caldwell could picture "the enemy" as marching and countermarching along the outside bases of these mountains from Springfield by the way of Westfield to Scotch Plains and back again! Perhaps they were marching for fun or just to keep their legs stretched! Or, perhaps, (and this supposition finds support in the Dominie's statement, heretofore quoted, that Washington and his troops were encamped near a spring at the back of the old church",

ALL TRADES ARE OUT

Chicago's Industry Almost Paralyzed.

Some Did Wait to Hear of the Refusal of Arbitration—The Struggle Between Capital and Labor Will Be a Fierce One—A Feeling of Unrest and Foreboding Prevails.

CHICAGO, July 11.—There is no disguising the fact that the local situation in the labor troubles is more grave than it has been at any time for two weeks, when the American Railway union issued its boycott against the rolling stock of the Pullman Car company, with the view of enforcing the demands of the strikers at the town of Pullman. This is not the view of the alarmist or of the biased idea of the radicals among the striking element. It is the opinion entertained among all classes of the community, which are looking forward with fear and apprehension to what another day may bring forth. There is that same feeling of unrest and foreboding in the air that those who have witnessed uprisings on the part of the masses in England and on the continent remember full well.

There were three times as many people on the streets to-day as were to be seen on any day for months past. Nine-tenths of them, men and women alike, displayed some emblem. The majority wear the white ribbon emblematic of sympathy with the strikers and against the use of which the white ribboners of the Women's Christian Temperance union have made a fervent, but apparently ineffectual, protest.

The people on the streets keep moving. There is no congregation of crowds except about the military camps on the lake front and the prominent building and in the region of the various headquarters of the labor organizations. But as they walked they talked and the present and future of the labor situation was the engrossing topic. So it was at the clubs, in the restaurants, in the saloons and in all other places of public resort.

In commercial circles there were lamentations loud and deep, for retail business of all kinds is in a state of paralysis and the wholesale trade is faring but little if any better. Everybody agreed that affairs had been wrought up to the highest tension, and that, to use the vernacular, "something or other must speedily drop" to bring relief.

FOREBODINGS AT CHICAGO.

No Telling What a Day May Bring Forth.

CHICAGO, July 11.—The working men are out on strike. Chicago industries are almost completely paralyzed, and the last call for the greatest struggle between labor and capital has been made and responded to so far as this city is concerned. Beginning yesterday at 4 o'clock the members of the different unions began to strike. It had been given out that nothing in the way of a settlement could be effected, and without waiting for the final report of the committee which bore the news of the refusal of the Pullman company to arbitrate the union men began to quit work. Almost the first men reported out were the stage employes, and following those were the carriage and wagon workers, teamsters, moulders, machinists, brewers, bakers and iron workers. All of these trades gave notice that they would strike and reported at noon to the chief officers as on strike. During the afternoon other trades followed in rapid succession.

It had been agreed that a meeting should be held at Uhlich's hall for the purpose of receiving a report from the committees. It was decided to then issue the call for a general strike, but the action of the mayor and others in attempting to secure a committee of prominent business ment and citizens to effect some sort of an agreement whereby the strike in general might be avoided, delayed the call.

Mayor Hopkins, acting upon the suggestion of citizens, had appointed a committee of three consisting of Judge M. F. Tuley, Willis J. Abbott, editor-in-chief of the Times, and City Comptroller Ackerman, to select a citizens' committee of 25 to call upon the Pullman company for a more amicable policy. The meeting was prolonged until after 4 o'clock, the hour set by the joint meeting of the trades and the efforts of the citizens to avert the strike were fruitless.

Chairman Kidd and Secretary McCormick of the joint trades meeting delayed the issuing of the call until 6 o'clock, but at that hour met with the committee of seven selected to try to induce the Pullman people to arbitrate, and concluded to issue the call. The call was issued and reads to the effect that acting upon the unanimous vote of the joint conference Sunday night a general call of all laboring men in the city of Chicago to unite in a sympathetic strike and to quit work at once in a uniform movement to assist the American Railway union by remaining out until the Pullman boycott and strike was settled. Before the call was issued fully 30 unions had given notice that they would strike.

Situation at Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, O., July 11.—The indications are that the backbone of the strike has been broken. One crew has been put to work in every yard in the city, and each of the roads has succeeded in making up and sending out at least one freight train. There have been no signs of disturbance. All the firemen employed by the Big Four who have been on strike here returned to work. It now looks as though the strike would speedily break down and every yard be fully manned and actively at work clearing up the accumulation of cars.

Marines To Check Strikers.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—The United States cruiser Charleston has arrived at Mare Island navy yard from Central America. She has a force of marines on board, and these with her blue jackets will be held as a reserve force in the event of further outbreaks in the vicinity of San Francisco.

To Compel Arbitration.

PATERSON, N. J., July 11.—J. P. McDonnell, president of the New Jersey state board of arbitration, has communicated with United States Senator Smith, urging him to introduce in the senate a bill making it compulsory on the part of corporations to arbitrate labor troubles.

Weavers Strike Off.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 11.—At a meeting of the weavers union the strike at No. 6 Wamsutta mill, which has lasted 9 weeks, was declared off, and a committee will wait on Mr. Kent to arrange terms for the strikers returning to work.

CHAMPIONS THE STRIKE

Mr. Pullman Scored by Senator Peffer.

The Kansas Senator's Position Denounced by Messrs. Davis and Gordon—Mr. Daniel Upholds the Action of the President and His Cabinet—Bills Passed by the House.

WASHINGTON, July 11. — The senate spent three hours yesterday in debate upon the resolution offered Monday by the populist senator from Kansas, Mr. Peffer, looking to government control of interstate railroads, the regulation of their passenger and freight rates, the fixing of the wages of railroad employes, the acquisition and operation (either by the federal government or by the state governments) of all the coal beds of the country, and to many other ideas of the populist party. As was to be expected the great railroad strike at Chicago was the chief topic in the debate. In a speech of over an hour and a half Mr. Peffer stated the case from the Debs or strikers' point of view, and laid all the blame for the outbreak on Mr. Pullman, whom he characterized as soulless, conscienceless and tyrannical. The cause of law and order and of the maintenance of free and unobstructive intercourse by railroad communication was championed by Senators Davis (rep., Minn.) and Gordon (dem., Ga.), both of whom denounced, in eloquent language, the position taken by the Kansas senator, and the lawless acts of Debs and his followers. A substitute for the Peffer resolution was offered by Mr. Daniel (dem., Va.) upholding and commending the official action of the president and his cabinet; and then, after some remarks by Mr. Daniel and by Mr. Stewart (pop., Nev.), the whole subject went over until to-day.

In the last two hours of the session the postoffice bill and the house bill for the admission of Utah as a state were passed, the former with very little friction, and the latter without any at all, even without the yeas and nays being called upon its passage. The senate then at 5:45 p. m. adjourned.

House of Representatives.

According to the arrangement made by him with the committee on rules, Mr. McRae, chairman of the committee on public lands, called up the bill reported from his committee to amend the railway land grant forfeiture law of Sept. 29, 1890, by inserting a substitute for section 1, greatly extending the scope of its operations. By the provisions of the new act about 54,000,000 acres of land would be forfeited and restored to the public domain. The bill was discussed, but not disposed of.

In the consideration morning hour bills were passed to repeal the act exempting public lands in Alabama from the operation of the law of 1883, relating to mineral lands, and authorizing the appointment of a commission to ballot lands in severalty to the Uncompahgre Indians on their reservation in Utah, the residue of the lands to be opened to settlement, and to negotiate with the Uintah Indians for the cession to the United States of the land in their reservation not needed for allotment in severalty.

The contested election case of Thrasher vs. Enloe, from the eighth Tennessee district, was decided in favor of the latter without a division upon the unanimous report of the committee on elections that he was entitled to his seat.

EDUCATIONAL CONVENTION.

The Annual Gathering Heavily Cut by the Strike.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., July 11.—Fully 3,000 teachers took part in the initial session of the 33d annual meeting of the National Educational association at the auditorium. The estimate attendance of 7,000 delegates has been heavily cut into by the railroad embargo in the west, it being evident from the reports that from 2,500 to 3,000 persons have been compelled to miss the pleasure of the annual gathering on account of the strike. The west and northwest is not without representation, however, and during the day several hundred, who had run the blockade after many delays and changes of route, arrived to swell the number present.

Escaped from Ellis Island.

NEW YORK, July 11. — A daring and partially successful attempt to escape was made at Ellis island at an early morning hour by 13 men detained as prisoners there until their qualifications to land in this country should have been determined. Four men got away, namely, Rasalle Civsomelli, who came on the steamer Crown Prince; Alfred Auskin, Bissel Edward Horsford and Bissel James Donassi-Connington, stowaways. All who gained their freedom or made an attempt to do so had been on the island at most but three days. Three of those who escaped were negroes.

THE TENSION RELAXED

Chicago Breathes Easier Over the Strike Situation.

Peace and Quiet Maintained by the People Throughout the City—An Effort Will Be Made To Have Members of the General Managers' Association Indicted—The Managers Contend that They Are Not the Aggressors, and Have Violated No Laws—Many Patriotic Emblems Displayed About the City.

CHICAGO, July 12.—The most important development in the labor situation during the past 24 hours is the announcement made from the headquarters of the American Railway union that a determined effort is to be made to invoke the federal laws against the members of the General Managers' association, and that, with this end in view, a conference will be had today between W. W. Irwin, of Minneapolis, the principal counsel for the men arrested for participation in the Homestead riots, and a number of local attorneys who have made the laws of the United States, relative to legal combination and conspiracy, a special study.

When Judge Grosscup was asked whether the special grand jury was empaneled simply to inquire into the offenses of the employes, or whether it was within its scope to inquire into probable violations of the law by railroad managers, he significantly replied that he had no doubt that, when the jury should have finished the particular matter it is now investigating, it would turn its attention to others who may have violated the law, and that it would so widen the scope of its inquiry as to include all persons who may have interfered with or obstructed interstate commerce or the United States mails in any way or by any means.

This reply is regarded as a diplomatic hint so framed as not to violate judicial dignity, that the grand jury has only commenced its work, and that it may consider the question as to whether or not railroad managers have committed any offenses bringing them within the pale of the statutes that have been invoked against the leaders of the strike.

It is known, moreover, that this question was very vigorously debated in the session of the grand jury that preceded the return of the true bills against Debs and his associates, and that at least two of the body vigorously insisted that George M. Pullman himself should be included in the indictment.

Counsel for the strikers, as well as Mr. Debs and his colleagues, are secretive in regard to the actual grounds upon which process will be sought against those whom they characterize as their "opponents." In a general way, however, the claim is made that the obstruction of the United States mails and the interruption to interstate commerce has been due, quite as much to the general managers as to the men responsible for the ordering of the strike, and that while it is true that the boycott was ordered, it is also true that the general managers agreed among themselves that no trains should be run on any of the roads until all had gained the points in dispute, and that, as a consequence, many roads that were inclined to deal direct with their employes and thus bring about a resumption of traffic on their own lines, were whipped into the traces.

The indictments returned Tuesday against the union men were, it is understood, based almost entirely upon the contents of certain telegrams that a telegraph company was compelled to produce, and a charge is made, and this will form a portion of the statement to be made by the federal authorities, in behalf of the arrested men, that another enforcement of a similar order will bring to light telegrams sent out by the General Managers' association, that on their face points to illegal methods, if any such methods have existed, as the dispatches which were produced before the grand jury. These are the straws, as they come from the strikers' headquarters, but which have not been embodied in an official statement. The members of the General Managers' association claim that they are willing that their every action should be thoroughly and impartially investigated. They contend that they were not the aggressors, that the fight was forced on them and not by them, and that they have done nothing more than to protect to the best of their ability the property over which they have control. They have neither violated the statutes relating to the transportation of United States mails or those governing inter-state commerce, but from beginning to end they have simply acted on the defensive with the aid and succor that has been afforded by the United States government.

Peace and quiet were maintained throughout the city. It was a welcome relief from the tension of yesterday, and especially in view of the fears that had been entertained that the general tie-up ordered by the various trades unions might result in filling the streets with sympathetic strikers and serious disorder being possibly provoked.

There were fewer white ribbons to be seen to-day and ten times as many patriotic emblems. Many banks and other institutions and buildings, not content with hoisting the stars and stripes on their roofs, decorated their ground floor fronts with monster flags.

Philadelphia's Mayor Declines.

PHILADELHHIA, July 12.—Mayor Stuart has declined to co-operate with the mayors of other cities in asking George M. Pullman to arbitrate the labor troubles, as he was requested to do by Mayor Pingree, of Detroit. The Philadelphia executive has not replied to the mayor of Detroit, and probably will not do so, because, as he stated, the subject is in no wise connected with his official duties.

Ex-Soldiers Offer Services.

CHICAGO, July 12.—James Lockwood, national commander of the Regular Army and Navy union, has sent a letter to the secretary of war tendering the services of 5,000 ex-soldiers and sailors, who have faithfully served in the army and navy of the United States, for such duty as may be necessary in the present crisis.

Refused To Handle Cars.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 12.—The switchmen on the Soo road in the yards here went out, refusing to handle the freight cars of the Northern Pacific upon order of the officials of the Soo.

PLAN OF CAMPAIGN.

A. R. U. Officials and Master Workman Sovereign Confer.

CHICAGO, July 12.—A. R. U. officials were busy yesterday conferring with Grand Master Workman Sovereign and Committeeman Kinney, of the Knights of Labor, and the local chiefs of the trades' unions. A decisive plan of campaign was mapped out, and in substance, the result of the meeting was a general and positive agreement to call out every laboring man in the city and country, if possible.

The general strike was not as complete as expected in some quarters. As has been foreshadowed in these dispatches the action of the committee attending the meeting Sunday night, while unanimous in sentiment, was not in fact, as a number of the committees have not received the proper instructions, or the actual power to strike.

Grand Master Workman Sovereign had received no official reports from the Knights of Labor assemblies of actual strikes and the majority of the messages received by him announced that meetings were to be held last night, to-night and Saturday and Sunday to take united action. Mr. Sovereign said last evening that his committee had estimated that over 500,000 men would respond to his call.

BIG FOUR FIREMEN OUT.

Refusal To Restore 1893 Wages the Cause.

CINCINNATI, O., July 12.—Every fireman on the nine divisions of the Big Four railroad has been ordered out by Chairman C. B. Odell, of the Brotherhood committee, acting on authority conferred by Chief Sargent. This action was taken on the refusal of Vice-President Schaff, of the Big Four, to grant the demand of the firemen for a restoration of 1893 wages. Odell had thought to impress on the Big Four officials the earnestness of the demand by ordering out the firemen on the Indianapolis division. This did not have the desired effect, however, hence the order affecting passenger as well as freight and yard firemen.

DISCHARGING EMPLOYES.

Wheeling & Lake Erie Retains Only Those Who Are Indispensable.

MASSILLON, O., July 12.—Orders were received at the Wheeling & Lake Erie division headquarters to pay off and discharge every man connected with the railway in any capacity whose presence is not absolutely indispensable. Of the 3,000 employes, the only ones retained are station agents, heads of departments, one despatcher, and a few operators. All business is suspended, except the movement of one daily mail train in each division. All this has been brought about by the sympathetic strike of perhaps 600 American Railway union employes.

More Men Than Needed.

CHICAGO, July 12.—The General Managers' association has quit hiring men, more men than is needed having already been employed, General Manager Egan claims, and he has wired to all points in in the United States where branch employment agencies have been established, closing them. The number of men employed by the association has reached into the thousands. It is said that the Great Western has a complete outfit of new men, all its old ones having quit work.

What Mr. Depew Thinks.

NEW YORK, July 12.—President Chauncey M. Depew says that all his advices are that the strike is completely broken and he expects to leave Saturday on his annual trip to Europe. Emissaries of the American Railway union had been at work this week among employes of the New York Central road, but they had their labor for their pains.

Striker Annesley's Funeral.

CHICAGO, July 12.—The funeral of Striker Annesley, who was hot by Deputy Marshal Sharp in the recent riot at Kensington, took place yesterday. Fully 1,500 men were in the funeral procession, and the streets were lined with friends of the dead man. Much feeling was exhibited by the crowd, but beyond that no demonstration was made.

No Open-Air Meetings in 'Frisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—Interviews with local labor leaders indicate that the organizations will go out if ordered by the Knights of Labor and American Federation. The chief of police has issued an order to allow no open-air meetings in this city during the continuance of the strike.

Determined Strikers.

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., July 12.—The strikers say no train shall pass under any circumstance. Company G, N. G. C., is under arms. The determined stand of the strikers here evidently deters the Southern Pacific company from sending trains north from Los Angeles to San Francisco.

Situation at Buffalo.

BUFFALO, July 12.—The situation in Buffalo is virtually unchanged and it is not believed that the necessary two-thirds vote to order a strike will be obtained in many of the unions. The result of President Gomper's conference is being anxiously awaited.

Miners Marching.

LASALLE, Ill., July 12.—A crowd of 1,500 miners of LaSalle, Peru and Oglesby yesterday afternoon started to march to Spring Valley, ostensibly to attend the funeral of the Italian miner killed there yesterday by the United States regulars. It is thought they have other objects in view, however, and exciting developments are looked for.

WILL NOT ARBITRATE

Pullman Stubbornly Resists All Efforts.

Rejects the Kindly Overtures of the Mayors of Fifty Leading Cities of the Country—Reiterates That the Works Lost Money for a Long Time Previous to the Strike.

CHICAGO, July 12.—The Pullman company has rejected the kindly overtures of the mayors of fifty of the leading cities of the country and still refuses to arbitrate. Mayor Hazen S. Pingree, of Detroit, accompanied by Mayor John S. Hopkins, of Chicago, and Erskine M. Phelps of the extensive boot and shoe firm of Phelps, Dodge & Palmer, of this city, called at the Pullman building. Mayor Pingree carried with him telegrams from fifty mayors calling upon the Pullman Palace Car company, in the name of peace and good citizenship, to submit its differences with its employes to arbitration and at once end the disastrous strike. There were present at the conference on behalf of the Pullman company Vice President Wickes, General Manager Brown and Chief Counsel John S. Runnells.

Mayor Pingree presented the telegrams he had received from all parts of the country, and in a manner most earnest urged that the Pullman company accede to the expressed wish of the people and at once submit all matters in question between itself and its employes to arbitration. He pointed out the disastrous conditions which had already resulted from the strike and the results which seem inevitable unless it was settled.

The officials of the company, on the other hand, denied responsibility and repeated the oft-reiterated statement that there was nothing to arbitrate. They declared that the works had for a long time previous to the strike been run at a loss and if they were again put into operation it could only be at still further loss. They declared, in conclusion, "that the question at issue was simply that of reopening the works and carrying on the business at a ruinous loss, was not a proper subject for arbitration."

The conference ended with that emphatic decision of the officers of the company and the party of peacemakers withdrew.

"I believed there were good grounds for arbitration before I sent out my telegram of inquiry to the mayors," said Mr. Pingree, "and I have seen no reason to change my mind in that matter in all that has been said to-day. I am myself a manufacturer and employ 700 hands. I have had differences with my men, but we have always been able to adjust them, and I still believe this whole matter might be settled were the proper spirit manifested."

Mayor Hopkins was completely discouraged though he had not expected the results would be different. "The matter stands just where it did before—the Pullman company will not arbitrate," he said. "There is nothing more to be said concerning this conference and there is nothing to be looked for in this direction from the Pullman company."

AS MR. PULLMAN VIEWS IT.

Supposes His Men Will Be Satisfied With Half a Loaf.

CLAYTON, N. Y., July 12.—Mr. Pullman, when questioned regarding his attitude towards arbitration, said that the Pullman company had nothing to arbitrate. He said that he supposed his men would be satisfied to take half a loaf when they could not get a whole one, and, considering the losses of the Pullman company on their contracts, he thought that would be satisfactory. Further than this, Mr. Pullman would say nothing. He expects to remain at his cottage for the time being. He seems somewhat anxious, but is taking the matter coolly. He is in communication with his manager at Chicago several times a day.

English Capitalists Beaten.

ORANGE, N. J., July 12.—Thomas Nevins, the wealthy contractor, has just concluded the purchase of the street car lines in Detroit, Mich. The contract was signed last week. Mr. Nevins had the option, which expired on July 9. English capitalists were anxious to secure the roads and induced the Mayor of Detroit to delay granting the franchise beyond the time named in the option in the hope of defeating Mr. Nevins. Mr. Nevins, however, went to Detroit last week and closed the deal.

Surprised the Other Candidates.

FALL RIVER, Mass., July 12.—Representative Walter J. D. Bullock caused a big surprise in local political circles by announcing himself a republican candidate for congress. He said he had $10,000 to prosecute his campaign and would try to win from Congressman Randall and Hon. John Simpkins.

Roberts for Governor.

BUFFALO, July 12.—Erie county formally launched James A. Roberts as a candidate for governor yesterday at a meeting of the republican general committee, representing every election district in Erie county.

Dr. Cyrus Edson, [illegible], says:

H-O Hornby's Oatmeal

VIGILANT'S FIFTH DEFEAT.

This Time She Is Beaten by the Britannia over 20 Minutes.

GLASGOW, July 12.—The fifth race between the Vigilant and the Britannia was sailed in broader waters than heretofore. It was a quadrangular course, in the Firth of Clyde, sometimes humorously termed by British yachtsmen the "Firth o. Flukes." The Britannia won easily.

The yachts finished thus: Britannia, 6:39:58; Vigilant, 7:01:19.

The Britannia won by 21 minutes and 21 seconds actual time, and 21 minutes and 21 seconds corrected time.

Britannia and Vigilant Matched.

LONDON, July 12.—The Prince of Wales and George Gould have signed an agreement for a match on Aug. 4, the loser to give the winner a cup valued at $500. Yacht Racing association rules to be observed, and both boats to be measured with their crews aboard. The race will be sailed over the royal course at Cowes.

MINERS STRIKE AGAIN.

Demand That All the Men Be Paid the Same Rate.

PHILLIPSBURG, Pa., July 12.—Several mines at which the compromise rate had been paid for a week past have suspended work, and at Wigton's Troy mine the men went on strike until all the miners have been offered the same rate.

The situation is more complex than at any time since the beginning of the suspension. Three hundred men from Munson marched to Morrisdale, where Wigton's shaft is located, and which has been running at the compromise rate, and told the men that were working that if they did not quit and stand out with them until they were offered the same price, that they would go to work at 40 cents.

Did Not Oil His Engine.

BABYLON, L. I., July 12.—Philip Brown, engineer of train No. 10 on the Long Island railroad, has been suspended for 100 days for alleged neglect of duty in failing to properly oil his engine. Brown denies that he was negligent, and claims that the engine was in bad condition when he took charge of it, and that he reported the matter to headquarters. The Brotherhood engineers of the road uphold Brown, it is said, and are trying to have him reinstated.

Chinese Go to Prison.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., July 12.—Of the six Chinamen captured some time ago, five were sentenced to serve 20 days in the Albany penitentiary and then to be deported to China. The sixth will be held until October before his trial will begin, as he turned state's evidence. An appeal will be taken in the cases of two. On behalf of one it will be argued that he is a merchant, and on behalf the other that he was born in California.

Electric Plants Short of Coal.

CHICAGO, July 12.—City Electrician Barrett says that the prospects of having to shut down the city electric light plants for lack of fuel is apparently certain. The four city plants have been burning hard coal, slabs and other kinds of fuel for the last week and Mr. Barrett thinks that supply is about exhausted.

Deputy Imbriani Jeered At.

ROME, July 12.—The chamber completed last evening the work upon the anti-anarchist bill. Deputy Imbriani, the leader of the socialist radicals, found no opportunity to speak, and in a rage strode from the hall while most of the deputies shouted derisively. Premier Crispi's final plea for the bill was greeted with cheers by an overwhelming majority of the chamber. He appealed to the deputies to give the government adequate means of defending society against its enemies.

Fertilizing Works Destroyed.

RAHWAY, N. J., July 12.—About 6:30 o'clock last evening fire was discovered in the immense fertilizing works of Williams & Clark, of Carteret. The fire was fought vigorously by the hundreds of employes who inhabit that village with buckets and the Carteret fire brigade. The total loss will foot up to $500,000.

Predicts Yale Will Be Victorious.

LONDON, July 12.—The Sportsman of this morning predicts that the Yale athletes will be victorious in the contests of July 16. Among the guests at the dinner after the games will be the Maharajah of Cutch Behar, Consul General Collins, W. W. Astor, Lord Chief Justice Russell and George Gould.

SOLDIERS SACRIFICED

Trapped Near Sacramento by Train Wreckers.

The Engineer and Three Privates Buried Beneath the Engine in a Ditch—Another Private's Arm Torn from Its Socket—Strikers Deny Responsibility for the Wreck.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 12.—The Southern Pacific company has broken the blockade at Sacramento, but the engine that hauled the first train out lies on its back in a slough by the side of a broken bridge with three of the cars that composed the train.

Under the wreck in ooze and slime of stagnant water lie the bodies of the engineer who held the throttle and three soldiers who were guarding him. The dead are:

Engineer Samuel Clark.
Private Byrne.
Private Lubberden.
Private Clarke.

Three men were injured and one of them will almost surely die. This is Wesley Dugan, also a private in Battery L, of the Fifth artillery. He was on the tender of the engine and was thrown to the shore of the slough. One of his arms was torn from its socket and broken in three places and his jaw was broken.

The wreck of the train was accomplished by means of a loosened rail. Fish-plates were removed, spikes drawn and bolts taken out. The rail was left in place and there was nothing to show the engineer, who was running his train slowly and cautiously, that there was anything wrong with the track ahead of him. When the wheels struck the loose rail it sent the ponderous engine into ties. The cars followed and the whole forward end of the train plunged into the muddy water.

The trestle is a complete wreck. The rails are bent like a shepherd's crook and the ties are ground to toothpicks. The locomotive turned a complete somersault.

The scence of the wreck is a little over two miles from Sacramento. It was well selected for disaster. The loosened rail was just at the end of the bridge and the momentum of the heavy train could not fail to hurl a great part of it into destruction. The effect of the outrage has been to make the soldiers desperately bitter against the strikers, where they would have fired with reluctance they will now shoot with actual pleasure. Their feeling is shared by the militia and it is almost a certain thing that the lives of other men will pay for those of the three soldiers. The soldiers have already captured two strikers who are suspected of knowing how the rail came to be displaced. The cavalry brought the men in and they were placed under guard at the depot for some hours before they were turned over to the United States marshal.

The catastrophe came without any warning. The soldiers had cleared the depot without a particle of trouble, and, except for the riot, some desultory firing at long range between the militia and the strikers in the early morning, there was no sign of violence or opposition. The railroad people were already congratulating themselves on the successful breaking of the blockade, and the soldiers were shaking hands over the bloodless campaign, when the awful news came. It was discredited at first, but presently a messenger arrived from the wreck with a note from the conductor telling of the horror. A wrecking train, with army surgeons on board, was hurried to the scene, but there was little that they could do. They brought the wounded to the military hospital established in the waiting room of the depot and replaced their rough field bandages with more elaborate dressing.

The despatch of the cavalry to the scene, to find, if possible, the guilty parties, followed, and in a very short time these soldiers were back with prisoners.

Strikers deny responsibility for the disaster. Their leaders have expressed horror at it, and hope that it would be the last act of violence in the strike. They say that they cautioned their men not to oppose the law, and to avoid violence of every sort. They say they have posted guards and taken many precautions to prevent such work by the people, but all this has not softened the temper of the soldiers.

Passenger and Freight Collide.

ST. LOUIS, July 12.—An outgoing freight train on the Big Four last night stopped at a junction a few miles out of East St. Louis. Passenger train No. 42, east bound on the Wabash, ran into the rear of the freight train, demolishing several cars. A freight brakeman, known only as John, was instantly killed, and A. J. Fuller, of Toronto, Canada, a passenger, was seriously injured. The freight crew were new men and no light was placed on the rear of the train. The Wabash was delayed one hour.

Teachers' Association Officers.

SARATOGA, N. Y., July 12.—Before adjourning their annual convention the New York State Teachers' association elected the following officers: Edward N. Jones, Plattsburgh, president; Emmet Belknap, Lockport, Thomas R. Knell, Saratoga; Anna Downing, New York; Gratia L. Rice, Buffalo, vice-presidents. Welland Hendrick, Courtland, and C. H. Van Tuyle, Hamilton, secretaries. Percy I. Bugbee, Gneonta, treasurer.

A Millionaire Commits Suicide.

CHICAGO, July 12.—P. C. Hanford, second vice-president of the Linseed Oil trust, and popularly supposed to have been several times a millionaire, committed suicide in his apartments at the hotel Metropole, 29th street and Michigan avenue. Despondency, caused by worry over financial matters, is given as the cause impelling him to take his own life.

A Young Duelist Killed.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 12.—James Spears and Howard Rainwater, aged 17 and 19 years respectively, fought a duel in the woods near Liberty. The trouble grew out of rivalry for the affections of a young woman. Rainwater was killed and Spears locked up. Both young fellows had been drinking.

CIRCULATION EXCEEDS THAT OF ALL OTHER PLAINFIELD DAILIES COMBINED.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., JULY 12, 1894

"One of the prettiest and most prosperous towns in New Jersey"—that's the description of Plainfield read by all Philadelphia in the columns of The Inquirer of that city. It paid to have that excursion come to Plainfield. You haven't begun to hear the reports yet; they'll be world-wide and full of praise. Plainfield is like The Press, "Always ahead and on the go".

The orders for the Editorial Souvenir Edition of The Daily Press continue to come in, and copies are freely sent by appreciative citizens to friends at a distance. This is an easy method of making people everywhere acquainted with Plainfield's charms. Order early, as the supply is now limited. Two cents secures a copy, and there is no charge for mailing to any address.

The publication of the Laws of New Jersey is completed by The Constitutionalist this week. The publisher adopted the plan of giving the laws entire in two issues, this being an especial convenience for those who wish to preserve them. Local lawyers have complimented The Constitutionalist on the form, and have found them easiest kept and best for ready reference as published thus. The plan of scattering them in small batches through many issues is condemned by those interested in the laws.

The new directory of New York city contains 387,411 names. On a basis of 5 to 1, which is believed to be a fair ratio, the metropolis contains 1,937,065 inhabitants who transact business on 41 square miles. The Chicago directory gives the inhabitants of 185 square miles. The publishers of the New York directory estimate that 185 square miles, with Central Park as a centre, would include over 4,000,000 persons. The pretensions of Chicago to close rivalry with New York are upset, when the region naturally and closely tributary to New York is considered in the count.

Suppose a Front street storekeeper had trouble with his delivery wagon drivers, and suppose they quit work. Add to this that all his employes went out in sympathy with them; then that the clerks of all the Front street grocers followed suit; then that the employes of every merchant in the city quit work to help along the cause, and then after this, when all business had ceased, the clerks and drivers and other employes began to burn down the stores and to endanger the lives of all who came along expecting to buy goods. What would Plainfield people think of this situation? And yet is n't it perfectly analagous to that of the Western States?

The arts printorial are faithfully served in the new form of Paper and Press, published by Wm. M Patton at 1414 South Penn square, Philadelphia. This has long been a popular periodical among the printing trade, and now it is issued in handy magazine form, with features that commend it to all who love handsome printing and beautiful illustrations, besides valuable information of what is new in the publishing, printing, writing, and illustrating world. All of these things Paper and Press contains. The cost to subscribers is only 15 cents a copy, or $1 a year. Paper and Press is a bureau of information to the trade, and a pleasure to all who turn its handsome pages.

Turning from the strikers and their allies, who certainly number less than a million, to the other seventy millions of the people of the United States, one finds an encouraging disposition to give hearty support to the President in the preservation of peace and the enforcement of law. Senator Peffer sought to give aid and comfort to the common enemy yesterday, but was rebuked by both Democrats and Republicans. Men of all parties patriotically support President Cleveland, and, if necessity should require it, will rally to his support as they did to the support of Lincoln in 1861.

There is continued talk of arbitration to settle the difficulty, but it is mainly by the followers of Debs, who would be very glad to get something to show for their reckless assault upon the public and their sacrifices of life and property. But even the consideration of arbitration should be postponed until the strikers and their sympathizers in all parts of the Union have been reduced to obedience to the law. The deluded followers of Debs and Sovereign have given up work pending a settlement of the Pullman strike. Nobody is trying to force them to work. They can remain out indefinitely, so long as they do not interfere with other men who have the same rights as themselves. Not until the railroads from Maine to California are free to run trains with such help as they may procure will the time come to treat with these sympathetic strikers, who have no grievances of their own, but are seeking to coerce the Pullman Company by inflicting distress upon the people of the whole country and loss upon the railroad companies and the counties and States where property may be destroyed. Submission in the smallest degree to such a boycott would invite others, even more troublesome and dangerous.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Always Up to Date.

(From The Asbury Park Daily Journal.)

H. P. Baldwin, General Passenger Agent of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, is another prominent railroad man attracted to Asbury Park by the Educational Convention. He made the Coleman House his stopping place.

—Everybody praises F. A. Dunham's Atlas of Plainfield, recently published. It shows at a glance the location of every home, store, fire hydrant, and point of interest in city and borough, and The Press finds it a valuable aid in its everyday work. Charles Potter sent Mr. Dunham a check for the Atlas, and wrote across the check "Atlas good thing".

THE BROKEN RAILWAY STRIKE

FAILURE OF THE ATTEMPTED TIE-UP AT TOLEDO.

Passenger and Freight Trains Moving on All Trunk Lines—No Strike on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul—Men Returning to Work.

[Special to The Press.]

TOLEDO, O., July 12—The strike situation here is decidedly improved. All the trunk-line roads are moving through freight without interruption. Some are getting out local freight irregularly. The Lake Shore has a full complement of non-union men, and is moving all freights without difficulty, and has cleared out all accumulation of cars in its yards. The Wheeling and Lake Erie is at a standstill, having discharged its men, and has yet made no movement to resume freight business. There has not been the slightest interruption to passenger traffic for several days, and it is believed that there will be no more serious trouble here.

The Michigan Central yardmen, who were expected to strike this morning, decided not to do so, and are all at work. The eight yardmen of the Clover Leaf who went out yesterday morning were notified last night to report for duty this morning, or their places would be filled by outsiders. Two went to work, and the others are expected to follow. That road sent out two freight trains, and expects no further trouble.

CHICAGO, July 12—The report that the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway men decided, last night, to strike is emphatically denied by officials of the road today. General Manager Farling says that the who had been on strike have returned to work, and that the road is running its trains without interference.

The engineers and firemen have begun to regard their strike as lost.

A STRIKE LEADER ARRESTED.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

CHICAGO, July 12—George W. Lovejoy of La Salle, Ill., a prominent member of the American Railway Union, was arrested last night for intimidating John T. Campbell, a telegraph operator.

The railroad companies are refusing to discharge non-union men for the sake of strikers willing to return to work.

Justice Barrett Has Issued a Certificate for an Appeal.

(Special to The Press.)

NEW YORK, July 12.—Judge Barrett of the Supreme Court this morning granted a certificate of reasonable doubt in the case of Erastus Wiman. Judge Barrett says that all question as to whether the indorsement was made with intent to defraud Bullinger or to defraud Wiman's own bank, were substantially excluded from the consideration of the jury.

Under the certificate which is now granted by Judge Barrett an application will undoubtedly be made for the release of Wiman on bail pending the appeal and its determination by the General Term of the Supreme Court.

BEAUTY PILLOWS.

They May Be Filled With Rose Leaves, Violets or Pine Needles.

It is now the fad to have a beauty pillow, as it is called, which is a euphemism for something very hard and uncomfortable for the head to rest upon at night. The soft reposeful feather pillows which have hitherto been the confidants of our midnight meditations are to be cast aside as deleterious—too sympathetic possibly—and their place is to be taken by a stony hearted article distended with rose leaves, violets, pine needles or some other stuffing poetically suggestive, theoretically healthful and practically so hard that that proverbial head that wears a crown could rest no more uneasily than does that of the simple republican faddist.

Vegetation is not the only filling recommended for these new beautifiers." Somebody has lately advised the use of paper torn into tiny fragments. But it would seem that discrimination should be exercised in the selection of material for this sort of stuffing. A pillow full of unpaid bills, rejected manuscripts or outgrown love letters might be a fruitful source of restlessness and nightmare, while, on the other hand, one with an agreeable and soothing table of contents would be calculated to allay mental disturbance and induce slumber. A woman inclined to melancholia might be cured by sleeping on a cushion stuffed with the best jokes that can be cut from the newspapers and funny publications; insomnia might be warded off by old sermons torn very small indeed; a too volatile and frivolous spirit could be curbed by a pillowful of death and funeral notices—in fact, there is no limit to psychological possibilities in this direction, and the experiment is certainly worth trying. While we are making up our minds just what sort of a pillow is best suited to our particular case we can use one stuffed with curled hair if feathers and down are too warm.

The sketch given shows a moire and taffeta gown. The first skirt of moire has an application of pointed guipure around the bottom. The second skirt is of taffeta draped at the side. The full pointed bodice of taffeta has moire revers covered with guipure and decorated with pendent ends of moire. The balloon sleeves, also of taffeta, have guipure cuffs.

GRANDMOTHER'S TRUNK.

If It Contains a Brocade Gown, You Have a Treasure.

Some women are fortunate enough to have a grandmother's trunk in the garret. Perhaps it is covered with hide and decorated with brass headed nails, or it may be a stout wooden chest made when work was done to last. But, whatever the outside may be, the inside is sure to be rich with the treasures of a past generation, so old fashioned that they are now new fashioned and may be brought forth and remodeled to fit the dainty lady of today, who cannot realize that the woman who originally wore them was then as fresh and blooming as her granddaughter now is.

The flowered nainsooks and muslins of 50 years ago are considered eminently fashionable this season. They are almost sure to be fine in texture, and although tender with age, if they are made up over a silk foundation, which will bear the brunt of wear, they will be found still serviceable. Panniers are quite permissible this year.

Perhaps grandmother's trunk contains an old brocade gown. If so, it is a treasure indeed, for it will make a beautiful court coat full skirted and with wide revers opening over a ruffled vest. If there is not enough of the brocade to make both body and sleeves of the coat in these days of inordinate arm drapery, let the sleeves be of plain goods harmonizing with the color of the brocade. If the latter has a black background with pink flowers, the sleeves may be of pink satin covered with black lace. A large cuff and a lace frill at the wrist are the appropriate finish.

A sketch is given of a Louis Quinze gown of sky blue taffeta, with blue and chestnut brown flowers. The bottom of the plain skirt is trimmed with white lace arranged in coquilles. The corsage crosses surplice fashion back and front over a plastron of the silk. It is trimmed with white lace, and the belt is covered with lace. The round panniers terminate at the back under a short silk drapery forming coquilles. The draped sleeves extend only to the elbow and are finished with a frill of lace. The white straw hat is trimmed with black moire and forgetmenots.

HOME TESTIMONY.

Mr. Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.
TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly. They were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 144 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOS. CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.
TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact, it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

Fanwood.

Col. C. K. Moore left this morning for the State encampment at Sea Girt to remain with his regiment until July 21.

Those stones placed on North avenue just east of Terrill road break up the exercising of the trotters. Mr. Force cannot understand why the only good road for speeding should be so impaired.

It is understood that a question as to legality of the present Township Committee was recently raised and appeal made to the Post-office department to ascertain whether a government officer could hold office as a township trustee. The reply was that he could not, and it is a question whether the acts of the present committee are legal, Abner P. Downer being a member of that committee and Postmaster also.

Under the new law relating to school trustees, this township is to elect nine members of the board July 24. Very few realize the importance of this election. It is to be hoped that every person entitled to vote will make it a point to see that other business be laid aside for the limit of time necessary to cast his ballot and that only representative men be balloted for. Under the present board and largely through the influence of such men as David P. Hall, Thos. J. Nichol, A. D. Shepard and Dr. Westcott the schools in this township have attained a standing second, in fact, to those of very few in the State. The fact of a greater number of members in the new board than ever before makes the duty of each tax-payer greater to guard against the election of those not in accord with progressive American ideas.

WEST END NOTES.

Fred Bowden is welcomed back to the West End.

The Misses Casper of Newark are visiting friends and relatives in the West End.

Mrs. Frank McCleery of New York is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Cose of 225 Grant avenue.

Alvah Hoffman has returned home after spending a few weeks with friends and relatives in Califon.

A strong base-ball team is being made up, and will be ready soon. The first game will be with the Crescents.

Miss Mamie Cody and Miss Lizzie Clifton of Worcester after spending a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. John Ardern of Manson place have returned home.

Refined Restaurant.

As tempting a place for refreshment as any of New York's restaurants is the newly-fitted place of Max Wiertz, at 544 West Front street. Mr. Wiertz established his reputation as steward of the Union County Country Club, and those who desire a choice dinner or who want to entertain their friends in the highest style of the caterer's art should give Mr. Wiertz their orders. Mr. Wiertz's restaurant can be secured for the exclusive use of a large party, and orders for catering in privare homes will receive prompt attention. The new wagon of the establishment will be ready in a short time. The restaurant is equipped in the elegant style to be expected of Mr. Wiertz, and is sumptuous with fine linen, silver, glass and china-ware. The cook is a high priced man of wide experience, and the service is in every way all that the fastidious can desire. It is an institution that Plainfield has not yet had, and one that it should support.

CHURCH CHIMES.

The Asbury Park daily papers charge 5 cents a line for the regular Sunday notices. The Plainfield papers insert them free.

The Mt. Zion camp-meeting will commence in Vail's Grove, July 21, with more improvements for the accommodation of its patrons than ever before.

The Mystic Mirror, published by Rev. F. G. Warnick, formerly of Plainfield, is a steady arrival from Matawan, and is interesting. The July issue has eight pages, and is printed in red.

Commencing with tonight, there will be held a series of meetings in the East Third Street Mission, every Thursday night at 8. The local pastors will speak. Rev D. J. Yerkes, D. D., will take charge of tonight's services.

Roton Point is a new resort for Plainfield excursionists, and a delightful place. Those who are fond of a fine trip on the water and a pleasant day on the shore should join the Grace M. E. party next Tuesday. The train leaves Plainfield at 7:45, and the fare is $1 25. Children can go for 90 cents.

An accidental juxtaposition of facts resulted in the appearance of a laughable paragraph in a recent issue of the Brooklyn Times, under the heading of church news:

The Rev. Dr. Crowder of Rockville Centre M. E. Church, will exchange pulpits tomorrow morning with the Rev. Mr. Hudson of the Baptist Church. In the evening Dr. Crowder will occupy his own pulpit, taking for his subject, "Behold I Have Played the Fool".

Holy Cross Brotherhood's new, cosy room in the Parish Building was formally opened at the regular monthly meeting last evening, when a goodly number of members made themselves at home in the bright and cheery apartment. The new room has been most tastefully arranged for the purpose and will prove a great addition to the many attractions of the growing organization. Games and musical instruments as well as a library of books, magazines and papers, go to make the pretty club-room a thing to be proud of. The members were given keys to the room, which will always be open to them for a meeting place for social enjoyment and pleasant intercourse.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck gave credit to The Press in a recent sermon, for the local church statistics. "Why,"—said he,—"I learn from The Press that we have over thirty meeting-places in Plainfield! It astounds me." He went on to praise The Press for the information it had given, and thanked the papers of Plainfield, in the name of the church, for the good work they all did in giving up to the churches each week so much space, free of cost, for regular Sunday announcements and editorial paragraphs. He said the newspapers of Plainfield were material coworkers with the Church, in doing so much to interest the public in the services and in striving to secure large attendances.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Cyclers training on the Crescent track find the riding rough.

Harper's Bazar for this week tells how a woman should ride a bicycle. It is full of pointers.

A colored hostler, learning to ride a wheel, collided with another cycle on Park avenue near Sixth street this morning. The colored man's wheel was damaged in the crash.

Beginning tomorrow in the Asbury Park races, A. H. Barnett will be a Class B rider. He leaves the stricter class of amateurs because of the way in which he has been handicapped since he won the Irvington-Millburn.

Mr. and Mrs. James G. Voorhies of Madison avenue rode on their wheels yesterday over the loop of the century route on which the Atalanta Wheelmen's race will be run Saturday. They found the roads bad, especially in the neighborhood of Neshanic and Princeton. The principal racing will have to be done between Newark and Plainfield and New Brunswick and Newark.

The Elizabeth Journal says: "Barnett will ride in the two-mile handicap at Asbury Park on Friday, Class B. As soon as he accepted Spalding's offer to ride on that team, Abe at once informed Chairman Raymond of the fact. A nice reply, complimenting the Jersey rider for his honesty, is now in Barnett's possession. Barnett is known to be one of the whitest, most honest bicycle riders that ever entered a race."

The members of the Plainfield Lady Cyclers have shown familiar acquaintance with the divine muse in the tastfeul little book of songs just issued by them through the Daily Press print. The dainty volume contains original verse composed by the various members of the club, and these are set to familiar music. They are clever and witty, and at times full of sentiment. The various local allusions will be especially appreciated.

Wild West in Town.

Westervelt avenue boys have become imbued with the Wild West idea, and a large gang of them last evening had great sport in lassoing, dragging, and burning at the stake, victims of their fancy. Two fights resulted, from the boys not being able to keep their temper over the rough play, and while one boy sat down to nurse a bleeding nose another sought parental protection in front of his father's front gate. After the excitement they all gathered under an electric light and discussed their adventures. There's nothing like being a boy.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

CLEVELAND, O., July 12.—Cleveland was gaily dressed in yellow and white, and red, white and blue yesterday when the delegates to the big Christian Endeavor convention began arriving in force. Nearly every store, shop and other business establishment in the down-town district was profusely decorated, either upon the outer walls or in the windows, the effect being beautiful and inspiring.

At the railroad stations and steamship wharves the members of the reception committee were to be found at break of day, and they continued at their stations until relieved by others on like missions. The scare on account of the strike interfering with the plans of intending visitors has blown over to some extent, and while the attendance will be cut down to a considerable extent, still the convention will be a very large one. Big delegations came from Detroit, Toledo and Buffalo by boat, and every train was crowded. Besides these, a number of specials came in bearing visitors from points east, west and south. To-day it is estimated that from 15,000 to 20,000 have arrived.

Harper's Weekly gives the following interesting statistics:

Christian Endeavor has had a marvelous growth it its fourteen years. It has passed the "big boy" period, and is far on the way to matured manhood. Its progress is indicated in the following statistics:

MEMBERSHIP OF THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

	Societies.	Members.
In 1881	1	48
In 1882	7	481
In 1883	56	2,870
In 1884	156	8,905
In 1885	253	10,964
In 1886	850	50,000
In 1887	2,314	140,000
In 1888	4,879	310,000
In 1889	7,672	485,000
In 1890	11,013	660,000
In 1891	16,274	1,008,980
In 1892	21,080	1,372,200
In 1893	26,284	1,577,040
In 1894 (on record January 1)	28,741	1,734,460

To this may be justly added kindred denominational organizations of young people that have sprung from the Christian Endeavor idea. The most notable of these is the Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal churches, with nearly a million members. The Christian Endeavor movement has reached most of the Protestant churches. Twenty-five denominational conferences have been arranged for at Cleveland. The pastor's study has widened, and the world is welcoming the Christian Endeavor Society. President Clark, in a recent tour of the world, found a Christian Endeavor welcome and a Mizpah benediction in every land.

At the business meeting of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church Christian Endeavor Society held last evening it was decided that the society should do its share in raising the money for the drinking fountain which the local union will erect at the corner of Somerset and East Front street.

An Unusual Opportunity.

The enterprising Newark dry goods firm of L. Bamberger & Co., are at present engaged in the disposal of their remaining Spring and Summer stock at such low prices that it is almost wasteful extravagance not to purchase there while the sale is in progress. The goods are all new, having been bought by them within the past month, and the only reason for this sale and the extraordinary bargains it contains is that it is contrary to the policy of the firm to carry goods from season to season, and rather than do so they have marked many of them to less than cost. Their establishment, well named "the always busy store", has been thronged since the sale began. It is an unusual opportunity to supply present and future wants that should not be permitted to escape.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

THE SCHOOL BANK.

It Inculcates Habits of Saving and Teaches the Value of Money.

In no other way can the habits of thrift and economy be so well instilled in the youthful mind as by means of the banking system as it is practiced in many of the most progressive public schools. Ordinarily deposits of from a cent up are received by the teacher upon the morning of a certain day each week, and pupils may draw money upon that day by giving previous notice. Every child is furnished with a bankbook, in which are printed regulations. Checks, receipts and deposit slips are also given by the board of education, and every scholar above the infant grade is required to fill out all blanks necessary in the transaction of business. This is done not only for the practical ideas it gives the pupil, but as a protection to the system. The money received each week is placed in a local national bank, which, for the honor of being the custodian of the children's funds, is always ready to pay legal interest and allow it to be computed semiannually.

Thus each succeeding six months the bankbooks are written up and the earnings added. Exuberant expectation is shown in the proceeding from the tot with a dollar to her credit to the youthful Crœsus who has ten. Girls as well as boys vie with each other as to their holdings, and ample appreciation is evinced of the earning power of money as the interest rapidly compounds itself to the respectable proportions of the principal.

But an hour of the school week is given to the business of the banking department, and when are taken into consideration the benefits derived to the child in after life by thus early inculcating the principles of saving and of the value of the currency of the land it must be allowed that no other hour is likely to be more profitable in results. A child taught that of its earnings or gratuities at least one-half must be saved will never want for the necessities of life and perchance may be able to indulge in some of its luxuries.

A Sanitary Hint.

A practice which is quite common, and which might be a great factor in spreading disease, is the custom of carrying caskets of small children in carriages to avoid the expense of hearse hire. This should be forbidden by law. Suppose, for instance, that a carriage is called in the morning to carry a casket of a child that has died of scarlet fever. After the funeral the carriage goes back to the stable and perhaps in a half hour is called out by some one. The vehicle cannot help being so full of germs that the innocent people who use it for some time afterward are exposed to the disease. All caskets should be carried in hearses.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A NOBLE GIFT

PLACED IN A DAUGHTER'S HANDS

In Order That a Life's Work May Be Perpetuated.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

It was an eventful day.

One of the noblest women of the age felt the weight of years upon her.

Her whole life had been given to one grand work, and her name was known throughout the civilized world.

Before her was a younger woman, and they were seated in the great "record room," where were stored many women's stories of sorrow and joy.

Letters by the thousands, together with great books of record, containing the important points of advice and treatment in special cases, were all about them.

The elder woman turned over the leaves and read:—

"I was sorely afflicted with chronic inflammation of the womb . . . . I am now well."

Turning over another page she read:—

"They said I was consumptive, and sent me away . . . But you opened my eyes to the truth, and through you I am well."

Another page and:—

". . . Your remedy came to me with hope, then the truth dawned upon me. You saved my life, and I bless you continually."

Then the book was closed and placed in the hands of the younger woman.

"These are the records of my victories over the peculiar diseases of women. They give the history of each case, and how it was treated.

"I am growing old. Some day I must give up the effort, and I bequeath to you my life work for the physical salvation of women. Carry it forward that all may be cured."

The elder woman was Lydia E. Pinkham. The younger was her daughter, Mrs. Charles H. Pinkham, the one woman fully equipped to carry out the requirements of this noble legacy, not only by natural endowments, but from her knowledge through constant study and years of experience in assisting her mother in her voluminous correspondence and personal treatment of woman's diseases.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will redeem women from the fearful consequences of all diseases of the womb. All druggists have it for you.

DOINGS IN CONGRESS

Pension Bill Passed by the Senate.

Appropriates a Round $150,000,000—Discussion Over the Bill Was Short—Mr. McRae's Land Forfeiture Bill Passed by House—Scope of Present Law Increased.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Three of the annual appropriation bills were passed by the Senate yesterday, practically without discussion and with little more consumption of time than of that occupied by the clerk in reading them. They were the diplomatic and consular, the invalid pension and the military academy bills. The pension bill appropriated a round $150,000,000. If the senate had not been in an exceptionally indolent or tolerant disposition perhaps the result of the great strain to which it was subjected during the long and exhausting tariff struggle it might have discussed such a bill for a couple of days. But the only discussion the bill evoked was the delivery of two short speeches by Senators Cullom (rep., Ill.) and Gallinger (rep., N. H.) in criticism of the democratic administration of the pension office, and a sharp reply to them by Mr. Palmer (dem., Ill.). Even the debate on Senator Peffer's (pop., Kan.) resolution declaratory of populistic ideas about the government control of railroads and kindred subjects, and on Senator Daniel's (dem., Va.) substitute for it, endorsing and commending the course of the president and the administration in dealing with the great railroad strike, was short and free from any exciting incidents. Mr. Daniel proposed an addition to his substitute declaring the adhesion of the senate to the principle of arbitration and its condemnation of the refusal to arbitrate given by one of the parties to the struggle, meaning the Pullman Palace Car company. This proposition met such warm opposition and resistance from the republican side of the chamber, which wished action confined to an endorsement of the executive, that Mr. Daniel withdrew it, and even modified the resolution which he had offered on Tuesday, so that it simply endorses the prompt and vigorous measures adopted to repel and repulse the interference of lawless men with the due process of the laws of the United States, with the transportation of the mails, and with commerce, and declares that the action of the president and his administration has the full sympathy and support of the law-abiding masses of the people and will be supported by all the departments of the government and by the resources of the entire nation.

The senate adjourned at 5:15.

House of Representatives.

Acting under the operation of an order reported from the committee on rules, the house, after two days' debate, passed the bill introduced by Mr. McRae (dem., Ark.) to amend the act of Sept. 29, 1890, providing for the forfeiture of certain railroad land grants. The new measure increases the scope of the present law by including 54,000,000 acres of land within its operations. An effort was made by Mr. Hartman (rep., Mont.) to except from the operations of the bill lands sold by the railroad companies to bona fide settlers for value, but this was defeated—yeas, 26; nays, 113.

By unanimous consent, in the morning hour, bills were passed granting right of way to the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railroad company through the White Earth, Beech Lake, Chippewa and Fond du Lac reservations in Minnesota, and granting an American register to the schooner barge Astoria.

Senate amendments were agreed to on the bill dividing the southern judicial district of Mississippi into two districts, and providing for holding a term of court at Meridian.

Pottery Strike Compromised.

TRENTON, N. J., July 12.—News has just been received here from Washington of the settlement of the pottery strike, which has been in progress in this city since last January. Committees representing the manufacturers, the operatives and the local board of trade went to Washington to confer with Senator Smith, who has been trying to arbitrate the difficulty, and the result of the discussion was a compromise settlement, the operatives agreeing to a 12 1-2 per cent. reduction. The manufacturers, up to this time, have been insisting upon a 20 per cent. reduction.

Gold Exports Begun Again.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Gold exports, after a cessation of a week, have begun again, $700,000 being engaged in New York for shipment to-day. Of this amount $600,000 goes to Europe and $100,000 to Canada. Of the gold taken out $250,000 is of recent coinage, or new gold, and commercially more desirable than the gold that has heretofore been shipped. This means that all the gold held at New York has been withdrawn and the new coinage has to be drawn on to supply foreign demand.

New Companies Incorporated.

ALBANY, July 12.—The following companies have been incorporated with the secretary of state: The Brooklyn Gas and Electric company, to furnish gas and electricity for public and private purposes in Brooklyn; capital, $10,000. The W. P. Holbert Lumber company, to manufacture and deal in lumber and building materials in Binghamton; capital, $10,500. The Elma Natural Gas company, to supply natural gas in Elma, Erie county; capital, $15,000.

Col. Washington Dead.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Col. Thornton A. Washington is dead, in this city, at the residence of his daughter, Miss Lee Washington. He was a great-grandson of Col. Samuel Washington, the oldest brother of the illustrious first president of the United States. Col. Washington served under Gen. Lee during the civil war and of late years has been employed in the general land office.

Spring Lake Church Burned.

Women Students at Cambridge.

The entries from Girton and Newnham colleges for the various tripos examinations at Cambridge this year show a steady increase. Over 80 students have within the last three weeks submitted themselves to the test which secures for a man his degree in honors, whereas all that a woman has to show for the same work is a "parchment fair of gracious seeming"—a document which, however, does not imply any university standing. With the results of the last few years before us, does it not seem strange that women should still be debarred from receiving that recognition of their work which would be fair to them, and which would also be more easily understood by those less closely connected with the university? So far the results are known in two cases only, and they point to the same story of good work with which those acquainted with the colleges and with the class lists are now so familiar.—London Queen.

Breakfast Bacon In England.

As to cooking bacon, most people find frying the most handy method of serving bacon in small quantities. It will not do, though, to thrust the pan on the stove and leave the bacon to cook itself. Some care is necessary, as, like other things, all bacon does not behave in the same way, and a slice of lean needs to be turned over on to a fatter part to keep it from getting too dry, while another rasher cooks more quickly than the rest, so without care the rashers will not cook evenly. In doing small quantities it is well to put a little bacon fat in the pan. Save it each day when frying, pouring it in a jar to keep it. This plan preserves the meat from hardening.

Some of the best cooked bacon I ever saw was served daily among other breakfast dishes. The rashers were cut with mathematical precision and laid in a large baking tin, overlapping each other, so that each strip of lean was on the fat of the rasher underneath. The tin was then placed in the oven and left till the meat was cooked. The bacon never varied in appearance, the lean being beautifully tender and the fat cooked through, but not chippy. Every stranger always asked how the bacon was cooked and why it never looked done too little or too much.

Boiled bacon goes further than fried, and a dainty little bit is the end of the loin when it is rather lean. A piece weighing 2½ pounds makes a nice piece for a small family and should be boiled, with the rind peeled off and the fat crumbed as a ham. This, when cut off a piece of good Wiltshire, is a great delicacy and to be recommended when a ham proves too large.—London Queen.

New Bows.

A little bowknot perched high in the hair, with straight, spiked ends, is an addition to the coiffure now much affected. Some new bows are seen on children's hats. They are tight, stiff bows, made of 2 inch ribbon, with very short loops and as short ends, and are fastened at the end of a 3 inch wire, which is then coiled round with ribbon to conceal it. These tiny bows, nodding quite above the hat at the top of their stems give a very smart effect.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.

Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make Is True.

To those who do not already know this there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

DR. STARKWEATHER.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays 4 to 6 p. m.

Those living at a distance can consult the Doctor by letter.

QUIET NOW PREVAILS

Labor Troubles at Chicago Seem To Be Nearly at an End.

General Manager Egan Considers the Strike Over—At A. R. U. Headquarters, However, There Is No Falling Off in Enthusiasm or in Claims of Ultimate Victory—It Is Said that About 20,000 Members of Trades Organizations Responded to the Order To Strike.

CHICAGO, July 13.—It is the opinion of careful and conservative observers that the labor troubles, so far as Chicago and its vicinity are concerned, are dying by inches. There may be a few more manifestations of their continued existence in the form of minor walk-outs and similar demonstrations, but these will be but the sparks that precede final dissolution.

The railroad managers were especially elated. Reports from every quarter showed that men by the thousand, strikers as well as those unemployed, by no fault or action of their own, were applying for work, and that business of all kinds was being resumed as rapidly as could be expected under the circumstances. Some of the roads that have been most directly affected posted notices in their down town ticket offices to the effect that they were prepared to receive freight and to forward it with reasonable promptness. At the same time they gave it out that the commercial community could not expect normal conditions to be resumed in a day or even in a week.

As General Manager Egan put it, the railroads are in the position of a merchant whose place of business had been burned down. The building is commenced almost before the ruins are cold, but the reconstruction takes time and even when he is ready to begin business again, it takes some little time for the public to become accustomed to the new order of things. So with the railroads. They have plenty of help to take care of traffic now offering, and as this traffic increases they will need more men, and they will be able to get, even if they have not already, as many men as will be needed at high tide conditions. To put it in the concise words of Mr. Egan: "We consider the strike over, although it would be folly to assume that the effects of the trouble can be effaced in a single day or night."

At the headquarters of the American Railway union, however, there was no falling off in the enthusiasm or in the claims of ultimate victory that has been manifested since the boycott was declared. The officers insisted that the strikers were standing firm, that their position was being even reinforced by tens of thousands of men of every trade who, while having no direct interest in the outcome, were determined to manifest their sympathy in the strongest possible manner and that such a thing as a stampede was out of the question.

The reports received from the officers of the various local trade organizations placed the number of men that had gone out in response to the call, at 15,000 to 20,000, but at the same time no authenticated figures were produced to justify the claim. The officers and directors of the union held a brief confesence during the afternoon with W. W. Erwin, who has been retained as special counsel, but no definite line of policy either in regard to the threatened prosecution of the railway managers of the defense of the officers and others arrested under the indictments found by the federal grand jury was mapped out. The questions involved will be further discussed to-day.

Everything was quiet throughout the city yesterday except at the stock yards, where a few hundred striking butchers attacked an incoming train of cattle and by tampering with a switch derailed the engine. Two companies of militia were brought to the scene in quick time and the mob was just as quick in scattering.

Several heavy trains were sent in and out during the day. Of the 5,000 butchers in the yards less than 500 went out in compliance with the appeal of Grand Master Workman Sovereign, the remainder continuing at work.

The federal grand jury examined a large number of witnesses concerning the sayings and doings of the officers and directors of the railway union. Some of these were newspaper reporters and were asked to testify concerning the accuracy of interviews with President Debs and Vice-President Howard that had been printed in their papers. In one case a reporter declined to affirm an interview which he had written, on the ground that it had been mangled by the blue pencil of the copy reader, while two others refused to respond to the interrogatories, on the ground that statements made to them in their reportorial capacity, were privileged. This raises a question somewhat similar to that now at issue in Washington in the case of the correspondents who refused to disclose the source of their information before a senate committee in the sugar trust scandal.

The correspondents were ordered to reappear before the grand jury, and in the event of their repeated refusal to answer the interrogatories propounded the body will report the fact to Judge Grosscup. If the latter holds that the work of the reporters is not privileged they will be confronted with the alternative of giving the information desired of them or being committed for contempt of court.

Many of the questions put to the witnesses related to what was designated as "treasonable utterances" on the part of Debs and other officers of the union. This gave rise to the rumor that indictments for treason might be supplemented for those already found against the officers of the organization. District Attorney Milchrist, however, denied that anything of the kind was contemplated.

In labor circles a report gained considerable currency that George M. Pullman had weakened and was willing to submit his side of the trouble to arbitration. Vice-President Wickes promptly nailed the story with the official announcement that the Pullman company stood by every declaration that it had previously made on the subject.

'Longshoremen Go Back.

PORT HURON, Mich., July 13.—The longshoremen who struck in sympathy with the American Railway union have returned to work at the Grand Trunk sheds on advice of American Railway union leaders as they could no longer be of any assistance. The strike is practically over here, and railroad men who went out have decidedly the worst of it.

CARING FOR THE INJURED.

Soldier Victims of the Wreck Near Sacramento in the Hospital.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 13.—The men who were injured in the railroad wreck are being carefully nursed in the hospital depot.

Captain Roberts, of battery L, furnished the United Press correspondent with a correct list of the killed and injured. He said that when the wreck occurred Sergeant J. Kroppe and Privates Clarke, Byrne and Lubberden were on the tender, and were all thrown into the water. Kroppe escaped with slight injury, but the others were drowned. Private James Dugan was on the first car and received fatal injuries. Private Daumler received deep contused and lacerated wounds on the head. Private A. Wilson received a severe contusion of the left knee. Privates Ginnins and Martin were also slightly injured.

Although the city is not under martial law, people realize that they are affected by the strict discipline that prevails, and they fear that the soldiers will not be slow in making their authority felt. Col. Graham called upon the First regiment, Col. Sullivan, of the National guard, to co-operate with the regulars and citizen soldiery now doing duty at the depot.

The body of Private Dugan, who died from injuries received in the railroad wreck, was removed from the depot to the pier for transportation to San Francisco. The funeral procession was an impressive one. It consisted of a guard of non-commissioned officers and Battery L of the Fifth artillery. The coffin was borne on a Gatling gun carriage.

Officers of the regular army have spoken in flattering terms of Privates Pickel and Fifer for their heroic efforts to save Private Clarke after the latter was thrown into the slough. Both men extricated themselves from the wreck with considerable difficulty, and, although bleeding from many wounds, they jumped into the slough and almost drowned while endeavoring to rescue their comrades.

New York's Big Labor Meeting.

NEW YORK, July 13.—The labor demonstration at Cooper Union last night was one of the most extraordinary outpourings of people ever seen in this city. The meeting was called to express sympathy with the strikers in Chicago and elsewhere in the west, and, as an expression of sympathy, it was a decided success. The area in front of the hall was filled after the hall could contain no more. It was a meeting which expressed its convictions in the the loudest ways—hissing and hooting the name of President Cleveland so vehemently that Henry George, who was speaking—had to cry: "What's the use?"

Deputy Sheriffs Fooled.

CHICAGO, July 13.—Deputy sheriffs guarding a Big Four train, as it was passing through Kensington last night, imagined that they were being fired on because the train ran over a lot of track torpedoes. Tney pulled their guns and commenced an indiscriminate fusilade and succeeded in wounding Peter Fish, of Pentwater, Mich., who was sitting on a Big Four car.

Would Not Obey Chief Arthur.

COLUMBUS, O., July 13.—Twenty-eight engineers of the Columbus, Hocking Valley & Toledo have rebelled against Chief Arthur's orders and go out with non-union crews. Two trains left the Hocking Valley yards yesterday—one the regular freight to Athens, and the other a special train manned by 25 police to break the coal blockade at Nelsonville.

Perishable Freight Received.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., July 13.—That the railway companies have reached the conviction that the strike is at an end was clearly demonstrated last night, when an order was posted in the freight stations in this city that perishable freight would be received for Chicago and other points in the west. Only one train came in late.

New York Troops for the West.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., July 13.—A large detachment of United States infantry, which has been stationed at the David's Island recruiting station, has left here for the west. Their supposed destination is Chicago.

None Will Be Taken Back.

CLEVELAND, July 13.—The Lake Shore dealt very severely with its strikers. Not one will be taken back. The Big Four took all its old men back.

LABOR DISTURBANCES

The President and K. of L. Leaders Confer.

The Executive Will Appoint a Commission Which Will Inquire Into the Causes of Strikes—All Labor Troubles Must Be Settled Before Such Appointment Is Made.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—President Cleveland informed a committee representing organized labor who called to see him that he would in the near future appoint a commission composed of three members, of whom the United States commissioner of labor shall be the chairman, under chapter 1063 of the laws of 1888 to enquire into and investigate thoroughly the causes leading up to the present labor disturbances of the country. This announcement was made by the executive last evening to J. W. Hayes, general secretary of the Knights of Labor; T. R. McGuire and O. A. French.

These gentlemen called by an appointment arranged early yesterday. They were shown into the president's working room, where they presented their credentials and made formal application to the president to appoint a board of arbitration under the law of 1888.

The president listened to the labor men present their views and told them that as a condition precedent to making such an appointment, all strikes must be called off by organized labor and all violence and mob rule cease. He informed them that law and order must be restored before he took any steps looking in the direction of ascertaining the causes that produced the present condition of affairs.

United States troops would be still retained in the disturbed sections to see that the orders of the United States courts were enforced, interstate traffic must be resumed and peace restored throughout the country. The labor committee was given to unperstand that this commission would be appointed apart from any demands made by the strikers for arbitration. In fact the commission would have under the law no power to arbitrate, but simply to investigate and report its conclusions to the president and to congress.

The president and his cabinet advisers were at the executive mansion as usual last night. It was after 9 o'clock when the president returned from a drive. Secretary Lamont, Postmaster-General Bissell, Attorney-General Olney and Gen. Schofield were awaiting his coming. Later in the night Secretaries Herbert and Smith dropped in, but did not remain long.

Gen. Schofield left early in the night and said that he had received advices from all over the country except California, and quiet prevailed everywhere.

The appointment of a commission to look into labor difficulties, he said, would not affect the operations of the United States army, which would continue to carry out its present orders until they were revoked.

Pacing Record Not Broken.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—The pacer Saladin made two attempts to break the record—2:07 3-4—on a hal-mile track at the Holmesburg Driving park yesterday but failed, not being able to do better than 2:11 1-2 in the first trial and 2:12 3-4 in the second.

Will Resume July 30.

LOWELL, Mass., July 13.—When the Tremont and Suffolk mills shut down on July 3 it was announced that work would be resumed on July 16, but it has now been decided to keep the mills shut down until July 30.

Sons of St. George.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., July 13.—The grand lodge of the Sons of St. George adjourned its annual session last evening. It was decided to hold the next grand lodge meeting in Auburn.

"BATTLE OF THE BOYNE"

Fought Over Again in the Quaker City With Dire Results.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—The Battle of the Boyne was fought over last night in the very heart of the city, and as a result about 20 Irishmen are nursing cracked heads and cut faces, and a dozen men are in the police station charged with inciting a riot. The local lodges of Orangemen had celebrated the day with a picnic at Rising Run park, and with banners flying they were parading down Broad street on the way back to their lodge rooms.

At Cherry street, under the shadows of the academy of the fine arts, a gang of green ribbon men became enraged at the tune played by the organization's band, and a shower of bricks flew into the ranks of the marchers. The Pioneer corps, armed with sabres and axes, charged on their assailants, and for a few minutes there was about as lively a riot as Philadelphia has seen in recent years.

The reserves were promptly ordered out from the city hall, only a block away, and the rioters were clubbed into submission. At the Hahnemann hospital, close by, some 20 had wounds, more or less serious, attended to. Daniel Kielt, one of the attacking party, had his face split with a sabre and received several severe wounds. Michael Burns, one of his companions, was chopped over the head with an axe, and both are in a serious condition. After the police had dispersed the mob and locked up a score of the rioters, the Loyal Orangemen resumed their march to the tune of "Boyne Waters."

WORTHLESS ARMOR-PLATE.

One Weighing 76,000 Pounds Penetrated by a 12-Inch Projectile.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Naval ordnance officers yesterday fired two 12-inch projectiles at a Carnegie 17-inch Harveyized curved steel plate, typical of 367 tons of armor, constituting one of the barbettes protecting the 13-inch battery of the battleship Oregon. The plate, which weighed 76,000 pounds, behaved under fire in a remarkable way, resisting the first shot, which had a velocity of 1,410 feet per second, and utterly failing to stop the second shot, which went entirely through it and pierced the 30 inches of oak planking.

The first shot penetrated 13 inches and rebounded 25 feet without breaking up to any considerable extent. The second shot, a Wheeler-Sterling projectile, had a muzzle velocity per second of 1,858 feet, and when it was recovered from the sand bank it was scarcely injured. The plate was not cracked, except slight radial breaks at the points struck by the shells. It behaved in all respects as if it had not been Harveyized at all.

The entire lot of armor will be rejected by the government unless subsequent tests give very much better results.

New Armor Plating.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—For several months past the engineers at the Midvale Steel company's works at Nicetown, which has had much success with steel shot, have been experimenting in the laboratory on the manufacture of steel armor plating. The process is said to be entirely new, and the company is confident that the plate will withstand any test that may be made by the navy department. The test will be made at Sandy Hook on July 20 or 25.

VIGILANT'S SIXTH DEFEAT.

Clyde Regatta Ends Without a Victory for the American Yacht.

ROTHESAY, July 13.—Yesterday's yacht race closed the Clyde regatta, leaving the Vigilant with a record of six consecutive defeats.

The course of the combatants was from a point off Craigmore pier, in Rothesay sound; thence almost due south to and around a stakeboat off Mount Stewart; thence to the westward to and around a markboat off Largs; thence northward to and around a boat in Wemyss bay, and across the Firth to the starting point, twice around.

After the second round the yachts sailed diagonally across the quadrangle from Rothesay and return. The length of the course is about 50 miles.

The yachts finished the race thus: Britannia, 4:00:30; Vigilant, 3:02:10.

To Be Decided by Arbitration.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Ex-Congressman Robert Smalls and present Congressman George Washington Murray, both colored, each claiming to be regularly nominated from the first South Carolina district for the 54th congress, have agreed to submit their pretensions to the arbitration of Messrs. Apsley (Mass.), Hitt (Ill.), and Settle (N. C.), a sub-committee of the national republican executive committee.

THE CONVICTION STANDS.

Banker Rockafellow Must Take His Punishment.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—Justice Fell, in the supreme court, has rendered an opinion affirming the conviction of banker F. V. Rockafellow, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., who was found guilty in the court of quarter sessions of Luzerne county of receiving money from a depositor while insolvent.

Rockafellow was convicted under an act which provides that any banker who shall receive money from a depositor with the knowledge that he is insolvent shall be guilty of embezzlement.

Justice Fell holds that the act is not to be nullified, as counsel for the defendant claimed, because the offense is called "embezzlement." The word was not well chosen, the opinion reads, "but the intention is clear."

Not a Sympathetic Strike.

NEWARK, N. J., July 13.—About 600 of the united hatmakers of Essex county are on strike for an increase of wages, and not out of sympathy with the Pullman strikers. They are nearly all Poles or Russian Jews, who practically ruined the hatting industry in this section which formerly gave employment to more than 2,000 operatives, all of whom earned good wages. Their places were gradually filled by the foreigners, who worked for any price offered them. As a result they were cut down, until now their wages do not average 60 cents a day. The bosses claim to be able to fill the strikers' places without any trouble.

THE COLD AND WHITE

An Immense Turn Out of Christian Endeavorers.

Over 40,000 Attended the Opening Meetings at Cleveland—Trains Carrying Thousands Still Arriving in the City—A Choir of One Thousand Voices.

CLEVELAND, O., July 13.—The Christian Endeavor convention managers are filled with enthusiasm over the unexpected success of the meeting in point of numbers. Evidently the people have recovered from the panic over the railroad strike, and are coming on to Cleveland as rapidly as the railroads can carry them. Special and regular trains are following each other into the city rapidly, loaded to overflowing with young people wearing the badge of the society.

The line boats also brought hundreds from east and west, until the streets were crowded with them. The numbers now in the city are variously estimated at from 30,000 to 35,000. Over 40,000 people attended the opening meetings yesterday, the tent, hall and two churches being crowded. Saengerfest hall is elaborately draped with flags, bunting and the gold and white colors of the society. A choir of a thousand voices is located on the stage and is supplemented by a large orchestra of brass, reed and string instruments. The features of the music of the morning session were the cornet playing of the seven Park sisters, of New York, and the singing of the welcome song written by Jessie H. Brown, of Cleveland, to the tune of Beulah Land.

At the evening session the annual address of President Clark was read at both the tent and Saengerfest hall. There was great regret at the absence of the president and his illness, but his words of inspiration were received with gladness.

The announcement was made by Rev. James L. Hill from the board of trustees that the convention of 1895 would be held in San Francisco if a lower rate of transportation could be secured than at present offered—otherwise another choice would be made by September 1. The convention for 1876 will be held in Washington, D. C. Presentation of badge banners was then made, that for proportionate increase of junior societies going to Delaware, for the largest proportionate increase of young peoples' societies to West Virginia, for absolute increase to England, for absolute gain in junior societies to Pennsylvania, and for the largest number of junior societies to the same state. The Chinese umbrella of state, sent from the Chinese Christian Endeavor society to be given the state showing the largest number of societies which have adopted Rev. A. A. Fulton's plan of giving two cents a week per member, was awarded to New York.

Confectioners' Convention Closed.

BOSTON, July 13.—The 11th annual convention of the National Confectioners' association of the United States was brought to a close yesterday. The matter of the use of wax in the manufacture of candy and its possible injurious effects was left to the incoming executive committee. Officers were elected as follows: President, A. F. Haywood, Boston; vice-president, C. B. Miller, Philadelphia; secretary, F. D. Seward, St. Louis; treasurer, Henry Heid, New York.

Income Tax Defeated in France.

PARIS, July 13.—The chamber of deputies rejected M. Cavaignac's proposition for an income tax by a vote of 267 to 236. As the proposal had been strenuously opposed by the government, Premier Dupuy and Finance Minister Poincare announced that, in view of the narrowness of the majority, they must have a vote of confidence or resign. Confidence was then voted by 269 against 80 deputies.

Important Naval Assignments.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Two important assignments of naval officers have been made by Secretary Herbert. He designated Rear-Admiral Kirkland as commander of the European naval station, although no orders to that effect were issued, and ordered Commodore C. C. Carpenter to assume command of the Asiatic station.

An Aeronaut Dies Suddenly.

CRESTON, O., July 13.—Leroy Higgins, a traveling aeronaut, was found dead in the office of C. E. Wright, dentist, at Seville. He entered the office during the night, and died of organic heart trouble. He had traveled all over the country, giving exhibitions as a rope walker and aeronaut.

After the meeting the general fund provided the members with ice-cream soda.

The visit of the Perth Amboy Council, J. O. U. A. M., to Franklin Council, No. 41, of this city, was postponed till next Thursday evening, when it is expected a large number will be present. There will also be initiation that evening.

Besides the transaction of routine business, Division No. 4, Ancient Order of Hibernians, elected the following officers at their meeting last evening:

President—J. F. Sheehan.
Vice-president—E. Birmingham.
Secretary—J. McCarthy.
Financial Secretary—C. Ragan.
Treasurer—P. Casey.

The officers-elect will be installed by a delegation from Elizabeth at the next monthly meeting of the Division.

A Moral.

There was a man in a faraway town
Who thought him wondrous wise.
He swore by all the fabled gods
He'd never advertise.

His goods were advertised at last,
And thereby hangs a tale.
The ad was set in nonpareil
And headed "Sheriff's Sale."

THE SEWERAGE FARM.

ESTABLISHING ONE HERE CANNOT INJURE LOCAL PROPERTY.

Plainfield's City Officials Convinced More Firmly Than Ever That This Is Nature's Own Method of Sewage-Disposal—Former Conclusions Are Clinched by a Visit to Framingham.

Mayor Gilbert and Councilman Frost, Chairman of the Sewerage Committee, returned yesterday from South Framingham, Mass., where they spent five hours Wednesday inspecting the intermittent filtration system in use in that town. The object of the visit was to ascertain whether anything had developed in the condition of the filtration beds there since the investigations of the committee a year and a half ago that would indicate that there were any offensive or objectionable features about the system.

The visitors were not only pleased, but were agreeably surprised, to find that the efficiency of the system and the absence of anything objectionable were underrated in the report of the committee. They made a most thorough inspection of the beds Wednesday in company with the superintendent, and failed to find anything on which objections to the system could be based. There was no disagreeable odor, and very little to indicate that the ground was used for the disposal of sewage.

While the visitors felt reasonably sure before that the location of the filtration beds near the city would not prove detrimental to the health of the town, they are now confident that the sewerage bed might be located within the limits of the city, if it were necessary, without proving in the slightest degree offensive or disagreeable.

The Plainfielders were present while the flow of sewage for the day was being distributed over the beds. They discovered nothing in the appearance of the sewage as it came from the pipes that would show that it was more than dirty water. There was an entire absence of solids and of offensive odor. The sewage as it flowed on the ground was absorbed very rapidly, disappearing within 20 or 30 minutes after the flow was shut off.

South Framingham, as has been described at length in The Press, has in its filtration beds 70 acres of land, of which only about six or eight acres are in actual use. Twelve acres are divided into six equal beds, only two or three of which are in constant use, the object being to alternate so as to prolong the life of the beds that are used. The beds are underdrained, the effluent passing off into a dry brook which is at one side.

The Mayor and the Councilman were much interested in testing the efficiency of the filtration by inspecting the effluent as it ran out of the underdrains. They found it as clear as the very best samples of Plainfield water that can be produced. The men in charge of the beds drank of the water freely. Their visitors were encouraged to try it in order to discover if there was any disagreeable taste about it. Mr. Frost finally plucked up courage to drink of it, and Mayor Gilbert tasted it. The test was satisfactory. There was no bad taste.

Crops of corn, pease and cabbage are grown on the beds. In the Summer five men are employed in caring for the crops. The services of two are sufficient during the Winter season. The revenue derived from the farming last year was about $1,000. Anyone driving by the bed would think it a well-kept farm, not the place where the sewage of a town of 10,000 population is disposed of.

The visit had the effect of confirming all the views held by Mayor Gilbert and Councilman Frost in regard to intermittent filtration, and they now feel that it is Nature's own way of getting rid of sewerage, and that Plainfield cannot possibly make a mistake in introducing the system. They will take up the work now with renewed confidence, and with a determination to push it along with vigor, and if possible to have the main trunk line with the lateral lines necessary to drain the more thickly settled parts of the city completed before the end of the year.

OLD ÆSOP'S STORY.

It is About a Rebellion that Ended in Flat Failure.

That wise old slave, Æsop, tells how the jaws and the arms refused to supply and to grind food for the stomach which, they said, was a lazy thing living on its neighbors. Of course the rebellious members suffered and grew weak As what we call science did not exist in Æsop's day, it isn't likely that even he understood the full force of this fable.

We understand today the supreme importance of treating the stomach well, for the consequences of indigestion extend from the brain to the toes. Because of bad indigestion, there are so many skinny pale, bloodless men and women in the world. Nothing will fatten and strengthen them unless they can find a food that will pass from the stomach into the blood without digestion. Paskola is such a predigested food.

"It gives me great pleasure," says Dr. G. W. Babcock, of Chelsea, Mass., "to speak in the highest terms of your delightful preparation, Paskola. I have lately prescribed it for one of my lady patients and I am greatly surprised at its wonderful power as a flesh producer. The young lady has been out of health and losing flesh. She began taking Paskola as directed. Her weight was 103 pounds. She has taken four bottles and now weighs 109 pounds, and is looking much improved. She says she feels like a new creature. This change has been brought about by Paskola."

Another physician's testimony:

OSWEGO, N. Y., May 21, 1894

Gentlemen—The bottle of Paskola received a week ago today and I immediately commenced the use of it, in connection with Poland water. I am feeling very much better and have increased 1¼ pounds. During the eight days' use of Paskola no eruptions of gas, in fact, seeming perfect digestion. If this condition continues, I shall be a devotee of Paskola and will prescribe it when indicated to my patients.

Sincerely yours,
E. M. MANWAREN, M. D.

Paskola may be obtained of any reputable retail druggist and a pamphlet fully descriptive will be mailed upon application to The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade street, New York.

DEBS SURRENDERS.

THE STRIKE DECLARED OFF BY HIM TODAY.

Conference Sought with the Railroad Managers, but Refused—Stockyards Butchers Back at Work.

[Special to The Press]

CHICAGO, July 13—President Debs of the American Railway Union at 9:30 a. m. declared the strike of the union at an end. He went to the headquarters of the General Railway Managers' Association, presumably to endeavor to make arrangements for the return of the strikers to work. Debs's action leaves only the original strikers, the employes at the Pullman car shops, out of the case.

The railway managers refused to have any conference whatever with Debs.

The packing houses were all running at the stockyards this morning, many of the striking butchers having returned to work. The receipts were 11,000 cattle, 14 000 hogs, and 5 000 sheep

NEW ETON JACKETS.

Styles to Suit All Tastes and For All Occasions.

Bodices differing from the skirt are more worn than ever. Silk lawn and muslin are all employed for these garments, and every degree of elaboration is seen, from the plain shirt waist to the complicated affair made of lace, moire and spangles. There are styles to suit every occasion, but the prettiest bodices are not necessarily the most expensive. Blouses of ruffled lawn are often more becoming than those of richer materials. Some pleasing ones are shown made of soft silk or crape with a wide collar, Garibaldi front and folded belt, but the yoke effect is usually employed and is accentuated by a trimming of double or even triple ruffles around the shoulders. Sometimes bretelles extend from shoulder to waist back and front, the bodice being full between them.

The new Eton jackets are tighter and longer than those of last season and show a tendency to close in front in either single or double breasted style with large buttons. They all have revers more or less conspicuous, usually faced with different goods, and are worn over a vest or plastron preferably of a brilliant color. A stiffly starched shirt bosom of white or tinted linen may be worn beneath the jacket, brightened by a gay silk scarf, or the triangular space over the chest may be filled in with chiffon ruffles. When the jacket has open fronts, they generally display a neat duck or cloth tailor made vest or a ruffled blouse.

The standing collar still prevails in spite of the weather and is often supplemented on the outside by another flaring one still higher. It is as uncomfortable and therefore silly a fashion as was ever invented for this season of the year.

An illustration is given of a sort of Eton jacket, double breasted and having double revers of contrasting colors. The flaring cuffs of the gigot sleeves are also double. The jacket closes with two rows of three large buttons each, and the V at the throat shows a plain linen band collar and a silk scarf holding a scarfpin.

TREES IN THE TOWN.

They Add Value to Property—A Few Remarks on Street Lighting.

A love of the beautiful is inborn in man. Trees are a source of never failing enjoyment to dwellers in the town, and no town can be beautiful without them. How refreshing their shade in summer, and the dreariness of winter is rendered less desolate by their presence. Sentiment aside, trees have a direct value. A tree shaded avenue is a much more desirable place of residence than one which lacks their adornment. Property is more valuable on this street, and landlords demand and receive a higher rate of rent. The houses are more pretentious, the lawns are green and smoothly shaven, and beds of flowers and bunches of shrubbery bear witness to the friendly rivalry among the dwellers to excel in the beautiful.

The lighting of streets at night is a subject of great importance to the people of a community. The benefits are many and far outweigh any question of cost or economy. How many accidents that have caused loss of life and limb are due to insufficiently lighted or wholly dark streets! How many crimes have been committed under cover of darkness that would never have been perpetrated had there been light to reveal the robber or assassin to his intended victim!

HOME TESTIMONY.

Mr Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly. They were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 144 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOS. CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

BUSINESS TROUBLE.

H. R. MUNGER'S BANKING FIRM FAILS.

His Partner Hopes for Funds to Enable Them to Resume Business —Liabilities $50,000 More Than the Nominal Assets.

L. D. Alexander & Co., bankers and brokers at 50 Broadway, New York, announced their suspension yesterday and made an assignment to Archibald Leroy, their cashier, with preferences of $41,784. The partners are Lawrence D. Alexander of Staten Island and Horace Raymond Munger of Plainfield. Mr. Alexander is a son of the late J. B. Alexander, formerly of Kentucky. He had an interest in the firm of J. B. Alexander & Co., bankers of New York city from 1870 to Jan. 1, 1875, when that firm was succeeded by Kelley & Alexander, of which he became the junior partner. They dissolved July 1, 1878, and the present firm succeeded. Mr. Alexander has been a member of the New York Stock Exchange since 1868. The liabilities are about $200,000 and the nominal assets probably $150,000. Whether or not the firm resumes business will depend largely on the share Mr. Alexander receives from the estate of his father, which is in litigation. The largest preferences are to Chauncey Ives, Brooklyn, $3,158; Elizabeth F. Davis, $3,072; John F. Saunders, $6,434; John VanHorne, $10,311.

AT REST.

Mrs. Mary Ellen Ware.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Ellen, late wife of R. W. Ware, took place yesterday afternoon at 3, from her late residence, 810 Second place. A large number of friends and relatives attended.

The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, and were very impressive.

A quartette consisting of Miss Gussie Holmes, Miss Jessie Smille, Alexander Gavett and Elmer Runyon, sang very sweetly "Nearer My God to Thee".

Dr. Richards then read appropriate Scriptural selections, after which the quartette effectively rendered "Abide With Me".

The words of comfort spoken by Dr. Richards were deeply felt by all. His remarks were founded on burdens and burden-bearing. In part he said:

"Our Lord's words, 'Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest', are very comforting to us. To the daily toiler there seems to be no rest. When he arises in the morning he says, 'Would to God it were evening'! And in the evening 'Would to God it were morning'? But the blessed fact remains that we can place our trust in God and will receive that rest which all seek, a rest eternal.

"History tells us of the death of one of the world's greatest martyrs, Stephen, who was stoned; and in the midst of that hooting and persecuting crowd he said, 'Lord, receive my spirit', and he prayed for his persecutors. So he secured that rest which he craved.

"After much suffering, the one at whose bier we stand today, has received that rest; and thanks be to God for His wonderful goodness in relieving the sufferers of earth."

Those present took a last look at the body, interment of which was in Hillside Cemetery.

The pall-bearers were John Leal, Alfred T. Slauson, Alfred W. Duxbury, and Edward S. Peck.

HE GAVE THE LOT.

And Is Anxious to See the New Chapel Built Speedily.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—It has come to my notice that a rumor is afloat to the effect that I have failed to keep my promise to donate the lot for the proposed chapel at Mt. Pleasant. As this story is false, and is likely to injure the project, by dissuading benevolent persons from aiding the cause and giving others who have already promised to contribute, an excuse for putting off their payments, I deem it proper to state the facts in the case.

At the meeting when the society, afterward incorporated as the Mt. Pleasant Union Chapel, was formed, I offered to donate a site for the building, explaining at the time that the lot offered was subject to a mortgage.

With this understanding a motion was put and carried unanimously, that the offer be accepted. Since that time a large quantity of stone and sand has been dumped on the premises, but nothing further has been done toward building the chapel. The lot now presents the aspect of a dumping ground. It seems to me that if the society would use the funds now in hand and begin the work of construction, more subscriptions would be paid in, and false rumors would die a natural death. WILLIAM H POTTER.

Will Tame Fractious Horses.

The Crescent Rink has been engaged for Monday and Tuesday evenings and Wednesday afternoon and evening by H. J. Elliott, horse educator. He will exhibit his skill in taming wild and vicious horses by kindness, and invites local horse-owners to bring him their kicking and vicious horses for speedy subjection to his will. He also shows his talking and boxing horse, "Atrox".

Freddie Is Home Again.

Freddie Frey, who disappeared from home the night of the circus, came home Wednesday night. He says a man enticed him away under promise of work, and abandoned him in Central Park. He had to foot it home. A stranger will find him an unwilling victim another time.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in all the liquids, snuffs or powders prescribed. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

The first trouble in regard to the shooting of dogs occurred yesterday, when Allen Wilson shot a dog owned by Mr. Marlenschek. A daughter of Marlenschek went to Hetfield's meat market to make a purchase and the dog followed. While the girl was inside, Wilson came along, and, seeing the animal without a collar, secured a rope and fastened him to a post. He then shot the dog. The owner of the dog values him highly, and threatens to bring suit for the loss.

Birthday Anniversary.

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Cortwright, corner of Sixth and Sycamore streets, last evening, a large number of friends gathered, and spent a most delightful evening, the occasion being the anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Cortwright's charming daughter, Miss Kate Cortwright. She was the recipient of many handsome gifts, and well wishes for her future happiness from her many friends, and she right royally entertained them in such a manner that when the small hours of morning arrived and they were compelled to part for home, it was the sentiment of one and all that they had spent a most pleasant evening. They congratulated her upon the success, and in bidding her adieu expressed a wish that she might live to spend many happy birthdays.

Poisoning Dogs.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Is there no law to protect valuable dogs from the spite and maliciousness of neighbors who try in every way to molest, provoke and poison such beasts? Today a piece of meat filled with poison was found tied to a string, on my lawn, where it had been thrown by some one. The dog never goes off the place, is registered, and wears a collar with address and register number on it.

Will you kindly state in your paper the law on this matter?

SARA S. MCQUAIDE.

[All that is necessary is to be able to give the name of the offender to the courts, and the law will give ample protection. In cases of dog poisoning criminal procedure can be brought, and civil suit for damages.—Ed.

They'll Be Tenting Tomorrow.

Captain George F. Edwards has ordered the Third Regiment Cadets to assemble in front of E. J. Shaw's store at 9:15 tomorrow morning in full fatigue uniform with their knapsacks. They will then go to their camp by way of stage to South Plainfield, Lehigh Valley Railroad to Perth Amboy, march to the ferry, cross to Tottenville, Staten Island, and by stage four miles to the camping place at Rossville.

Grave John Cox.

Lorenzo Paoli of North avenue left his horse tied to a tie-post made of galvanized pipe in front of his fruit store this morning. At 10:25 the horse became frightened, pulled up the pipe, and ran away with the light carriage, turning to the left at Park avenue. John Cox, a colored driver, jumped from a lumber wagon near the railroad bridge and caught the horse at the risk of his life.

CAPT. PARKER.

M'PHERSON ASKS THAT HIS NOMINATION BE ANNULLED.

Parker Protests that He Has Been Appointed in an Open Manner and that He Should Not Be Thrown Over—The Appointment was Decidedly a Surprise.

Senator McPherson called at the White House yesterday to request President Cleveland to withdraw the nomination of Capt. James Parker, sent to the Senate a day or two ago, to be United States District Attorney for New Jersey. This nomination meets with much opposition among the leaders of the New Jersey Democracy, as nearly all of the influential members of the organization had recommended the appointment of Wm. C. Heppenheimer, and it was generally understood when he was in Washington a few weeks ago that his appointment had been decided upon. Among others who endorsed Mr. Heppenheimer are Senators McPherson and Smith, National Committeeman Miles Ross, and nearly all the Democratic Congressmen from New Jersey.

At the White House Mr. McPherson saw a letter which he had written cordially endorsing Capt. Parker as worthy and capable of filling any honorable position to which he might be appointed. The Senator had forgotten having written the letter, and explains that he never intended to urge the appointment of Capt. Parker in preference to Mr. Heppenheimer.

An investigation by the friends of the latter shows that Capt. Parker, who is an ex-naval officer, has a law office in New York city, and has intimate personal relations with several anti-snappers, including Frederick R. Coudert and William R. Grace. Capt. Parker has letters of recommendation from other New Jersey Congressmen than Senator McPherson, but none of them asked for his appointment for the District Attorneyship. Senator McPherson is confident that Capt. Parker's nomination will be withdrawn.

Turtle Industry to Blame.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Being the neighbor referred to in the statement of Wednesday, as the probable cause of the disease and death from diphtheria of Mr. VanNest's young son, I would say that the statement that it was "thought to be the unclean condition of a neighbor's yard, a nuisance which was ordered removed today", is not true. The Board of Health found the yard of the house in which Mr. NanNest lives, the corner of Central avenue and Third street, to be in an unclean condition, and it was ordered to be cleansed. The filth in this yard was caused by the turtle industry. Some individual in the house, for profit or pleasure, is raising young turtles, and feeds garbage to these pets—I rather should have said pets—and kept the yard after the old-fashion style of pig-pen. MRS. BRAND.

WEST END NOTES.

Mrs. A. A. Marsh of West Front street is convalescent from her recent severe illness.

Exercise, But No Fire.

The borough fire-gong sounded for the seventh district at 11 last evening. The alarm had been given by Marshal Wilson, who thought he saw flames in the direction of Scotch Plains. The hose cart went out first to Manning avenue, and the engine followed to Mountain avenue. No signs of a fire could be found, and the firemen went through the streets of the district with the whistle blowing and the bell ringing. No fire showing up, they returned to the house and sounded the recall at 11:30.

CYCLING COMMENT.

George Taggart is taking in the Asbury Park cycle races for The United Press.

The question of when the next race will be held will be brought up at the meeting of the Crescents next Monday evening.

While Robert Schriener was riding a wheel on Park avenue this noon he ran into a horse and wagon. He was severely shaken up. There was no damage.

Eighteen members of the Crescent Wheelmen went on a run to New Brunswick last evening, stopping for refreshments and returning with good speed.

Walter B. Bittenhouse, George A. Horne, Nathan Lane, Jr., Sidney Titsworth, and Champlain L. Riley rode to Boynton Beach today, to enjoy the delights of that resort.

Horace Huff has been entertaining his brother Oscar Huff, and his friend Will Servis of Centreville. They rode down on their wheels, returning yesterday. The roads were found to be in excellent condition.

William Kline, driver for Garret Q. Decker the furniture man, is taking his vacation by trips on his wheel. He will visit friends and relatives, stopping off at New Brunswick, Franklin Park, and other places.

The first of the Newark-Princeton century racers will probably pass through Plainfield about 9 tomorrow morning and on the return at noon. The time will be in the neighborhood of six hours. Both of the Plainfielders, Walter Manning and James G. Voorhies, have 35 minutes handicap.

A month ago Captain Israel Jones of the Victor Wheelmen sent to the Atalanta Wheelmen of Newark his entry in the Newark-Princeton century road race to take place tomorrow. Since that time he has risen early to train, and has ridden during his leisure moments in preparation for the run. Yesterday he received a notice from the Atalantas that they had decided to reject his entry because of his color. The captain thinks it very unjust that he received no warning of such a decision before he began to train for the event. Captain Jones went to Newark this morning and saw Chairman Whitfield Smith of the Atalanta's Racing Committee. He said that the protest against Israel's racing came from 40 Cortlandt street, New York.

PANIC IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

Another Earthquake Shock Terrorizes the People.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 13.—Another severe earthquake shock was felt last evening. The panic was revived at once. Tradesmen hurried from their shops, and families ran from their houses to the open spaces. Most places of business, which had been opened with the return of confidence, were closed before 5 o'clock. The parks and squares are again filled with improvised tents and beds.

Workingmen are busy razing the buildings which were badly damaged by the earthquake on Tuesday. About fifteen gangs are at work in as many parts of the city.

The meagre reports received from the interior indicate that the loss of life and property there has not been so great as was feared.

Cleveland's Course Approved.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—The directors of the Philadelphia Commercial exchange telegraphed to President Cleveland their approval of his "timely and patriotic action in the use of federal troops for the suppression of lawless interference with the United States mails and the commerce between the states."

Vetoed by Mayor Stewart.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—Mayor Stuart has vetoed the council bill for the purchase of property for the purpose of opening a boulevard from Broad and Market streets to the Green street entrance of Fairmount park. The estimated cost of the boulevard was $6,000,000 to $8,000,000.

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception: "I had been troubled with heart disease 25 years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician continuously. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I was indeed in a serious condition when a gentleman directed my attention to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by the remedy, and was again a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could feel a decided improvement in the circulation of my blood. When I had taken three doses I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost putrified. Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down, and I was so much better that I did my own work. On my recommendation six others are taking this valuable remedy."—Mrs. Morgan, 509 W. Harrison St. Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, a discovery of an eminent specialist in heart disease, is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from all opiates or dangerous drugs.

WORK IN BOTH HOUSES

Rapid Progress Made by the Senate.

Bills Which in Previous Congresses Provoked Long Debates Quickly Passed—The House Nearly Beats Its Best Record for Quick Work in Disposing of Bills.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The progress made by the senate yesterday in the matter of annual appropriation bills was on a par with that inaugurated by it at the beginning of the present week. Bills which in previous congresses have provoked long debates and occupied the time of the senate for days and weeks have glided through during the past few days meeting hardly an impediment. And if the same speed shall be maintained, there is no reason why the last of the great appropriations should not be cleared off the senate calendar with the close of this week or early next week. Last week there had not been one of the appropriations taken up in the senate. No less than five of them were passed before the adjournment on Wednesday, and are now in the hands of the conference committee. They were the naval, pensions, military academy, and diplomatic and consular, and one—the postoffice bill—has gone to the president. The army and the fortifications bills were passed, and progress made on the river and harbor bill. Those still on the calendar are the District of Columbia, Indian, legislative, sundry civil, agricultural, and general deficiency.

Outside of the appropriation bills there was little of interest in the proceedings of the senate.

The unusual, if not unprecedented, circumstance of having the conferences on the tariff bill confined, so far, to the democratic managers of the two houses, excluding the republican conferees, was called to the attention of the senate in a resolution offered by Mr. Hale (rep., Me.) directing the chairman of the senate conferees (Mr. Voorhees) to inform the senate whether a full and free conference is being held.

An amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill was presented by Mr. Manderson (rep., Neb.) and referred to the committee on appropriations to pay to the families of 20 clerks who lost their lives through the falling of the Ford Theatre building $5,000 each. The select committee on that subject will not, Mr. Manderson says, be able to decide at the present session what compensation should be paid to those who were injured, or to the families of the three persons who died some months after the accident.

The senate adjourned at 6:15.

House of Representatives.

The house made its best record except upon the passage of private pension bills, when it passed an even dozen bills of general character and agreed to the senate amendments to two others. These latter were more important, however, being the bill to provide for the admission of Utah into the Union, and the postoffice appropriation bill for the year ending June 30, 1895. They now go to the president for his signature, and if he acts promptly the postoffice bill will be the first to become a law. Eleven of the twelve bills were reported from the committee on foreign affairs. Most of them were to authorize naval officers to receive decorations and medals presented by foreign governments in recognition of various services; others were directing the secretary of state to accept for the United States the picture "Love and Life" from G. F. Watts, royal academician, and to distribute the Virginius award.

TARIFF CONFERENCE.

Both Sides Stand Firm on the Sugar Schedule.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The whiskey schedule was discussed yesterday, and the house conferees are holding out for the terms of the house bill, which fixes the tax at $1 and the bonded period at five years, instead of $1.10 and eight years, as provided for in the senate bill. The house conferees are unanimous in this.

It is understood that no fight was made on the schedule in the senate, for the reason that it was hoped, by leaving it alone, time could be gained.

Sugar also again came up, but the conferees are no nearer an agreement than when they first met. Both sides stand firm, and it is believed that nothing short of a disagreeing report can be made on this schedule.

New Companies Incorporated.

ALBANY, July 13.—The following companies have been incorporated with the secretary of state: The West Side Fire Proof Stabling company, of New York city, to deal in real estate; capital, $40,000. The Sleeman Gas Saving Governor Manufacturing company, of New York city; capital, $100,000. The Dwight Survey and Protection bureau, of New York city, to make inspections and survey reports for fire insurance companies, etc.; capital, $30,000. Denio Smoke Consumer company, of Rochester; capital, $6,000.

Held Up the Barkeeper.

BALTIMORE, July 13.—A bold robbery occurred at Flood's pavilion on Curtis bay, while the resort was crowded. Barkeeper Banner was busy dealing out beverages when two men rushed behind the bar. One grabbed the cash register and wrenched upon the drawer. The other pointed a pistol at the barkeeper and pulled the trigger. Banner fell wounded in the legs. The robber who did the shooting was arrested, but the other escaped with $100.

Narrow Escape of a Switchman.

TOLEDO, O., July 13.—While Lewis Potts, one of the new Lake Shore switchmen, was running a pony engine in the yards, he was fired on by some unknown person from behind some empty freight cars. Five shots were fired, one grazing his neck, but not wounding him. The assailant escaped.

A Naval Reserve Drowned.

CHICAGO, July 13.—Menton Meyer, one of Co. Schaffner's naval reserve, was drowned near the battleship Illinois at Jackson Park. About sundown he went in bathing, was attacked by cramps, and drowned before his comrades could reach him. The body has not been recovered.

Secretary Foreign Missions Board.

BOSTON, July 13.—President James L. Barton, of Antonia college at Barpoot, Turkey, has been selected as successor of Rev. Dr. N. Clark, the senior foreign secretary of the American board of commissioners for foreign missions.

or Money paid for His Medicine to Returned.

MISS LOYD.

Wesson, Copiah Co., Miss.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—My daughter has been sick all her life, and the older she grew, the worse she was until she was the picture of death: the physicians could not do her any good.

I heard of your "Favorite Prescription," for women, and I gave her three bottles, and now she is a perfectly healthy girl.

Have recommended it to a great many sufferers from "female complaints," and it has cured them.

I think it is the greatest medicine in the world, and I have never found anything to compare with it.

Yours truly, MRS. M. J. LOYD.

The Plan of Selling Medicines

ON TRIAL, PIERCE

IS PECULIAR TO

Who Will Pay for It?

NEW YORK, July 13.—Emigration Commissioner Senner said that the refusal of the steamship companies to pay for the food consumed by emigrants while awaiting examination at Ellis island would be very apt to react on the companies. Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle has made a request of the attorneys who have been pressing the matter in Washington to furnish him with the names of the steamship lines they represent.

Killed in a Collision.

CHICAGO, July 13.—A Wisconsin Central railway switch engine collided with a Baltimore & Ohio coal train just west of Johnson street yesterday afternoon. The overturned cars demolished a portion of Northern Bros. elevator and buried the train crews under the ruins. One man was instantly killed.

G. A. R. Encampment.

BOSTON, July 13.—Commander-in-Chief John G. B. Adams, Grand Army of the Republic, has issued general orders No. 5, announcing the time of assembly for the eighth national encampment of the G. A. R. at Pittsburg, as 10 a. m. Sept. 12. The annual parade of the encampment will take place Sept. 11.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.

Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make Is True.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

DR. STARKWEATHER.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays 4 to 6 p. m.

Those living at a distance can consult the Doctor by letter.

Send or call for our Book of Testimonials.

THE APPEAL REJECTED

A. R. U. Strikers Will Not Be Taken Back.

Railroads Will Have Nothing To Do With Debs—The Propositions that Were Offered to the General Managers Were Returned Unopened—What Sovereign Says.

CHICAGO, July 14.—The compromise proposition of the railroad organization to the General Managers' association was agreed to before 10 o'clock in the morning and the managers of the strike were congratulating themselves on the shrewd move which they had made, harmonizing with the views set forth by President Cleveland as a condition precedent to the appointment of an investigating committee. The general opinion was that a refusal to accept the one condition imposed by the A. R. U. on the railway managers would shift all the responsibility for the consequences on their shoulders, so that the suffering public would have to make their appeals and complaints to the railroad corporations instead of to the railway and other national labor organizations if the strike became more general.

The offer of settlement was regarded as the playing of the A. R. U.'s last trump card, especially as it contained a practical admission that the widespread distress and threatened calamities of a worse character demanded that the strike should be declared off, in order to restore peace and commercial activity in all parts of the country. The determination of President Cleveland to appoint a commission also had much to do with the decision of the A. R. U. executive board to submit a proposition to the railway managers which would contain the only condition they were bound in honor and duty to the strikers to improve. President Debs and his colleagues realized when they read the dispatches from Washington, that if the investigating commission was appointed and came to Chicago it would not take that body long to determine that the railway strikers having no grievances directly against their employers should return to work at once if the railway managers would take them back. The proposition anticipated the condition which President Cleveland said should be imposed before the commission was sent to Chicago.

Every American railway union, Knights of Labor and Federation of Labor leader spoken to at headquarters declared that the refusal of the railway managers to restore the strikers to their positions, except those convicted of crime, would be the signal for the waging of a relentless war on the corporations, compared with which the present strike would be tame.

General Master Workman Sovereign and the other members of the executive board of the Knights of Labor had a conference at Uhlich's hall with President Debs and the executive board of the A. R. U. The subject of discussion was that of ordering a strike of all the knights in the United States. No definite action was taken by the executive of the Knights of Labor and the conference with the A. R. U. will be resumed to-day.

Mr. Sovereign said to a reporter of the United Press: "If the fair and square proposition made to the railway managers by the railway union is rejected the Knights of Labor will take up the fight with renewed power and determination to bring the aggregation of capital to our terms. We will consider that we, just as much at the A. R. U. and the Pullman strikers, are fighting for the very existence of organized labor and living wages. This fight has not reached its zenith yet."

THE PROPOSITION.

The Strike Is Declared Off If the Men Are Taken Back.

CHICAGO, July 14.—The officers and directors of the American Railway union held a special executive session at their headquarters in Ulich's hall for the purpose of making a proposition to the railway managers looking to a calling off of the great strike. They agreed to order the strike off if the railway managers would give the strikers their former positions except those who have been convicted of crime. The proposition in full is as follows:

TO THE RAILWAY MANAGERS:

The existing troubles growing out of the Pullman strike having assumed continental proportions, and there being no indication of relief from the widespread business demoralization and distress incident thereto, the railway employes, through the board of directors of the A. R. U., respectfully make the following proposition as the basis of settlement:

They agree to return to work in a body at once provided they shall be restored to their former positions without prejudice except in cases, if any there be, where they have been convicted of crime. This proposition, looking to an immediate settlement of the existing strike on all lines of railroads, is inspired by a purpose to subserve the public good. The strike, small and comparatively unimportant in its inception, has extended in every direction until it now involves or threatens not only every public interest but the peace, security and prosperity of our common country. The contest has waged fiercely. It has extended far beyond the limits of interests originally involved and has laid hold of a vast number of industries and enterprises in no wise responsible for the differences and disagreements that led to the trouble. Factory, mill, mine and shop have been silenced. Widespread demoralization has sway. The interests of multiplied thousands of the innocent people are suffering. The common welfare is seriously menaced. The public peace and tranquility are perilled. Great apprehension of the future prevails. This being true, and the statement will not be controverted, we consider it to be our duty as citizens and as men to make extraordinary efforts to end the existing strike and avert approaching calamities, whose shadows are even now upon us. If ended now, the contest, however serious in its consequences will not have been in vain. Sacrifices have been made, but they will have their compensations. Indeed, if lessons shall be taught by experience, the trouble now so widely deplored will prove a blessing of inestimable value in the months and years to come. The differences that led up to the present complications need not now be discussed. At this supreme juncture every consideration of duty and patriotism demands that a remedy for existing troubles be found and applied. The employes propose to do their part by meeting their employers half way. Let it be stated that they do not impose any condition of settlement except that they be restored to their former positions. They do not ask the recognition of their organization or of any organization. Believing this proposition to be fair, reasonable and just, it is respectfully submitted with the belief that its acceptance will result in the prompt resumption of traffic, the revival of industry and the restoration of peace and order. Respectfully,

EUGENE V. DEBS, president,
G. W. HOWARD, vice-president,
SYLVESTER KELIHER, secretary,
American Railway union.

This proposition was taken by the signers to Mayor Hopkins who, at their request, presented it to Chairman St. John, of the General Managers' association. The association was not in session, but after the individual members had been consulted, it was returned to Mayor Hopkins without answer and with the information that no communication whatever from Debs, Howard and Keliher could be received or considered by the Managers' association.

The action of the strike leaders was taken, they claim, not because of impending defeat, but in order that they should be in harmony with the suggestion President Cleveland made in announcing that he would appoint a commission on arbitration.

The refusal of the General Managers to even consider the proposition which would necessitate the dismissal of all men engaged to fill the strikers' places and would place them again in the power of the organization which had paralyzed the lines for days, was a decided setback to the union.

The Rights of the Choctaw Nation Upheld.

International Complications Have Arisen Over the Expulsion of Foreign Miners from Indian Territory. What the Secretary of the Interior Says About the Matter.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—International complications have arisen between the United States on one hand and Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium on the other in regard to the recommendation of Gov. Jones, of the Choctaw nation, in the Indian Territory, for the removal of certain intruders among the miners there who have been on a strike and committing all kinds of lawless acts in their fight against the Atoka Coal & Mining company. Among these miners were subjects of Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium and each of their representatives in the United States have called at times upon Secretary Gresham and the officials of the interior department to protest against the action of the United States in removing them from the Indian country.

Ambassador Pauncefote had an interview with the Indian bureau officials and the results of the protest made personally by the representatives of other foreign countries has led to an extensive correspondence between the state department and the secretary of the interior.

A few days ago Ambassador Pauncefote forwarded a communication to the secretary of state, inclosing a letter from John Williamson and others, in which it was stated that certain British subjects residing in the Indian territory, within the jurisdiction of the United States, and employes of the Atoka Coal & Mining company had been ordered to leave the territory by the United States and that troops had been sent there for that purpose; that the alleged reason for their ejection was a strike against a 25 per cent. reduction in wages; that they had violated no law and were willing to obey all legal demands made upon them by the United States. They propounded several questions to the secretary of state as to their rights, and requested to be advised whether these foreign subjects could be legally ejected, having violated no law; whether the United States was responsible for the value of the property owned by them; whether they had any choice of states to which they might be taken, and whether the states could object to their entrance. They also asked whether they could demand sustenance for their families from the United States during the ejection, and whether they, as British subjects, not willing to go to other states, could lawfully demand passage to England.

This communication was referred by the secretary of state to the secretary of the interior, and the latter, in reply to the questions propounded, says that the military force of the United States now in the Choctaw nation is there for the purpose of removing intruders of whatever nationality from within that nation and for no other purpose. Under the provisions of the treaty between the United States and the Choctaw and Chickasaw nations, the unrestricted right of self-government and full jurisdiction is accorded these nations over persons and property within their respective limits, excepting all persons with their property who are not by birth or adoption members of either nation. Under these provisions of treaty the principal chief or governor of the Choctaw nation reported the names of certain persons to the Indian agent and requested their removal as intruders, and troops were sent there for that purpose, among the persons so reported being the subjects of Great Britain, Italy, France, and Belgium.

The secretary answers all the questions propounded by the British ambassador by stating the general proposition that under the treaty the United States has the right to eject intruders whatever their nationalities. He denies the allegation that the strike was against a 25 per cent. reduction in wages. In support of the action of the department in removing the intruders he quotes from section 2,134 of the revised statutes which provides that "every foreigner who shall go into the Indian country without a passport from the department of the interior or its agents and who shall intentionally remain there is liable to a penalty of $1,000.

Tariff Conference Discussion in the Senate.

The Course Pursued by the Conferees Defended by Mr. Voorhees—Senator Hale's Resolution Placed on the Calendar by Common Consent—House Proceedings.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Senator Hale's (rep., Me.) resolution directing the chairman of the senate conferees on the tariff bill to report why a full and free conference has not yet been held was taken up in the senate, discussed for an hour and a half and then, by common consent, placed on the calendar. Mr. Hale, in justifying the resolution, said that no one could tell what had become of the tariff bill, and that so far as the senate and country were concerned, it was a lost bill.

Mr. Voorhees, (dem., Ind.), while disclaiming any disrespect for lack of courtesy to the republican conferees, defended the course pursued by the democratic conferees as being in the interest of speedy action on the bill. They desired to perfect it, he said, on their own lines of action before submitting it to the full conferees committee. The three republican conferees, Senators Allison (Iowa), Sherman (Ohio), and Aldrich (Rhode Island), spoke of the course pursued by the majority conferees as unusual, and Mr. Allison said that if the minority conferees were to be mere bystanders at the formal conference it would be better to have the conference dissolved without delay. Mr. Sherman thought that the majority conferees should confine themselves to such portions of the bills as presented political questions.

After this matter was laid aside the river and harbor bill was taken up. The first half of it had been gone through at Thursday's session, and the half that remained (40 printed pages) was disposed of in a little less than two hours.

The bill was passed, and a conference with the house was asked. Then the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill was rushed through at the same rapid pace, only the paragraphs providing for a reorganization of the executive departments being reserved. The senate, at 6:10 p. m., adjourned until to-day.

House of Representatives.

Beyond adopting the report of the conferees upon the bill making appropriations for the payment of pensions for the year ending June 30, 1895, the house accomplished but little business, and that only of a preliminary nature. The entire session of the day was spent in consideration of measures on the private calendar. Two of them, one known as the "omnibus resolution," recommending in bulk 37 claims amounting to $1,040,000 to the court of claims for investigation, were ordered to be reported to the house unfavorably. One bill was given a favorable recommendation and the rest of the session was occupied in discussing a fourth.

PRENDERGAST DIED GAME.

He Hoped To Be Saved Up to the Last Moment.

CHICAGO, July 14.—A crime against the state was expiated on the gallows of the Cook county jail yesterday.

Nearly nine months have elapsed since the bullet of an assassin deprived Chicago of her chief executive, the state of one of her most illustrious citizens, and the country at large of the patriot, Carter Harrison. The crime is avenged, and Patrick Eugene Prendergast suffered an ignominious death at the hands of the hangman.

The assassin went to his death like an ox going to the shambles.

Up to the last moment the hope or interposition from some source of another did not desert him, although he was fully cognizant of the fact that all efforts in both state and federal courts and in the executive chamber had been exhausted. When he came to the end he nerved himself for a supreme effort and paid the penalty of his crime without a whimper and without a word.

PULLMAN'S STATEMENT

Reviews the Causes of the Great Railroad Strike.

Arbitration He Could Not Agree To. If the Terms of the Men Were Complied With, He Claims, Their Wages Would Be Greater Than Their Work Could Be Sold For—Thinks the Public Should Not Let the Real Question Be Obscured—A Few Words Pertinent to the Town of Pullman—Refutes the Charges as to Watered Stock.

NEW YORK, July 14.—George M. Pullman last night gave out a statement for publication in which he reviews the causes which led to the great strike. Arbitration, he declares, he could not agree to, because it would mean acquiescence to the demand of the men if the decision was favorable to their side, and this would mean that he had to employ men at wages greater than their work could be sold for.

Mr. Pullman adds that a possible dictatorship is the real issue in the present struggle, and that one is threatened which could make all the industries of the country and the daily comfort of the millions of dependent upon their hostages for the granting of any fantastic whim that might seize him.

The statement in full is as follows:

"There is hardly anything new to be said as to the position of the Pullman company, but I have so many indications of the facility with which my expressions and those authorized by me have become distorted, and thus misleading to the public, and of an entire forgetting of my earnest efforts to prevent the strike, that perhaps it is well that I should again make public assurance that the deplorable events of the last few weeks have not been caused by the Pullman company taking an obstinate stand in a debatable matter, and refusing to listen to reason. The leaders of disorder have not hesitated to harrass the public by all means in their power, because, as they say, the Pullman company would not submit to arbitration, and now that disorder seems to be quelled they are reinforced in their clamor for arbitration by some prominent newspapers, but, so far as I know, very few, if any, business men in the country.

"What is the demand concealed under the innocently sounding word, arbitration? A little more than a year ago the car shops in Pullman were in a prosperous condition, work was plenty, wages were high, and the condition of the employes was indicated by the fact that the local savings banks had of savings deposits nearly $700,000, of which nearly all was the property of the employes. Our pay rolls for that year show an average earning of over $600 per annum for every person—man, woman, or youth—on the roll. Then came the great panic and depression of last summer. Many customers stopped negotiations and canceled orders, and our working force had to be diminished from nearly 6,000 to about 2,000 in November, 1893. The great business depression existing throughout the country had naturally resulted in a wage depression, and the getting of orders was by bidding for work at prices as low, or lower, than could be made by other shops, and this, of course, necessitated a reduction in the wages of the employes at Pullman. This was arranged satisfactorily, as I supposed, and in close competition, disregarding all account of capital and machinery, I secured enough work to gradually increase our force to 4,200, the number on the rolls last April.

"Nine weeks ago the car shops at Pullman were working with car building contracts on hand enough to keep them going about 60 days, and with all business forecasts leading to the belief that no considerable new orders could soon be had. The most important of the work in hand had been taken by me in competition at prices which were less than the actual cost to the company of delivering the cars, without any reckoning for the use of capital and plant. This work was taken to keep the large force of men employed and to postpone, and with the hope of avoiding, the numberless embarrassments to all classes of people at Pullman and its vicinity of a closing down of the works, to prevent which the company considered it a wise policy to operate the shops temporarily at an actual loss.

"In the early part of May a committee of the employes demanded a restoration of the wages of a year ago. I explained to this committee minutely and laboriously the facts, showing that the company was already paying them more than it was receiving for their contract work, and I offered them for complete assurance and to end all questions an inspection of our books and contracts in hand. This and the beginning at Pullman of a proposed careful investigation of a number of shop complaints seemed to end all trouble, but a few days later, under the excitement of their recruiting into the new organization the workmen closed the shops by abandoning their work, thus themselves doing what I was strenuously trying to prevent being done by the depression of the car building business, and the employes who have quit their work have deprived themselves and their comrades of earnings of more than $300,000 up to this time. The demand made before quitting work was that the wages should be restored to the scale of last year, or in effect that the actual outgoing money losses then being daily incurred by the company in car building should be deliberately increased to an amount equalling about one-fourth of the wages of the employes. It must be clear to every business man and to every thinking workman that no prudent employer could submit to arbitration the question whether he should commit such a piece of business folly. Arbitration always implies acquiescence in the decision of the arbitrator, whether favorable or adverse. How could I, as president of the Pullman company consent to agree that if any body of men not concerned with the interests of the company's shareholders, should as, arbitrators, for any reasons seeming good to them so decree, I would open the shops, employ workmen at wages greater than their work could be sold for and continue this ruinous policy indefinitely, or be accused of a breach of faith? Who will deny that such a question is plainly not a subject for arbitration?

"The public should not permit the real question which has been before it to be obscured. That question was as to the possibility of the creation and duration of a dictatorship which would make all the industries of the United States, and the daily comfort of the millions dependent upon them, hostages for the granting of any fantastic whim of such a dictator. Any submission to him would have been a long step in that direction, and in the interest of every law-abiding citizen of the United States, was not to be considered for a moment.

"A few words are pertinent as to some industriously spread charges against the company.

"One of the charges is that rents are exorbitant, and it is implied that the Pullman employes have no choice but to submit. The answer is simple. The average of rentals at Pullman is at the rate of $3 per room per month, and the renting of houses at Pullman has no relation to the work in the shops. Employes may, and very many do, own or rent their houses outside of the town, and the buildings and business places in the town are rented to employes or to others in competition with neighboring properties. In short, the renting business of the Pullman company is governed by the same conditions which govern any other large owner of real estate, except that the company does directly some things, which, in Chicago, are assumed by the city.

"Strenuous efforts have also been made to create a prejudice against the Pullman company by charges that its stock is heavily watered.

"The Pullman company was organized 27 years ago with a capital of $1,000,000, of which two-thirds represented the appraised value of its cars, then held by three owners, and one-third represented the appraised value of its franchises and existing contracts. The company has grown until its sleeping car service covers 125,000 miles of railway or about three-fourths of the railway system of the country, and that increase of service has necessitated an increase of its capital from time to time until it is now $36,000,000. Every share of this increase has been offered to stockholders and sold to them or others in the ordinary course of business at not less than par in cash, so that for every share of the increase outstanding the company has received $100 in cash. There are over 4,000 stockholders of the company, of whom more than one-half are women and trustees of estates, and the average holding of each stockholder is now 86 shares, one-fifth of them holding less than six shares each."

Yale Athletes Practice.

LONDON, July 14.—Numerous spectators were at the Oxford exercise grounds yesterday, when the Yale athletes came out for practice. All the Americans appeared. Despite the recent injury to his knee, Capt. Hickok threw the hammer. L. V. Sheldon, although much better of his strain, refrained from work. G. F. Sanford, however, had recovered sufficiently to practice starts with A. Pond, jr., who after wards ran a hundred yards at top speed in remarkably good time. J. S. Morgan did two of the three laps required for a mile, and W. S. Woodhull covered a half mile, although not at full speed. Alexander Brown's best throw in putting the weight was 41 feet 9 inches. E. H. Cady and D. B. Hatch did some good work in practicing the high jump.

Millhall, Pa., Swept by Fire.

LOCK HAVEN, Pa., July 14.—Fire swept through the centre of Millhall borough last evening and destroyed 20 houses and that many stables. The Wilt hotel, Brady's hall, and the Christian church are among the buildings burned. Seventeen families are homeless to-day. The total loss is estimated at $30,000. Fire engines from this city and Bellefonte extinguished the fire.

Without a Governor.

ARMORIA, I. T., July 14.—The Chickasaw nation is virtually without a governor. The convening of the legislature Thursday by a call of Acting Governor McClure proved an utter failure, the legislature refusing to respect his authority. The time of election, Aug. 8, being so close, further action toward securing a governor pro tem will be abandoned.

THE DAILY PRESS.

A. L. FORCE, - - Publisher and Proprietor.
WALTER IRVING CLARKE, - Managing Editor.

Six pages today.

Don't miss the extra sheet.

"The New Rebecca" is a good story, and is complete in this issue of The Daily Press.

The Press had to grant a good many clerical pardons today. Nearly every clergyman was late with his church notice. 10 o'clock, gentlemen, please!

On Senator McPherson's recommendation, the President yesterday withdrew from the Senate the name of Capt. Jim Parker for United States District Attorney for New Jersey.

Hail the trolley! The big company has secured a State charter, and will proceed immediately to run its electric line from New York to Philadelphia, through Plainfield, as already mapped out in The Press. Popular fares will prevail.

That Editorial Souvenir Edition of The Daily Press is bearing fruit. A New Yorker saw a copy, and was filled with admiration of the town thus pictured and described. "I was going to buy a house in Harlem,"—he said—"but this seems such a delightful place that I guess I'd better take a run out there and see if I can't invest my money to better advantage." That means that he will surely become one of the army of home-holders in Plainfield. That Editorial Extra was a great town-boomer.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The Manhattan has a great clambake tonight.

—Liefke's Vienna bread is the staff of life in Plainfield.

—Everyone is asking Ellis Campbell how he lost that front tooth.

—Telephone service to A. D. Shepard's has been improved by the substitution of a long-distance for the local 'phone.

—Mrs. Schwinewurth of Westfield unsuccessfully attempted suicide by taking carbolic acid Thursday. The loss of two children affected her.

—Fruit jars and lamps complete are among a lot of other things given away at the 5 and 10 cent store. Look in the windows and see what they offer, at Allen's.

—One employer is beloved by his men, and that's Edward Love. He was given a rousing send-off, and a good-bye remembrance, on leaving Plainfield yesterday for his 8-weeks trip.

—Chief T. O. Doane is arranging the batteries and constructing the wooden shelter for the gong-ringing apparatus on the North Plainfield electric light station for the Gamewell Telegraph Fire Alarm Company.

—Fifteen of the Third Regiment Cadets went to camp at Roseville, S. I., this morning. Others will follow this evening and tomorrow. They all braced up on Reynolde's famous soda before they departed.

—Plainfielders going away need new trunks and bags. It is on just those goods that Hallock is having a big sale His stock is large, and includes all grades. It's wonderful what a little money can buy. Stop in and look things over.

—The Dime Savings Bank is determined to have light even on stormy days. Incandescent lamps are to be used, the current being converted from the trolley wires. This busy and prosperous institution cannot spare the time to wait for the clouds to roll by, but must keep everlastingly at it, working for the depositors' interests.

THE SECRET ORDERS.

New Jersey Odd Fellows will hold their annual field day in Asbury Park September 3.

Deputy Great Sachem Warren C. Westlake of Elizabeth conducted the installation of the following officers in Miantonomoh Tribe of Red Men last night:

Prophet—Charles Holstein.
Sachem—Joseph C. Wyckoff.
Senior Sagamore—David C. Allen.
Junior Sagamore—Francis M. Whiteley.

Jailed Jaggy Jane.

Mrs. Jane Rittenhouse of Linden avenue, who returned from a thirty days trip to jail last Monday, caused a disturbance while intoxicated at a funeral on Steiner place yesterday afternoon. Magistrate Crosley sent her to Somerville for 10 days this morning, as she could not pay a fine of $7. This is the first case in the borough under the new law which allows borough officials to send short term prisoners, convicted under the local ordinances, to the county jail instead of keeping them in the lockups.

Runaway.

Butcher Dolan met with an accident this afternoon while out with his horse and wagon.

He was said to be under the influence of liquor and commenced beating his horse, which ran away.

The wagon collided with another rig. Dolan was injured very badly. Sergeant Kiely arrested him.

The Dog Poisoner at Work.

D. W. Littell's valuable Newfoundland died in agony last night. Dr. Herbert dissected it today and found it filled with arsenic.

CAPT. GRANT ON TRIAL.

BUT IT IS AN INVESTIGATION HE HIMSELF COURTED.

This Is a Case of Railroad Detective Against Municipal Policeman, and What Captain Grant Is After Is Vindication and a Railroad Pass—Mr. Spangenberg, the Fighting ex-Councilman, Takes Firm Hold of the Matter for the Captain.

This afternoon was set as the date for the hearing of the case of Police Captain George W. Grant, in the matter of certain charges made against him by Detective Corsa of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. This is not a trial before the Plainfield municipal authorities; they are satisfied with his career and with his record. It is a case of alleged professional jealousy and rivalry, in which the Captain merely seeks vindication from statements made against him by Mr. Corsa to the railroad company, and incidentally to have a railroad pass granted to him.

Time was when the captain of police in Plainfield could have a pass from one year's end to the other, and no fuss about it. During the term of office of Councilman Leonard Spangenberg, however, and at his instance, the pass held by Tunis J. Carey, then captain, was revoked, because of alleged abuse of the privilege. When George W. Grant became captain the pass was restored, and its use saved the city considerable money in transportation. The authorities felt that the captain was entitled to an annual pass because he and the police were of material use to the railroad company in suppressing disorder and trespass on the company's property.

At the beginning of the year Captain Grant was refused extension or renewal of the pass privilege, and was told that this was the result of Detective Corsa's report to the company. It was said that Mr. Corsa had told the company that the Plainfield police neglected and hindered the company's interests, and that the robbery at the North Avenue station was a direct result of their negligence. Another cause for complaint was said to be that the local police had railroad trespassers released by disclosing technical defects in the proceedings of Mr. Corsa against them which otherwise would have escaped notice.

A stormy scene occurred between Messrs. Grant and Corsa at the North Avenue station soon after the announcement that the Captain was not to have a pass. Mr. Grant told Mr. Corsa what he thought of him, and defied him to make charges against him for public investigation. The Captain told him that he had merely told these stories against the police in order to shield his own shortcomings.

The matter was brought to the attention of Mayor Gilbert, who had interviews with officials of the road, and agitated the question with as much persistence as comported with the dignity of his office, but without avail. Ex-Councilman Spangenberg, who is a natural fighter against public and private wrongs, learned how matters stood, and secured the permission of the Mayor to take hold of the case.

Mr. Spangenberg was told that there was no use of his trying to do anything with Mr. Williams, but to Mr. Williams direct he went. The official was naturally disposed to take the part of the company's detective, but Mr. Spangenberg kept at the matter, and produced such documentary and other evidence that he at last convinced Mr. Williams that the claim of Mr. Grant, that the charges against him and against the other officers were false, merited investigation. Therefore he ordered one made, and detailed an officer to take charge of it. That is why Detective Corsa, Captain Grant, Sergeant Kiely, and others having special knowledge of the case, are assembled in the Mayor's office this afternoon, hearing the evidence reviewed. Walter L. Hetfield was engaged to represent the legal aspect of the Captain's position.

Ho for Roton Point!

The map printed in The Daily Press today shows the route to be traversed by a large number of Plainfielders next Tuesday, when the great excursion of Grace M. E. Sunday-school takes place, to Roton Point. If you have had any ignorance on the question where is Roton Point, let this enlighten you; and furthermore let the actual experience of next Tuesday reveal to you the delights of this resort. This is not a new discovery, though it is new to Plainfield. The result of the excursion next Tuesday will be that Roton Point will be a regular thing every year for those Plainfielders who rejoice in a delightful sail and a visit to Nature's garden-spots. One such garden-spot is Roton Point, and you all know what a pleasure it is to explore the waters of the Sound. The best of company, the best of sails, and the best of stopping-places, are irresistible attractions for Tuesday next. So let's all go.

At Rest.

Robert John, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. R. Huntsman, was laid to rest in Evergreen Cemetery yesterday. The little one had been but a few days ill of cholera infantum. The disease at first seemed mastered, but suddenly affected his head, with fatal results, in spite of the most skilful medical attendance and tender nursing. The body was brought from Belmar, where the death occurred, to Plainfield yesterday morning, and the immediate family accompanied it to the cemetery, where a short and touching service was held. Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards read Scripture and offered prayer, and gave comforting words to the afflicted. Blossoms were clasped in the tiny hands, and he seemed to be peacefully sleeping.

Blackberries.

Now clustered in verdured recesses, and rich
With the nectar by fairies of morning distilled,
The blackberries temptingly offer their sweets
Till the pails of the gleaners their bounty has filled,
And if at their best you'd partake of this boon
You should purchase at Collier's a blackberry spoon.

—Weakfish are biting at Boynton Beach.

FELL FROM A WINDOW.

Too Much Drink on a Too-Hot Night Has Serious Results.

John Burke, aged 21, a mason's apprentice, fell from the second story of 23 Somerset street shortly before 2 this morning. His injuries were not very serious.

He returned to his home very late, and had evidently been drinking. He went to his room over Peter Anderson's restaurant. Shortly afterwards he fell from the window to the sidewalk, striking a sign in his fall. Occupants of the house heard the noise and carried him into the house. He was conscious when they reached him

Dr Andrew Manning was called. He found that Burke had sustained a fracture of the left arm near the wrist. He will probably be kept from work for six weeks. His body was bruised, and it is possible that he sustained internal injuries, although the physician could find no evidence that such was the case.

STRUCK BY A LOCOMOTIVE.

One Child Killed and Another Fatally Injured.

While two children of Charles Carleton of High'stown, a six-year-old deaf and dumb boy and a four-year-old girl, were playing on the railroad track this morning near their home, a passenger train struck them.

One died soon afterwards, and the other seemed likely to die at any time. Their bodies were thrown a considerable distance and were badly mangled.

The engineer of the train saw the children on the track and blew the whistle as a warning, but they paid no heed to it, neither seeming to appreciate the danger.

When the engineer saw that the children did not get off the track, he reversed his engine, but could not prevent the locomotive from striking them.

They Are Sorry to Lose Her.

Miss Cora Clark of Edsall's millinery department leaves today for her home in Vermont. Last evening she entertained the clerks in the store at her boarding-place on Grove street. The evening was spent pleasantly, and all wished the hostess a safe journey. Refreshments were served in abundance.

—The horse tamer wires The Press that he is ill, and his show is postponed.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 15. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Right and wrong ways of seeking.—Eccl. I, 13-18; Math. ii, 7-11.

The illustrations of seeking which we have in our references are both taken from the lives of wise men. The first case is that of Solomon, the wisest of the ancient kings, and the other is that of the three wise men of the east who came to worship Christ where He was born at Bethlehem. It would be naturally supposed perhaps that the methods and results of the searches of wise men would be similar; but, however, this was far from being the case, and this is still seen today. The wisdom of some men today leads them to Him who is all wise, and the wisdom of others leads to an opposite result. The difference in results is due to the difference in the ways by which men seek. There is a wrong way and a right way for seeking God. He who seeks in the wrong way will not find Him, but he who seeks in the right way will find Him.

1. The wrong way of seeking. This is illustrated in the case of Solomon. Solomon was a wise man. God had given him great wisdom. In trying to find an explanation for the things of this world, or, we may say practically, in seeking for the higher life, Solomon used his own personal wisdom. He says, "I gave my heart to seek and to search out by wisdom concerning all things that are done under heaven." And Solomon was sorely disappointed. He did not find the peace and rest to his soul for which he was undoubtedly seeking. The reason was simply because he sought in the wrong way—in what we may call man's way. Many men today are making Solomon's mistake. They are seeking for peace and rest, but in human ways and are disappointed, as he was.

2. The right way of seeking. This is illustrated in the case of the wise men. And how did they seek? In God's way. They simply followed the star that God had placed before them. They did not use their own wisdom to find the Saviour, but followed in the path that divine wisdom placed before them. And they were not disappointed. They found Christ. They found peace, rest, joy and salvation. If we are seeking these things, how are we seeking them? Only one way is right, and that is God's. His spirit can guide us when we cannot guide ourselves. Let us trust Him. Let us follow in the path that He marks out before us, and we will not go wrong.

Bible Readings—Gen. xxxvii, 15; Num. xv, 39; Deut. iv, 29; I Chron. xxviii, 9; II Chron. xix, 3; xxxiv, 3; Ps. x, 4; xxiv, 8; lxiii, 1; Prov. viii, 17; xi, 27; Math. vi, 32, 33; Mark xvi, 6; Luke, xi, 9; Col. iii, 1; Heb. xi, 6.

How to Hold a Ship Social.

Arrange the room in which the social is held so that it may look as much as possible like the interior of a ship. Decorate with flags and ropes, life preservers and other nautical properties. Sling hammocks here and there. Let the only light come from lanterns, either the ordinary ship lantern or Chinese lanterns. A promenade by the light of these lanterns will be very pretty and pleasant.

Get as many as can to come in nautical costume, the girls with sailor hats, and the boys with sailor suits. The mess will consist of ship fare—hard tack, canned fruit, biscuits and the like. At eight bells a nautical programme may be introduced. Such songs as "Larboard Watch," "Nancy Lee," "The Midshipmite," "The Three Fishermen," "The Murmuring Sea" and the like may be used, together with the recitation of poems, such as Buchanan Read's "Drifting," "The Ancient Mariner" and others. There may be a sailor drill, and of course there will be as many sailors' yarns as the programme has room for.

Keep a Clear Vision of God.

God punishes sin by the withdrawal of His presence. The hardest punishment a sensitive and loving child can have is the withdrawal of the parent's face. The hiding of God's face is harder to bear than the heaviness of His hand. Sin clouds the soul and hides the face of God. To see God's face forever is heaven's glory. To lose God's face forever is hell's unutterable woe. Keep a clear vision of God by keeping a pure heart. If your sins have caused God's face to become dim, heed the warning. Any punishment is preferable to being left without God's presence.—Christian Intelligencer.

God's Laws.

Law kept is a blessing. Law broken is a curse. Every law of God has its penalty as well as its precept. Body and mind and soul and heart are under the law of God. The laws of health are their own sanitary corps. A study of God's punishments will reveal the presence of God's laws. The blessings of Gerizim and the curses of Ebal came from the same law. The decision of the judgment will be according to law.—Selected.

Christian Endeavor Brevities.

Down in Australia the Wesleyan Endeavorers are holding enthusiastic conference missionary rallies.

There's a Christian Endeavor union in Wales—the Swansea union—that already has enrolled 24 societies, with 1,100 members. This union was not in existence four months ago.

In about nine months the number of Christian Endeavor societies in the English denomination, the Methodist New Connection, has increased nearly fourfold.

Christ conquers sin. He brings out victory in His open hand. From His hand we take it by the power of prayer, and to Him alone we render thanks here and forever.—Bishop Brooks.

The Endeavor movement in England is in some quarters adding to its work some of the functions of our American Chautauqua.

The Attraction Tonight.

One of the big attractions at Edsall's tonight is a special sale of fine handkerchiefs at about one-half their usual price. The elegant large show window of his store in the Babcock Building tells the story.

—Don't wonder whose is the new tallyho. It's J. W. Reinhart's.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost miraculous cures are on record in radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

At the business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist Church last evening an amendment to the constitution was adopted, which provides for a Press Committee, whose duties shall be to see that the work of the society is properly given to the different daily papers

An important point to come before the big convention is the choice of a place for the next gathering. Two years ago it was held at New York, and the monster convention of 1892 is one of the memories of the metropolis that was captured by this immense army. Last year the Christian Endeavorers met at Montreal and now they are in session at Cleveland. It is understood that the New Jersey delegates will recommend Asbury Park as the meeting-place for the next convention. It is an ideal place for such gatherings and the Christian Endeavorers will make no mistake if they select Asbury Park for 1895. They can count on a hearty welcome from New Jersey.

CHURCH CHIMES.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis preaches tomorrow in the Presbyterian Church in Bound Brook.

Hope Chapel excursionists to Asbury Park today filled a train of two section, one of ten cars and the other of six.

Coming excursions: Friday, July 20 Park Avenue, Congregational, and First Presbyterian, to Asbury Park; Thursday, July 26, St. Mary's, to Highland Beach.

The Park Avenue Baptists will be pastorless after Monday until Sept. 1 Rev J W Richardson goes to Middlebury, Conn., for rest. He has had a long season of zealous labor.

The Sunday-school of the First Church of Christ will conduct an entertainment next Thursday evening in the chapel, and the proceeds will be used to provide a picnic for the school at a subsequent date.

CYCLING COMMENT.

In the one mile handicap race at Asbury Park yesterday Monte Scott of the Crescent Wheelmen came in second.

The Associated Cycle Clubs of New Jersey will conduct a 25 mile road race Labor Day, over the level course from Elizabeth through Rahway to Cranford and Westfield.

Two cyclers, a woman and a colored man, collided at the corner of North and Park avenues at 8:30 last evening. Neither was hurt, although the wheels were somewhat damaged.

F. L. C. Martin sprained an ankle in stepping from a train at the North Avenue station at 7 last evening and was not able to act as assistant marshal of the century race this morning. C. B Morse took his place in checking the riders.

The New York Evening Post says: "The Atalanta Wheelmen of Newark, N. J., have refused the entries of two negroes entered in their 100-mile race from Newark to Princeton and return tomorrow. They are C. D. Brooks of the Eagle Bicycle Club, Newark, and Israel Jones of the Victor Bicycle Club of Plainfield, N. J. Brooks at once began suit against the club to recover the amount of money he had spent in getting ready for the race. He says he purchased a new wheel and has already gone over the course in less than record time. When the entrance money was returned a note was sent stating that a number of the other riders had declined to start in the race if the colored men were allowed to do so."

The Newark-Princeton century racers attracted large crowds along Fifth street this morning. The first man to reach town was G. W. W. Voorhees of the Union County Roadsters, handicap 40 minutes, who arrived at 9:42. The rest followed closely in small bunches, the last man passing at 10:53. Of the 114 who started in Newark, 102 reached Plainfield. James G. Voorhies of Madison avenue, handicap 35 minutes, was the sixth to pass. Walter Manning, with the same handicap, was thirty-fourth. The scratch man of the race, William VanWagoner, the veteran of ten years of cycling, did not start. He rode down after the riders passed, intending to go in at the finish. On the back trip this afternoon, G. W. Conklin of East Orange, handicap 34 minutes, passed the marshals at 2:03; W. P. Clowan of the Mercer County Athletic Club, 36 minutes handicap, at 2:11; A. W. W. Evans of the New York Athletic Club, 5 minutes handicap, at 2:21.

—H. C. Sargeant of Westfield, partner of ex-Mayor Wm. L. Saunders, has been granted two more patents on rotary rock-drills.

—For a good old-fashioned family picnic with excellent music and arrangement, go to Boynton Beach.

—Commencing tomorrow, Sunday papers will be on sale at the store 205 Liberty street.

THE NEW ISABELLA

By MARGARET LEE.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

It is with great gallantry as well as with great ability that Margaret Lee has ventured to combat in the ranks on what must be taken nowadays as the unpopular side and has indicated her belief in a certain old fashioned doctrine that the path of suffering may not be the path of duty only, but likewise the path of glory and of triumph for our race.—W. E. Gladstone in Nineteenth Century.

One sunny morning in early spring a tall, slight girl dressed in a gray cloth costume opened the door of a bank building in the vicinity of the New York city hall and addressed the first person whose head was visible behind the strong partition that rose like a wall between them.

"May I see the president?"

The mingling of decision and despair in the woman's voice made the paying teller hesitate until he had given her a comprehensive glance. Then he spoke slowly, allowing a man who was on his way to the street an opportunity to overhear the conversation.

"Do you want to see the president?"

"Yes."

The girl was too absorbed in her own purpose to suspect motives in utter strangers. She stood passive and unconscious of observation while the teller satisfied as much of his curiosity as was possible under the circumstances.

"The president is engaged just at present."

"May I wait?"

"Yes. Go as far as you can and turn to your left."

The young woman took the direction indicated, passing a line of openings in the dark wall guarded by gratings, which seemingly served a double purpose. The narrow passage way ended at a number of doors, on one of which the word "President" was perfectly legible. Now the woman stopped and summoned up all her resolution. She could hear her heart beating till the pain grew intolerable. Her cheeks burned. Her throat felt dry and voiceless. While she stood thus, the man who had started for the street, retraced his steps, passed her and opened the door next to the one that was demanding all her courage. The action made no impression upon her beyond the fact that the doors were easily managed, and after a moment of supreme effort she turned the handle in front of her and stepped into a little room containing a table, several chairs and a tall, elderly, gray looking man, who was walking about the small floor as if measuring its square feet. He gave her a quick, sharp glance, which suddenly grew fixed, and then drew forward a chair, which she eagerly accepted.

"Did you wish to see me?"

"Are you Mr. Messenger?"

The man nodded, and observing her agitation spoke assuringly.

"What can I do for you?"

"Oh, everything! You can do everything for us." Her eyes sought his. She clasped her hands. "I am Jasper Barclay's sister."

"There, that will do. It is useless to discuss his affairs. The police authorities have the matter in charge, and"——

"But you could stop all these efforts to arrest him"——

"Do you know where he is concealed?"

Miss Barclay's flush deepened, but her eyes still held Mr. Messenger's prisoners. He had read of such eyes, but this was his first experience of their power.

"No. I wish we did. His wife is ill, dying. I am sure if Jasper knew it he would risk everything to come back to her. If you will stop all these proceedings against him, we can advertise for him, and perhaps he will see the notice."

Mr. Messenger smiled sarcastically.

"You tell me that you have no method of communication with him."

"Oh, no! He left the house one morning as usual to come here. We have never seen him nor heard from him since. We only know the terrible things that the papers are publishing about us all."

"Truth is sometimes disagreeable."

"But it is not truth."

"Not truth! My dear young lady, do you know what he has been doing systematically for years?"

"But his wife was not extravagant."

"That is one of the evil effects of crime. The innocent have to suffer, perhaps more than the guilty. I am very sorry for you and your family, but the law must take its course in this case. I am very busy this morning. Perhaps you are aware that the unexpected death of the cashier not only left matters in confusion, but led to your brother's sudden flight. You must excuse me."

"Don't send me away until you have heard all that I want to say. What good can it do you to put him in prison? He has no money. He can do nothing there to repay you. We have nothing. We have never earned a dollar."

"Yes, it is all very sad, but it is about time to make an example of somebody. This sort of thing is growing too rapidly in the community. The banks charge their losses to the general account and make no effort to bring these offenders to justice. We have concluded to spare no efforts in this case. I am glad to know that you are ignorant of your brother's whereabouts. It somewhat simplifies the matter. Now, if you will excuse me"——

"Surely you cannot be so cruel, so heartless. Think! Is there not something that we can do? I am willing to work and try to return at least some of the money."

"One hundred thousand dollars, with the interest and the costs—you think you could earn it! Miss Barclay, your brother has been cruel, heartless, cowardly, swindling his employers, who trusted him, and keeping his family in a style wholly inconsistent with his salary. You know I am right in what I say. Why, you must have been a child when your brother began clerking it for us."

"I was. He has taken care of me for years."

"I see." Mr. Messenger commenced pacing the very limited space. It was annoying to have a woman sobbing in his private office. She could be overheard in the next one. He stopped quite close to her, lowering his voice: "Go away now. I am really too busy to give proper attention to you. Come again—Let me see—say, on Saturday afternoon."

"Then you will be merciful?"

Her sudden change of expression startled him.

"You really overestimate my power. I have not the control."

"But you have influence."

"Influence is not always successful. Suppose you take a few days to think over the bank's side of this matter, and in the meantime I shall consider yours. This is all I can promise you to do."

Mr. Messenger's eyes were cold, searching, judicial, and he glanced from Miss Barclay to the door as if every moment were fraught with incalculable importance to him and his affairs.

She rose, making an effort to regain her composure, and lingered at the door to hear him repeat the Saturday arrangement. Evidently she and her misery were dismissed from his thoughts, so she passed out of his office and the building, feeling quite exhausted and somewhat bewildered.

Had she gained anything by carrying out this resolution to obtain an interview with the president of the bank to plead her brother's cause, or had she simply exposed the family suffering to an unsympathetic heart?

She pursued her way slowly, wearily. It seemed almost impossible to go home and meet her sister-in-law's eyes. There was nothing hopeful to report. The children, too, would gather about her, ignorant of the cause of the general suffering, yet expectant of some relief coming through her, their girlish aunt and playmate. She had already explained their father's absence by telling them that he had gone out of town on business. This answer satisfied them, although Sallie, the eldest, had wondered why papa did not bid them "goodby," or take his valise. Their mother's illness made an excuse for keeping Sallie and Tom at home from school, but the great difficulty was to detain them in the house until a refuge could be found where they would not hear their father discussed.

Miss Barclay pondered this problem, wholly indifferent to the objects that formerly would have attracted and interested her. She looked ahead, seeing only her way, but suddenly a man's figure approaching caused the blood to rush to her cheeks, while her heart again commenced its painful throbbing. Mr. Andrews was one of her most devoted admirers, her most regular caller, her favorite escort. Did he also see her? She raised her eyes, with a feeling of desperation. He was steadily regarding something on the opposite side of the street, and as she passed him she knew intuitively that he was purposely avoiding a meeting. Perhaps it was done out of consideration for her. She was willing, quite willing, to give him the benefit of the doubt. But the incident caused new reflections. She could not but admit to herself that the family was well nigh friendless. Only very near relatives had come to the house since the publication of the news of the defalcation and her brother's disappearance from his post as assistant cashier, and these relatives had only come to moralize on his folly and offer useless advice. Substantial help was out of their power. At length a sensation of physical exhaustion overpowered her. She felt like falling, and she attempted to hail a passing street car. An obliging person in her vicinity stopped the vehicle, and she felt sure that he assisted her to a seat. She seemed to be under the influence of a terrible dream, out of which she must awaken to find herself the happy girl of former days. The blow had fallen so suddenly that a perfect realization of its full meaning was utterly impossible. She found herself revolving one idea on the next Saturday. Mr. Messenger would at least see her again. It was necessary for her to think deeply, to overcome this timidity, this nervous excitement, this cowardice of conscious disgrace and present every possible argument, every plea that could be urged in her brother's behalf.

When she reached home, the children were at lunch, and her sister-in-law was asleep, so she had a short respite from eager eyes and pointed questions. She had no wish for food. Solitude was the only desire she knew. But this was wholly unattainable throughout the day. Her lunch was sent up to her by the thoughtful servant, and in due time Mrs. Barclay had to hear the result of the visit to the bank. About 5 o'clock in the afternoon something happened. A gentleman sent up his card, with a request for an interview. The name was not familiar—William Howe.

Miss Barclay prepared to see him with a sense of dread that was perfectly visible in her manner and her appearance as she entered the darkened drawing room. Mr. Howe rose with a reassuring gesture and offered his hand.

"I am a friend of your brother," he said quietly, "and I am inclined to think that I can convey a message to him should you care to communicate with him."

"Oh, indeed we do long to hear from him, and Mrs. Barclay would like to write to him."

Miss Barclay's agitation was painful.

"If you will procure me the letter, I shall try to get it safely to him. Do not address it and use no names. How is Mrs. Barclay?"

"Oh, wretched!"

Mr. Howe was observing her closely, and she met his glance timidly. He was a slight, fair haired man of medium size,

"I am a friend of your brother," he said quietly.

colorless, with refined features and a certain air of languor which might result from lack of strength or simple affectation.

"I am sorry to hear it."

"So you know where Jasper is?"

"I do not. I am leaving town, and I may make it possible to see him. But this is between us. Now, what are you doing? Have you seen the bank people?"

"Yes"— she hesitated.

"If you would trust me, I think I could be useful to you." He smiled. "But I must know everything."

"You are very good. No one has offered to help us in anyway." Miss Barclay controlled herself and told Mr. Howe what had passed between her and Mr. Messenger. He seemed much interested and kept his eyes fixed on her face.

"You must not take offense, but in regard to money. How do you manage?"

Miss Barclay flushed.

"Mrs. Barclay had several diamonds, and one of her brothers advanced some money on them."

"I see. Has she enough for present demands?"

"Yes. I think so."

"Then we can correspond safely. You will keep this appointment with—Messenger, and let me know what transpires."

"Yes. I hope so much. He would not have asked me to come again unless he felt willing to help us."

Mr. Howe's gaze was perplexing.

"No doubt he is willing to be kind. I trust so, for your sake. My name is new to you, I think. I have known your brother for a long time, but our relations were entirely business ones. I suppose I was wrong."

The last sentence was spoken dreamily.

"How do you mean?"

"It would be difficult to explain the meaning of my remark. We often see our mistake too late to do anything but regret them. Now, if you will get me the letter."

Miss Barclay left the room, and Mr. Howe looked around him as if taking a mental inventory of its contents. It was certainly an expensively furnished apartment, but people are given to acquiring a lot of costly movables and concentrating them in a limited space, with a view to appearances, even if other parts of the house are left bare of ordinary necessaries. Then, again, Mrs. Barclay might possess some resources, although the incident of the diamonds was against this supposition.

Mr. Howe was anxious to be charitable, but any practical person would wonder how a man could expect to support a family in such surroundings upon a salary of $5,000 a year and make provision for that conundrum called the future. Barclay also owned a country house, and he belonged to several clubs, of which he was a prominent member. The inconsistency of his method grew in proportion as Mr. Howe considered its extent. It was limitless. No doubt the family had credit and owed all the neighboring tradespeople. Here were two women and four children left to face the situation.

Miss Barclay came in with the letter, and Mr. Howe took it mechanically and put it in a pocketbook. Then he looked at her.

"You say there is money in the house?"

"Yes. We had to dispose of the diamonds. Several persons refused to give us any more credit."

"Have you any plans whatever?"

"No. Mrs. Barclay is prostrated. We are too anxious about her to think of anything else. She dictated the letter. If we could only get away from here with the children."

"Have you any resources personally? I mean this kindly, but you need not answer me."

"Why not, when you are so kind? I have nothing. Jasper has taken care of me."

"Does he own this house?"

"Yes, but Uncle Charley says that the bank will take everything. However, that is only right. I suppose we are beggars."

She looked straight at Mr. Howe. A slight flush made him much more attractive.

"I wouldn't put it quite so hard. You must have relatives able to assist you until you can adopt some method for taking care of these children."

"Relatives! Yes. Not one has offered to do a single thing for us. I think they consider this a well deserved punishment. I cannot explain my own folly, my blindness. But I never dreamed of such a possibility. I did not know the amount of Jasper's salary, and he was always alluding to successful speculations."

"Miss Barclay, you must cease thinking of his folly. No one accuses him of premeditated crime. He yielded to temptation. We must be practical if we would do anything of real benefit to his wife and children. How about the country house? Can you remove to it at once?"

"The children might go. I am afraid Mrs. Barclay is too weak to travel, and I am anxious to see Mr. Messenger again. He must have meant to do something."

"Have you a trustworthy servant?"

"Yes, the nurse. She is devoted to us."

"Let her take the children to the country house as soon as possible. When that is done, we shall see clearly what the next move should be. Can you attend to this yourself? Are you equal, I mean physically, to taking hold and managing matters for your brother?"

"I must be able. There is nobody else to do it."

Mr. Howe regarded her slight figure and white, eager face.

"We can't take a third person into our confidence. You must not mention me to Messenger. See what mercy the bank will show. Now, here is money."

"Oh, indeed it is not right."

"Let me know best. You and Mrs. Barclay cannot dispose of your trinkets for a song. That only complicates things more. This is a loan. I can settle with Barclay hereafter. Now you will get the children away and keep a good heart until I see you again."

Mr. Howe pressed her hand, gave her a bright look and hurried out of the room.

Miss Barclay sat down quite overpowered by the increasing strangeness of her position. She gazed about the room, recognizing the familiar objects. She was not suffering in a vivid dream; she was struggling with realities. Who could Mr. Howe be? A business acquaintance. Well, perhaps men learned to feel for one another through such an intimacy. Certainly her brother's social friends now held themselves aloof. Of those whom he had visited and entertained, not one had even inquired for the family.

The children's voices roused their aunt to the necessity of prompt measures. There were some purchases to be made and much packing to be done, and when Mrs. Barclay was told of the country project she begged to be taken along, even if she had to be carried from her bed to the carriage.

Her physician agreed to her wish; the change would be beneficial. Open air was a possibility in the seclusion of her country home. Appetite would follow exercise. His features brightened. Miss Barclay caught the enthusiasm of hope.

"She will get well again?"

"My dear girl, it will greatly add to the chances of her recovery," was the guarded reply.

Within two days the family had reached their country house, and on the following Friday Miss Barclay returned to the city ready to keep the Saturday appointment.

Occupation and motion had aided her. She dressed to go to the bank, feeling that if permitted she could find language to express her thoughts. No message had reached her from Mr. Howe, and she was balancing her confidence in his honesty of purpose against certain misgivings which were worrying Mrs. Barclay. That lady was suddenly oppressed with the suspicion that Mr. Howe was a private detective, and that she and her children were assisting on a plan which would result in her husband's arrest. This dread, in addition to her nervous prostration, was counteracting any good effects of her journey and materially increasing Miss Barclay's perplexities. Recalling Mr. Howe's voice and looks, it did not seem possible that they were deceptive. If so, then she knew nothing whatever of physiognomy. She would never again trust a man's tongue and eyes.

However, he was sincere! She felt that he was actuated by kind motives, and having this faith to sustain her she entered the bank building with a certain degree of courage. To have even one friend or even to believe in the possession of such a treasure is a source of wondrous consolation.

It did not occur to Miss Barclay to stop at any grating for information, and in her abstraction she did not notice that she passed unobserved to the president's room. She had lost sight of the fact that the day was Saturday and the hour afternoon.

Mr. Messenger was seated at his table, apparently very busy. He acknowledged her entrance with a nod and proceeded with his writing. This reception was dispiriting. The matter that was vital to her was nothing to this man but a routine business appointment, to be coolly considered in its turn. Miss Barclay found herself watching him. His gray suit was immaculate; a single diamond glistened beneath his delicate tie. Presently he folded his letter, addressed and stamped it, dropped it into a basket near the table and then turned slowly, fixing his gaze on Miss Barclay's face.

IRON-TONE

For Nerve, Brain and Blood.

MAGIC IRON-TONE is an ideal summer drink. Served at fountains with soda it is incomparable. It must be remembered that the average summer drink is just so much syrup and water, having no medicinal properties, and which only serves to provoke instead of to assuage thirst. But MAGIC IRON-TONE not only quenches thirst, it gratifies the longing for "something that will go to the spot;" it sparkles and bubbles along the palate and the throat; it gratifies the parched stomach and immediately clears the films from the brain. It dispels the despondent, depressed feeling inseparable from weariness and overwork; it lightens the load the system seems to be carrying, causes the eye to flash, the mind to spring into activity, and the nerves and muscles to jump from a flaccid to an elastic condition.

"I don't think I can offer you any encouragement in regard to what we were discussing." He spoke with some hesitation and much emphasis. "The bank officers are very much incensed. Barclay had been in their employment for over 20 years. They trusted him and gave him what they considered an ample salary. I think they have the sympathy of the community in their determination to bring him to justice."

Miss Barclay spoke with an effort. She seemed to be pursuing her fleeting courage: "If they had been more careful years ago, they might have discovered that he was living beyond his means. We did not inherit money; his wife had none. Surely in all this time they could have learned that he was yielding to temptation."

"I know that argument. What are we to do? We must trust somebody. So you would place the responsibility on the bank and urge that the temptation made the thief."

"It made the opportunity. I suppose he began by taking small sums."

"Yes, and speculating with them, intending to replace what he borrowed, as he expressed it. There are men who take pride in being trustworthy. We supposed him to be one of them. If opportunity made the thief, we would have no honest men or women. The world moves on trust. I fear, Miss Barclay, that nothing of much weight can be urged in your brother's defense."

"You might then have mercy. Give him at least his freedom. Let him go where he is unknown and try to support his family."

"You are importunate. I did mention letting the thing go."

"And did no one feel sorry for us? I think I should have sympathy for a man's family under similar circumstances. It would not hurt you and them to be merciful. Good people should be the most charitable."

"We all can theorize as to what we should do under certain conditions. I can understand that you are accustomed to an expensive style of living. I believe you wear diamonds." Miss Barclay's glance fell beneath Mr. Messenger's keen survey of her face and figure. Then she felt her cheeks growing warm. Had Mr. Howe betrayed her? Was Mrs. Barclay correct in her surmise? "Luxuries are very acceptable to your sex, I will admit, and you are all quite willing to enjoy them, no matter how they are obtained. You ask no questions. Vanity and ambition are the ruling passions. When the bubble bursts, you want sympathy for yourself, mercy for the chief offender. Why? You do not deserve it. Your brother was not ill treated. Why did he not come forward like a man and say that he could not live on his salary. We thought it an ample one, but as he was a useful man to us no doubt such a demand would have been honored."

"A straightforward course is always the wisest. But that would have led to a discussion. We might have questioned his need of luxuries. It was easier to obtain them by fraudulent methods. An explanation might also have drawn attention to his habits, and he certainly could not have justified his personal expenses. Had he denied himself and tried to secure a future provision for his family even by wild speculations, I think we could make greater allowance for him. You must admit that his selfish indulgence swallowed up his salary and an amount of money which used to be regarded as an independent, ample fortune. Lack of principle is the secret of your brother's fall. An honest man would starve with millions within his reach. I can assure you that Barclay formed a scheme for enjoying stolen wealth, which shows not only perfect premeditation, but rare skill in its conception and execution. I think we were unfortunate when we left so much in the power of such a man. You will have to consider his lapse in its true aspect and nerve yourself to the coming events. His present refuge is known to the police, but there are some legal formalities to be settled before he can be arrested."

Miss Barclay sat immovable, pale and voiceless, watching Mr. Messenger's face. Undefined horror and a sickening sensation of weakness chained her to the strong office seat. Hope and courage vanished; she was conscious only of misery. Gradually she became aware of Mr. Messenger's voice and his long, thin fingers touching her arm. She shrank from the contact and caught her breath as if frightened.

"I am not so unkind as you think me," he was speaking in low, earnest tones. "I can realize how terrible this is for you, brought up in affluence, accustomed to luxuries."

"I wasn't thinking of myself," she cried piteously. "I cannot bear it! This will kill his wife. Oh, for God's sake, have mercy upon us! Think if he were your son, your brother, your relative." Mr. Messenger shook his head. She caught his hand and suddenly sank on her knees. "There must be something that will soften your heart."

"Yes, there is. You can do it."

"I!"

Miss Barclay stood up and gazed in amazement at Mr. Messenger, who regarded her with an expression that baffled her.

"Yes, you. Listen. I am rich. I can replace every cent of this money. I can influence the directors to hush up this matter, now and forever. I can assist your brother to make a living here or abroad, as he may prefer. I can do all —all that you desire. You have your brother's fate in your hands. Can you not follow my thoughts? You are beautiful. I love you. I will take care of you, devote my whole life to you. You shall enjoy everything that love and money can procure. Say that you will be mine, and at once your wishes shall be carried out."

"Do you mean that you will marry me? I was sure that you were married."

Mr. Messenger's face was inscrutable. A bright color tinged his thin cheeks. He spoke with some hesitation:

"You were quite correct. I have a wife and children. What of it? They will know nothing of you. I will provide against exposure. You seem incredulous, shocked. There is nothing unusual in what I am proposing. You shall have your own house where you please, in town or country. I will settle money upon you, so that in case of my death you will be in a position to marry. Men lead double lives for your sake. I will do it. Is it so much to ask in return for all that I can do for you? You are young, beautiful, accustomed to ease and luxury. I will protect you from toil and poverty, save your family from disgrace. I can even make it appear that your brother was not intentionally dishonest. Think of what I say. Go away and consider it. Give yourself to me, and I am at your mercy. I will do all you wish. Do not reject my offer. Leave me now and weigh it well when you are alone and when you are contemplating the results of your brother's arrest. You think me cruel. I want to be kind."

"Kind! Can disgrace cure disgrace?"

"Pshaw! Put disgrace out of your mind. Shield your brother. No one will advertise your doings. The thing will die out like much greater scandals in a few days. Life is rapid. Crime follows crime so closely that there is no time even to draw a moral. As a rule, people attend to their own business."

"And I am so obscure, so insignificant that my dishonor would make no difference?"

"I thought you were willing to make sacrifices. Why did you come here to tempt me with your beauty? Have I misunderstood you?"

"I thought you were a good man."

"I thought so too. You see how a man may be tempted. As you have just told me, the opportunity is the weak point. You see how one wrong, one crime encompasses another until we become involved in a web of evil. I offer you this way out of your trouble, knowing precisely the possible results. I am not deceiving myself or you. You have inspired me with a passion, consciously or unconsciously, I care not. I am willing to risk the consequences and save your brother from punishment for your sweet sake. Take your own time to answer me. Love can wait. You will not betray me. There is everything to gain in granting my prayer. But I cannot postpone matters for very long. Say 'Yes' now, and a telegram will stop all further efforts against your brother's freedom."

He put his hand on hers. His eyes were bright with passion.

Horror stricken, Miss Barclay shrank from him and reached the door, escape her only thought. Mechanically she left the bank and found herself going toward the ferry slip. Once on the boat, her mind began the argument which Mr. Messenger had suggested. For her the world had suddenly changed. What had she done, what had she said, what had she even thought that could induce this man to speak thus to her? Her cheeks burned, her heart throbbed at the recollection of his words. Was she awake and sane, or had trouble turned her brain? Perhaps he was trying her, curious to discover the depth of a sister's love. But, no; when she recalled his voice, the expression of his face and his manner, she realized that he was wholly in earnest. It was all terrible, a waking agony that had to be endured, and endured in secrecy and silence. Who but she could understand the situation or appreciate its complications? Fortunately it would soon be dusk. When she reached home, she could avoid observation and ward off questions until she had time to reconsider calmly all that had happened to her during the short stay in the city.

She found a seat in the train, and turning her face to the window appeared to be absorbed in the well known scenery. But her secret was eating her vitality. She could not get away from it. Several of her acquaintances, observing the misery in her face, refrained from greeting her. There is a marked family resemblance in our country villages and their scattered residences, large and small. When the train stopped at the gayly painted little station, Miss Barclay hurriedly left it, passed through the waiting room and took the path leading to the main street, on which her brother's house was situated. She knew every step of the way, and having only her sun umbrella to carry she walked rapidly, indifferent to the dusk and the solitude. She was realizing bitterly that trifles would never again ruffle her. Existence was now but the endurance of never ending grief and terror. How to act so as to do right—this was the problem. The burden felt too great to bear. As she struggled with herself, putting her womanhood in the balance with her pride of family honor and her brother's rescue from legal punishment, she became aware of a man's steps behind her, and she turned instinctively to see how near the stranger was to her.

He was tall and broad shouldered and wore a large, slouched hat, and even as she looked he spoke:

"Belle, don't you know me?"

In a moment she was clinging to him, with kisses and tears of joy.

"Oh, Jasper. You!"

"How is Mollie?"

"Very ill. But you are here."

"For a few hours only. Oh, my girl!" His sobs shook his strong frame.

Miss Barclay gazed at him and then looked about them without letting go of him.

"Come, some one may see you," she gasped.

"In a minute. Give me time. Messenger was all kindness. He sent me Mol-

"Belle, don't you know me?"

lie's letter and hinted that if I came here he would not let me be arrested. So until tomorrow night I can stay with Mollie."

"Oh, how good of him!"

"Yes. I did not expect consideration from him. Now, if you will go ahead, just prepare Mollie. Get the children out of the way. I'll see them tomorrow."

Miss Barclay hastened to the house, bewildered by her brother's words. She could not grasp the explanation of his appearance. Gradually it dawned upon her that Howe was acting under Mr. Messenger's directions. What would Jasper think if he knew the price demanded for all this seeming kindness?

The children were on the porch watching for her figure in the gloom, and a shout of welcome brought her to the contemplation of her present duties. They had waited for her and supper was ready. She kissed them and took them to the dining room, and having seated them at the table ran up to Mrs. Barclay's room. The poor woman was lying as she had been ever since her husband's flight, her eyes wide with expectation of some new horror. Her voice was only audible.

"Belle, how long you have been away? Did you see Mr. Messenger?"

"Oh, yes." After a pause, "He is really trying to help us." Miss Barclay was lighting a candle concealed under a pink glass lily.

"Well, dear?"

"Mollie, there will be plenty of time to talk about him next week. Some one is coming to see you—Mr. Messenger managed it for your sake—Jasper."

"Jasper!"

Mrs. Barclay sat up, with a quick cry of joy. The next moment her husband was holding her. In the dim light his sister was shocked at his appearance. She joined the children and tried to eat, tried to think, but in vain. Visions danced before her eyes. Her brother, pale, haggard, a fugitive, his wife clinging to him with unchanged love. Mr. Messenger's figure bending toward her, the office for background. Again Mr. Howe confronted her, proffering friendship.

Fortunately the children demanded attention. She entertained them until bedtime, and finally saw them all sleeping, rosy cheeked and smiling.

Occasionally she could hear the murmur of voices from her brother's rooms, and at 10 o'clock she carried in milk and crackers for Mrs. Barclay. Her brother sat by the bed, and husband and wife were crying.

"Try and sleep, Belle. I'll look after Mollie through the night."

Sleep! Miss Barclay had forgotten how it felt to sleep dreamlessly and awaken thoroughly refreshed. She went to her own room. The youngest child, a fair boy of 3, was slumbering in his crib. She bent over him and touched with her lips his little rings of golden hair that lay damp on his pretty head. The child appealed strongly to her heart. Suppose her brother could go among strangers and bring up his children among new scenes. Six people might be saved from misery by the sacrifice of one, and the sacrifice could remain a secret. She knelt by the crib and instantly rose to her feet. She could not pray while contemplating this step. Should she take it, prayer for her would be ended forever. To know herself to be an outcast among men was a condition to be dispassionately considered, but to be by her own act shut out from God—that it was impossible to conceive. Of what use was she in the world? She was dependent, ignorant and it would seem very friendless, since the people in whose love she had trusted had failed her. Perhaps this sacrifice was a duty. Her conscience would not support the mental effort. Thus the struggle continued—affection, pride and intellect arrayed against conscience. At dawn she still debated the question, and then she fell asleep, only to awaken and reconsider it.

That Sunday was one that could never be forgotten. It was made up of miserable scenes between parents and children, husband and wife, brother and sister. No ray of hope, no prospect of change, no consolation, brightened it for a moment. At dusk the fugitive would depart, if anything more unhappy than when he arrived.

Late in the afternoon he found his sister alone in a small library that opened from the parlor. She had gone there to avoid him, dreading an explanation of his visit.

"Are you reading, Belle?" he asked with hesitation.

"No. I was only thinking."

"Mollie tells me that you have seen Mr. Messenger about me Belle. What do you suppose will be the end of all this? He seems inclined to mercy. What do you think?"

"More than I can put into words." She stretched out her hands, and her brother held them and gazed down at her troubled face. "Jasper, can any one else do anything for you?"

He shook his head.

"Even Messenger's consideration is a mystery to me. I don't know that my coming has done Mollie any good. To part again, knowing what is coming, is going to kill her. If I had the courage, I'd blow out my brains. It would settle all accounts. I suppose I'll come to it sooner or later. I cannot live thus, beggar and outcast, listening with dread for the steps of my pursuers."

"You could be arrested here?"

"Oh, yes."

"Jasper, is this a trick to bring you here?"

"No. Messenger is square. He will keep his promise. Besides there is no need of artifice. I cannot escape. If Mollie had only reproached me! You will not do it either. I think insanity would be a blessing."

"Jasper, Jasper! You must try to listen calmly to me. Suppose I should do something very wrong to save you?"

"You, Belle? What evil could you commit that would help me? My misery is turning your brain."

"No. My mind is very clear. You say Mr. Messenger is honest. I mean as regards promises. He has made me an offer. He cannot marry me, but he will replace this money, put an end to these legal proceedings and assist you in some strange place if—if"——

Her flushed face sank against his shoulder.

"My girl, you must be going mad! Messenger would never dare make you such a proposal."

"He did, yesterday, in his office. I am not crazy. It is all—all real."

"My God!"

Mr. Barclay looked at her downcast eyes. He sat silent, shivering, cowering. What were his thoughts? His sister waited in vain to hear them. She threw her arms around his neck and pressed her lips to his cheek, murmuring:

"Jasper, speak to me. I can hardly endure this suffering."

"Why did you tell me this?" he muttered hoarsely. "Think, think what a temptation!"

"I know it, but you—you will help me to resist it, Jasper. Say—say that I must."

A deep groan escaped his lips. After a moment he rose, put her from him and suddenly left the room.

Miss Barclay stood passive for some seconds, then sat down, and the room seemed to whirl about her. What had come to her? Could this be death? How welcome it would be! But, no. Should she die, what would become of Jasper, of Mollie and the little ones? She must overcome this weakness, this shrinking from duty, this cowardice in facing trouble. She must find Jasper and make him tell her what to do. Should he consent to her dishonor, he and Mollie would certainly continue to love and cherish her; they would never forget her sacrifice; they would teach their children to love and respect. Respect? She began to tremble at the prospect she was trying to conjure for her own consolation.

Presently she arose, but her limbs failed her. No doubt Jasper would seek her again. He had gone away so that she could review the situation alone. But his sudden going! What did that mean? There could be but one interpretation of it. He dared not trust himself to let her read his thoughts; he had not the courage to express them. So this was her brother, but he saw only an open prison door. She pressed her hands together and waited. The minutes passed. No one came to her. The silence was ominous, and she grew suspicious. At length she went in search of him. She had suddenly thought of Mr. Howe and also remembered that in her anxiety she had forgotten to mention him and his proffered friendship to Jasper. It would be better for Jasper to hear all that had happened during his absence.

She went to his room, and finding the door ajar entered silently. Mrs. Barclay was lying on a lounge near the window, and a perceptible change for the better had taken place in her whole manner and appearance.

"Where is Jasper?"

"Where is Jasper?"

"Didn't he say 'goodby' to you? He went half an hour ago. The children walked a part of the way with him. Belle, what did you tell him? He seems in much better spirits. I have felt different ever since."

Miss Barclay sat down facing the window and gazed at the pretty budding foliage and the sunset coloring beyond.

"Mollie, did you tell him about Mr. Howe?"

GOOD SPIRITS

follow good health while low spirits, melancholia, impaired memory, morose, or irritable temper, fear of impending calamity and a thousand and one derangements of body and mind, result from pernicious, solitary practices, often indulged in by the young, through ignorance of their ruinous consequences. Nervous debility, and loss of manly power, not infrequently result from such unnatural habits.

To reach, reclaim and restore such unfortunates to health and happiness, is the aim of an association of medical gentlemen, who have prepared a treatise, written in plain but chaste language and treating of the nature, symptoms and curability, by home treatment, of such diseases.

A copy of this useful book will, on receipt of this notice, with 10 cents in stamps, for postage, be mailed securely sealed in a plain envelope. Address, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

UNCLE SAM PONDERS.

NOT DECIDED WHAT TO DO ABOUT THAT NETHERWOOD POSTOFFICE.

Storekeeper Guttridge Won't Let Postmaster Noel Have Room In His Store and Postmaster Noel Won't Put Up a New Office Till He Sees What Is to Be Done About Free Delivery—The Postal Inspector Fails to Show Up and Is Said to Have Disapproved the Proposed Change.

Netherwood is still greatly stirred over the local postoffice question. The petition of the leading citizens of the Heights has gone to the Department at Washington, and letters keep going to the authorities praying that the petition may be granted. All the influence available is brought to bear on those who can in any way help consummate the project.

Meanwhile Charles J. Noel, the new appointee of the President, serenely awaits the outcome. He told a Daily Press reporter last night that he was resting on his oars. His course of action depends on what news comes from Washington.

It was Mr. Noel who asked that a postal inspector be sent on to review the situation and decide what was proper to be done. The inspector was expected to be on hand this week, and the petitioners for annexation to Plainfield were primed with strong evidence that the change would be a most beneficial one to the public. But the inspector did not appear. Mr. Noel was asked last night if he knew why.

"I suppose"—he said—"that the Department is content to let the matter remain as it is. The inspector was in Netherwood May 30, and reported that it was not advisable to change. He said that the service was just as good as it could possibly be under free delivery from Plainfield. When this clamor began to be made by certain people for a change, I asked that he investigate it more fully, and was told that he would; but since he has not come I believe that he is content with his original report."

Mr. Noel said further that he was inclined to let postal matters rest in Netherwood till the final and authoritative decision was announced. If the office were to be abolished, he did not intend to spend any money in improvements. As soon as he knew definitely that he was to remain in office, he would provide every facility for satisfactorily handling the mails.

"Much"—said Mr. Noel—"has been been told about me that is based on hearsay. It has been circulated that I intended removing the office to my house, and I find that it was on the strength of such misrepresentations that such people as F. E. Miller of Hotel Netherwood signed the petition urging the change. Now the fact is that I have no intention of discommoding the public. I should prefer that the office remain where it is, but Mr. Guttridge will not consent to that. Notwithstanding that I won the contest for postmaster in a fair and honorable manner, Mr. Guttridge cherishes resentment against me for achieving what he himself was striving for.

"Mr. Guttridge based his claim for securing in the office on his own statement that he voted for Mr. Cleveland in the last election. I based my claim on my work for the party all my life. I was endorsed by James E. Martine and Congressman Dunn as the leading worker of the Democratic Association in my end of the town. Indeed, Mr. Dunn himself asked me to take the office, in preference to giving it to Mr. Guttridge, who was so long a Republican. It was after Mr. Guttridge had secured the signatures of a long list of citizens that I entered my application, and Mr. Martine was afraid that I stood little show in the fact of such a petition; but when I showed what I had done for the party, including the sacrifice of time and money in running for office, and satisfied the authorities of my qualifications, the nomination came. I got my commission soon after sending in my bond properly secured. The office is a money-order office, making the bond a heavy one, $5,000; but I qualified, and am today Postmaster, except that I have not taken possession.

"Mr. Guttridge asked me when I intended taking possession, and I told him this week Saturday night; but I shall wait till next Monday or Tuesday, when my paraphernalia will be here. You see I have to provide pigeonholes for the letters; I sent for them, but they have been delayed. If Mr. Guttridge would let me keep the office in his store I could start right in now. I went to him and said 'Jim, are you willing to have the office kept here?' He said No: that he wanted the room. I asked that I be permitted to keep the office there two or three weeks till I could provide a place on that side of the track. He would not consent to that. I told him it was not that I would be accommodated, but that it would be an accommodation to his customers. I didn't want to make them cross way over to my house to get their mails. He would not agree even to a temporary arrangement, and I am forced against my will to remove the office temporarily to my house until the decision of the Department is announced. If the postoffice is to remain a Netherwood institution, and I am to continue as Postmaster, I shall erect a handsome little building on the station side of the track, and will in connection with the office operate a general store. I want to have the office under my administration a convenience to the Netherwood public. The mails are as frequent and as speedy now as they would be under a free-delivery from Plainfield, and it is a credit to the Heights to have their own postoffice. Another general store would also be a benefit, giving that boom to local trade which competition always brings."

For the citizens of Netherwood it may be said that all who have been asked, have signed the petition, except three, and those three were warm friends of Mr. Dunn, the present incumbent, who thought that there was a possibility of his retaining the office in spite of Mr. Noel's appointment. A mounted carrier is what the people are hoping for.

SERENADED BY ELIZABETHANS.

Merry Times Doing Among "Our Boys" in the State Camp.

CAMP WERTS, SEA GIRT, JULY 12.

The Quartermaster's detail of the Third Regiment, with that officer, arrived in camp at 10:30 a. m. today. In preparing to receive the regiment which arrives Saturday afternoon an endless amount of work is necessary, but despite the extreme heat, Captain Hawkins, assisted by Sergeant Benbridge, Corporal Louis E. Mascot, Privates Harry Homer and M. Macgregor, organized the department and sat down to a number one mess within two hours after receiving word from Trenton as to location of quarters. In the evening a triple quartette serenaded the Quartermaster the members of which were Dave Merritt, Ed. Moulson, J. Lawson, Dock Williams, H. Fairfax, D. Reed, V. Reed, S. Townsend, E. Moulson, G. McIntyre, C. Little, Jim Brown.

Although Captain Hawkins insists that the lieutenant is the only "mascot" in his department the boys say that the two little fellows, Leon Hawkins, the Captain's son, and Jimmy Moore, are where the luck comes in.

Keeping Coolly Clad.

Cool and comfortable clothing costs but little, at Schepflin's store. He announces today a wonderfully cheap line of coats and vests, of jackets and trousers, and the prices are in an inverse ratio to the mercury in the thermometer. Think of a complete suit for $1.92. You can pay more, but you can also get one for just that figure. They're good goods, and wear as long and look as fine as though they cost a good deal more. Schepflin's is the place.

George Begins It.

The season in Music Hall will begin August 23, when the great and only George Thatcher will open the house with his new minstrel company, which he will organize in this city previous to that date. It is probable that the house will be disposed of before the season is far advanced. The Thatcher rehersals begin next week.

SUIT OVER A SALE.

SUPREME COURT CASE AGAINST POSTMASTER HETFIELD.

Charles W. Dodd, Not Satisfied With the Purchase of the Hetfield Coal Yard, Asks the Law to Give Him Damages—Mr. Hetfield Denies that the Business Was Misrepresented, and Holds that He Himself Was Deceived About Property that He Took in Partial Exchange.

An important lawsuit to come up in the Supreme Court at the September term is the case of Charles W. Dodd, ex-Chief of Police in Plainfield, and ex-Warden of the Union County Jail, against John M. Hetfield, Postmaster of Plainfield.

Papers in the suit were served by Sheriff Kyte. Mr. Dodd claims damages on the sale of Mr. Hetfield's coal business to him. He alleges that he bought the business on representations which afterwards proved to be mistaken. For instance, it is said that the amount of coal in stock turned out to be less than was specified in the bill of sale, and the actual income of the business proved less than Mr. Dodd had anticipated. Also, that the membership fee of the Coal Exchange, $500, was misstated.

When the dispute arose, arbitration was spoken of, but the case passed that stage, and actual suit was begun.

Mr. Hetfield insists for his part that there were no misrepresentations whatever, and that Mr. Dodd went into the matter with his eyes open. Regarding the bulk of coal in stock, Mr. Hetfield says that he and Mr. Dodd agreed on an estimate of it, and that that estimate, arrived at by the careful judgment of their combined experience, was accepted as final by them both. He offered to call in the service of another to estimate, but Mr. Dodd was satisfied and said it was n't necessary. As to the value of the business, Mr. Hetfield holds that it was worth just what he said it was, and regards it no fault of his if it has depreciated. He says further that for his part he did not get what he bargained for, as some land in Elizabeth which was a part of the consideration, turns out to be worth less than he was told.

The differences of these two prominent citizens will engage the Supreme Court at an early date of the session, as I such adjustment will then be made as concords with the evidences. Until the matter is settled it will be one of the chief topics of the town.

OBITUARY.

Augustus D. Holmes.

In the death of Captain Holmes, as he was familiarly called, who departed this life at his residence last evening, this community loses an upright and honored citizen, his family a beloved husband and kind father, and the church to which he belonged one of its most sincere and devout Christians. Captain Holmes was born in the State of Maine, about 70 years ago, he was in many respects a typical New Englander, he was a gentleman of sturdy character, firm integrity, upright in his dealings and very conscientious in all his acts. At the early age of fifteen he became a seafaring man, and by earnest application, strict attention to business and strong capabilities within a few years became a ship master, and served in that capacity for over a quarter of a century.

Captain Holmes was a strong Union man, and in the last Rebellion rendered incalcuable services to his country; in the year 1861 he was engaged in shipping Union troops and during the seige of New Orleans he was under the command of Benjamin F. Butler, for whose services he landed Vermont troops at Ship Island and New Orleans. After the war, he retired from the sea and settled with his family at Amelia Court House, Virginia, at which place he resided for several years; although of strong Northern Union tendencies, the people of that community on account of his generous impulses, broad sympathies, sterling integrity and honest convictions formed an early and deep attachment for him. At this place he was tendered the presidency of a local bank, which position he however respectfully declined, preferring to live in domestic retirement and giving his attention to looking after his mother's estate and personal business. In the year 1876 he paid a visit to Plainfield and was so impressed with the beauties of Plainfield that he was induced to bring his family here in that year and made this city the place of his residence up to the time of his decease.

Captain Holmes was a well-known personage in this city, and one of its loyal and true characters; he was a public spirited man and admired our institutions. Although he was at various times spoken for public office yet he preferred to lend private counsel to public utterances, and sought to elevate good men as public servants, rather than advance himself. He was a man of excellent judgment, a close observer, and a safe adviser, and despised shams and hypocrisies. In his home he was a model domestic man, ever attentive to the wants of his family and spared nothing to make those about him comfortable and happy. He was sincerely devoted to his beloved wife, in whose companionship he for over forty years had found much deep sympathy and enjoyment.

Captain Holmes was a very devoted Christian and a member of the Crescent Avenue Church. He was possessed of strong religious sympathies, he was a constant attendant at divine service and a regular and methodical giver to religious and charitable enterprises.

He carried his Christian life into his home and elsewhere and by precept and example constantly aimed to exemplify a model life.

He leaves a widow, Myra Holmes, and four children, namely, Mrs. John Faxon of Fitchburg, Mass.; Alfred Holmes, who was graduated from Princeton College last month; and the Misses Gussie and Ethel Holmes. His body is to be taken to Newburyport, Mass., and interred in the family plot at Oak Hill Cemetery at that place.

Society Excursion.

A plan is on foot among the younger society people to get up a picnic to West Point on the Hudson for Saturday, July 21. They propose to charter a fast steamer and leave Plainfield on one of the early morning trains so that they may start from the dock at about 9 a. m., arriving at West Point early in the afternoon. After seeing the sights at the fort and the town they will return to the boat and expect to arrive in Plainfield late in the evening. Every one will carry his own luncheon, which will be consumed as the spirit moveth.

Hustling for the Leading Luminary.

Peter Collins the popular old-time Plainfielder has left the service of the Brooklyn elevated roads, for which he was train despatcher, and is now enlisted in the work of booming the circulation of that bright and sprightly newspaper, The Evening Sun. He has undertaken to extend its service and influence in the suburbs; and speaking for Plainfield The Daily Press can say that The Sun's latest editions will be most heartily welcome in this city where intelligence rules. Intelligent people prefer such newspapers as The Evening Sun and The Daily Press.

WOMAN'S HEROISM.

FEW PEOPLE REALIZE IT.

What Heroic Efforts They make to Appear Cheerful and Happy.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

How many, think you, have any idea of the suffering endured by so large a proportion of the women of America?

Very few men have the slightest conception of the pain endured by so many women, even those of their own households, or the heroic efforts they make to appear cheerful and happy.

Maid of Orleans.

Women ought to be told just where the danger lies, for their whole future may depend upon their knowledge, and how to overcome it.

Lydia E. Pinkham solved the mystery after years of experience and study. She unerringly traced the cause of nearly all of woman's suffering to the womb.

Other years followed and her Vegetable Compound was given to the world.

And now, after years of marvellous success, it is acknowledged the unfailing remedy for all forms of female complaints, ovarian troubles, inflammation and ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb, irregularity, suppressed or painful menstruations, leucorrhœa, bloating, flooding, backache, nervous prostration, kidney trouble, etc., and is found on the shelves of all respectable druggists.

Such cases as this of Mrs. M. F. Fozzy, of Campello, Mass., speak volumes. She says: "I was very sick. I did not ever expect to get up again. Menstruations had stopped suddenly. The pains all through my body were terrible. As a last resort I sent for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a box of her Liver Pills. I also used a package of her Sanative Wash.

"Relief came at once, and to-day I am a well woman. Menstruations regular, no backache, entirely cured of leucorrhœa and bearing down pains. Nothing equals Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"No. I never thought of the man. Is it Mr. Howe who is to help us?"

"I cannot tell. Everything is so indefinite."

Mrs. Barclay sighed.

"You are not so hopeful as Jasper. I suppose men understand each other better than we can."

Miss Barclay rose, speaking excitedly:

"Mollie, what are you talking about?"

"Why, Jasper says that the president of the bank has a plan that will save him from prison if it can be carried out."

"And he told you what it was?"

"No. He said it would be wiser to wait until something was decided upon. You see, I am so weak. I suppose he did not want to raise my hopes too high. I could not bear disappointment."

"He was right, Mollie. I am so glad to see you looking so much brighter. I suppose if Jasper were saved from this terrible punishment you would recover your health. It is not too late."

"I really believe that I could, Belle. I feel so much stronger already, as if a great weight were taken off my heart."

"Poor Mollie!"

Mrs. Barclay put her hand on Miss Barclay's arm.

"Belle, how good you are! Jasper says that if he is saved it will be all due to your energy and devotion. It is wonderful what courage you have had, and strength. While I, his wife, sank under this blow, you rose to the emergency. Jasper has always said that you were different from ordinary women."

Miss Barclay was silent. Her extraordinary gifts were leading her in a strange path. She was to become a victim to her sisterly affection. She spoke decidedly.

"Mollie, if you will take heart and try to be courageous, you will help me. I want you to think of cheerful matters until, as Jasper says, something definite is decided upon."

"I only wish to please you, Belle."

"I see the children coming. We must control ourselves."

To her great surprise, Miss Barclay slept that night dreamlessly and refreshingly. Exhausted nature asserted its rights. Monday found her strong and equal to the consideration of everybody's side. In the afternoon a neighbor brought her a letter, with the remark:

"I thought I could save you a walk to the postoffice, and that was the only thing in your box."

Miss Barclay glanced at the strange address and quickly opened the envelope. The paper was fine and the handwriting very legible.

To Miss Barclay:

Your abrupt departure on Saturday afternoon has induced me to write to you in regard to the subject we were discussing. It will be necessary for me to know your decision by Thursday at noon. I cannot make excuses to the police authorities, although I can put an end to all action on their part.

I hope you have given this matter sensible consideration. Believe me, you take old fashioned views of life—views which I am happy to say are fast becoming legendary. This is a material age. Existence is short; we know nothing of the future. To enjoy is the object of our best thoughts. Pleasure is the watchword of the period. Let us grasp all that we can crowd into our narrow limits.

I offer you all that money supplies—luxuries, amusements, freedom from anxiety, your brother's present safety and future prosperity.

Why hesitate? Why judge the present by a dead past? To whom are you responsible? Who has the right to judge you? Circumstances bend and shape our little careers. We should at least have the privilege of choosing ease and enjoyment while suffering from the evil effects of wrongs committed by others. Consider the advantages of your present position—young, beautiful and beloved, you are offered the opportunity to do a noble action without entailing suffering upon yourself or others. It is impossible at this era to regard yourself as a victim or a sacrifice. History records women capable of doing all that I ask of you for much less worthy motives.

Place your brother in safety; give him occupation; let his family join him, and then be free to enter upon the enjoyment of all that the world can offer and my devotion can secure to you. I shall expect to see you on Thursday, say, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Until then matters will remain as they are, but you must come with your decision. P. M.

During the remainder of Monday, all Tuesday and Wednesday morning Miss Barclay carried this letter in her pocket and read it at short intervals. Meantime no message came from Jasper, but Mrs. Barclay gained strength hourly. The straw was becoming a rope. Late on Wednesday afternoon Miss Barclay took refuge in the library, locked the door and sat down to wrestle with herself for the last time. A knock interrupted the mental argument, and she opened the door to perceive Mr. Howe standing behind the servant. Surprise kept her silent until they were alone, and glancing at him she saw that he looked more animated and had a touch of color in his cheeks.

"You seem astonished," he said abruptly. "Your brother has been here."

"You knew he was coming."

"Oh, yes. Have you kept a good heart?"

"I am afraid not. I did not suppose that you were acting for Mr. Messenger. Jasper knows that Mr. Messenger assisted him to visit us."

"And was he not kind in so doing? I thought Mrs. Barclay's recovery might result from seeing her husband. I am mystified. What was the outcome of last Saturday's interview between you and the president? You hoped so much from it."

Miss Barclay flushed painfully. Mr. Howe regarded her intently.

"Nothing definite was decided upon." She spoke with an effort, and her eyes drooped under his steady gaze.

"But he had some message from the directors."

"Nothing pleasant."

"Miss Barclay, you are suffering intensely. Forgive me for what may seem unwarrantable curiosity. The truth is that, even if acting for Mr. Messenger, I am anxious to be of service to your brother. Unless you are perfectly candid with me I cannot act to the full extent of my powers. This matter certainly came up for discussion before the bank officers since I saw you, and the president had certain propositions to lay before you as your brother's representative."

"Yes, but they were not favorable."

"So? Was the interview final?"

"No. I am to see him again tomorrow."

"What are you to decide?"

"Don't ask me. I cannot comply with his demands."

Mr. Howe rose and paced back and forth in the pretty room. Miss Barclay sat as if motion were impossible to her. She became aware that Mr. Howe had stopped beside her and was resting his slender hand on the table near which she sat. The hand was white and delicate, and something made her look up and catch his glance. His fairness made his face almost boyish, and his eyes had in them the frank expression and the blue of childhood. He spoke calmly.

"Why may I not ask?"

"It can do no good. I cannot explain."

"You amaze me! There is nothing that may not be openly discussed in this matter. In fact, there are no secrets connected with it now."

"I suppose not with my brother's crime."

"Then with what, pray, has secrecy to do? Miss Barclay, there is no personal question involved? Impossible! What do you mean? I insist upon knowing precisely what has passed between that man and you. He would not dare"——

Mr. Howe's languor changed to the other extreme. His eyes shone, his voice was full of decision, his manner that of a person accustomed to giving orders. Miss Barclay mechanically drew the letter from her pocket and placed it on the table.

"He would not dare."

He read it rapidly, then carefully and finally looked at her bent head and burning cheeks.

"Am I to believe that he made this proposition to you in words last Saturday afternoon?"

Miss Barclay tried in vain to raise her eyes and speak. After a moment she gave way to passionate tears. Mr. Howe watched her.

"I think you are wise to let your feelings overpower your reasoning faculties. The truth is that you have been putting great restraint upon yourself for days, and the reaction has to come. I hope you will forget this letter."

"How can I? It must be answered, and my brother must go to prison. It will haunt me as long as I live."

"Your decision, then, is made?"

"Yes. Misery is not so terrible as disgrace, and it cannot last very long."

"It will kill you."

"Yes. I used to regard death as something to dread, but it may come as a friend."

"A friend?"

"Yes, one that takes us on a pleasant journey."

"Miss Barclay, may I take this letter for a few hours?"

Her great, sad eyes met Mr. Howe's.

"Would that be honorable? He misunderstood me. He said I tempted him."

"Indeed! He put the blame on you. Well, I can believe that his thoughts would never grasp yours. We are limited by our undertakings, our education, our opportunities. This letter is a very good showing of the man's character. I trust it has made no impression upon you. Believe me, there is a spiritual life as far beyond the physical and mental as life is beyond death—a life that broadens and deepens with each day's experience, the one life that satisfies us if we endeavor to follow its teachings. The soul must be considered, fed, cultivated, enjoyed. I pity the man or woman who dares not spend a portion of each day in communion with the soul and its Giver. You know what it is to struggle with evil. Your soul has come out conqueror. How have you developed in the past two weeks? Trouble has made you strong; sorrow has shown you your better self. You can choose the right and yet sympathize with the man who would ruin you forever. Trust me, I will not betray your confidence. I would, however, advise you to keep this letter until this whole matter has reached a settlement. Of course it has no signature, but it bears internal evidence that would tell against him." Mr. Howe drew a chair to the table and sat down, facing Miss Barclay. "Now, let us anticipate somewhat. Tomorrow you intend to grant him this interview?"

"I must."

"And your mind is fully made up as to your decision?"

His eyes made her hesitate.

"Yes, I think it is. Still, when it comes to the point, I may let myself go. I have altered my determination a dozen times since I received his letter. You see, I am so obscure, so insignificant.'

"That is one view of the subject, I grant."

"Then it is the one chance to save my brother."

"And your brother would let you make the sacrifice?"

Miss Barclay was silent for some minutes.

"I can understand his desperation," she said, with difficulty. "Perhaps, when it comes to the last, Mr. Messenger will have mercy upon him and spare both, because of my love, should I agree."

"Poor girl! You cannot tell what you will do a few hours hence. Your anxiety is not for yourself. Yet I feel sure that your conscience will assert itself and keep you from the power of your emotions. I wish I could assist you to calm judgment."

"I wonder why you are here!"

"To tell you that should the bank officers withdraw their charges against your brother I can obtain employment for him in another part of the country."

"It sounds like mockery after listening to Mr. Messenger's words. He alone can help us."

"I think you are right. I had no idea that this man could control so much money, but he is interested in several stock companies and no doubt has the means at command."

"You think he would do all that he promises?"

"Yes, even if his passion led him into crime. He could take trust money and replace your brother's deficit. I tell you, if you yield to evil you increase the inclination to it in others. Therefore, if possible, be strong to do right and let results follow. No one is required to sin in order to take another's burden."

"I know you are right. I am glad you came. I was beginning to fear for my reason."

"I should have been here sooner. I was detained. It grieves me to see you suffer so."

"It cannot be helped. Think how much more Jasper suffers. Then, his wife!"

"I see. I shall be anxious until your interview tomorrow is concluded."

"Listen. I am going to do right. You have shown me the way. I can suffer. I am learning how so quickly. Will you come again to hear what I have to tell? We are quite alone here, deserted. Do you know that I forgot to tell Jasper of your kindness? I was too excited, too troubled."

"It is best as it is."

"Once tomorrow is past, everything that we dread will happen. Will you care to come then?"

"Yes."

"You are too good."

"Oh, no. Others feel for you as I do, but probably see no way to help you and are fearful of intruding upon you. A good woman never lacks sympathy. For that matter, neither does a bad one. Some one can always be found ready to excuse poor human nature. Now I must leave you. I have a great deal to attend to before I can see you again. I must set about it without delay. Just at this moment I am supposed to be in Colorado pursuing health. You look surprised. I may explain in the future. Remember I am going away with perfect confidence in your fidelity to conscience."

"That helps me."

"You must be firm in your resolution to help yourself."

"I am beginning to fear that my strength will give out. I hate the idea of seeing that man again." She looked up. "I could write to him."

"I can appreciate that feeling. Still, I think it would be wiser for you to control your dislike of meeting him and face the interview tomorrow. Otherwise you might hereafter regret your want of courage."

"I suppose you are right. I will promise you to go."

"At 2 o'clock in the afternoon you will be in Mr. Messenger's office?"

"Yes."

He rose and offered Miss Barclay his hand, and without hesitation she put hers into it.

"And you will be brave for conscience's sake?"

"Yes."

He pressed her hand, bowed and left her. When Miss Barclay went up stairs, Mrs. Barclay was quite excited.

"So that detective has been here again? What did he want?"

Miss Barclay felt her cheeks flushing.

"I never thought of him as a detective. He came to inquire how our affairs are progressing."

"He knows more about them than we do. Oh, Belle, when will all this perplexity be ended?"

"Tomorrow afternoon."

"And you hope for something?"

"Mollie, let us try and put this away from us for tonight." She suddenly threw her arms around Mrs. Barclay. "I must save all my strength for tomorrow."

"Still I know that you are expecting"——

"Mollie! Mollie!"

Miss Barclay made her escape to her own room. Once alone, she repeated to herself Mr. Howe's words and tried to strengthen and nerve herself by recalling them. She even sought solace in them.

The long, sleepless night at last ended in dawn, and the exhausted girl rose and occupied herself with little offices for the children. She had to take the noon train, and even the effort to dress wearied her. Once seated in the car, she felt her courage revive. The sea breeze proved invigorating during the few minutes spent on the North river boat. She walked from the ferryhouse to the bank, and as she opened the heavy door discovered that her nerves were very unsteady. Could she trust herself to persevere? It was just 2 o'clock. She paused at the first desk to ask if she might see the president, but her lips would not do anything but quiver. So she passed on to the well known door, opened it and entered quickly, suspecting her own courage. The man whom she dreaded to see rose, came forward and offered his hand and then stood gazing at her inquiringly. With clear, steady eyes, Miss Barclay had met his easy, confident smile and withheld her hand.

"I am here," she said, her voice sounding thin and sharp. "I will not do what you ask."

"So you are satisfied with the results of your rejection of my offer?"

"No, no. You know I am not. But I have thought it all over. We must suffer the disgrace, the misery, even poverty. After all, thousands of women earn their bread honestly and keep their self respect. I can do it. But surely you will have mercy upon my brother. Perhaps you have been trying me. Have pity and think how I will always honor you as a kind, good friend."

"I offered you my terms, Miss Barclay. Listen. Sit down. Let me urge my claim."

"No. Don't touch me! Don't mention that again! I won't hear you!"

"Then you can go."

"Are you human?"

"Yes, thoroughly so."

"It cannot be true. Were all men like you, the world would come to an end. Nature would reject her own work. You disgrace humanity."

"Miss Barclay, your words can be overheard. You must leave me. I certainly confided in your sense of honor. You are not willing to accept my terms. The matter is ended between us. I insist upon your going. If you will not leave the room, I shall."

Miss Barclay left the room. She walked slowly like a blind woman along the narrow passage. At the door a man overtook her.

"Are you Miss Barclay?"

She nodded and tried to regard him with composure. His manner was wholly businesslike.

"Mr. Messenger would like to see you for a few moments." The message filled her with strange hope. Again she turned and followed her guide, who preceded her into a room opposite the one she had just quitted. It was a much larger apartment, containing a center table, around which a number of men were seated. She was given a cushioned chair, and then a voice seemed to reach her from a great way off.

"Miss Barclay, I am happy to inform you that we have reconsidered your brother's case and concluded to withdraw all our claims against him. This is due to two facts—his many years of faithful service and the very helpless condition of his family. To follow up this suit would do us no good and might be productive of much harm to his innocent wife and children. He is almost completely indebted to our president, Mr. Messenger, for this clemency. We think it best that he should know that Mr. Messenger has all along urged us in the direction of mercy. Your brother is now as free as ever and at liberty to take immediate measures for the support of his family. We congratulate you, Miss Barclay, on your sisterly devotion, your courage under grief and difficulties and your persistent efforts in his behalf. You have offered us an example which restores our faith in human nature."

Bewildered, dizzy, silenced, her heart throbbing with joy inexpressible, Miss Barclay sat and gazed at the speaker. Then her eyes wandered in search of Mr. Messenger. In vain; he was not in the group, but Mr. Howe was watching her with eager eyes, brilliant with reflected happiness. She started and flushed.

Presently the men rose, shook hands with her and left the room. Mr. Howe retained his seat. His voice sounded peculiarly sweet and soothing.

"Happiness must affect us as sunshine does the flowers. You are transformed. Do not revert to the sad for a moment. Your brother will be notified at once by telegraph of this decision."

"And Mr. Messenger! Was he here? I did not see him. I must. How shall I ever thank him? I have wronged him, misjudged him. I want to tell him how sorry I feel."

"One moment." Mr. Howe's voice had lost its music. His manner was reserved; his words came slowly as if chosen with difficulty. "The truth is that Mr. Messenger owes you an explanation. It is this: At the time of the cashier's sudden death the president of the bank was taken very ill and was obliged to resign. His son, who bears the same name, undertook his duties and was duly appointed to succeed him. After a few weeks of hard work the young man decided to leave town for several days, and he selected a trustworthy substitute to represent him. He had made all his arrangements for his short holiday and was leaving the bank when you attracted his attention by asking if you might see the president. Need I say any more?"

"Your brother is now as free as ever."

"I don't think I understand you."

"The mystery is simple enough. You excited his interest and curiosity. He hastily returned to the room adjoining the one you entered, and thus overheard your conversation with"——

"You mean that I have never seen Mr. Messenger?"

"I was going to name the man whom you met, but as you may never see him again perhaps it is well to be charitable. We will not judge him. Miss Barclay, Mr. Messenger, after listening to your pleading, followed you up Broadway and assisted you into a car. You have no recollection of him whatever?"

"None. And he has been our friend. We shall never be able to prove our gratitude, never."

"He has a young man's sympathy for your brother. He was a child when your brother came here, and he has pleasant recollections as a schoolboy of Jasper Barclay. Human nature is as good and as bad as it always was. We young men can see the flaws in the methods adopted by our elders. In your brother's case the remedy was too late, but Messenger set to work to prevent further suffering. His holiday is over, but I think it was well spent. Miss Barclay, can you forgive him for the suffering which he caused you? It was unintentional. He had perfect confidence in the integrity of the man who represented him."

"I know that. I only wish I could see him. Why did he not stay to hear me? If I could only make him understand how I appreciate his goodness."

"He knows all about it."

"From you? So then he sent you to me."

"Yes and no. Miss Barclay, this is not the place that I would have chosen in which to make my confession. Still I must know how I stand with you. Will you give me the right to call you Isabella? Will you forgive me for the test that I subjected you to this day? I, too, suffered keenly, but I had to satisfy myself about your strength of character. The pain was shared, and I was at hand to protect you. You can repay me richly if I have served you. I wish I could see you smile. It must be glorious to hear you laugh. Come, let me look into your eyes. I can read my fate in them. I have won you, have I not?"

"But this is not thanking Mr. Messenger."

"No, but it is giving him a wife." He gently took her hands and watched her questioning eyes. "But for your utter absorption in your brother's troubles I could not have learned your value so thoroughly. Sweetheart, your lover was winning you under an assumed name. You are so charmingly unconscious, so overwrought, that your mind will not act. Hereafter there shall be no mysteries, no sorrows, but those that we can bear together. From this moment let me make you happy; let me see you smiling, with your heart at rest. Will you love me as Philip Messenger?"

THE END.

Wash Challies In Rice Water.

Rice water is recommended in which to wash challies. Boil a pound of rice in 5 quarts of water. Cool it to the tepid point; then put in the goods and wash well, using the rice as soap. Pour off the water, leaving the rice sediment. Rub the challie well in this, rinsing in the poured off water. Use no rinsing water, but hang the materials to dry direct from the rice water.—Household.

HOME TESTIMONY.

Mr Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly. They were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 144 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOS. CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

THE BEST REMEDY FOR CATARRH COLD IN HEAD HAYFEVER ELY'S CREAM BALM WASTED TO A SKELETON.

ISAAC E. DOWNS, ESQ.

Spring Valley, Rockland Co., N.Y.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Sir—For three years I had suffered from that terrible disease, consumption, and heart disease. Before taking Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I had wasted away to a skeleton; could not sleep nor rest, and many times wished to die to be out of my misery. Step by step, the signs and realities of returning health gradually but surely developed themselves while taking the "Discovery." To-day I tip the scales at one hundred and eighty-seven, and am well and strong.

PIERCE Guarantees a CURE.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" has also cured my daughter of a very bad ulcer located on the thigh. After trying almost everything without success, we purchased three bottles of your "Discovery," which healed it up perfectly. Respectfully yours,

ISAAC E. DOWNS.

WANE OF THE BIG STRIKE

Troops and Idle Workmen Resting on Their Arms.

Labor Leaders Devoting Their Time To Encouraging the Men To Stand Firm—Strikers Still Seem Confident —A. R. U. Not Bankrupt—An Estimate of the Losses Sustained by the Railroads.

CHICAGO, July 16.—The past 12 hours have been the quietest in the history of the railroad strike, admitting the claims of President Debs and his colleagues that the strike is in force and effect as much as ever.

The leaders of the American Railway union are devoting their time mainly to encouraging their followers to stand firm and appealing to those not in the ranks of the strikers to join in the movement.

The confidence of the men who are out in the ability of the union executive officers to win the strike and their faithfulness to the cause of the rank and file does not appear to have waned in the least.

The union officers are still claiming accessions to the ranks of strikers and many new members enrolled who were at work, but could be relied on to go out when ordered.

Yesterday afternoon the strikers of the stock yards district gathered over a thousand strong at 47th street and Halstead to hear the eloquent president, Mr. Debs. Many workingmen who are not strikers were also present and shouted their sympathy for the American Railway union and approval of the decision not to declare the strike off unconditionally.

The army of state and national troops, the deputy marshals of the United States and the city police are having little to do except rest on their arms, watch the thousands of sightseeing citizens who congregate wherever there is a military camp.

The telegrams received by the railway union officers from their organizers and strike leaders in the western states indicate that there is more of a railroad strike on the transcontinental lines outside Chicago than here, and the strength of the union is expected to be concentrated at those points.

District-Attorney Milchrist said that the contempt proceedings against Debs and other officers of the A. R. U. would probably not begin in the United States circuit court until Judge Grosscup returns to the city the latter part of the week.

WELL OFF FINANCIALLY.

No Truth in the Report That the A. R. U. Is Bankrupt.

CHICAGO, July 16.—There is absolutely no truth in the report that the American Railway union is bankrupt, and from present indications there is no probability of such a thing occurring. Instead the organization is in a flourishing condition financially.

A prominent officer of the A. R. U. has made an estimate of the running expenses of the office force at $400 a week. The largest telegraph bill for one day was $500, and the association has been accumulating money for over a year.

For the month of June the receipts at headquarters for dues alone were over $10,000.

One day's receipts for the dues this month, seen by a reporter of the United Press, footed up nearly $1,000. As the local lodges cover the incidental expenses and the general assessment is coming in at the rate of $5,000 a week, the officers of the order say they are in a better condition financially than ever to proceed with the strike.

COST OF THE GREAT STRIKE.

It Will Run Up Into the Millions, Says One Railroad Man.

CHICAGO, July 16.—Now that the railroads are getting their traffic in shape and business is assuming its normal condition some speculation as to the cost of the great strike to the railroads and others in Chicago alone may be interesting.

All the general managers can say at present is that they have insufficient data to hazard an opinion that could be relied upon.

Urged to make a guess, one of them said the losses of the roads would reach at least $5,000,000, and might go as high as $8,000,000. He declined to permit the use of his name, however, as the father of the random opinion.

It will probably be many weeks before the managers can secure figures for a detailed report. Many things must be taken into consideration. The loss occasioned by suspended traffic will be the largest item, but the destruction of property will be by no means a small one.

Nearly 600 Pan Handle cars were destroyed in one blaze, and of this number 95 are known to have contained merchandise. It will be necessary to learn from the shippers invoices just what those 98 cars contained before any computation of loss can be made, and that will take much time. Within the city limits tower houses have been burned and tracks torn up. Damage has been done in many railroad shops and enormous sums expended in defending the roads against rioters.

TROOPS BRING ABOUT QUIET.

Marshal Law To Be Declared at Two Cherokee Strip Towns.

WICHITA, Kas., July 16.—Temporary quiet has been restored in the Cherokee Strip towns, Round Pound and South Enid by the arrival at each place of two troops of regulars from Fort Reno who are under orders from Washington to place the two towns under martial law, and to cause the arrest of all persons implicated in the outrages of Friday. Troops now patrol the Rock Island tracks.

The bridges and tracks blown up with dynamite Friday have been temporarily repaired and trains are again running as usual.

Chicago Federation with the Strikers

CHICAGO, July 16.—The decision of the American Federation of Labor to the effect that no actual support would be given to the A. R. U. strike was virtually annulled so far as the local trades unions are concerned by meetings held yesterday afternoon and evening at Bricklayers' hall. Resolutions pledging to support the strike with financial assistance and by all other means in their power was adopted.

WANT THE STRIKE CALLED OFF

A Statement Made That the Pullman Employes Are Ready To Go Back.

CHICAGO, July 16.—It has just developed that Chairman Heathcote, of the committee of strikers at Pullman, sent a letter Thursday to President Debs of the A. R. U., asking him to call off the boycott and strike. No answer has been returned as yet.

It is given out that the request of the Pullman strikers to declare the boycott off and permit them to return to work was the real cause of the sending of the conciliatory proposition to the general managers. The majority of the Pullman employes are anxious to return to work.

NO ENCAMPMENT THIS YEAR.

Strikes Have Cost the State of Illinois Too Much Money.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 16.—Governor Altgeld says there will be no encampment of the Illinois National guard this year. "I don't see how we can have an encampment," said the governor this morning.

"The strikes have cost us enormously, and we have nothing in the treasury to pay for an encampment. I am sorry but it cannot be helped. The present strike is costing about $10,000 a day for pay for the soldiers alone, and when subsistence and transportation are added it foots up a big sum every day."

Several Outrages at Wichita.

WICHITA, Kan., July 16.—Another outrage was attempted on the Rock Island road at South Enid shortly before daybreak, some unknown men exploding a charge of dynamite under the bridge just north of the town. The guard stationed at the bridge was fired at, and retired to secure reinforcements when the dynamite was planted and discharged without doing much damage. The telegraph wire between the government townsite and the depot at North Enid was cut during the night. A number of deputy marshals from North Enid were chased out of the south town early in the morning. A large body of citizens attacked them with clubs. Several of the citizens of South Enid also have been ordered to leave town on pain of death because of the stand they have taken against the outlawry.

Disorders at Terre Haute.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., July 16.—Strikers or their sympathizers made another attempt to ditch the Evansville & Terre Haute north-bound passenger train here yesterday by tampering with a switch, but their work was discovered before the passenger train arrived. An assault was made on the Evansville & Terre Haute yard office operator by four men. The operator drew his revolver and the men ran. A Big Four freight was run through an open switch, but not wrecked. The trainmen were stoned by a crowd of hangers-on.

Debs' Work Worse Than War.

LONDON, July 16.—The Times says in a leader on the A. R. U. strike: "Debs and his coadjutors have done as much to harm the industries of America in a week as the Confederate army did in months."

SUICIDE OF HON. B. F. GENTSCH.

He Was an Ex-Postmaster of Buffalo and a Prominent Citizen.

BUFFALO, July 16.—The Hon. Bernard F. Gentsch committed suicide by shooting yesterday.

Mr. Gentsch left his house at south Buffalo at 10 o'clock to go for a walk in his garden. When he did not return to dinner a search was made for him. It was found that on leaving the house he had taken with him a revolver which he rarely carried, and selecting a place well away from the houses and hidden by a clump of bushes, had fired a bullet into his brain through the right temple. He died almost instantly.

Mr. Gentsch came to America penniless. He was established in business in Buffalo in 1854 as a manufacturer of pickles and mustard, and was worth about a quarter of a million of dollars.

He was appointed postmaster four years ago by President Harrison, and only two weeks ago relinquished the office to his successor, Howard H. Baker.

It was generally believed that Mr. Gentsch would have been the republican choice for mayor this fall.

Worry over losses sustained in speculative enterprises is the supposed cause for the deed.

HIS WIFE PLEADS FOR HIM

A New York Millionaire's Son in a Southern Penitentiary.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 16.—It has developed within the last day or two that a white prisoner in the Georgia penitentiary is a son of a New York millionaire. A few months ago a handsome young actor, who passed under the name of Edwin Harcourt, was sentenced to the penitentiary for one year from Columbus, Ga.

Harcourt was charged with running away with some diamonds belonging to the daughter of a prominent family in Columbus. He pleaded guilty to the indictment and was given the minimum sentence.

Harcourt had played through the south as a member of Robert Downing's company and he said that he had been a member of various standard companies.

After receiving sentence he was leased to a brick manufacturer who operates near Atlanta.

A few days ago Harcourt's wife came here, called on Governor Northen and appealed to him to pardon her husband. She was recognized as Mrs. Albert Buckner, nee Shields, of Knoxville. She admits that her husband is the son of a New York millionaire. Harcourt, or Buckner, intimates that he pleaded guilty to save the reputation of the young lady involved in the case.

Governor Northen has not given a decision in the appeal for pardon.

DASTARDLY SPITE.

An Unknown Man Wrecks Furniture and Slashes a Girl's Clothing.

PORTLAND, Me., July 16.—A strange affair is reported from Old Orchard. Mrs. A. Dennett and her daughter Grace, 16 years old, of this city, have a summer cottage there. Saturday night Grace was alone in the house, her mother being at Saco, when a man knocked at the door and asked if the young lady was alone.

He attempted to enter, but the girl told him to keep out. He knocked her down, hitting her in the stomach and leaving her insensible on the floor.

He then went into the parlor, tipped over the furniture, throwing small articles on the floor and doing much small damage. He then went upstairs to the young lady's room, took all her dresses and underclothing and cut them to pieces with a knife. He also cut open the bedclothes and a sofa cushion.

When Mrs. Bennett returned she found the outside door closed and her daughter insensible.

A physician found that no violence had been done her, nor was there an attempt at a criminal assault.

The man's motive is a puzzle. He was a stranger to the girl.

This is the same young lady whose death was printed in a Portland paper, a notice having been received by an anonymous postal card. It is evident that some one has a spite against her.

MORE THAN 200 LIVES LOST.

The Earthquake Panic at Constantinople Does Not Abate.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 16.—The panic caused by the earthquake does not abate. The rumbling of a heavy cart or the rattling of widows from a sudden breeze suffices to send the occupants of nearby houses headlong into the street. The families in the parks, cemeteries and smaller open spaces are preparing to camp out for several days more; all who can are replacing their tents with little wooden huts. The rich families have sought refuge on the upper Bosphorus. Business is virtually stagnant.

Apart from trade in food, there is no buying and selling in the city.

It is believed that more than 200 lives were lost.

Americans Carry Off the Prizes.

PARIS, July 16.—The American wheelmen did fine work at the Velodrome de la Seine yesterday. Harry Wheeler was second in the race for the Liege prize, which was won by Louvet. The match between Zimmerman and Bardan, which was the event of the day, was won in fine style by the American. In the first heat of one mile Zimmerman finished five lengths in the lead. In the race for the Valenciennes prize of 2,000 metres Harry Wheeler finished second. The tandem race of five kilometres was won by Anthony and Farman, with Crooks and Fossier second.

Missing Mails from 'Frisco.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Superintendent of Mails Weeks, at the general postoffice, reported that all the incoming mails, with the exception of those from San Francisco, were arriving on time. There is a deep mystery surrounding the whereabouts of these mails. The mails that started from San Francisco on July 3 and 5, arrived on Saturday last, but those that started from the Golden Gate on June 27, 28 and 29 have not yet shown up.

Cuxhaven's 500th Anniversary.

HAMBURG, July 16.—Cuxhaven, the port of Hamburg, celebrated yesterday the five-hundredth anniversary of its founding. On land there was the usual historical parade with floats, and at sea a procession of forty large steamers passed in review before the town. In the evening there were fireworks and an illumination.

Possible Revenue Under Income Law.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Investigations made by Worthington C. Ford, chief of the bureau of statistics, treasury department, lead him to conclude that "the possible" revenue under the income tax provision of the tariff bill will range from $32,000,000 a year, at the lowest point, to $80,000,000 at the highest point.

PULLMAN A FUGITIVE

Guarded at His Country Seat Against Anarchists.

A Report That the Rich Car Builder Only Escaped Assassination Because One of the Plotters Came to the Conclusion That His Murder Would Injure the Strikers' Cause.

CINCINNATI, July 16.—A special from Chicago says: It is not strange that George M. Pullman left this city suddenly for his castle on an inaccessible island in the St. Lawrence river. Hidden in the depths of the barronial-like structure which he has named Castle Rest, he is safe from the danger which compelled him to flee from Chicago.

The rich fugitive was marked for assassination by a band of anarchists, and he, while knowing something of the plot, probably does not fully know how near he was to a violent end. He had been doomed and the agent of death was willing to execute his work, and it was simply a difference in the judgment of some of the band that saved him.

All this occurred about the time he was leaving for the east, when he practically abandoned his great interests in the city which he had built.

It has been ascertained that a couple of days after the American Railway union declared the boycott it was resolved by a group of anarchists that Mr. Pullman should be "removed."

He was shadowed by three men, one of whom carried a revolver.

Just where they obtained the opportunity to carry out the decree of anarchy is not known. But it is within the information of certain persons here that the muzzle of a gun was but a few feet from Mr. Pullman's back when the arm of the would-be murderer was stayed.

The man who thus interfered is a well-known labor agitator, whose speeches on the lake front caused the police to suspect him as an anarchist. He has delivered speeches in a number of cities since the strike began, and has been mixed up in big political affairs in the far west, at all times commanding the widest attention wherever he went.

It was his opinion that the slaying of Pullman would not accomplish anything at this time, but would rather be an injury to the thousands of workingmen who are engaged in the boycott against the millionaire.

The scene, according to the description furnished, was a most dramatic one.

The appointed executioner had his weapon, which was levelled at the back of the unsuspecting capitalist, when the savior seized his wrist and whispered into the executioner's ear to desist. There was a slight struggle, and the would-be murderer was disarmed of the revolver.

No words were spoken. Satisfied that another attempt would be made to kill Pullman, the labor agitator and a few friends quietly informed those close to Mr. Pullman that it would be best for him to remain away for a time. It was not because there was a wish to save his life as a human being, but rather to protect the cause of labor, which would have been materially injured by an assassination.

Mr. Pullman was soon speeding on his way to Hollywood, N. J., where his seaside cottage is located. He remained there in semi-seclusion for a couple of days, but being found out by representatives of the press, he concluded to leave.

Whether he feared the vengeance of the anarchists is simply speculative. But it is known that his departure for the St. Lawrence river was as hurried as had been his flight from Chicago.

The island which is now his retreat was purchased by him from the Canadian government and was beautified at an enormous expense. Tourists taking St. Lawrence trips are always shown the island home of the great car builder, the castellated structure which he has erected being most striking. The island is some distance from the mainland and with a few guards along the water front he would be as practically free from danger as though he were in the heart of darkest Africa. That he has taken these precautions there is no doubt.

THE THREAT CARRIED OUT.

House Blown up Because the Owner Took a Striker's Place.

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 16.—A colored employe of the Pennsylvania Steel works went to Punxsutawney last week to take a strikers' place in the coal mines. He was warned that his house would be blown up if he went, but he paid no attention to the threat.

Yesterday a dynamite cap with a fuse attached was placed outside a window of his house and the place was wrecked. There is no clue to the perpetrator of the outrage.

Too Consolidate Two Big Universities.

CHICAGO, July 16.—The Columbian university of Washington, D. C., has made a proposition to the University of Chicago looking to the consolidation of that institution with the University of Chicago. The Columbian university has at present nearly 1,000 students, over one-half of whom are connected with the law department. At present the institution has no head. The faculty numbers 110 professors and instructors. The value of the property of the university is estimated at $750,000.

Drowned in His Father's Presence.

MONTICELLO, N. Y., July 16.—George Braun, aged 27 years, was drowned in Pleasant Lake last evening while bathing. He was taken with cramps, and cried lustily for help. His aged father rushed to his son's assistance, but enfeebled by age, is disqualified him for such service, and he was compelled to stand upon the bank and see his son drown.

Exchange of Baseball Players.

BALTIMORE, July 16.—Ed Hanlon, president and manager of the Baltimore baseball club, telegraphed from St. Louis that he had secured John Clarkson in exchange for Tony Mullane. "The acquisition of Clarkson and Gleason," said he, "increases our chances of landing the pennant at least 50 per cent."

FORECAST OF CONGRESS

Republicans' Latest Plot Against the Tariff Bill.

May Block the Measure by Speeches Until August 10—Appropriation Bills Nearly Completed by the Senate—The Work of General Interest Now Before the House.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—The senate has made such rapid progress with the appropriation bills that it is quite possible that the close of the week will see all the departments of the government provided for for the present fiscal year. When this result has been accomplished the minority will occupy a position of singular advantage in regard to the conference reports on the tariff. Should those features of the house bill which the "conservative" democrats and the republicans most object to be reinstated in the conference report it will be in their power to say "Well, now, gentlemen, we are quite ready to vote to adjourn or to stay here and discuss this matter until the Fourth of next March, if need be, and there is no rule by which you can shut off debate or compel the adoption of a conference report which does not concede something to our views."

If after the appropriation bills are disposed of, the republicans in both senate and house should combine to break a quorum, it is doubtful whether the democrats would be able without extraordinary effort to hold their forces together, and to command sufficient votes to adopt the conference report. Some more aggressive republican opponents of the tariff bill are already hinting at the possibility of such a contingency arising. But the better opinion seems to be that some kind of an adjustment will be arrived at, though not until after the first of August—the date now fixed for the bill to take effect—has passed.

August 10 is the date which one of the most active of the conferees names as the time when he hopes to see the bill signed by the president. There are no other important measures pending between the two houses which the senate is in any humor to take up. The anti-option bill was talked to death in the senate in the last congress, and it would meet with equally strong opposition if called up for senate action at this session. Almost as much opposition would await the bill to forfeit unearned railroad land grants which the house passed last week.

House of Representatives.

The managers of the house think they see daylight ahead, and that so far as measures of general interest and importance are concerned the present week will put them all out of the way. To-day is being given to the consideration of Representative Bailey's bill for a uniform system of bankruptcy, the vote on its passage to be taken at 4:30 o'clock.

By the terms of the order agreed upon, one hour will be devoted to general debate and two hours to debate on proposed amendments under the five-minute rule.

In case the bill is out the way in time, the judiciary committee will be recognized before adjournment, so that it will have all of to-morrow's session for the discussion of measures reported from it.

Nine bills have been selected by the committee for presentation, but manifestly it will be impossible to consider them all. One of these, which is considered of much importance, is that to establish a system of salaries for the marshals, clerks and attorneys of the United States courts, and abolishing the practice of paying fees. The bill is in some sense an outcome of the investigation into the reported abuses by officials of the United States courts in Massachusetts and Alabama.

Wednesday will be given to the committee on military affairs to clear the more important bills, the passage of which it has recommended.

A VICIOUS OUTRAGE.

An Attempt To Kill a Citizen of Scranton with Dynamite.

SCRANTON, Pa., July 16.—Early Sunday morning an attempt was made on the life of Brian Healy, of Dunmore, by exploding a dynamite cartridge underneath his bedroom window.

Mr. Healey says that fear of such an occurrence recently caused him to remove his bed from the front to the rear of the house and this precaution saved his life as the house was shattered, the windows broken and a hole torn through the front of his dwelling.

Mr. Healey ascribes the crime to a vicious enemy.

A BOY'S AFFLICTION.

Sensation in the West End Over Young Newman's Attack of Convulsions—Neighbors Persist in Saying He Has Hydrophobia.

John Newman, the 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Newman, of 525 West Third street, was bitten on the hand by a dog about four years ago Although the wound never healed properly nothing was thought of it until last night when it was thought by his parents to have some connection with an attack of illness which he then sustained.

John and several other boys were enjoying themselves on the Plainfield Avenue railroad bridge last evening about 11, when suddenly young Newman jumped up from his seat and commenced barking like a dog. Froth appeared at his mouth.

The crowd was very much frightened, and could not imagine what the trouble was. There were five or six, however, who took hold of him, thinking he could be pacified, but their efforts were in vain.

Policeman Vanderweg was sent for. Learning the circumstances he immediately went to Muhlenberg Hospital and secured a straight-jacket. The boy was fastened by this, and taken to his home. It was fully an hour before the boy was quiet enough to permit of its removal.

During this time he continually made a noise, which the neighbors say was exactly like a dog's barking. The dogs in the vicinity began to bark too, and everyone became excited.

Dr. W. C. Boone was sent for. He was of the opinion that the boy simply had convulsions. Those of no medical education were sure it was hydrophobia, and sought to substantiate their assertion by the fact that he would drink no water. Several hours passed and the boy became quiet, ether having been administered.

This morning about 10 the effects of the ether wore off, and the boy was resting quietly.

John went to New Market yesterday afternoon to take a swim and some of the neighbors think that this together with the excessive heat brought on the attack.

Michael Newman, the father, is a hod-carrier in the employ of Pahgborn the contractor. This is the first attack of the kind the boy ever had. He has been working for some time for William Stephenson, the caterer, of North avenue. Mr. Stephenson visited the boy this morning and gave valuable assistance.

During the boy's terrible struggles last evening he bit at the leg of "Nick" Kelley, one of the men who was holding him. His teeth went through Kelley's clothes but did not break the skin.

BASE-BALL.

The Arlingtons have challenged the Dunellens to play ball in Plainfield Saturday, August 4.

The Arlingtons and the Carltons, both of Plainfield, played a game of base-ball Saturday on the Park Avenue ball grounds. The Arlingtons came off victorious, winning by a score of 18 to 12. The game was an interesting one from beginning to end. The Arlingtons hit the ball with telling effect, making twenty-one hits for a total of twenty-five bases, while the best the Carltons could do was to get eight hits for a total of eleven bases. Features of the game were the batting of Sprowl for the Carltons, and the batting of M. Sutphen, Owens and others of the Arlington team.

Score by innings:

Arlingtons	1	1	6	5	2	1	2	0	0	—18
Carltons	3	1	1	2	1	4	0	0	0	—12

Batteries—Arlingtons—C. Sutphen and F. Dodge. Carltons—Hartley, Vail and Wheeler.

Two cyclers run into a horse on Park avenue late Saturday afternoon. Both were thrown to the ground. The rider of the animal was very much incensed at the accident, although the horse was not hurt.

A special meeting of the Victor Wheelmen will be held at the home of Captain Israel Jones on Washington avenue tomorrow evening. Arrangements will be made for a run next Sunday afternoon with visitors from Newark, New York and Coney Island. The refusal of Captain Jones's entry in the century race will also be discussed.

He'd never advertise.

And thereby hangs a tale.

And headed "Sheriff's Sale."

THE CONTRAST OF THE SYSTEMS.

An Intermittent Filtration Bed Unlike a Combination of Cess-pools.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—F. W. Runyon shows his complete mastery of the sewerage filtration question by comparing the present cess-pool system of Plainfield to an intermittent filtration system. Of course the water soaks into the ground in both cases, and so far the cess-pools do not seem to have seriously injured our water supply.

But there the parallel ceases, for the organic matter in the cess-pools is stored up for offensive decomposition, while in the filtration system it is exposed to the action of the oxygen of the air in the pores of the sand and of the nitrifying microbes, which completely and thoroughly convert all organic matter into harmless substances suitable for assimilation by plant life. EXPERIENCE.

THE SECRET ORDERS.

Two Central Railroad officials, J. Chief Grant was supported by the police in his claim that he had done all he could to assist Corsa. After talking over matters the railroad men went back to report to the company. It is probable that the chief will be given another pass.

HOME TESTIMONY.

Mr. Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly. They were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 144 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOS. CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z GRIGGS.

ANOTHER CONGREGATION HAPPY.

Emmanuel Baptists Enter and Dedicate a Building of Their Own.

The new church of the Emmanuel Baptists, on Fillmore avenue, between East Third street and North avenue, was dedicated yesterday. Three services were held, and at all the greatest religious enthusiasm and general rejoicing was manifested. During the day about $50 was subscribed to the church fund.

The morning services opened with the chanting of "Glory Be to the Father". After several hymns had been sung the pastor, Rev. J. W. Mitchell, prayed, and then the sermon was delivered by Rev. W. D. Johnson of Westfield. He spoke earnestly and forcibly on consecration, dwelling on the responsibilities of the congregation which was just entering the new house of worship. His text was Genesis 28:17, "This is none other than the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven". Rev. Ebenezer Bird of Roselle followed with a few remarks of congratulation, and Rev. William Wallace of Cranford made the dedicatory prayer.

During the noon hour those who preferred to stay were served with lunch from tables prepared on the second floor of the building. Rev. R. D. Wynn of New York conducted services. In the evening Rev. William Hill of Newark spoke.

The completion of the building marks a new era in the career of the colored church. The pastor has worked hard during its erection, having entire charge of all of the work. The congregation worshipped on Somerset street near the bridge until two years ago when their rooms were burned out. Since that time services have been held Sunday evenings in Reform Hall. The building they now have is a neat structure of brick, painted red with trimmings of dark green. Its size is 27x51. It was a part of the oil-cloth factory until last March when the church bought it and had it moved to its present site, and put a slate roof on it. The first floor is neatly finished for the main room. The work in the upper rooms has not been completed. The mover employed was George Henry; the mason, Jacob Gulick; the carpenters, John Hartpence and John E. Mowry; and the painters, Woolston & Buckle.

A Drop in the Price of Meat.

The City Market Meat Company, whose place of business is on North Avenue opposite the Daily Press office declare low prices for first-class meats in our advertising columns today.

When the scarcity of meat compelled the wholesale houses to put up the prices, they were compelled to ask their customers to pay the increase, now that the strike is ended, the price of meat has again declined and the City Market Meat Company are among the first to give their customers the benefit of the lower rates. They neither solicit orders nor deliver them. The money thus saved they give to their customers. Their price list is given in their advertisement.

One Begged, Another Drank, the Third's Insane.

Chief Marshal Pangborn took three men to Somerville today. Alexander Prentiss went for 30 days because he has been begging about the borough. Peter Brunn will remain in jail the same length of time for being drunk and disorderly. James Watt was committed to await the action of the township authorities of his home, Bridgewater. He was sent from there to the insane asylum in Trenton in 1879, and was released last Spring on the application of friends living on Harmony street. He became flighty again and it was thought best to refer his case to Bridgewater township.

Thrown from a Cart.

Constable W. R. Mattox and Mrs. W. H. Clum were riding in the constable's cart on Terrill road near the Jackson school yesterday afternoon at 3, when the horse fell. Both of the occupants of the cart were thrown out. Mrs. Clum was bruised about the head. She was taken to her home on Netherwood avenue in a hack. The constable escaped injury.

No One Was Beneath.

Painter Vroom and one of his employes started to lower a scaffold from the Park avenue side of the Corey Building Saturday evening at 7. They slackened the ropes, the scaffold inclined and a board fell from it. People beneath saw it coming and jumped out of its way. The board was six inches wide and 15 feet long. It struck the curb and was split in two.

Day & Martin's Black and White.

The first issue of The American Eagle, the State organ of the J. O. U. A. M., under the management of Charles S. Day of New Market and Gilbert Sutphen Martin of the borough will be issued Thursday. It will be dated Plainfield hereafter instead of Trenton.

The Deadly Trolley.

Car 1 of the street railway while going at a high rate of speed on Somerset street near Mountain avenue yesterday afternoon at 4:30, struck and instantly killed a young chicken. The victim was one of a flock which became bewildered at the approach of the car and ran toward the track instead of away from it.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there's more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

From Car Platform to Dancing Floor.

The members of the Plainfield Street Railway Association are bound to have their annual picnics successful from the start. Their first festival will come off Wednesday evening in Vail's Grove, and none of the street-car men can think of a single detail of preparation that has not been carefully attended to. A jolly crowd and a general good time are assured, from the way people talk about the affair and the way the tickets have been sold. N. H. Guttman's musicians will be in attendance, and with a list of 30 numbers on the dancing programme all may be sure of an opportunity for pleasure, however large the crowd.

In honor of the event Superintendent Adieman will run Car 6 on a special trip Wednesday evening. It will be gaily decorated and will carry seven members of N. H. Guttman's band. The car will leave the house at 7, and go to the North Avenue station, to the end of the Somerset Street line, back to the station, and thence to the picnic grounds.

Claims a Misquotation.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Your correspondent "Westfield" is unfair to quote from the Westfield Centennial Souvenir which did not profess to give Rev. Mr. Cadwell's exact language.

Mr. Cadwell's reputation in this town and all fair play seems to entitle him to have his own words quoted, and not a mere abridgment thereof. FAIR PLAY.

SAILING UP THE SOUND.

Sights on the Shores that Await the Grace M. E. Excursionists.

The opportunity of taking the sail up Long Island Sound is one that is rarely offered to the people of this city, and no doubt many of The Press readers will be glad to avail themselves tomorrow of the chance of going on the excursion of the Grace M. E. Sunday school.

The boat will start from Elizabethport, cross Newark Bay and passing through the Kill von Kull enter New York Bay where will be seen The Narrows leading to the Ocean. A close view will be had of the Statue of Liberty, Ellis Island where the emigrants land, and Governor's Island with its forts and batteries. On the way up the East River will be seen the Brooklyn Bridge, the Brooklyn Navy Yard, Blackwell's Island with its prisons and hospitals, the world renowned Hell Gate, Ward's Island, Randall's Island and many smaller islands with their beacon lights. At the entrance of Long Island Sound will be found Willitt's Point Fort and Fort Schuyler, Sand's Point and the Stepping Stone Lighthouses. The trip up the sound to the landing point, Roton Point, Conn., will be one long to be remembered.

Yale-Oxford Games.

LONDON, July 16.—Nearly all the morning newspapers have articles on the Yale-Oxford games to-day. They concur that it is difficult, if not impossible, to forecast the result, chiefly owing to Yale's different method of practice. Frye and Swanwick, of Oxford, and Sanford and Sheldon, of Yale, have virtually recovered from their injuries. The Sportsman prints under the caption "Hail Columbia" a cordial poem of eight stanzas addressed to the Yale athletes.

Alterations to the Vigilant.

GLASGOW, July 16.—Contrary to former reports of alterations to the Vigilant, her topmast has been shortened four feet six inches and her spinnaker boom has been cut down four feet besides being reduced one inch in diameter. She has a new wire bobstay and her bottom has been thoroughly cleaned. The Sportsman thinks that the alternations will put her on equaltime with the Britannia or perhaps even win her a time allowance.

Close of C. E. Convention.

CLEVELAND, O., July 16.—The 13th annual convention of the Society for Christian Endeavor closed last night in a wave of Christian enthusiasm. It has been the greatest convention ever held by the society, both in point of numbers and in the interest manifested in the meetings. The total registration reached 40,000, of which 18,790 came from points outside of Ohio. The total registration at the Montreal convention of a year ago was 16,500.

CITY'S ENTERPRISE

POPULATION HAS DOUBLED IN A DECADE.

What Diversity of Industries and Energetic Men Have Done For Battle Creek, Mich.—Not Affected by Dull Times—The Advertising Signboard.

Perhaps no town in the west has felt the pressure of hard times so little as the growing, thriving, hustling, wide awake city of Battle Creek, Mich. Evidences of unusual prosperity are visible on every hand, not only in the activity displayed in the numerous and varied industries, but in the large number of buildings in course of erection in the streets of the city. Indeed the building boom is especially conspicuous and terse in emphatic terms to the happy conditions which enable the artisans of the town to thus provide comfortable homes for their families.

The reasons for the prosperity of this city are not far to seek. The citizens have always been of one mind as regards matters of public weal, and as a consequence Battle Creek has always enjoyed a steady, uninterrupted growth, adding to its population all classes that go to make up a prosperous community, a preponderance being skilled artisans on account of the demand of its high grade of manufactured articles. Nor do they believe in hiding their light under a bushel, but prefer to see it so shine that it may be seen of all men.

Having faith in a standing advertisement, the citizens' committee has decided to be erected near the passenger depot a sign made of matched pine boards 278 feet long, 20 feet high in the center, and with a wing on each end 50 feet high. The reading matter is in plain gothic black letters on a white background, the words calling attention to special features being underscored in red. The sign cost nearly $500. The railroad tracks at the depot here are on the bank of the Battle Creek river, and the sign is erected on the opposite side of the river, which is about 60 feet wide, making the view from all passenger trains an unobstructed one. The committee intends placing a similar sign beside the other railroad tracks at once. The reading matter on the sign is as follows:

"In the center panel: "This is Battle Creek, Mich. Midway between Chicago and Detroit, a growing manufacturing city of 18,000 population. No better shipping facilities in the state. On main lines of two grand trunk railroads. All modern municipal improvements. Cheap water and electric power. Death rate the lowest in the state. Surrounded by a farming country unsurpassed in prosperity and productiveness."

On the left wing: "We manufacture the threshing machinery, traction engines and steam pumps than any city in the globe. The finest newspaper printing press in the world. We make and ship weekly carloads of books, metal back albums, woodworking machinery, carriages and wagons, metallic refrigerators, boilers, agricultural implements, flour, canvas boats, shipping rigs, tents, cigars, sewer pipe, etc. We employ skilled labor and pay out over $3,000,000 annually in wages."

The matter on the right wing is: "The Battle Creek sanitarium and hospital, a finely equipped and well conducted establishment, receives 3,000 persons annually. We have the largest and finest equipped printing establishment in the state, sending tons of printed matter to all parts of the world. The public schools, colleges, free public library, charity hospital, churches of all denominations. We invite capital and industries to join us. We extend a hearty welcome to all."

The business interests of Battle Creek are so diversified that the city must always be prosperous, and it will enjoy a steady, healthy growth. It is not a boom city and has never had a boom subject to some gigantic enterprise. Its rapid and continued growth has not been noticeably affected by the dull times, and the comparison with the other towns and cities, which have received a serious setback by the present business depression, is so marked as to direct attention to it as "booming."

What has been accomplished in this town is within the power of any community. Talk is worth something, but will not be effective unless supplemented by earnest and systematic work. Push to the front. Let the world know that you are on the earth. Let the citizens' committee be composed of live men, who know what is required and are not afraid to act. Sing the praises of your town, but do not sit idle after the music. Put your shoulder to the wheel, and very soon it will go without pushing.

A YOUNG GIRL'S FORTUNE.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

Nothing appeals so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter just budding into womanhood. Following is an instance: "Our daughter, Blanche, now 15 years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. She was in such a condition that we had to keep her from school and abandon her music lessons. In fact, we feared St. Vitus dance, and are positive but for an invaluable remedy she would have had that terrible affliction. We had employed physicians, but she received no benefit from them. The first of last August she weighed but 75 pounds, and although she has taken only three bottles of Nervine she now weighs 106 pounds; her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and studies with comfort and ease. She has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid, and no money could procure for our daughter the health Dr. Miles' Nervine has brought her.

"When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines, and would not listen to him, but as a last resort he sent us a bottle, we began giving it to Blanche, and the effect was almost immediate."—Mrs. R. B. Bullock, Brighton, N. Y.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

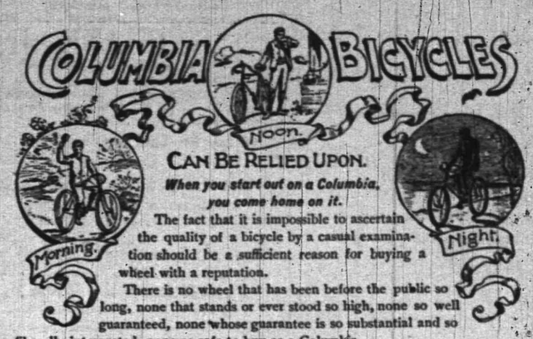
COLUMBIA BICYCLES



CAN BE RELIED UPON.

When you start out on a Columbia, you come home on it.

The fact that it is impossible to ascertain the quality of a bicycle by a casual examination should be a sufficient reason for buying a wheel with a reputation.

There is no wheel that has been before the public so long, none that stands or ever stood so high, none so well guaranteed, none whose guarantee is so substantial and so liberally interpreted, none so safe to buy as a Columbia.

With Columbias listed at $125, few riders will be so unwise as to invest in lower grade bicycles.

GOSSIP FROM BERLIN

Kotze's Wife Appeals in Vain to the Empress.

The Kaiser Determined To Squelch the Scandal—Prince Bismarck and Rudolph von Bennigsen—The Jew Baiter, Ahlwardt, Publishes a Rabid Anti-Semitic Pamphlet.

BERLIN, July 16.—The empress will return to Potsdam from the north on July 20. She will visit her children at Wilhelmshoehe near Cassel and be back again in time to receive the emperor at the new palace.

The rumors that she is enceinte are pure gossip.

The empress received last week a letter from Leberecht von Kotze's wife, who appealed for an audience that she might present her husband's defense. The empress made no reply. The emperor is determined to squelch the scandal wholly for the present and, as far as the public is concerned, forever.

The story that Kotze has offered a large reward for proof against the anonymous letter-writer is absurd. The culprit is known at court. Probably the emperor only awaits the right time to punish him without attracting attention.

Privy Councillor Bruegge-mann, who conducted the examination in the Kotze case, received two days ago an anonymous letter which offered proof that a certain prince at the Berlin court wrote the offensive letters. The prince's friends say that the writer lies, as the prince was traveling in Asia when the first of the letters were sent.

A report that Prince Bismarck would pass through Berlin yesterday caused a crowd to gather at the station. Later dispatches from Schoenhausen said that he would remain there a day or two more before starting for Varzin. He is fatigued, and declines to receive his admirers.

Franz Held's tragedy "Das Fest Auf der Bastille," is about to be produced at the National theatre. Freiherr von Richthofen, chief of police, has permitted the production on the condition that the piece shall be withdrawn in case the audience be moved to a demonstration by the political sentiments of the characters. The management of the theatre therefore requests all auditors to listen in silence.

The Bayreuth rehearsals proceed almost daily with Frau Cosima Wagner in constant attendance. The orchestra consists of 120 selected players. Mme. Nordica's Elsa in "Lohengrin" promises to be a fine performance.

Rudolf von Bennigsen, the veteran national liberal statesman, has published a letter thanking the thousands of friends who congratulated him on his birthday last Tuesday. He told a friend that he was most gratified by the warmth of a letter from Bismarck, who said: "Our political differences have never abated my old esteem for you."

The irrepressible and irresponsible Jew baiter Ahlwardt has published a pamphlet composed at his leisure in the Ploetzensee prison. The contents are so rabidly antisemitic as to suggest the insanity of the author. Ahlwardt contends that the Bible is full of Jewish falsehoods born of the enormous conceit of the Hebrew race. Almost every genealogical record in the Scriptures, he says, is forged, not excepting that of Christ. Judas Iscariot, he holds was the typical Jew of the Bible.

The Hamburg government has suppressed a society of freethinkers whose members are chiefly young anarchist suspects. A Munich socialist club called the Free Debaters was dissolved last week, mainly because the members sympathized openly with the Berlin anarchists who masqueraded as independent socialists.

CHOLERA SWEEPING CHINA.

Forty Thousand Deaths Said To Have Occurred in Canton Alone.

TACOMA, Wash., July 16.—Advices received by the Northern Pacific steamship Victoria from Hong Kong say that cholera is spreading throughout the Chinese empire and that the government officials are suppressing the number of deaths.

In Canton alone Chinmen say that 40,000 deaths have occurred.

Decide To Return to Work.

CORNING, N. Y., July 16.—The miners at Arnot, Morris Run, Fall Brook, and Antrim, Tioga county, Pa., have decided to resume work. They have been on strike since April 19, when ordered out by President McBride of the United Mine Workers' union. The losses entailed by the strike fall the heaviest on the miners. Estimating their number at nearly 5,000 persons affected by the strike, and this number having lost about three months' pay their financial loss cannot be less than $500,000.

Sunday at Chautauqua.

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y., July 16.—The Sunday sermon was delivered yesterday by Bishop E. R. Hendrix, of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, whose residence is St. Louis, Mo. It was an able, scholarly address. The principal feature being the stress laid upon Christian activity. The evening address was delivered by Dr. Wm. A. Duncan, of Syracuse.

Coxey's Force Without a Star.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Oklahoma Sam departed from Camp Bastile Saturday evening, which leaves not a single "star" in the Coxey aggregation stationed at Highlands. He will join Browne in Baltimore, and has been assigned to the position of chief of staff of the Browne forces. Jesse Coxey says his father will be in camp Tuesday.

Harvesting of Wheat Affected.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 16.—The farmers fear they will suffer from a sympathetic strike growing out of the Pullman boycott. On account of the strike shipments of binding twine have been few and far between, and the wheat crop is suffering because it cannot be harvested promptly.

Two Children Burned to Death.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., July 16.—Two children, aged 5 and 3 years respectively, of Luigi Spediacci, an Italian of this city, were burned to death yesterday. They were playing with matches, and set the house on fire.

Catholic Summer School.

PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., July 16.—The third session of the Catholic summer school was formally opened here yesterday in the beautiful church of St. John with imposing solemnity.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.
THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.
Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make Is True.
To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.
Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.
Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Elmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."
This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

DR. STARKWEATHER.
There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.
Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays 4 to 6 p. m.
Those living at a distance can consult the Doctor by letter.

Sergt. Lider, cannonier.

INJURED:

W. I. Antis, bugler of Troop B., Seventh cavalry, Fort Sheridan, righ shoulder shattered by shell; J. W. Allen, cannonier, Battery F., Second artillery, upper part of body burned; George Hoffman, sergeant, chin partly shot away; Trooper Huyck, blown off horse and rendered deaf; bruised and burned. Several other soldiers were more or less injured.

Others injured are Mrs. F. A. Howe, face and hand cut by flying glass while sitting at window; Mrs. S. C. Griggs, knocked down by explosion, wrist and face cut by glass; unknown man and sister, driving on Oakland boulevard, blown from buggy; man's nose broken, woman's face cut; horse ran away and vehicle demolished. Many other citizens who followed the military column were thrown to the ground, more or less bruised by contact with the ground, and their hearing temporarily taken from them. They were too glad to escape with their lives to wait for reporters to get their names.

At least $25,000 worth of damage was done to the property of the residents on both sides of Grand boulevard for half a block north of Oakwood boulevard. Many houses in adjoining streets were also damaged, principally by broken windows and door glass.

The body of troops was proceeding south from the lake front camp along Grand boulevard at a trot. Having no rioters to quell or railroad property to protect the soldiers were out for drill and exercise when the explosion occurred.

The half-dazed soldiers in the rear of the first timber caisson saw smoke and flame belch from the receptacle for the death-dealing missiles, men, horses and wheels, caisson and other parts of the battery rise before their horrified gaze, high in the air. The exploding powder and shot inclined to the rear, which accounts for the escape of all the cavalrymen in the third and sixth cavalry. The artillerymen received the brunt of the explosion, being directly in the rear of the deadly missiles and ignited powder, which burst from the caisson, sending fragments in all directions. Donovan and Doyle were doomed to a death which carried with it no suffering, not even an instant of time to realize their fate. They were sitting on the caisson which exploded. Donovan was blown through the air over trees 50 feet high, a distance of 500 feet, across a vacant lot, dropping on the Union Stock Yards railroad tracks. Part of one limb was torn off and picked up in the corner lot. There was hardly a shred of clothing left on his body and the mutilation was so horrible that he could not be recognized.

His companion, Doyle, was hurled 300 feet across the intersection of Oakwood boulevard on the opposite side of Grand boulevard. The mangled, lifeless body came in contact with a high fence, on top of which were a lot of stuffed bears, the advertisement of a firm of furriers. Over these bears, 50 feet from the ground, the force of the explosion carried a wheel and other parts of the gun carriage, half a thousand feet away from the bloody scene.

Galler, the farrier of the seventh cavalry troop, was riding in the second column behind the artillery. The shot and shell which hurled him to the ground a bleeding corpse, entered his head over the heads of the troopers in the front ranks.

Part of the leaden load which tore through Galler's head took off half of Kane's ear and tore a big hole in his hat to keep as a memento of the horrible tragedy.

Lead and wood pierced the body of Fred Lots, the wheel horse driver nearest the exploding ammunition, and killed the animal.

All the eight artillery horses are dead. The four which pulled the first gun were hurled in front of the exploding powder and shells to a grassy part of the boulevard, 100 feet away. Three were killed outright, being shot through and through. The fourth had to be put out of his misery. The four horses drawing the second gun were hurled to one side of the boulevard on the grass and all instantly killed. Galler's horse was shot from under him and his life had to be taken soon after his master had been blown into eternity.

Lieut. Gale, commander of the ill-fated battery, told a reporter for the United Press that it was mere guess work to try to explain the cause of the explosion, but it was most likely that part of the time-fuse attached to the shrapnel shell had become loosened and ignited the powder by friction. A court-martial, in addition to the coroner's inquest, will be held.

Miss Carrie Lehman was looking out of the drawing-room window of her father's house when a bullet whizzed past her head and imbedded itself in the wall.

DEBS WILL NOT GIVE IN

He Still Claims To Be Certain of Victory.

As Long as Traffic Is Stopped at Any One Point the Strike Is Not Lost, He Says—Troops Not To Leave Chicago For the Present—Situation at Several Points.

CHICAGO, July 17.—The strike situation in this city and vicinity remains practically unchanged this morning, except possibly that the railroads are slowly getting into better shape.

President Debs still claims to be certain of coming out ahead in his fight with the railroads.

Directors Goodwin and Hogan, of the A. R. U., have left to begin the work of organizing the men in the northwest and the country west of the Mississippi. There are now eight of the organizers out.

"Our policy," said Mr. Debs, "is to keep these organizers with the men, so the strikers will not weaken. We have everything solid west of the Mississippi. That is our strong point. I claim that as long as we have traffic stopped at any one point we have not yet lost the fight.

When shown a United Press dispatch stating that Mr. Heathcote, leader of the Pullman strikers, had asked him to call off the strike, Mr. Debs denied it flatly. "The Pullman strikers are just as firm as ever," he said. "They have no intention of going back to work. If Pullman is satisfied, they are."

The following has been issued by the local American Railway union:

"The traveling public is warned against patronizing all trains now running on the Southern Pacific line. Such travel is unsafe. Men who operate the trains are incompetent, and grave danger to life and limb may result from the faulty operation of the trains intrusted to unskillful hands. The strike is not off; the public has been misled. We abhor violence and state emphatically that we are not responsible for any depredations that are committed."

There is no immediate prospect of the withdrawal of the federal troops from Chicago and vicinity. This is upon no less authority than Gen. Miles.

At present he does not feel that the general situation would warrant the decrease in the military forces at present guarding the property of the government and doing police duty along the many miles of rail road tracks that penetrates Chicago from every point.

How Freight Business Was Affected.

CHICAGO, July 17.—Last week's traffic returns of the eastern roads show that freight business is practically abandoned on a majority of the roads. Five of them make no report, and the largest amount carried by any of the others was less than 2,000 tons. Total shipments amounted to but 4,142 tons, as compared with 11,666 tons for the previous week and 50,257 tons for the corresponding week last year.

EAST RIVER TUNNEL FINISHED.

One of the Greatest Pieces of Engineering Work in the World.

NEW YORK, July 17.—The new tunnel of the East River Gas company was formally opened yesterday with much ceremony, officials accompanying an invited party through the subterranean vault.

William Henry White, an engineer from Philadelphia, pronounced the tunnel one of the greatest pieces of work in the world.

The shafts are each 9 feet square, the one on the New York shore being 135 feet deep, and that at Ravenswood being 147 feet deep. The tunnel is 2,616.4 feet in length, is cylindrical in shape, 8 1-2 feet high by 16 feet wide, runs under Blackwell's Island and comes out on the New York side at East 71st street.

The top of the tunnel under the channel on the New York side at the point of nearest approach to the bottom of the river is 40.93 feet below the river bottom, while under the channel of the Long Island side nearest the nearest approach of the top of the tunnel to the river bed is 82.33 feet. The depth of water in the channel on the New York side is 65 feet, and in the channel on the Long Island side 30 feet.

The water pressure over the tunnel is greater than over any other tunnel in the world.

TWICE IN COLLISION.

Steamer Stamford Badly Damaged and Beached on Castle Island.

BOSTON, July 17.—Steamboat Stamford, while coming from Plymouth yesterday afternoon during a dense fog, collided with the British steamer British Queen, from London, which was anchored. The Stamford received slight damages, but continued on her way to Boston at quarter speed.

When the Stamford reached the vicinity of Long Island, the steamer Kennebec, bound for Bath, crashed into her tearing away the paddle box, cutting through her guards and listing the steamer badly.

The Kennebec, after finding the Stamford was not cut below the water line, proceeded on her way apparently uninjured.

The Stamford had about 50 passengers aboard, and thinking the steamer might be sinking, they hurriedly adjusted life-preservers, but were later transferred to the steamer Gen. Lincoln, which hove in sight, and landed them at Boston.

The Stamford was then beached on Castle Island. The extent of her injuries are not yet known.

The mountain gullies were turned to raging torrents, and the growing crops were badly damaged. After the storm hailstones as large as walnuts were gathered up in many places.

UPHOLD THE PRESIDENT

The House Praises Him for Calling Out Troops.

Messrs. Pierce and Bland the Only Members Who Spoke Against the Resolution—The Attorney-General in for a Scoring by the Populist Congressman—Doings in the Senate

WASHINGTON, July 17.—With less than an hour's discussion, and with practically no opposition, the house adopted the following resolution offered by Mr. McCrary (dem., Ky.):

Resolved, That the house of representatives indorse the prompt and vigorous efforts of the president and his administration to suppress lawlessness, restore order and prevent improper interference with the enforcement of the laws of the United States and with the transportation of the mails, and with interstate commerce, and pledges the president hearty support; and deems the success that has already attended his efforts cause for public and general congratulation.

The resolution was opposed by Pence (pop., Col.) and conditionally by Bland (dem., Mo.), who denounced the actions of the federal officials in his own state as wholly unnecessary. Pence criticised the attitude and action of Attorney General Olney towards and upon the recent troubles, charging that he had selected a railroad attorney of Chicago as special assistant district attorney to prosecute the strikers and their leaders in that city. He also referred to the charges made in democratic papers that Olney was the representative of corporations and trusts as a reason why he should not be in the position he occupies, and why his action should not be approved.

The resolution was advocated by McCreary and Catchings (dem., Miss.) and passed by a large viva voce vote. Efforts to secure a call of the yeas and nays were unavailing. Republicans took no part in the debate.

Senate amendments to the naval appropriation bill were non-concurred in and the bill sent to conference. Messrs. Cummings (dem., N. Y.), Geisenhainer (dem., N. J.), and Dolliver (rep., Ia.) were appointed managers on the part of the house.

The rest of the day's session was spent in discussing the bill reported from the committee on judiciary to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy. It was a purely voluntary measure and intended, as explained by the author, Mr. Bailey, of Texas, to harmonize proceedings in bankruptcy in the several states. The bill, as reported by the committee, was ordered to be engrossed, but on its passage the vote of a quorum could not be obtained.

The final touch to the act for the admission of Utah as a state, so far as the two houses of congress are concerned, was applied by the vice-president when he announced his signature to the act. It was immediately sent to the president for his approval. The house bill to regulate dealings in options and futures was advanced one stage, in being taken from the table (where it has been lying for two or three weeks) and referred to the committee on agriculture.

The rapid progress which has distinguished the senate for the past two weeks in connection with the annual appropriation bills was still further illustrated in the finishing up and passing of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, and in the passage, with very little consumption of time, of the District of Columbia bill, and in the reporting of the agricultural bill to the senate.

LOVED HER, AND DIED FOR HER

NEW CASTLE, Pa., July 17. — William Bartle, of Big Beaver township, committed suicide yesterday afternoon by shooting himself through the head. His wife, from whom he had been separated for some time, was in an adjoining room at the time writing separation papers.

A moment before Bartle had tried to induce his wife to live with him again. This she refused, and Bartle left the room, saying:

"I love you, and will die for love; you will need no divorce."

He then went into another room and in the presence of his brother and sister shot himself. He was 27 years old, and leaves three children.

Treasury Finances Improved.

'MID NATURE'S GLORIES.

DELIGHTS OF SUMMER LIVING AT THE FAMOUS WATER GAP.

There Breezes Are Always Cool and There Is Abundant Fishing, Boating, Driving, and a Splendid Variety of Pioneer Mountain Walks Among the Glens and Heights.

WATER GAP HOUSE,
DELAWARE WATER GAP, PA.,
July 16, 1894.

We are surveying the glories of what the Indian legends tell us was once the basin of a mighty inland sea. Our point of view is the best that the country affords, the famous Water Gap House. It is a place that Plainfielders are finding most convenient of access and most full of Summer delights.

Situated on a spur of the Kittatinny Mountain, the house has the finest location of the whole range of the Blue Ridge. From its elevation are compassed views of great extent and beauty. The Water Gap House is the central point from which radiate all the lovely drives, walks, and other pleasure-paths of this wonderful region.

Geologists claim to read in the markings of the rocks and in the masses of rock formation, the story of a mighty upheaval which caused the wonders of the Gap. Old settlers repeat the tale of the aborigines, that the waters once covered this country, dammed by the mighty mountains. The range extends across the two States of New Jersey and Pennsylvania in a straight, even barrier; but at the Gap it is rudely swept asunder, leaving the broad, deep gorge, the jagged ends of the strata of rock revealing where once the mountain was united. Below the Gap are huge boulders, tossed about once, now solid in the river beds. Above, is one of the choicest garden-spots of the creation, and here the Water Gap House is supreme sentinel.

There is every reason why this celebrated house should lead. Its view is the best. It is unsurpassed in its appointments and management. It is conducted by the pioneer of Water Gap hotel men, L. W. Brodhead. Mr. Brodhead is one of the most capable and most genial men in the business of making people happy. Any man of the style and of the school of Abraham Lincoln wins affection by his appearance. Mr. Brodhead is such a man, and he not only inspires confidence and kindles good feeling by his resemblance to Honest Abe, but he holds the personal friendship of all who meet him, by his sterling worth and his unceasing and unfailing efforts to please his patrons.

The first hotel at the Gap was a venture; Mr. Brodhead owned it, managed it, and made it a success; then he climbed up higher and achieved the crowning triumph of the Water Gap House.

The hotel is a big and delightful home for hundreds of families during each season. Good taste and refinement prevail. The rooms are as comfortable as any can desire. The table is superior, the bills of fare affording every substantial and every dainty dish, wholesomely and palatably prepared. The service is that of the best Philadelphia families, the waiters being secured from households that suspend during the heated term.

As Mr. Brodhead is the directing genius in the business management of the hotel, so Mrs. Brodhead, his excellent and estimable wife, personally makes perfect every detail of the housekeeping. She sees that all the guests are provided with what their comfort and tastes require, and a cleaner and better equipped house cannot be found.

Under her care, the garden of the hotel is a floral paradise. She watches the plants during the long, cold Winter with the solicitude of a mother over a child. In the Spring they come forth in glory, to gladden the senses of the Summer guests. Everything grows luxuriously, the roses, geraniums, and all other plants, becoming veritable trees, and the bloom they show continually is wonderful. The flowers occupy space all along the immense verandas, and the lawns are profusely adorned with their beauty. The famous florist, Peter Henderson, pronounced this the most successful result of amateur window gardening he had seen in this country.

The air is bracing and life-reviving. The waters come from the clear and pure mountain springs, and flow direct into every bedroom. The gas, bath rooms, electric bells, billiard room, and other details, make this a completely equipped hotel in every particular.

T were too long to tell at one sitting all the splendors of this region. From the Water Gap House radiate paths exploring all the hidden glories of the mountain. We traverse the native forests, and come upon waterfalls, glens, and curious things fashioned in the solid rock. By easy ascent we reach the summit of Mt. Minsi, and the whole world is at our feet. Game starts at our footsteps as it did when the Indian sent arrow after it. Far down is the beautiful Delaware, its lakelike repose dotted by the boats and canoes of the modern Isaak Waltons, luring the gamey bass from its depths.

Fishing? Ask anyone who has tried it here. Ask Al Graves of the Water Gap House and H. B. Kretschman of New York: they came to the hotel today with a catch of 180 fish, the biggest 22 inches long and weighing 6 pounds, and the average 2½ pounds. Bass leads in the river sport, and the tributaries are alive with trout.

Besides the lesser craft on the river, there is a sprightly steamer that takes one through the Gap to the Cold-Air Cave, and down the Rapids, an adventurous but not dangerous pleasure.

All these, and many other delights, are the happy lot of the favored ones at this lovely place, and the best way for those interested to gain fuller information is to send to Mr. Brodhead for one of his dainty illustrated booklets telling all about everything—not all, either; one has to see for himself to know the full happiness which obtains here.

Our own party reached here Saturday night. We climbed the mountain from the station by means of the stout legs of the Broadhead horses. The moon was roaming over the hilltops in an ecstasy of glory, and the picture was like those painted of the Rhine.

The music was on at the Water Gap House. The merry throng found pleasures indoors and on the verandas. Then came a night of delicious rest, and a peaceful, happy Sabbath. The morning found us in the village church; the afternoon brought a concert of sacred music at the hotel. In the evening services were conducted in the large parlors by Rev. Dr. Andrew W. Hardy. This is a scholarly man from East Stroudsburg, where he has a preparatory school for expectant collegians. He gave us a stirring and powerful sermon on the text "Quit you like men", showing true manhood to consist of strength, steadfastness and saintliness; and urging his hearers to make religion not an insurance for the future but a programme for the present.

One makes charming new friends here, but it is refreshing to come across occasional familiar faces. Plainfield was represented here last week by by Rev. and Mrs. Lewis Bond. Today Miss Mary K. Compton arrived. This morning B. A. Hegeman, Jr., stopped for a fleeting glimpse of the Water Gap glories, on a business trip along the D. L. and W.

The moonlight just now is glorious. Hardly has the sun dipped below the western hills, when Luna appears in full glory beyond the Gap. Mt. Tammany and Mt. Minsi as towering sentinels, guarding the river's flow; they are dark and sombre. The waters are silver in the moonbeams. Still lingers in the West the blush of the departing day. The valley of the Delaware and Cherry Valley are peaceful under the gentle glow of coming night. Fertile fields nod their verdure before the breezes. The quaint old villages of Shawnee and Water Gap twinkle their evening lamps. The hills to the north, very like the Berkshires in their gentle undulations, are a pastoral poem. Far off are dim, dark ranges, yonder the Catskills, and thither the Pocomo. On an island of the river are the white tents of a pleasure camp, and campers burn fires on the Minsi summit. The night is too young for any celestial lamp besides the moon, except the evening star, which hovers over us. The heaven is still a beautiful blue, and no clouds spot its azure. Never before have we seen such a color in the evening sky, except four years ago, when moonrise succeeded sunset here just as it is doing now. The moon climbs higher, and a curtain of mist wreathes upward from the mountain, throwing a halo over the orb, and encircling it with rainbow hues. The promenaders on the verandas pause to drink in the witching beauty of the scene, and seem to hear a Lorelei song above the dreamful music of the minuet.

CURED BY PASKOLA.

WHAT PRE-DIGESTED FOOD IS DOING FOR DYSPEPTIC PEOPLE.

Its Wonderful Effects—Thin People Rapidly Gain Flesh by Taking Paskola, the Newly Discovered Pre-Digested Food—Remarkable Cures of Indigestion.

Paskola works wonders.

That is what people who take it say, and the statement is repeated by the druggists who sell it. There has never been such a demand for any preparation as there now is for Paskola, the pre-digested food. The druggists say that a large stock of it is rapidly disposed of in meeting the calls that are constantly made for it.

Dyspeptic sufferers, who have tried Paskola as a last resort, after taking every other remedy they could find, have been delighted to notice their symptoms soon disappearing. Pale, thin people who take Paskola rapidly gain flesh.

The fact of the matter is, Paskola is a scientific discovery. It is not an old fashioned remedy like the greasy, evil smelling cod liver oil, a relic of a past age. Paskola is the outcome of modern research and progress. It cures because it is based on correct principles.

Paskola is not a medicine, but a food, pleasant to the taste and agreeable to the weakest stomach. Being pre-digested, it is instantly absorbed by the system when it is swallowed, entering at once into the tissues of the body to form new flesh and blood. It builds up the strength gives tone to the stomach, enables other food to be properly digested. Delicate stomachs cannot stand sickening cod liver oils and other fatty mixtures. Paskola has replaced them.

Children thrive wonderfully when they are given Paskola. They like it, and cannot get enough of it. As a means of imparting health, strength and vigor to the puny little ones it is unsurpassed.

You can obtain Paskola of any good druggist and a free pamphlet will be mailed by the Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade street, New York.

When you start out on a Columbia, you come home on it.

The fact that it is impossible to ascertain the quality of a bicycle by a casual examination should be a sufficient reason for buying a wheel with a reputation.

There is no wheel that has been before the public so long, none that stands or ever stood so high, none so well guaranteed, none whose guarantee is so substantial and so liberally interpreted, none so safe to buy as a Columbia.

With Columbias listed at $125, few riders will be so unwise as to invest in lower grade bicycles.

WRECK IN THE STREET.

COAL CARS CRASH DOWN AN EMBANKMENT.

Richmond Street the Scene of an Unusual Railroad Accident—A Brakeman Escapes by Jumping.

The end of a coal train crashed down an embankment near Richmond street this morning. No one happened to be passing underneath at the time, and none of the crew was caught in the wreck.

It happened at 8:15. Engine 421 ran ten cars of coal down the siding between the main track and the Scott Press Works. These were stopped at the end of the track, a few feet from the edge of the embankment on Richmond street. The engine then pushed down a second section. At the head of the grade the cars broke away from the locomotive and rolled down towards the first ten. The rear flagman shouted to a brakeman who was between two of the cars near the street and he jumped just in time to escape being killed.

Seven cars, consigned to L. A. Rheaume, left the track. Five went crashing into a tangled heap on the sidewalk, scattering the coal into the road. The other two remained on the slope of the hill.

Roadmaster George Abbott of Somerville was notified. He went to the switch and sent for the wrecking train.

The wreck has been cleared away, and the spilled coal is for sale.

Clinton Company against F. M. Hulett, Andrew Vanderbeck against Charles M. Ulrich; and July 24: Daniel & Son against P. Minturn Smith, H. J. Heinz against Charles Van Winkle, H. J. Heinz against John Blimm, John E. Beerbower against Charles H. Burnett; and July 24, the landlord and tenant case of John F. Beerbower against Lewis B. Coddington.

Maher Puts the "Harlem Coffee-Cooler" To Sleep in Short Order.

BOSTON, July 17.—Music hall was well filled last night with sports to witness the sparring match between Peter Maher, the Irish champion heavy-weight, and Frank Craig, the "Harlem coffee-cooler."

Maher fought at 185 and Craig at 170 pounds.

The fight lasted but two rounds and was won by Maher, who landed a terrible upper cut on his black opponent, knocking him senseless for several minutes.

The fight was fast and furious throughout. Craig did the better fighting in the first round, but Maher had it all his own way in the second.

An explicit denial is given to the report that a compromise had been made on sugar.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

ALL HAIL, VANITY!

This Sterling Mare Proves Herself Not a Vexation of Spirit.

M. Quinn's black mare Vanity has proved herself to be the best race mare that Plainfield has yet sent out to battle for money. She has trotted eight races in six weeks, and only once behind the money.

It takes a horse to be of the very best material and in the best of condition to trot a race once a week so early in the season. And this mare started a green young mare. She never had a race before the first of June, and has trotted every week since. She trotted four races these last four weeks. One on the 3d of July, winning second money and one on the 4th of July, winning first money, and trotting eight heats. She trotted nine heats last Friday and Saturday, and took second and first money.

Mr. C. C. Brower deserves great credit for his training and conditioning of this mare, as does also her care-taker, old, reliable Charlie Nichols.

—The Jersey Central will run an excursion to Mauch Chunk next Sunday. The Plainfield fare is $1.75. Train leaves Plainfield 9:35 a. m.

HOME TESTIMONY.

Mr Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly. They were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 144 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOS. CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact, it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

BANDEAU AND MONOCLE.

Anomalies and Curiosities of the Fickle Fashion Goddess.

At what shall we hesitate in these days of anomaly? A certain authority devotes half a column of small type to a discussion of the effects of the revival of the bandeau—that smoothly plastered arrangement of the hair in which it is parted in the middle and brought down over the temples and ears in the fashion of Evangeline pictures—which it says is right at our doors, and in the next breath announces the arrival of the monocle. Was there ever such a combination? Conceive Evangeline sporting a single eyeglass and holding it in position by contortions of the cheek and eyebrow!

Since Turkish toweling has been brought out in lightweights and dainty colors and sold by the yard it has been utilized for various purposes other than washcloths and bathrobes. The ornamental varieties are at present employed for loose dressing sacks made with bell sleeves and tied together with ribbons matching the pink, blue or yellow stripes of the material. These are cool and comfortable garments, well suited to the season, and as they do not have to be either starched or ironed the laundering is a simple process.

It is said that chatelaines are again coming into fashion, the natural consequence of the universal popularity of the belt. No doubt they will be worn by a great many women of acknowledged good taste, but there is nevertheless always a suggestion of vulgarity about any article of clothing or personal ornament that rattles or jingles, a hint of the aboriginal savage who delights to decorate himself with strings of clattering beads and bits of clinking metal. Perhaps when humanity reaches the higher stages of evolution it will wear no jewelry whatever and will regard gems and metal work in the light in which it now considers paintings and statuary—as things of beauty not suitable for purposes of bodily adornment.

The latest development in wraps consists of two full capes of moire mounted on a yoke and bordered with jet. The lower cape has two long stole ends in front that reach almost to the bottom of the skirt and are finished with jet fringe. A torsade of moire fastened at the shoulders by rosettes outlines the yoke, and a bow of black satin ribbon with floating ends unites the torsade in front. JUDIC CHOLLET.

AN UNMASCULINE GOWN.

It Is of Serpent Green Serge and Velvet and Is Extremely Handsome.

The objections to a fashion of dress for women more nearly approaching the masculine style are mainly sentimental ones, and that is why they are so hard to overcome. A demurrer founded upon apparent reason may be logically proved to be wrong, but to fight a sentimental theory is like contending with the wind. If the persons who disapprove of trousers costumes for women possess that most uncommon of attributes—common sense—they will say honestly: "We acknowledge that the ordinary style of dress for women at present is inconvenient and hampering in all active occupations, but we maintain that it is more dignified and reserved than trousers, and we dislike the latter because they are ugly, unbecoming and ungraceful. Women are the beautiful half of humanity, and we like to have them appear such just so far as is possible, for there are none too many beautiful things in the world at the best." However, personal liberty is better even than beauty, and whether women wish to dress in trousers or skirts they should not be molested nor made afraid. Each individual best knows what garments suit her means, position and occupation and should be left to decide the matter for herself without interference. The adoption of the divided skirt or knickerbockers by no means argues the use of cigarettes, swear words and intoxicants, although these indulgences are equally meritorious in men and women. A woman of perfect propriety and refinement of mind may dispense with petticoats, since their absence merely proves that either she is engaged in some peculiarly arduous employment or that her artistic perceptions are atrophied, neither of which facts indicates a moral blemish.

A sketch is given of an entirely unmasculine gown of serpent green serge. The skirt is draped lightly on each side and finished at the bottom with rows of stitching. The corsage is of velvet to match, dotted with white. The draped figure fronts of ecru lace fall over wide revers of white silk. The wide belt is also of white silk. JUDIC CHOLLET.

IT WAS BRITONS' DAY

Americans Beaten on Land and Sea, But Not Disgraced.

Weather Conditions Against Our College Boys and Our Boat—Yale Athletes Unable To Cope with the English Fellows on Account of Wet and Heavy Grounds, Which Oxford Cracks Are Accustomed To—Lack of Sufficient Wind Causes the Defeat of the Vigilant.

LONDON, July 17.—The victories yesterday of the Britons "on land and sea" has naturally turned the head of the sportive Englishman, but not to such an extent, however, that he is not ready to admit that the conditions all around were against the American. In the yacht race the Vigilant is now admitted by all to be the better boat in a strong wind, and although the crack athletes of Oxford triumphed over the champions of Yale, the latter were by no means disgraced.

Rain poured down almost unceasingly from noon until the programme was more than half decided and the sodden condition of the track and infield played havoc with the form of the Americans. The Yale men are but little accustomed to heavy going, while the Oxford cracks have been inured to all kinds of atmospheric freaks during their early spring campaign.

Had Jupiter Pluvius held aloof the indications are that the result would have been a win, or at the worst, a tie, for the Americans. As it was, if Woodhull had run up to his form in the half mile, the match would have resulted in a tie, with four and a half wins to the credit of each team.

The arrangements inside the grounds were excellent. As a prelude to the day's sport the band struck up "Rule Britannia," and the numbers of the first event were hoisted on the telegraph board.

The first clangs of the clerk's bell was the signal for a buzz of excitement, and each sprinter who trotted past to his mark received an ovation. When the American pair appeared the band played "Yankee Doodle" to an accompanyment of warwhoops very suggestive of the campus at New Haven.

Oxford drew first blood in the 100-yard dash which Ashley Pond, jr., of Yale, was thought to have at his mercy. The Detroit boy was all at sea on the soft track and could not live at the pace set by G. Jordan and C. B. Fry, of Oxford.

The latter got over the ground in fine style and finished too fast for Jordan, whom he led about half a yard at the tape. A similar distance separated Jordan and Sanford.

The jubilation of Oxford was short lived as W. O. Hickok and A. J. Brown, of Yale, outclassed G. W. Robertson, the English intercollegiate crack, in the hammer-throwing event. Hickok favored his weak knee so much that he fouled the circle three times. He gave the assembled Americans a big scare but made ample amends soon after by hurling the missile 110 feet 5 inches. The Yale second string, A. J. Brown, beat Robertson a yard for second place. Hickok's winning performance was almost 15 feet behind his best record at the game and would not have earned a place for him in the last American intercollegiate championships.

Yale colors fluttered uneasily as the hurdle racers crossed the infield to the starting point on the back stretch. Taking time, as a standard, E. A. Cady had the pace of his rivals and some fancy odds were laid on the American intercollegiate champion. He flattered his admirers for a time, but could not shake off Oakley, of Oxford. The latter got away slowly but came with a rush half way through and won cleverly by a yard. Cady struck the last obstacle and came to grief, leaving D. B. Hatch to finish second.

This event was the turning point of the contest but the Yale men struggled on with unflinching courage, relying on the effect of the dogged perseverance which is sometimes miscalled "Yale luck." There were three track events remaining and it was not unreasonable to hope that the American flag would be hoisted at least once. Sanford went for all he was worth to capture the quarter mile, but he had not speed enough to stall off Jordan's challenge in the stretch and the English intercollegiate champion won by two yards.

Fresh courage fired the American contingent when the Stars and Stripes were seen fluttering aloft in the infield, and the soothing news was wafted to them that L. P. Sheldon, of Yale, had beaten C. B. Fry, the part holder of the world's record, for the broad jump. The defeat of Fry was probably the greatest upset of the day, particularly as his sprinting in the dash had shown him to be in exceptional form. Considering the state of the ground, it was something unusual to find three men clearing over 23 feet, while Sheldon's jump was a little short of marvelous, under the circumstances. He went within a quarter of an inch of tieing the American intercollegiate record.

The shot putting further increased the Yale score, as A. F. Mallig, the Oxford champion, had not a ghost of a chance against such a pair of experts as Hickok and Brown. Then came the crucial test.

With two events remaining, Yale had scored three wins to Oxford's four, and the American colony could not figure anyone but Woodhull winner of the 880-yard run. The good thing was hopelessly beaten, and the Oxford pair, W. H. Greenhow, of Exeter, and F. W. Rathbone, New, had the finish between them. This gave Oxford her fifth win and settled the question at issue.

Sheldon was again a tower of strength in the high jump, and went within a most tantalizing margin of winning, without actually doing the trick. E. D. Swanwick, the English intercollegiate champion, was said to fear no one but E. A. Cady. The latter was in difficulties after clearing 5 feet, 7 3-4 inches. Sheldon got an inch higher, but there he and Swanwick stuck. Extra jumps failed to solve the problem, and, as Oxford's win of the half mile had taken away Yale's last chance, the tie was allowed to stand.

In the hurdles Greenhow won in a romp amidst tremendous cheering from the Britishers.

Sheldon turned out for the jumps wearing a plaster on his left knee. His performances under the circumstances were highly creditable. Hatch was not at his best and failed to "take off" with any success.

When Sheldon made his big hit in the broad jump, the Yale contingent got together and let off one of their historic Rah Rah Rah's.

The score at the end of the game was: Oxford, 5 1-2; Yale, 3 1-2.

The consensus of opinion among the experts was that the Yale men were insufficiently trained.

The dinner tendered to the Americans after the games was a rather late function owing to the delays at the scene of the tournament. The chair was taken at 9:15 by Sir Richard Webster. He was supported by the American ambassador, Thomas F. Bayard. A number of prominent guests were present.

The queen and President Cleveland were treated to an accompaniment of enthusiastic cheers, with the Yale yell as a climax.

Sir Richard Webster, in proposing the health of the Yale men, said he never saw a finer body of athletes or a team more cordially welcomed, and he expressed a hope that this tournament was only the precursor of many such elevating contests.

NEEDS A STIFF BREEZE.

Vigilant Can't Beat the Britannia in a Calm.

BANGOR, Ireland, July 17.—The course over which the American sloop Vigilant and the British cutter Britannia sailed yesterday for the County Down cup, or its equivalent in cash, £50, is peculiarly adapted to the English racing model. It has twelve turns, and, as the Britannia is credited with being a third faster in stays than the Vigilant, she entered the contest with the assurance that she had favorably two minutes advantage of the centerboarder.

Over this course, that of the Royal Ulster Yacht club, in July last the Britannia, in a stiff northeaster, worsted Valkyrie by 11 minutes and 44 seconds. The Britannia was second, the Satanita capturing the mug by 2 minutes and 29 seconds.

The Vigilant looked a trifle less majestic than she did in last week's races, as she had 4 1-2 feet of her topmast cut off and her bowsprit shortened. This reduced her sail area and gave her less than her former time allowance. How much she will allow the Britannia will not be known until the center-boarder is measured.

The cloudy sky did not prevent crowds of enthusiastic Irish yachtsmen from gathering from the several points on either side of Belfast lough, overlooking the turns. There were thousands of spectators from Belfast, which is about ten miles southwest of this little town.

When the boats reached for the line the wind was brisk from the southwest.

The Vigilant was handled admirably at the start. Although she crossed the line three seconds later than the Britannia she secured the weather berth. The yachts were timed thus:

Britannia	11:00:12
Vigilant	11:00:15

The race demonstrated clearly that with a mild breeze the Britannia is the better boat, but in a stiff blow the American yacht can run away from the English cutter.

Over the first leg, four miles, the breeze was not such as the Americans desired, but was increasing, and the Britannia gained 18 seconds. In the run to the next mark, 5 1-2 miles away, the wind was fairly piping and the Vigilant drew on her rival and passed her at the mark 21 seconds in the lead.

The next run, 4 1-2 miles, the Vigilant showed her weather qualities and passed the mark-boat 52 seconds in advance. The next mark-boat was passed with 1 minute and 31 seconds to the Vigilant's favor. The wind then softened a bit, and although it soon freshened, the drop was unlucky for the Vigilant, for in the run on this leg the British boat picked up 53 seconds.

In the next run the wind was all the Yankees could desire and the Vigilant rounded the stake boat 2 minutes and 44 seconds in the lead.

The Vigilant lost 50 seconds on the next leg by making a hitch inshore. The wind soon fell almost to a dead calm, and the race ceased to have any interest for the unlucky American. The Britannia succeeded in getting over two minutes in the lead, but as the wind freshened on the run home the Vigilant began to creep up on her rival. As they crossed the line they were timed as follows:

Britannia	4:39:12
Vigilant	4:40:45

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.

Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make Is True.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is in demand by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Elimore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

DR. STARKWEATHER.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays 4 to 6 p. m.

Those living at a distance can consult the Doctor by letter.

DEBS PLAYS MARTYR

Goes to Jail as a Matter of Principle.

Other Officers of the A. R. U. Go Along—Plenty of Bail Offered, But the Strike Leader Was Determined in His Decision — Treated With Much Courtesy by the Prison Officials—To Be Tried Next Monday for Contempt of Court.

CHICAGO, July 18.—There was a sensational climax late last evening to the troubles that have disturbed railroad circles west of the Allegheny mountains during the past three weeks, when President Eugene V. Debs, of the American Railway union and his cabinet, Vice-President George W. Howard, General Secretary Sylvester Keliher and L. W. Rogers, chairman of the executive committe and editor of the journal of the organization, were taken to the county jail and incarcerated as prisoners of the United States for violation of the injunction issued on July 2 by Judges Woods and Grosscup, restraining them from combining and conspiring to hinder interstate commerce traffic or the movement of United States mails.

The imprisonment of the chiefs of the new railway union was not in any sense an arbitrary proceeding. Although predicated upon what the courts regarded as an open and defiant violation of orders previously issued from its jurisdiction, an opportunity was afforded to the defendants of presenting bonds for their appearance in court a week hence. This proposition, however, was rejected on the ground, as emphasized by President Debs, after the court had rendered its ultimatum, that the principle involved was one entirely too serious in its nature to admit of the defendants availing themselves of any technicalities that might be regarded as loopholes in the laws.

Bondsmen almost without limit offered their aid and support to the union leaders, but their overtures were declined in a firm, although courteous manner, and the prisoners suffered themselves to be taken to jail and locked up. There, unless in the meantime they should tire of the incarceration, they will remain until Monday morning of next week.

The initative proceedings that resulted in this climax were inaugurated in the United States circuit court in the morning, when special counsel for the United States, Edwin Walker and United States District Attorney Milchrist, appeared before Judge Seamans to present their information against President Debs and his associates, charging them with willful, open, daily and hourly violation of the spirit and letter of the injunction issued by Judges Woods and Grosscup on July 2.

In support of the contention of the government, several scores of telegrams, which had been secured from the telegraph company under a ruling of the court, were cited. These are specimens of the whole:

TO COURT HEAD, SOUTH BUTTE, Mont.

The general managers are weakening. If strike is not settled in 48 hours, complete paralysis will follow. Potatoes and ice are out of sight. Save your money and buy a gun. E. V. DEBS.

To S. W. RAINS, Mount Vernon, Ill.

Call out Air line, and let it be understood this trouble is one of capital against labor. This is no contest in which children or childish men have a part. Strong men and broad minds only can resist the plutocracy and arrogant monopoly. Do not be frightened at the troops, injunctions or a subsidized press. Quit and remain firm. Commit no violence. American Railway union will protect all, whether members or not, when strike is off.

(Signed) E. V. DEBS.

Only a few of these dispatches had been read when Judge Seamans interrupted to remark that sufficient had been shown to indicate a wilful and deliberate violation of the injunctions; and thereupon counsel for the government concluded with a prayer for an attachment against the defendants indicated and their punishment for contempt of court.

President Debs was the only representative of the union in court during the morning session. He was accompanied by W. W. Erwin, of St. Paul, special counsel for the union, and who figured conspicuously in the defense of the Homestead rioters at Pittsburg two years ago, and S. S. Gregory, of Chicago, recently leading counsel for Prendergast, the assassin of Mayor Harrison.

When the representatives of the government had concluded their arguments, Attorney Gregory took the ground that the information failed to charge any one of the four defendants with personal participation in violence or destruction of property. In behalf of the government, Special Counsel Walker declared that the government represented all the people, the defendants included, and that it did not propose to protest railroad property except so far as interstate commerce and transportation of the United States mails were concerned.

Further discussion was cut short by the court, the judge ordering writs of attachments to issue against Debs and his associates returnable at 2 o'clock. Instructions were given the marshal, however, to waive personal service, with the understanding that the defendants would voluntarily surrender themselves.

The confidence of the court was not misplaced, for, within fifteen minutes after the reassembling in the afternoon, Debs, Howard, Keliher and Rogers were on hand.

Attorney Erwin led off the proceedings with a fiery speech in which he declared that the defendants had been guilty of no contempt of court and stated point blank that, in the event of the court ruling otherwise, they would refuse to give bail and accept instead the alternative of going to jail.

Counsel went on to say that President Debs and his associates were already under bail in $10,000 each to answer indictments preferred by the grand jury, and that they could not and would not give additional bail on the charge of contempt. It would be amply sufficient if they were out on their own recognizance to appear whenever wanted.

Special Counsel Walker replied in behalf of the government, by asking the court to pay no attention to the speech to the public that had just been delivered. Day after day, he said, these men had wilfully violated the injunction directed against them. They cannot raise the question of jurisdiction until they have purged themselves of their contempt.

After further argument the judge fixed the hearing of the case for 10 o'clock on Monday morning next, and added that it would be a manifest impropriety to allow the defendants to go at large on their own recognizances. He therefore thought that each and every one of the four should find satisfactory sureties in the sum of $3,000 each to appear on Monday next. The court added that this was purely nominal bail, and but for the fact that the defendants were already under bonds it would be much larger.

General Counsel Peck, of the Santa Fe road, argued that similar bail should apply to the information filed in behalf of that corporation, but Judge Seamans ruled that one bond would be sufficient. To make it more, he said, or to apply it to other informations would be a hardship and in the nature of a persecution.

The ruling of the court was received with a buzz of astonishment on the part of the spectators. Debs, Howard, Keliher and Rogers retired to the northwest corner of the room and held a long consultation with their attorneys.

When they concluded, Lawyer Erwin announced that the prisoners, for such they were by this time, would refuse to give bail.

A score or more of friends clustered around them and urged them to recede from their determination. One of the number said that he was worth half a million dollars and would go bail for the entire quartette. Others offered to become individual surety for the several defendants. Debs, however, was obdurate and in his determination he was supported by his associates.

In the meantime the orders of commitment were made out. Marshal Arnold had been summoned, and with him he brought two deputies. A final effort was made to induce the defendants to accept the proffers of their friends, but without result.

At half past four Marshal Arnold escorted them to an open carriage in which they were driven to the county jail on the north side. Arnold sat with the arrested men while the two deputies shared seats with the driver.

On their arrival at the jail the prisoners were courteously received by Jailer Morris and Jail Clerk Whitman. The marshal did the introductory honors and the prisoners shook hands cordially with their new custodian.

No feature of jail methods, however, relaxed in their behalf.

At the demand of the turnkeys they held up their hands and submitted to a search. They were deprived of all valuables and then led to roomy cells in the debtors' department.

THE SENATE AGAIN LAGS

Occupied by the Russian Thistle, It Loses Time.

One Million Dollars Added to the Agricultural Appropriation Bill To Exterminate the Pest—The Indian Appropriation Bill Now Before the Upper Chamber—In the House.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The senate presented a singular exception yesterday to the example of rapid discharge of business which it had given for the last two weeks. It had, before Monday's adjournment, reached a point on the agricultural bill where it only remained for the vice-president to put the question on its passage; but at that point Mr. Hansbrough (rep., N. D.) interposed an amendment appropriating a million dollars to be used in the extermination of the Russian cactus or thistle; and the discussion upon it occupied the whole of yesterday's session. A preliminary point of order was made against it; but the senate, by a vote of 26 to 23, decided it to be in order.

The amendment was defended and urged by Mr. Hansbrough, and it even found an advocate in so strict a constructionist of the constitution as Mr. George, of Mississippi.

It was eventually carried by a vote of 27 to 24, and then the agricultural bill was passed.

As reported to the senate from the committee on appropriations it appropriated for the agricultural department for 1895, $3,208,183, being $7,460 less than the amount in the house bill and $108,000 less than the amount appropriated for 1894. There were some small increases made as the bill progressed in the senate, in addition to the million dollars given in the Russian cactus amendment.

The Indian appropriation bill was taken up this morning as the unfinished business.

House of Representatives.

The day was accorded to the committee on judiciary, under an order adopted by the house, to present bills for consideration, but an hour and a half was spent on other matters before the committee found its way clear to the floor. In that period the Bailey bill, to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy, which came over from Monday, was passed—yeas, 127; nays, 81. The senate bill was passed authorizing the construction of a bridge over the Monongahela river at the foot of Main street, borough of Bellevernon, Pa.

The committee on judiciary succeeded in passing two bills, one authorizing the appointment of a third circuit judge in the eighth judicial district, and the other making United States railroads, for the purpose of jurisdiction, citizens of any state into which their tracks or leased lines may run, or in which they do any business, and in which the cause of action may occur.

RIOTING AND DESTRUCTION.

Acts of Disorder on the Rock Island Road Worse Than Ever.

GUTHRIE, O. T., July 18.—Rioting and destruction is going on worse than ever on the Rock Island railroad.

One bridge was blown up with dynamite, one burned, and a dynamite bomb thrown under a train carrying soldiers, within the past twenty-four hours. Telegraph wires cut, train guards fired upon and section men driven from their work, are some of the occurrences of the day at Enid and Round Pond. County Attorney Asher at Round Pond only escaped hanging by the interposition of several citizens. A reign of terror prevails and the local officials are afraid to act.

The handful of soldiers are scarcely able to take care of themselves.

NEW MEN ASSAULTED.

Brutal Conduct of Rioters at Fort Wayne.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., July 18.—The new men employed on the Fort Wayne railroads in the yards, and as trainmen, are hourly submitted to most brutal assaults from discharged men.

Engineers and conductors have been stoned and seriously injured and trainmen knocked senseless with clubs. Christian Hess, the only rioter arrested, fired two shots at Captain Borgman, of the city police, before he surrendered.

Caught Tearing Up Rails.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, July 18.—Three strikers were caught just before daylight removing rails on the Union Pacific near Ogden. They were arrested. The overland flyer was due a few minutes later and a terrible catastrophe was averted.

Still Firing Bridges in Montana.

HELENA, Mont., July 18.—Were it not for destruction of many bridges in Montana, the Northern Pacific railroad would be able to operate all trains on time. Three bridges were fired yesterday.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 18.—Striking miners of Jellico district, about 3,000 in number, who have been out since May 1, have reached an agreement with the operators, and will return to work on or before August 1.

RIOT AT A BALL GAME.

Tucker, of the Bostons, Roughly Handled by a Philadelphia Crowd.

PHILADELPHIA, July 18.—A riot occurred on the ball field here yesterday, and only the plucky action of Grady and Boyle, of the local club, coupled with the assistance of the police, prevented serious injury being done to Tucker and other members of the visiting club. As it was, Tucker was struck and had a bone in his cheek broken, and a squad of 25 policemen had to protect the players on leaving the grounds and until they got several squares away.

The game was a close and exciting one, and Umpire Campbell, the local substitute, several times cautioned the Bostons.

It looked like rain when the eighth inning started.

Boston at that time led, the score being 2 to 1.

The Phillies started in by batting out seven runs, when the visitors used every means to delay the game, positively refusing to make an effort at a put-out. Finally Delehanty went out on a foul strike, and Thompson was called out for cutting second base.

Boston then refused to bat, and Campbell gave the game to Philadelphia.

The crowd then surged on the field, and it was only by hard work that Tucker, who had made himself particularly objectionable, was gotten safely under the grand stand.

NEW WORLD'S RECORDS.

Walter Sanger's Great Feat on the Waltham Bicycle Track.

WALTHAM, Mass., July 18.—Six new world's records were established yesterday afternoon at the Waltham bicycle park. Walter Sanger, riding for the Springfield, Mass., Bicycle club tried for a mile without pacemakers and with flying start. He rode in the face of a stiff wind. Even then he broke, not only the mile mark, but also that for every fraction of the mile without pacemakers. The new records are:

Quarter mile, 29 4-5 seconds; one-third, 40 seconds; half 1:01 2-5; two-thirds, 1:24; three-fourths, 1:35 4-5; mile, 2:11 2-5.

A claim for these records was entered immediately after the riding was finished.

AMATEUR PRESS ASSOCIATION.

The 19th Annual Convention in Session at Boston.

BOSTON, July 18.—The 19th annual convention of the Amateur Press association is in session at the United States hotel.

The convention was called to order by the secretary, Miss Susan Robins, of Abington, Mass. Truman J. Spencer, of New Britain, Conn., a former president of the association, was chosen temporary chairman.

Among new members admitted were C. W. Kissengen, of Reading, Pa., and Agnes J. Butler, of East Greenwich, R. I.

BLAND'S FREE COINAGE BILL.

Will Be Called Up To-day at the Meeting of the Proper Committee.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Representative Bland (dem., Mo.) will call up his free coinage bill at the meeting to-day of the committee on coinage, weights and measures.

He said to-day, in a mock-serious manner, that so many republican conventions recently have shown their sympathy with silver that he desired to put the republican party on record, and it is for this reason that he will get the bill before the house if an opportunity is afforded him.

Confirmed by the Senate.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The senate has confirmed the following nominations:

Wallace Macfarlane, to be United States attorney for the southern district of New York.

United States Marshals—Fletcher C. Peck, for the northern district of New York. John H. McCarty, for the southern district of New York. Charles H. Evans, of Maryland, for the district of Maryland.

Steamship Rate War Continues.

NEW YORK, July 18.—The rate war which the European steamship lines have been waging on each other in regard to steerage rates still continues. The North German Lloyd and the Hamburg-American lines have joined the fight and made a rate of ten dollars to all British ports, thus meeting the lowest eastward rate made up to this time. Neither line has made any change in its rates westward.

Her Shaft Broken at Sea.

QUEENSTOWN, July 18.—The White Star steamer Majestic, just arrived from New York, enroute to Liverpool, reports that she passed the British steamer Holkar, from London for Philadelphia, 630 miles west of Fastnet. The Holkar signalled that her shaft was broken and that repairs were being made.

TO RESUME SILVER COINAGE.

Orders To Be Issued for a Limited Number of New Silver Dollars.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Secretary Carlisle, it is understood, will give directions within a few days, to resume to a limited extent the coinage of standard silver dollars at the mints of the United States.

Since the repeal of the Sherman silver purchase law last November silver coinage has been virtually suspended, only about 500 silver dollars having been struck off bearing the date of 1894. This coinage of silver for the remainder of this year will not probably exceed $2,000,000.

NOT A TRACE REMAINS

Heaps of Ruin Mark Where Green Bush Once Stood.

New Jersey's Forest Fire Wipes Out an Entire Village—The Inhabitants Homeless and Reduced to Beggary. No Hope Yet of Extinguishing the Flames—Another Village in Danger.

EGG HARBOR CITY, N. J., July 18.—Every previous fire in the history of the southern part of the state of New Jersey has been outdone by the blaze which is at present sweeping through the pine belt. There seems but little hope of stopping the flames as yet.

To-day a whole village is in ruins, wiped out by that section of the fire, which, for two days, has been sweeping toward Bridgeport. That place was not touched, as the wind shifted and turned the flames aside.

Of Green Bush, however, not a vestige remains, save blackened and charred and still smoking heaps of debris.

The inhabitants were not taken by surprise, for they had ample warning. For hours dense, black, choking smoke, laden with hot ashes and cinders, had been raining down on the houses.

When it became evident that the village was doomed, the inhabitants prepared to move. The cattle and live stock having been driven some miles to a place out of the line of the flames, household effects were hastily loaded on wagons and carts and also taken beyond the track of the devouring element. By the time the last wagon was about to leave the flames had secured a start by seizing on several of the houses.

The love of home brought back to the scene of desolation many of the women, who had been the first object of solicitude, and in some cases they had to be removed by force, even when the danger became almost unavoidable.

There was intense excitement. For hours the homeless ones watched from a distance the work of destruction, and children, women, even men, wept as they saw what had taken the toil of years to rear wiped out, comparatively speaking, in a moment.

Hundreds are now, for the first time in their lives, compelled to ask food of strangers.

Only by desperate exertions were the inhabitants of Bass River able to save that village from sharing the fate of Green Bush.

The wind is now carrying the flames toward Waretown, which is in danger.

WON ON HER MERITS.

Vigilant Defeated the Britannia Fair and Square, Says the London Press.

LONDON, July 18.—The Daily News says of yesterday's yacht race:

"The Vigilant won on her merits. The race was already hers when the accident occurred to the Britannia. The Britannia's long success needs to be confirmed by a series of victories in America. The visitor has some disadvantages on our courses as we have on theirs. The Britannia will do well to make the best use of her chances. Yachting honors are short lived, especially as the Americans have a positive gift for surprises in endless inventiveness and fertility of resource."

The Standard says that the Vigilant gave the Britannia a fair and square all-around beating, without the shadow of a fluke.

NATIONAL LABOR ARBITRATION.

Mr. Springer Argues to That Purpose Before the House Sub-Committee.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Messrs. Erdman, Pence, Talbert, Kiefer, and Gardner, the sub-committee of the house labor committee, having charge of bills introduced looking to the settlement of labor troubles by arbitration, yesterday heard Mr. Springer (dem., Ill.) in support of his bill providing for a national board of arbitration. Mr. Springer held that if a national board were appointed, and its members paid sufficiently high salaries, good men could be secured, and this would give greater satisfaction than boards appointed from time to time as occasion demands.

The committee briefly discussed the merits of the bill and adjourned until to-day, when it will be further considered, in connection with other bills of the same character.

YALE SUPPER IN LONDON.

The Visiting Athletes Entertained by the American Colony.

LONDON, July 18.—The American colony in London gave a Yale supper last evening in the Victoria room of the Criterion restaurant. The guests of honor were the members of the Yale athletic team.

The company sat down at the tables at 11 o'clock, Mr. Bayard, the United States ambassador, acting as chairman.

The dinner was a most enjoyable affair, and the assemblage did not depart until after 2 o'clock this morning.

This will give her builders, the Cramps of Philadelphia, $414,000 in premiums.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

Keeping Everlastingly at It, Tells.

On exhibition in the pharmacy of H. P. Reynolds is a remarkable example of what the constant friction of a soft substance upon a hard material will produce. The object shown is a piece of pine planking, originally a part of the bottom board in a flour-mill chute. A. W. Waldron brought it home with him from the West. For eight months it served its purpose in the Washburn Mills, and 500 barrels a day passed through the chute in a steady stream. From being nearly an inch thick the board was ground down by the flour to a varying thinness, and the surface is now corrugated fantastically as though by the skilful design of a wood carver. It is even more wonderful than the action of water on stone.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Crescents are keeping the track in better shape.

William Nicholson has received his expected safety.

Handicap races add interest to the daily work of the cyclers training on the Crescent track.

F. L. C. Martin is welcomed back to the Wheelmen's Headquarters, having nursed his sprained ankle back to usefulness.

C. S Gotthell was thrown from his wheel by the breaking of his left pedal on West Fifth street last evening at 11, and was severely bruised about the head and face.

L. B. Woolston, J. F. Buckle, John J. Kenney, and Tunis J. Carey, started for Rahway yesterday afternoon. At Fanwood the wheels of Kenney and Woolston were disabled by punctures, and only half the party went on.

David Smalley of North avenue has mastered the wheel, and without having ever ridden a mile before rode to Bound Brook and back, yesterday. He pluckily finished the self-imposed task, though the roads were heavy with sand. Muscle tells.

A cycling vacation will be taken by Chas. Hall of Reynolds's Pharmacy beginning Monday. He does n't say where he is going, but the Daily Press cycling sharp is confident that he will cover at least 1,000 miles in his two weeks, and that without any effort either. Hall is a huetler, on or off the wheel. He can set a lively pace for long distance stretches.

C. S. Gotthell has local control of a wonderful improvement in cycling. This is the Hy-Lo instantaneous changeable gear, a strong, simple and durable attachment which is a great help in road riding. By use of it, hill climbing is accomplished with ease, and speeding on the level is a delight. The Press expert has tried it and finds it a good thing. Any wheel can have it applied, and the benefit is immense. Mr. Gotthell is very courteous about permitting cyclers to try a wheel with the Hy-Lo attachment, and to be up to date you must jump on and take a ride. You 'll like the gear, and will want one right away. Mr. Gotthell may be found at Doane's jewelry store.

Newark News: "People with æsthetic perceptions and respect for human anatomical structure are pained when they see so many young men trying to bend into arcs of 190 degrees the forms that nature meant to be erect. They mourn not only for rounded shoulders, humped backs, compressed lungs, distorted diaphragms and cramped stomachs. They grieve also for moral obliquity, for they know, alas! that these young men are making themselves look like so many Quasimodos, and contracting all sorts of ancient and original diseases, in the hope of making the public and the girls believe that they are racers. The thought of such deception cannot but make the judicious grieve, for they know that habitual imposture undermines the whole character and is often the initiatory step to crime. They know that the young man who tries to make people think that he is a bicycle racer when he is nothing of the kind is taking a false step which may lead him into graver moral turpitude. Therefore in the mere sight of distorted riders, the artistic eye, the thoughtful understanding, the love of virtue and reverence for truth, are all alike wounded and distressed."

It would be a good thing, so far as pedestrians are concerned, if no one had ever thought of putting a bell on a bicycle. Then the riders would understand that their responsibility was not discharged when they rang their gongs, but that it was their business not to run into people. As it is now some of them seem to think that when they have made their bells ring they have fulfilled all the law and the gospel, and that it is the business of the pedestrian, the baby carriage and other impediments to get out of the way. In the case of the unhappy wight just learning to ride a fiery, untamed machine which has a strange and awesome propensity to run into the things that it should not run into and not to go in the way it should go, the bell sounds a note of imploring petition which should not be denied. Only the hard of heart and reckless of flesh refuse to get out of the way of the man whose wobbling wheel, intense grip on the handle bar and careworn countenance indicate that he is a new hand at the exhilarating game. When he has learned to ride he has no longer the right to expect or exact courtesy not voucheafed by the rule of the road. He should simply refrain from running into people. There are careful riders in plenty, who, if they carry bells at all, do it only to satisfy the police, and who do not strike the alarm once in a season.

He'd Be a Good One.

Miles Ross has been heard from in connection with the office of United States District-Attorney for the District of New Jersey, and has named a man whom he wants appointed. It was generally supposed that he favored the selection of Heppenheimer, but he is now urging the appointment of H. M. T. Beekman, his Somerset County protege.

Mr. Beekman has been a member of the Somerset County bar for many years. He made a gallant run for State Senator last year against Lewis A. Thompson (Rep.) He is a member of the law firm of Trapnagen & Beekman of Jersey City.

Fred E. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Horace J. Martin are home from the Cleveland Convention.

The whistle on the borough electric light station is being arranged to work by electricity. The work of putting up the boxes has not yet been begun, although they have been here since Monday. The station outfit will be perfected first.

—In the case of Carpenter against Doud, before Justice Sperry, today, Attorney DeMeza won non-suit against H. O. Hance the plaintiff's lawyer.

—The handy and complete publication of the laws by The Weekly Constitutionalist makes them in steady demand. They are convenient of reference and easy to preserve.

PIANO PRACTICE.

Utterly Useless In Some Cases, but Vocal Exercise, Never.

The newspapers are continually publishing jokes at the expense of the unmusical young woman or girl who persists in practicing upon the piano and going through singing exercises. There is no more reason to find fault with the latter custom than with any other sort of gymnastics, for even if a girl can never learn to sing proper vocal exercises properly practiced strengthen the throat and lungs and thereby improve the general health. But piano practice to one who has no taste for it is utterly useless. The confinement and cramped position are irksome in the extreme when there is no compensating intellectual pleasure, and the feeling that too often accompanies faithful practice, the feeling that the pupil is constitutionally unable to achigre a musical result, no matter how laboriously she perseveres, has a depressing and unwholesome effect.

"Yet thousands of parents persist in setting their daughters to learn to play the piano in spite of natural aversion and incapacity, and thousands of girls throw away years of their youth in attempting to accomplish what is to them impossible. How much better it would be if fathers and mothers would have their children taught those things which they are capable of learning and which will be useful to them! If a girl has musical talent, by all means cultivate it, but if she has not let her learn millinery, dressmaking, hairdressing, something that is available for everyday use. She is not obliged to make it her profession if she does learn it, and she will be amply repaid for the small outlay of time and money by the ability to assist herself and her particular friends. Nobody, man or woman, no matter how intellectual, should be entirely helpless and ignorant as to handicrafts. There is nothing degrading in a practical knowledge of any trade, and in these days of fluctuating fortune such knowledge may on occasion stand between a girl and destitution. So, if you care for your daughter's welfare, teach her a trade as well as accomplishments.

GIRL'S CREPON GOWN.

A sketch is given of a young girl's gown of rose colored crepon trimmed with bands of white lace insertion. The skirt is plain, but the corsage is crossed in front over a full plastron. The tight sleeves have a puff to the elbow, and the collar and belt are covered with insertion. The light brown straw hat is trimmed with rose colored ostrich tips and ribbon.

Mrs. S. H. Ashbridge and Miss Ashbridge, wife and daughter of Coroner Ashbridge of Philadelphia, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Silas Yerkes of Central avenue, returned home this afternoon.

NOTES FROM THE CAMP.

Chatty Gossip from the New Jersey State Playground, by a Plainfield Press Correspondent.

CAMP WEBB,
SEA GIRT, July 16, 1894.

The trial of Lieut. Charles L. Bauer of the gun detachment, Third Regiment, was heard, at his request, by a Union County magistrate.

The charge was "suspected perjury". Regimental Adjutant McVicker of Elizabeth presented the case, assisted by the eminent counselor, Nelson Y. Dungan of Somerville.

A jury was impanelled with Quartermaster Hawkins foreman. After a four hours session the case was adjourned till Friday evening at 8:30.

The testimony taken was that of the defense, but his not accounting for the "Lost Angels" who afterward by investigation of the Court proved to be "Swamp Angels", and his statements relating to F. A. Dunham in connection with the "Astfalk" pavement at Dunkirk, and his statement that his brother "Jake", Dunham's assistant at Dunkirk, was seven feet two in stature being questioned by the prosecution, the Court, backed by Major Shailer, adjourned at 1:30 a. m. "Prisoner! Taking your statement that the base of your brother's brain is seven feet two from the ground I figure that his height must be fourteen feet", said the prosecutor. Court adjourned.

Constables Garrison and Remson are as officious and obnoxious as usual, but having no jurisdiction here their efforts to place themselves prominently before the higher State officers are failures. The youngsters in camp in playing railroad trains, use Constable Garrison as a tunnel, those legs having a spread through which a 200-pounder could pass without turning a hair.

Danny Horton, the popular main-line conductor, dropped in on us for a moment, and was heartily greeted at headquarters; the only expression being one of regret that his duties necessarily limited his visit.

The smoothness with which matters have been run by the Third Regiment Quartermaster is a surprise party to even such veterans as the Brigade Quartermaster.

Speaking of smoothness in departments aside from militiamen, there is a railroad official handling the wires and levers in the tower at Sea Girt who is simply immense. Although a young man, being in his twenty-fourth year, the decision of all old railroaders is that lives of passengers intrusted to him, and on account of the State encampment they are legion, are as safe as though asleep in their beds. Herbert E. Williams is the man, and his uncle, Samuel T. Williams of this city, should be proud.

Col. T. A. Zimmerman seems to be the popular host. The visitors from Plainfield and Elizabeth were delighted with his treatment of them.

A little bird whispered that the secret of Captain Hawkins success was due to his selecting his assistants. John F. Emmons, the U. S. express agent in charge at Sea Girt, Brielle and Manasquan, quietly attends to delivery of goods.

P. S.—Jimmy Moore just reported in camp with two flukes weighing together 1½ pounds, caught from the shore.

Col. Dietrich's Gratitude.

Col. John Dietrich, one of Plainfield's oldest and best known residents, submits for the edification of all afflicted a strong testimonial of Dr. Lighthill's remarkable skill, as follows:

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.,
July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician, and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

Smothering Noise Spells Water.

To kill the nuisance of the exhaust noise at the power station, the Edison Electric Light Company of North Plainfield buried the exhaust in an old well. This successfully silenced the roar, but has been the means of spoiling the water in some of the neighboring wells. The flow of well water being southward, the wells to the south of the steamed well are found to be heated and made oily. Therefore in the Smalley Building city water is being introduced, the owners of the building paying for the piping, and the light company paying for the water consumption. The company seems disposed to treat people right.

Landlord Force Makes a Change.

John Force announces that August 1 he will take possession of Lowe's Hotel in Scotch Plains, and will conduct it in the first-class manner which has characterized his management of the Mansion House in Bound Brook. His mother and sister will live in Plainfield.

THAT'S WHAT THE SCHOOL BOARD ASKS OF COUNCIL.

Wants the Money for a New School Building—Location Not Specified.

The Board of Education held a meeting last evening, all of the members attending except Mr. Lonnsbury. A few bills were passed upon. A communication from County Superintendent Holmes was received and ordered filed. It gave notice that the money due the board from the State for 1894-'95 was $14,725 66.

Superintendent Maxson reported having received $74 additional tuition money. The amount was ordered placed in the bank to the credit of the board.

A resolution offered by Mr. Lovell that a request be made to the Common Council for its approval of the board's raising about $70,000 for the construction of a new school building, was adopted. The meeting was then adjourned subject to the call of the president.

THATCHER ON DECK.

Plainfield the Scene of a Great New Comedy Production.

George Thatcher, our well-known and enterprising resident comedian and theatrical magnate, has made preparations to rehearse his new production, "About Gotham", and inaugurate his touring season of 1894-5 from this city. He has arranged with the management to begin rehearsals on the stage of Music Hall on or about Aug. 5, and will give the initial presentation of the new play upon the the same stage Thursday evening, Aug. 23. The whipping into shape of so pretentious a production as "About Gotham" promises to be, devolves upon everyone concerned an endless amount of arduous labor, and could one be present during these forthcoming rehearsals, his or her probable verdict would be that an actor's lot is not quite the rosy one a great many imagine.

Mr. Thatcher has engaged one of the most competent scenic artists in New York city to come to Plainfield and build the necessary scenery for the production upon our local stage, so that he can have the building of it under his own personal supervision. When Mr. Thatcher's army of soubrettes, comedians, minstrels, musicians, stage managers, stage carpenters, scenic artists and others arrive, Music Hall will present a lively appearance during the ten or twelve days in which they will be busily engaged preparing for the auspicious event, that of a first night.

The manuscript of "About Gotham" promises great things in the way of fun and entertainment, and he claims to have secured the best company that has yet traveled under the Thatcher banner.

TELEGRAPH TICKS.

Ninety persons sailed today on a pilgrimage to the shrine of Our Lady of Lourdes, at Lourdes, France. This is the first organized body to go from this country.

The new Union Station at St. Louis, which has the largest train service in the world, will be formally opened on September 1.

Washington E. Irving was supposed to have died at Escondido, Cal., recently. His funeral was held, and after the services a knocking was heard inside the closed coffin, and when it was opened Irving got up in a dazed condition, but soon regained his senses fully, and was taken home.

Nellie Kenne, a nine-year-old child, hanged herself at Bradshaw, W. Va., yesterday because she had been kept home from school to care for two infants.

The bark Emma T. Crowell, which left yesterday bound for Shanghai, loaded with oil, took fire about twelve miles south of Fire Island, and burned to the water's edge. The captain, his wife and the whole crew were saved.

Fifty policemen raided Chinatown last night and gathered in several dozen Celestial and confiscated over $1,000 worth of opium.

Charles Jacquin, a restaurant-keeper of New York, and who has a Summer residence at Hilledale, N. J., had a desperate struggle with a large St. Bernard dog yesterday afternoon. He went to New York today to receive Pasteur treatment.

Hotel Netherwood Drive.

Eighteen merry people from Hotel Netherwood had a jolly drive to Westfield last night, and were royally entertained by Col. Al Drake at his charming home. The party was as follows:

W. B. Ogden, Jr. and wife.
F. H. Herrick and wife.
F. H. Reed and wife.
F. H. Pinch and wife.
F. E. Miller and wife.
Miss Hosmer.
Miss Bennett.
Miss Christopher.
Allan Wardwell.
F. H. Wood.

A Bargain to the Rumseys.

The old hose carriage of Warren Engine Company was taken to the North Avenue station yesterday afternoon for shipment to the Rumsey Company, the makers of the new hose wagon ordered by the Borough Council's committee. The borough will receive $40 for the old machine, which had not been in use for four years. It is thought by some that this price does not compare very favorably in proportion with the amounts received by city companies for their old carriages.

The Sewerage Farm.

A correspondent, "Anxious", writes to know where the filtration beds are to be. The Sewerage Committee itself does not know, but it is certain that the beds will be situated as far from human habitation as possible, though the authorities assure the people that there is positively no offense from nearness to the beds. They could be maintained in the heart of the city if necessary, but will be somewhere in the outskirts. When the purchase is made the location will be made known.

NEWS OF NEAR NEIGHBORS.

Mrs Harmon Apgar is confined to her home by illness.

Walter E. Smith went to Plainfield yesterday on business.

Wilson Fredick, for many years clerk in the main United States Express office in New York, has been promoted to chief clerk in the superintendents' office of the company.

W. H. Taylor wishes The Press to deny the statement of another paper that there was any disturbance at his hotel. He says that never in his 12 years at the place has any trouble occurred there. The band will play Saturday night.

T. W. Sisty and William Carmon, two good shots of the Dunellen Gun Club, are willing to arrange a shoot with any two members of the club at live birds. It is hoped this will bring out the sporting qualities of the members.

The excellent mail service given the residents of Dunellen is very gratifying to all, and is due to the untiring efforts of Postmaster Staats and his daughters, the Misses Celia and Lillie Staats. Since their taking charge of the office, there has not been one complaint.

People in the vicinity of New Market are much incensed over the scarcity of fish in the pond. They claim that it is all due to certain Plainfielders who have been using set-lines. Many nights have been spent watching for these offenders, but as yet they have not been caught.

The charms of angling lured two local fishermen to New Market pond the other day, their wives accompanying them. The whole day was spent in a boat. Toward evening the party became tired, and they thought it advisable to stop and count the fish. One sunfish was the result.

The Best at the Park.

It is a great satisfaction for those away from home to know just what physician to call in case of need. To the large number of Plainfielders at Asbury Park each Summer, The Press can cordially recommend Dr. Joseph H. Bryan, of 221 Asbury avenue. He is a classmate of Dr. D. C. Adams of this city, and Plainfielders who have consulted him and received his treatment speak in highest praise of his skill and success. He has saved babies who were taken to the Park so ill that their lives were despaired of; and adults have been cured of serious ailments by his treatment. He is successor of the famous Dr. Bruce S Keator, who commends him thoroughly. Dr. Bryan is the physician to call when in need of medical services at Asbury Park.

THE SECRET ORDERS.

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially attractive department of science, as it exerts so marked an influence on the health of the organs of the body. Nerve force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with the vitality necessary to insure their health. The pneumogastric nerve, as shown here, may be said to be the most important of the entire nerve system, as it supplies the heart, lungs, stomach, bowels, etc., with the nerve force necessary to keep them active and healthy. As will be seen by the cut the long nerve descending from the base of the brain and terminating in the bowels is the pneumogastric, while the numerous little branches sippy the heart, lungs and stomach with necessary vitality. When the brain becomes in any way disordered by irritability or exhaustion, the nerve force which it supplies is lessened, and the organs receiving the diminished supply are consequently weakened.

Physicians generally fail to recognize the importance of this fact, but treat the organ itself instead of the cause of the trouble. The noted specialist, Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., has given the greater part of his life to the study of this subject, and the principal discoveries concerning it are due to his efforts.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the nutrivaled brain and nerve food, is prepared on the principle that all nervous and many other difficulties originate from disorders of the nerve centers. Its wonderful success in curing these disorders is testified to by thousands in every part of the land.

Restorative Nervine cures sleeplessness, nervous prostration, dizziness, hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs. It is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

Sold by Laing Matthews, 205 North Avenue, opp station.

NOT HYDRO.

Only a Case of Indigestion, Says Dr. Gibler.

John Newman, aged 17, who was attacked Sunday night with what his family feared was hydrophobia, was taken by his parents to the Pasteur Institute yesterday. He was examined by Dr. Gibler, who assured the parents that the boy had been seized with a nervous fit, probably caused by a severe attack of indigestion. Young Newman was bitten on the hand by a dog six years ago. The dog was allowed to live three weeks before it was killed, during which time it showed no signs of rabies.

HOME TESTIMONY.

Mr. Thomas Callahan, of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly. They were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 144 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOS. CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact, it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

Dr. Lighthill

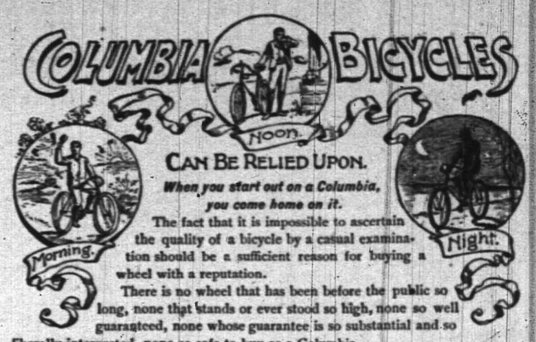
COLUMBIA BICYCLES



CAN BE RELIED UPON.

When you start out on a Columbia, you come home on it.

The fact that it is impossible to ascertain the quality of a bicycle by a casual examination should be a sufficient reason for buying a wheel with a reputation.

There is no wheel that has been before the public so long, none that stands or ever stood so high, none so well guaranteed, none whose guarantee is so substantial and so liberally interpreted, none so safe to buy as a Columbia.

With Columbias listed at $125, few riders will be so unwise as to invest in lower grade bicycles.

IS THE BILL DOOMED?

Tariff Conference Committee Can't Get Together.

Believed That a General Disagreement Will Be Reported—When Insists That the House Bill Is the Better of the Two and the Republicans Are for the Senate Measure.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The session yesterday afternoon of the full conference committee on the tariff bill was the first held since the conferees were appointed, and lasted just one hour and fifteen minutes and adjournment was taken until this afternoon.

The entire time was spent in general discussion with no specific conclusion.

When the republicans left the room they were as much in the dark as when they entered as to what their democratic colleagues had been doing all the time they have had the bill in secret session.

Immediately upon entering the room there was some good-natured chaffing between the democrats and republicans, and during the discussion a prod was occasionally shoved into the democratic side by the republicans, who were loth to pass the opportunity to have some fun over the dilemma in which the democrats found themselves.

When the republicans inquired as to the condition of the bill they were told that there existed a wide difference of opinion on the sugar, metal, iron ore, coal, wool and cotton schedules and the lead ore item; and the frank admission was made that it seemed to be impossible for the opposing conferees to get together on any of these matters. The house conferees, they were told, held out for the house bill, while the senate conferees were as insistent on the senate bill.

As senator Jones expressed, there was a high wall between them and they had not been able at any time either to tear it down or scale its heights.

The democrats of the house wanted to find out what the republicans thought of the situation, and what their democratic colleagues were willing to do, and the republicans endavored to draw out what had been done in secret session. In neither case was their any apparent success. The republicans contented themselves with the simple announcement that they were for the senate bill.

Sugar was mentioned and Mr. Allison was asked what he thought was the best thing to do.

"I am for the senate bill, for I believe that to be the better bill of the two."

"And, I am for the house bill, for I think that is the very best measure that has been proposed," replied Mr. Wilson.

The meeting of the full conference yesterday is looked upon as but the preliminary step to the report of a general disagreement which will soon be made to the house. As the meeting to-day will not convene until 2 o'clock it is hardly probable that the report will be made to-day. It is known that upon a great many of the items a perfet agreement has been fixed upon for action when the time comes to take the vote.

Many of the leading tariff reformers of the house raised the question whether it would not be better to have no tariff legislation at this session than to adopt the senate bill, which is utterly repugnant to their idea of tariff reform. Some of these gentlemen went so far as to say that it would be better to kill the bill at once, go before the country in the coming campaign and show that the democratic house, which correctly reflected the sentiment of the people, had passed a satisfactory tariff bill, and that this had been emasculated and thoroughly changed both in spirit and principle by a few members of the senatorial body.

NEW BULLET-PROOF CLOTH.

A German Machinist of Passaic, N. J., the Inventor.

PASSAIC, N. J., July 18.—A new bullet-proof material, invented by Ignatius Lucas, a German machinist, was put to a very satisfactory test here yesterday.

Fourteen members of the Centrum Shooting club, using their own ammunition and 32-calibre Winchester rifles, fired at the shields. None of the bullets penetrated more than three-eighths of an inch.

Then several shots were fired with a Mannlicher rifle, the weapon used in the German army. The penetration with the Mannlicher was half an inch.

On Saturday a more exhaustive test is to be made at the Haledon Shooting range with Mannlicher rifles and steel bullets.

Lucas says his bullet resistant weighs only 20 ounces to the square foot when one inch thick. He claims that there is no metal in his shield, and that it consists only of this secret material held together by pasteboard.

WORSE THAN IN RUSSIA.

President Debs Speaks Bitterly of His Incarceration.

CHICAGO, July 18.—President Debs, when seen this morning by a reporter, spoke very bitterly of the decision of the court.

He declared that only a few months ago certain railroad officials, charged with violating the interstate commerce law, the charge on which he is held, had walked out of court free men, the presiding judge at that time virtually declaring that law a dead letter. "The very law, he said, that had facilitated their escape was now construed in another way to injure his associates and himself. He said that such a condition could not obtain in Russia, and was absolutely impossible in England or any other civilized country, except the United States.

Massachusetts K. of L.

BOSTON, July 17.—The quarterly session of the state assembly Knights of Labor is in session here, with about 30 delegates present. The most important report submitted was that of the secretary-treasurer, who reported 81 locals in the state, with a membership of 11,214. There had been paid $3,000 in relief the past year and a substantial sum remained in the treasury.

MOB OUTRAGES AT OSWEGO.

Non-Union Men and Their Families Beaten by Strikers.

OSWEGO, N. Y., July 18.—The militia have everything in hand at the yards, but longshoremen have changed their base of operations and are trying to prevent non-union men from going to work by threats and acts of violence.

Last night James Sexsmith, aged 60, was set upon and beaten until left for dead by the mob. Isaac Densmore was also attacked while in his own yard by William Scott and several others and badly beaten.

His wife, who is in a delicate condition, was knocked down by a violent blow on the chest.

The non-union men are afraid to go to bed, having been threatened that their houses will be entered, their families dragged into the street and the houses burned.

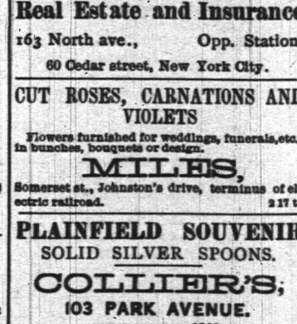
A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.
THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.
Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make Is True.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.



DR. STARKWEATHER.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays 4 to 6 p. m.

Those living at a distance can consult the Doctor by letter.

Send or call for our Book of Testimonials.

NEW EVIDENCE
Of Dr. Lighthill's Success.

A Flattering Testimonial From Col. John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,
Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact, it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And that made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

Dr. Lighthill
can be consulted daily (except Thursdays) on all CHRONIC, OBSTINATE AND COMPLICATED diseases of the human system of whatever name and nature, at his office and residence,
No. 144 Crescent Avenue.

Deafness, Catarrh and Diseases of the Head, Throat and Lungs successfully treated.

Piles of the most aggravated nature radically and permanently cured in a few weeks, without pain or detention from business, and all other rectal diseases are treated with equal success.

JAPAN NOT OFFENDED
Corean Troubles To Be Amicably Settled.

China Disclaims All Intentions of Oppressing Corea—Agreed to Withdraw Her Troops as Soon as Japan Agreed To Do the Same—United States as Peacemaker.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The interest which the United States has always manifested in Corean affairs has been extremely cordial, but not more so than its relations with Japan. Both countries were opened to the world by this country, Japan in 1854, and Corea in 1883. In the treaty negotiated with Japan in 1858 the the second article expressly provides that "the president of the United States, at the request of the Japanese government, will act as a friendly mediator in such matters of difference as may arise between the government of Japan and any foreign power," and that American warships should render assistance to Japanese vessels on the high seas. Most of the institutions of Japan are modelled after those of this country, and nothing has ever occurred to affect the warm relations between the two countries.

In the treaty with Corea the United States assumed obligations quite as important.

Article 1 reads: "There shall be perpetual peace and friendship between the president of the United States and the king of Corea and the citizens and subjects of their respective governments. If other powers deal unjustly or oppressively with either government, the other will exert its good offices, on being informed of the case, to bring about an amicable arrangement, thus showing their friendly feelings."

It was under this clause that the king of Corea on June 1, last, when the rebellion in several provinces progressed beyond his control, asked the United States to send warships to Chemulpo, a request which resulted in the dispatch of the flagship Baltimore to that port the next day, and under the second paragraph of this clause the Corean government notified the United States two weeks ago that Japan and China were dealing "unjustly and oppressively."

In response to this notice about ten days ago the administration assured the Corean government that it would exert all its friendly influences with Japan and China to relieve Corea's distress. China at once disclaimed all intention of oppressing Corea or desiring to embarrass that country by the presence of its troops and expressed willingness to withdraw them as soon as Japan agreed to do the same. Japan's reply was a similar disclaimer of intentionally oppressing Corea or having any design upon Corean territory, but declining to withdraw her troops until satisfactory measures had been taken to prevent the frequently recurring internal disturbances in that country which affected Japanese interests more seriously than those of other countries.

The United States thereupon, as stated above, made representations to China and Japan calculated to settle the matter if the two countries desired its good offices. It is understood that both Japan and China are satisfied that the United States may be depended upon to do full justice to all concerned, and the prospect for a speedy and peaceable conclusion of the controversy is excellent.

The rumors that Japan had taken offense at the so-called interference of the United States are declared to be utterly without foundation.

HAD TO LEAVE THEIR POSTS.
The Smart Coup of a Lawyer To Get Witnesses Into Court.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 19.—Gen. A. L. Hart, attorney for the local branch of the A. R. U., executed a coup when he had subpœnas issued for switchmen in the yards of the Southern Pacific, calling them to Woodland as witnesses in the case of Knox and Worden, where the preliminary examination came up.

The men were compelled to leave their posts forthwith, in order to reach Woodland in time to give testimony. Thus the company is left without a switching crew for an indfinite period, as the examination is likely to continue several days and will probably be sensational in its character.

The strikers claim that the places cannot be filled at once, and that until the return of the men from Woodland the company will be unable to make up trains.

Struck by Lightning.
MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., July 19.—The worst electrical storm which has visited this city for years broke out last evening. The lightning was terrific and the rain fell in torrents. The Oriental hotel was struck by lightning. At the Walkill hat works it was necessary to stop the machinery owing to a panic among the girls in the trimming room. Three barns, belonging to farmers situated in different directions were struck by lighting and burned.

To Exempt Foreign Exhibits.
WASHINGTON, July 19.—Mr. Doolittle (rep., Wash.) introduced in the house a bill to exempt the articles of foreign exhibitors at the interstate fair at Tacoma, Wash., in 1894 from the payment of duties and to permit the removal of articles on exhibition at the World's fair at Chicago and the Mid-Winter exposition at San Francisco to Tacoma without paying duty.

Gov. Flower at Saratoga.
SARATOGA, N. Y., July 19.—Governor Flower arrived at the United States hotel from Lake George and Glens Falls, where, with the other state officers, he had been the guest of State Treasurer Colvin. He will remain here until to-morrow, and the hotel displays the state flag on its main tower in his honor.

Fierce Prize Fight.
BETHLEHEM, Pa., July 19.—In a six-round fight here Paddy Sheehan, lightweight champion of the Lehigh valley, knocked out Pete Gillen, of Philadelphia. Gillen was counted out on the 21st knockdown. He was pummelled frightfully. The fight was for a purse of $100.

TUCKER ARRESTED.
The Boston's First Baseman Roughly Handled.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Although the Boston-Philadelphia game passed off peacefully enough yesterday on the grounds, while First-Baseman Tucker was alighting from the coach at the door of the hotel where the club was staying some one leaned out of the window of a passing trolley car and struck him in the mouth. The blood spurted from the effects of the blow and Tucker and Bannon started in pursuit of the car. They could not catch the rapidly moving car, and after running about half a square they stopped and Tucker began to call for the police. In the meanwhile a crowd of about 500 men and boys had collected and Bannon discreetly retired with the hotel. Tucker remained in the street, however, and by the time the police came up he was in danger of being roughly handled by the angry crowd that had collected around him. Tucker made matters worse by abusing him. Tucker made matters worse by abusing the police for not discovering his assailant, and finally, more to protect him than anything else, Tucker was arrested and taken to the station-house.

Later in the evening he was released. On the way down from the grounds, while the Boston players' coach was passing 13th and Race streets, some boys threw a tomato, and it passed through the windows of the coach. One of the players, said to be Lowe, jumped from the coach, and, catching one of the boys, struck him and knocked him down, and while he was lying on the pavement kicked him in the side. This action probably led to the scene before the hotel.

Before leaving with the team last night Tucker denounced his arrest as an outrage and said he should have received protection from the police.

NAVAL CHANGES.
Many Promotions and Retirements as the Result of a Deal.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Commodore Joseph Fyffe, who was promoted to be rear-admiral by the retirement of Admiral Skerrett, and whose nomination was confirmed by the senate Tuesday, retired yesterday on account of his 40 years' naval service, and makes a vacancy which will be immediately filled by the promotion of Commodore O. F. Stanton, the officer who was called home from Rio and afterward was wrecked on the Kearsarge when that vessel was flying his pennant. He will also retire as soon as his promotion receives senatorial sanction, when Commodore Erben, now commanding the European station, will become rear-admiral.

These changes all result from a naval deal, which had for its object the promotion of Fyffe and Erben to enable them to retire on rear-admiral's pay instead of that allowed commodores, which would have occurred if Admiral Skerrett had insisted upon serving until his compulsory retirement upon reaching the agelimit of 62 years.

Commodore Fyffe would have been forced out of active service on July 26, and Commodare Erben on Sept. 6. The latter will retire on that date with his increased rank, thereby promoting Commodore Richard W. Meade, who is to succeed Admiral Stanton in command of the North Atlantic squadron.

Charges Not Believed.
CITY OF MEXICO, July 19.—United States Minister Gray says that there is no truth in the recent statement that charges had been preferred against him at Washington on account of his being interested in a lottery scheme in Mexico. He says that he never had any relations, personal or official, with any lottery. The charges preferred in Washington against Consul Crittenden by ex-Vice-Consul Edgar, in connection with the estate of Dr. Russell, deceased, are not believed here.

TENTH WAGNER FESTIVAL.
Bayreuth Crowded with Strangers for the Opening Performance.

BAYREUTH, July 19.—The tenth Wagner festival will begin to-day with a performance of "Parsifal" and already the town is crowded with strangers who fill up every nook and corner in it during the festival and then at its close leaves the town to three years of provincial dullness, a strange contrast to the excitement which prevails everywhere during the month of the festival.

At three o'clock the procession to the Festspielhaus outside the town begins and until the audiences return after the close of the opera at Bayreuth sinks back into its accustomed quiet.

The festival this year will differ little from those that have preceded it. There will be the same number of performances, the chief interest centering of course in "Parsifal," which can be heard at no other place. The proposal to give it in Austria has now become impossible owing to the fact that the Austrian government has extended the copyright on Wagner's operas to 20 years in place of the usual period of 10, thus making it the same as the German law and allowing the composer's heirs to benefit for some time still from the presentation of his works.

The season will be of particular interest to Americans this year from the fact that Mme. Lillian Nordica is to appear as Elsa in the elaborate presentation of "Lohengrin." She is the first foreign female singer to create a role here and already there is enthusiastic praise of her performance.

COXEY HAS RETIRED.
The "General" Gives Up the Turf for New Schemes.

PITTSBURG, July 19.—J. S. Coxey, commander of the late Commonweal of Christ, advocate of non-interest bearing bonds and better country roads, and once a horseman of some reputation, was in Pittsburg yesterday on his way to Washington, where he says he will appear to-day before the senate finance committee in advocacy of non-interest bearing bond bills. He will then go to Brooklyn, where he will on Sunday address a monster labor picnic. He says the "wealers are moving toward Washington from all over the west, and he is firm in the belief that his schemes will yet succeed.

"General" Coxey made the surprising statement that he has retired from the turf. For ten years he has campaigned through the circuits with a string of competent horses, but this year he has not even attended any of the races, and is devoting his time exclusively to new schemes.

PULLMAN OFFERS WORK.

H. MIDDLETON,
General Superintendent.

The strikers held meetings at Roseland and Kensington last night and again resolved to stand firm and refuse to go to work. About 300 Hollanders met at Roseland and over 2,000 attended the Kensington meeting.

President Debs has sent out a circular letter and blank petitions to all local unions. The letter calls upon all members to sign the petition to be presented to the house of representatives asking for the impeachment of Attorney General Olney. The petitions are to be sent to each congressman.

WILL STAY IN JAIL.
Debs and His Associates Refuse Many Offers of Bail.

CHICAGO, July 19.—The first whole day spent by the quartette of American Railway union officials was a quiet one, although the heat made their voluntary imprisonment decidedly uncomfortable. Part of the afternoon was spent outside the jail walls in the office of S. S. Gregory, one of their counsel. They have meals served to order from the Revere house. Neither their spirits nor their appetites have been affected so far.

All requests of friends to be allowed to furnish funds for their appearance in the United States court next Monday were met with a firm but grateful reply that they intended to remain behind the jail bars until they were taken before the federal court for trial on the charge of violating the injunctions.

WILL STAND BY DEBS.
American Railway Union Meetings Held at Chicago.

CHICAGO, July 19.—The switchmen belonging to the American Railway union held meetings at various places throughout the city last evening to discuss the situation and it is safe to say they will stand by Debs to the end.

The meetings were all largely attended, that held at South Side Turner hall being the largest with over 500 present. There was some disorder at this meeting caused by the speech of an ex-officer of the Switchmens' Mutual association in which he depressed the strike and told his audience that it was bound to be a failure. He was hooted down, however, and the meeting by unanimous resolutions decided to remain out till the strike is officially declared off.

Col. Oates' Denial.
MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 19.—The charge of Pence, of Colorado, as to the use of silver dollars coined in 1894 by Col. Oates, the democratic nominee for governor in his campaign in this state, is denied. Col. Oates expressly declares in his speeches that silver dollars are not now being coined. He states that only fractional silver is being turned out at the mints.

Hotel Destroyed at Nahant.
LYNN, Mass., July 19.—Fire broke out in the office of the Bass Point house, Bass Point, Nahant, and the buildings were destroyed. The property was owned by the Nahant Steamboat company, and was leased to A. G. Fuller. The place was a noted summer resort and was doing a good business. The loss will be in the vicinity of $25,000.

BLUEFIELDS TROUBLE
Many Americans Leave the Reservation.

They Are Charged by Nicaraguans With Inciting Indians to Riot—The Marblehead Lands Marines To Protect American Interests—Rebelled Against the Governor.

NEW ORLEANS, July 19.—The first reliable news from Bluefields since the outbreak of hostilities there was brought here by the steamships Gussie and John Wilson, which arrived within a few hours of each other. The vessels left there on July 10 and at that time the situation in Mosquito reservation was quite serious and threatened to develop into a regular war before long. For a long time after the removal of Gen Lacayo, whose dictatorial acts brought about his downfall through the demand of the United States government, everything went along peacefully at the reservation. Young Chief Clarence of the Mosquito Indians resided in Bluefields under the protection of the British consul and the American warship, and nothing of note transpired until during the day of July 5, when some Indians and Nicaraguan soldiers got into a brawl on the streets of Bluefields and two of the soldiers were killed. This caused a great deal of exitement and it is feared that an attempt of the new commissioner, Senor Cabezas, to arrest the rioters would result in more bloodshed. That night, however, before the authorities had time to perfect plans, the Indians executed a coup d'etat, which changed the whole aspect of affairs, and the Nicaraguans charge it was incited by the Americans. This has resulted in an increase of the tension between the two nationalities to such an extent that many Americans have deemed discretion the better part of valor and have left the reservation, despite the fact that an American warship is anchored off the bluffs. About the middle of the night the Indians made a clever attack on the bluffs where the Nicaraguan troops were quartered, and, driving them off, captured all the arms and ammunition and fortified themselves in the stronghold which Lacayo had built for his soldiers. A hundred or more Indians, said to have been commanded by young Clarence himself, embarked on a flatboat and stealthily moved around to the bluffs until they were directly opposite them, and before the sentries were aware of what was going on opened fire on them and on the troops which had been suddenly called to arms. The Nicaraguans, however, were so surprised that they were unable to make any defense and fled. The next morning the Marblehead landed fifty marines and quartered them near the International club to protect American interests. This was deemed necessary owing to the hostility of the Spaniards, who attributed the midnight attack to the incitement of the American residents. The commissioner immediately set to work trying to gather together his demoralized forces and sent word to the interior by courier for reinforcements. After the landing of the marines there were no more hostilities though the Indians were still in possession of the bluffs. It was reported that the Indians in the interior were preparing to move on Bluefields in large numbers to annihilate the Nicaraguans, and, though they have not yet materialized, there is a vast amount of uneasiness. It is said that the Nicaraguans have warned several Americans to make themselves scarce under pain of death, but so far these threats have not been put into execution. It is reported that two or three soldiers were killed in the attack on the bluffs. The trouble on Corn Island is substantially as reported in the despatches from Port Limon. The foreign residents rebelled against the native governor and drove him into the woods with a few of his followers; the natives came to his rescue, and, after a few skirmishes, he was fully reinstated. There is no British warship at Bluefields now, the Magicienne having left there nearly a month ago. The Nicaraguans have seized all the lighters used in loading the fruit steamers and are preparing for a regular campaign against the Indians as soon as the expected reinforcements arrive.

The Recent Earthquake at Tokio.
WASHINGTON, July 19.—The state department has received a letter from Minister Dun at Tokio, Japan, describing the earthquake there of June 20, which is said to have been the most dangerous of any in 40 years. So far as the American minister could ascertain, no American citizen met with bodily injury, and the American legation buildings were affected only by a few trifling cracks in the walls.

The French Anti-Anarchist Bill.
PARIS, July 19.—The general debate on the anti-anarchist bill was closured by a vote of 253 to 194, and, upon the demand of Premier Dupuy, urgency was voted by 279 against 167. Eventually, despite all socialist efforts to obstruct it, a resolution fixing for to-day the discussion by clauses was passed by a vote of 269 to 172.

MOTHERS WORRIED.
HOW INFANT DEATH RATE MAY DECREASE.
Cleanliness, Pure Air and Lactated Food the Only Sure Preventives of Cholera Infantum—Lactated Food Approaches Nearest to Breast Milk—Every One Knows What It Is Made Of—No Secret In It.

Don't feed a baby on a secretly prepared food.

Don't take any chances of giving it a "trade article that is made, no one knows where nor by what process.

Use lactated food—pure, unadulterated nourishing food.

There is no secret about it. Lactated food is manufactured under the personal supervision of Prof. Boynton of Vermont University.

An absolutely pure and reliable infant food had been eagerly sought for years as a substitute for pure mother's milk.

Lactated food solved the problem completely. It stands today pre-eminent among all others. Infants fed upon it suffer less and fewer die, it is now well known, than those fed upon anything else. It is used in the big charitable institutions for children. It has saved the lives of thousands of infants during the hot, dangerous months of summer.

It is indorsed by the best physicians, by nurses, and by happy, grateful mothers in every town and village in the land.

Sugar of milk, the basis of mother's milk, is the basis of lactated food; with it is combined pure barley malt, the finest wheat gluten and the nutritious elements of the oat. It is thoroughly cooked by high steam heat and a predigested, nutritious food is made that fulfills every requirement of the growing child. It is by far the safest food that a child can take in the summer. It is a true preventive of cholera infantum.

No home where there is an infant can afford to be without it.

Lactated food saves babies' lives.

The following letter from Mrs. A. Wandell, 99 Rowe street, Rochester, N. Y., a picture of whose pretty baby is given above, is one of scores that is received every week from happy parents the country over:

"Our baby weighed four pounds at birth. When two months old she weighed but eight pounds with her clothes on; the doctor said she was a very frail child. I commenced feeding her a certain food when she was fourteen days old, but she did not gain strength as I knew she ought. When she was seven months old I changed to lactated food. She commenced to gain at once and to rest well at night. She has not been sick with bowel trouble once through her teething, and she was teething last summer. I consider lactated food has been a great blessing to our little girl. It has made her healthy, strong and the happiest two year-old child in Rochester. Any mother wishing to address me that has used lactated food will be cheerfully answered at my expense by addressing me."

IMITATIONS are MADE TO SELL
To sell on the merits of the genuine. To sell by substitution; or by deception. To sell to the injury of the genuine, to the dissatisfaction of the consumer, to the detriment of the dealer, to the loss of all concerned—except the scheming counterfeiter himself.

If you wish the best food and the best health, you should insist that your cooking be done with genuine Cottolene. Refuse all counterfeits.

The Christian Endeavor meeting at the First Baptist Church tomorrow evening will be very interesting. All Christian Endeavorers are urged to be present.

Fred Smith talked interestingly of the Reformed denominational rally of the Christian Endeavor Convention, in Trinity Church prayer meeting last night, and will report to Trinity's Christian Endeavor society later.

The local Christian Endeavor Union intend holding several meetings at an early date in the different churches to hear reports from the delegates of their societies who attended the great convention. It is expected that each delegate will tell his or her own society many interesting facts of the meetings in Cleveland.

CHURCH CHIMES.

The exterior of St. Mary's Church is being painted under the direction of Charles J. Ward.

The great excursion of the First Presbyterian and other churches to the seashore takes place tomorrow. Be sure to go along and have a lovely time in good company.

Chairman John Valiant, A. A. Taft, and L. A. Hummer, are highly congratulated on every hand for the great success they achieved in the Grace M. E. excursion. It was one of the best Plainfield ever had. Everybody was delighted.

The women of the Emmanuel Baptist Church opened a three-days fair in the new church on Fillmore avenue last evening. Because of its being Wednesday night, when most of the colored people cannot leave their work, the attendance was not very large. The evening was therefore spent in arranging for tonight and tomorrow evening, when the workers hope to give those who attend a pleasant social hour and a chance to help them pay for the new building.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Caleb Dickenson successfully carried a big clock through the streets on his wheel yesterday.

C. K. Compton is the latest to join the vast army of wheelmen. He enjoys short rides every day.

Monte Scott's racing wheel came back from the factory today, repaired from the recent collision with the triplet. Scott began training again on the Crescent track.

While crossing the street railway tracks on a wheel last evening about 7, C. K Compton met with an accident which caused him to drop some cake which he was carrying. He was unhurt.

The entrance fees sent by Monte Scott, A. T. Hinrichs and L. S. Darling to the Mercury Wheel Club of Flushing, L. I., have been returned to Secretary Teel, the club having postponed their race meet from next Saturday to Saturday, September 8. The Mercurys were unable to obtain the use of the driving track in Flushing.

Chicago Inter-Ocean: "Lady bicycle riders are setting an excellent example to the men, who are accustomed to lie down and hold their stomachs as soon as they mount their wheels. The ladies sit upright, and seem to enjoy the exercise. The women do a great many things better than men, and among them they are more graceful riders of the bicycle."

Neaf Apgar Capped the Climax.

Nineteen members of the Climax Gun Club participated in the monthly club meet at the South Avenue club-grounds, yesterday. In addition to the regular club meet, several sweepstakes were shot, and while all the contestants showed remarkable skill the work of Neaf Apgar was particularly brilliant, he missing but one target in the entire afternoon's shooting, making a successive run of 69 kills. The scores of the club event, shot at Empire targets, the scratch men shooting at 25; with extra bird allowances for the weaker shots, were as follows:

Mrs. Michael Koller.

Matilda, wife of Michael Koller of 27 Emily street, died this morning at 7, after a long illness, in her thirty-eighth year.

She was a faithful housewife, and trained not only her three children but also three of her late sister's.

The funeral will take place Saturday afternoon.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

THE INTERESTING WIFE OF A FAMOUS POLITICIAN.

Deserves an Especial Diploma—Belva Lockwood's Victory In Virginia—Fashions In Precious Stones—An English Criticism. Sex and Salary.

Now that Croker has resigned his leadership in Tammany his wife is as happy as any wife in this broad land. Mrs. Croker is a large, handsome woman, with a face showing signs of great mental power, and her children admire and love her as much almost as does their quiet, stern father. Despite her strong nature, however, she was exceedingly sensitive to the rancorous criticism showered upon her husband and feels immensely relieved that he has by resigning ceased to offer himself as a target for political abuse. She is a rich woman and now feels that the social aspirations which she has so long repressed may be given some need of freedom.

Mrs. Croker's fondness for domestic life means fondness for her growing family. The truth of this may be gauged from the fact that she has six living children. Three of the children born to her are dead. Of the surviving ones four are boys. The eldest is about 19. Mrs. Croker herself shops in the mornings in company now and then with little Flossie, the heroine of Hugh Grant's famous gift of money, who is getting to be really a young lady. The other children are of course quite young. The family moved into their own house recently, but previous to that lived at the Windsor hotel. On one evening she was the most magnificently dressed woman in a hotel far famed for its millionaire guests. Perhaps the most striking feature of this particular hotel dinner party was the costume of the two Croker boys present. They were in full evening dress, as correct and sober as if fashioned for old men of the world, although they could not have been aged more than 9 and 12 years respectively.

Mrs. Croker affects light, neutral tints in dress. She is generally sparing in the use of jewelry and seldom displays her diamonds. Mrs. Croker dines in the middle of the day unless she has guests, but even then the chief meal is at 1 o'clock. Her tea is got ready for 6:30 every day. These are her favorite meal hours. Mrs. Croker is an early riser, as is her husband. Mrs. Croker's domestic duties are in a measure lightened by a housekeeper, who is practically stewardess of the mansion on Seventy-fourth street. There are also three other servants. Mrs. Croker, among her other retainers, employs a seamstress, who is kept busy for weeks at a time. She sews not merely the garments of the household, but makes over numbers of dresses.—New York Correspondent.

Deserves an Especial Diploma.

Among the graduates from Smith's college this year is a young woman who deserves an especial sort of diploma. She is Miss Alice Martin of St. Louis, and four years ago, when she began the freshman course, she was counted as one of the wealthiest girls in the college. Returning home at the close of her sophomore year, she found that every vestige of her father's property had been swept away. Instead of giving up in despair, as some girls would have done, she at once determined to complete her collegiate education whatever the cost. She therefore secured a position as teacher of French in the public school in Old Hadley, a bit of a village about three miles from "Smith," to and from which she has walked every day for the past two years.

She also, in company with another not too wealthy girl, went into very cheap lodgings outside the campus, cooking their own meals and in every possible way reducing their expenses. She earned money, too, by "coaching" backward and lazy pupils, and last fall she undertook to make all the new gymnasium suits needed—a pretty heavy contract, but one which paid well and which she accomplished successfully. In person Miss Martin is a slender, wiry little body, with a picturesqueness of feature that is most attractive. Besides her pluck and energy she was one of the highest students in the college, all of which goes to show what may be achieved by the woman who makes up her mind to win.—New York Recorder.

Belva Lockwood's Victory.

Through persistent effort Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood has gained another victory for herself and for women. The Virginia court of appeals, with a full bench present, has decided that she is eligible to practice law in that state. Her counsel was Judge Joseph Christian, a former member of the court. The court some weeks ago by a tie vote decided against Mrs. Lockwood. The present decision is reached by the additional presence of Judge Richardson. For four years a struggle has been going on in Virginia to get the legislature to pass an act permitting properly qualified women to practice law, but without success. In the last legislature the bill was lost by a considerable majority, one member declaring in the debate that if Virginia women were allowed to practice law it would lead to "the downfall of Anglo-Saxon civilization." Mrs. Lockwood's victory of course opens the door to all of her sex who can pass the examination. The Staunton (Va.) Vindicator says, "Whatever may be the prejudices of men on this subject, there is hardly a thoughtful one who will not gladly recognize that another field is open to woman in Virginia in some departments of which she may add to her opportunities to gain a livelihood."

Fashions In Precious Stones.

In France, by the way, at present pearls and rubies are the most fashionable gems. As regards diamonds, the Duchess Doudeauville and the Countess Pourtales have introduced the following mode: A ribbon is tied around the neck, with a bow covered with tiny diamonds.

Go by the book on Beecham's Pills.

—A perfect swing for porch or lawn is the Brunswick, sold by Rand.

—Adam C. Blair, liveryman, of West Sixth street, purposes purchasing the Metropolitan Stables of A. M. Dunster & Son. Manager Dunster will probably return to Somerville. Mr. Blair's present stables will then be devoted to the use of E. B. and F. A. Pope, for their private vehicles and the watering carts.

DRUGGISTS AND CONFECTIONERS.

Coming to turquoise, those of great beauty are becoming rarer and rarer. If a turquoise be of any particular value, it must hail from the old mines, be very close and beautifully polished. When a turquoise is worn, so we are told by experts, by sickly persons, or by ladies with a bad complexion, the stone assumes a greenish dull color. Happy, therefore, are the wearers whose turquoises have a bright blue color, as such women must enjoy excellent health and have a fine complexion. The Baroness Burdett-Coutts possesses one of the finest collections of turquoises in the world, the smallest being valued at from 5,000 to 6,000 francs. The empress of Russia and the Countesse de Paris likewise possess famous collections of turquoises, but perhaps the choicest stone in existence is that once owned by the notorious Maharajah Dhuleep Singh, ex-king of Lahore.—Lady's Pictorial.

An English Criticism.

An English woman who is visiting in this country writes home to a newspaper friend, who promptly puts it into print, that what surprises her most is that many American women wear ball attire while receiving their guests in the afternoon. She describes the effect as most incongruous and pictures a mother and four daughters wearing decollete white satin gowns, loaded with flowers and jewels, standing at the head of a staircase, shaking hands with a large contingent of friends in hats and coats. It does seem odd when you think of it; but, after all, it is merely a matter of custom. A low corsage and no sleeves to speak of is the correct dinner dress, from the English fashionable standpoint, but there are many critics who hold that the dinner board is not at all the place where such a generous display of fleshly attractions should be tolerated. Mrs. Peary did not admire the Eskimo women, and they in turn didn't admire her. They found her too tall and too lazy because she didn't chew the birdskins for her dress. And so it goes.

Sex and Salary.

There are reported to be 185 male teachers in the public schools of Boston and 1,372 women.

The average salary of the men per month is $246.06, and the average salary per month of the women is $70.69.

To what extent the larger salary is a bonus to the male sex is an interesting question. Doubtless the fact that many of the higher salaried posts are held by men accounts for more or less of this disparity, but it by no means accounts for all.

So far as a man receives higher remuneration than a woman can secure for the same labor this excess is a pure bonus handed over on account of sex.

Of course old but not venerable custom sanctions the payment to women of less for the same labor and service than is paid to men, but this is an age when equal rights are supposed to be maintained and fair play to all is supposed to rule.

Why are women still paid less for the same work than men receive? Who knows?—Boston Globe.

London Women's Latest Fad.

English women of the "smart set" seldom if ever either wear or carry flowers to the opera. It is considered "bad form." But women — even English women—are contradictory. The latest fashionable freak among women who are blessed with pretty hands is to wear an immense ring like a Roman Catholic bishop's on the first finger of the right hand. It used to be considered the height of vulgarity to place a ring on the index finger, but now this decoration is the "dernier cri." The ring must be a superb one and must not partake of the slender and graceful daintiness of the "marquise" circle. It must be solid, big and respectably ecclesiastical in its appearance. The feminine mind, always desirous of presenting contrasted effects to poor humanity, sees the delicately sarcastic anomaly of a little, white, frivolous looking hand wearing a big, aggressively solid sort of ring.

THE TROLLEY TO PHILADELPHIA.

Only $1.50 for the Round Trip—Three Hours for the Run.

The proposed trolley road between Philadelphia and New York has already cost a fortune, and not a tie has as yet been laid on the main stem of the system, which of course includes Plainfield. The work, however, has progressed much further than the general public is aware, and the project is much greater in magnitude than has been generally supposed. Lewis C. Maus, who is associated with J. C. McNaughton, one of the directors of the Traction Company, and who is interested in supplying ties to steam and passenger railroads, in an interview said:

"We have been hard at work for two years getting the matter in shape, and during that time we have expended nearly $200,000. Since the first of January we have expended $5,000 a month. The right of way has been acquired from farmers and others where needed, and about 75 of existing trolley systems have been purchased outright. No arrangements have yet been made with existing passenger railways to enter Philadelphia. Our line is projected to Frankford, and either the Electric Traction Company or the Philadelphia Traction Company could be used to advantage, but if satisfactory arrangements cannot be made we shall undertake to build an independent line into Philadelphia.

"We are not interested in the Pennsylvania Traction Company, but arrangements will be made for the interchange of traffic, so that our passengers may reach Harrisburg. In time we expect also to extend our system to Washington if another electric line is not built from Philadelphia to the capital. We expect to run express as well as passenger cars to carry packages and produce. The round trip from Philadelphia to New York will cost but $1.50, and we expect to make the run between these cities in about three hours."

Mr. Maus stated that there are plenty of capitalists ready to supply funds to complete the work.

M'CARTHY GIVES UP.

Can't Stand the Battery of W. R. Codington's Legal Guns.

The case of the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company has at last been settled, and the Land Improvement Company gets possession of the grounds desired after a brief but active litigation.

The first trial before Justice Mosher was in favor of the company. The case was then certiorrared to the Supreme Court, where it looked as though nothing could be done until November next, but on motion of ex-Judge W. R. Codington a hearing was had, and the proceedings before the Justice were set aside.

The case was then brought up de novo, and tried before the Justice and a jury. The jury disagreed and another jury was summoned, but on the eve of battle McCarthy agreed to surrender the lands desired for permanent improvement, Mr. Powers, the new owner, making some concessions as to rent.

The ex-Judge ably conducted the case for the company single-handed. Mr. McCarthy was represented by three counselors, and all parties interested appear glad that the matter is finally settled.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Fanny S. MacDonald.

Fanny S. MacDonald, wife of C. H. MacDonald of Albert street, Evona, died Wednesday evening of consumption, in her thirtieth year. Decedent was the daughter of John Rowley of Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y., to which place the body will be taken for interment Friday morning. Services will be held at the residence of the bereaved husband at 8 this evening.

Mrs. MacDonald had been ill for nearly two years. Her husband, who is an attorney practising in New York, moved from Hastings to Evona 18 months ago, hoping to benefit her health. The family consisted of Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald and their only son, a boy of four. Yesterday afternoon he came home on an earlier train than usual. He was talking with his wife on his arrival when he noticed a sudden change in her appearance. She died a few minutes afterwards. Rev. G. Kennedy Newell will conduct the services this evening.

Newark News: "At last the Vigilant has shown her ability, under her present management, to do something besides driving the Britannia before her and carrying the Gould family into English society."

Chicago Herald: "It may occur to William Waldorf Astor and his Pall Mall Gazette that the Vigilant has really crossed the Atlantic. When she defeated the Valkyrie Mr. Astor and his toad-eating newspaper squirmed and wriggled in their efforts to explain the defeat of the British yacht, and every article upon the subject contained the pitiful whine that, although the Vigilant had beaten the Valkyrie, she could n't make the voyage across the Atlantic. She has done that very thing, and by so doing has furnished entirely unnecessary proof that Mr. Astor is not only a renegade but a superfluous and unpicturesque falsifier."

A Picturesque Excursion.

The route to the regions of Mauch Chunk, Glen Onoko and the Switchback lies through one of the handsomest stretches of cultivated country in this or any other land. To those who have never traversed this region the views are enchanting above description. Those who are fond of nature's beauties and her wonderful structures a chance is now offered to view them by taking advantage of the excursion to Mauch Chunk, Glen Onoko and the Switchback, Sunday, July 22, over the Central Railroad of New Jersey. A special express train will leave Plainfield at 9:35 a. m. on the day mentioned, and the fare for the round trip is but $1.75.

NEWS OF NEAR NEIGHBORS.

Dunellen and New Market.

Mrs. Wm. Schiveley is visiting friends in Bloomsbury.

Harry Lyon visited friends in Plainfield yesterday.

John VanMiddlesworth is stopping at the Park Hotel.

Miss Maude Benton is the guest of friends in Red Bank.

Miss Mamie Dinnean is stopping with relatives in New York.

Edward Milliken of Co. H, Somerville, left for Sea Girt yesterday.

Augustus Sampson of New Market is taking a two-weeks vacation.

Miss Marienschek of Plainfield is visiting her parents in the borough.

Arthur Giles has just completed a large oil tank for Adam Dealaman.

Mrs. Fred Canfield of Plainfield was entertained by Dunellen friends yesterday.

Leroy Sproul of Jersey City returns home today after a pleasant visit in Dunellen.

The employes of the brickyard yesterday gave a picnic, which was enjoyed by all.

Mrs. GaNun of Jackson avenue, Plainfield, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Tingley.

Augustus A. Runyon of Lafayette place, Plainfield, is visiting his father, John Runyon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ulysees G. Tingley of Bound Brook were the guests of Mr. Tingley's parents yesterday.

Miss Margaret Corriel of Plainfield rode to New Market yesterday and called on her cousins, the Misses Corriel.

James Reidy, the flagman at the Washington Avenue crossing, has been given an excellent position by the company, in Somerville. Thomas Costello will take his place here.

The croquet party given by Mrs. Geo. Conover yesterday was attended by people from Dunellen, Bound Brook and Somerville. At the close of the games refreshments were served.

Mrs. Messler is making some improvements about her store and dwelling. The front porch is being lowered, and will be on a level with the sidewalk. She has some intentions of opening a grocery.

Four young persons from New Market and Dunellen took a row on the New Market pond Tuesday evening, and in some manner the boat was upset in very deep water. Excitement reigned supreme. The two young men were obliged to use all their strength to help the two young women ashore. The four finally struck terra firma and declare that they have had enough of the briny deep.

Considerable dissatisfaction is being expressed in regard to the new school law which affects Dunellen and New Market. A large number of teachers throughout the township are left in an uncertain position, they claim, because they have not been told whether they are to return next Fall or not. In Dunellen provision was made for the teachers before the law went into effect, by the present school trustees engaging them for another year. At the election to be held soon, nine commissioners will be elected, and many changes may be made. In the district schools this may be felt severely, for the commissioners may decide to consolidate, and thus throw out of employment several good teachers. In fact, it has been stated that there are schools from two to three miles from Dunellen and New Market that are not a necessity, as the children, it is thought, could come to the latter places. The question is being very much discussed, and the outcome is in doubt.

WEST END NOTES.

Michael Burke of South Second street started yesterday for Cleveland, where he will join J. Goodrich's Circus.

Messrs. Harry Foose, Albert McComas and Wm. Gray have been visiting Henry Pugh of Rahway, a former resident of Pondville.

Master Joseph Berry of Elizabeth will spend the next two weeks with friends and relatives on Grant avenue.

Debs Is There Too.

During the past week a large part of the amusement interests of New York have centred on the Eden Musee, where exhibits of unusual interest and importance have taken place. Following the handsome group in wax representing Carnot on his sarcophagus came in quick succession the figures of Santo Cesorio, his assassin, and M. Casimir Perier, the new President of France. The Italian murderer is represented as a prisoner, and occupies the cell of Carlisle Harris. One of the finest figures in the house is the handsome and soldierly presence of M. Perier, which stands before the famous group of crowned heads of the world. This interesting group of potentates is also about to undergo a great change. Queen Victoria is already in the hands of a modiste, and will soon have a costly new court robe of regal velvets and Egyptian lace. President Cleveland is also having a new dress suit made to order, as the one worn during his former administration appears somewhat to small for him. The young King of Spain and President of France will be added to the group, which will be ready for exhibition in about ten days. Debs, the labor leader and agitator of the recent strike, is on exhibition this week. The music is superior, and the garden draws large crowds every day.

NEW ISSUE OF POSTAGE-STAMPS.

Changes in the Proofs—Proposed International Agreement on Colors.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing has furnished the Postoffice Department with its first proofs of the new stamp issue. The proofs show fine work and a good color. Thus far only the one, two, and 5 cent dies have been run through the press. There are enough stamps now on hand, bought under the old contract, to supply the needs of the department till the first of October, at least, so that there is no need of haste in turning out the finished work.

The new stamps differ from the old ones in design in only one particular. In the old stamps the corners above the medallion are plain; in the new stamps these corners will contain a little triangular decoration. This throws the upper part of the stamp into bolder relief, instead of giving it the effect of receding, as the present design does. The triangles are intended, also, as a means of identifying the issue of the government presses from that of the Americ n Bank Note Company.

Still another change—not of design, but of color—may possibly come later. It has been called to the notice of the postmaster-general that at the meeting of the international postal union at Paris in 1878 a recommendation was adopted that all the powers represented there should give uniform colors to stamps of certain common denominations. The stamps in most general use everywhere were those corresponding to our five-cent stamps for foreign postage, and those corresponding to our one-cent and two-cent stamps for domestic use, or for pay a foreign letter. The colors decided upon were green for the ones, red for the twos, and blue for the fives. The purpose of this attempt at uniformity all over the world was to simplify matters for travelers and immigrants who were not familiar with the language of the country of their sojourn. Numberless cases of annoyance and delay occur through the ignorance of foreigners in America who do not understand English or our monetary units well enough to know whether they are stamping their letters to their correspondents at home correctly or not; and even as quick-witted people as Americans are bothered in like manner when they go abroad. As the colors used for stamps are merely arbitrary at best, it was believed that the nations represented in the postal union would be willing to make such changes as might be necessary to bring all into line.

Whether any considerable portion of these nations have responded to the proposal of 1878, and whether any action taken at later meetings of the postal union has changed the situation, is what the postmaster-general wishes now to find out. An inquiry is in progress.

HYMENEAL.

Woolley-Bolsterle.

The wedding ceremony was performed in a pretty, quiet way at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Casper Bolsterle, 38 Chatham street, last evening at 8. Their daughter, Miss Ella J. Bolsterle, was married to Oscar Woolley of Westfield, by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, of the Trinity Reformed Church.

The house was tastefully decorated with palms and flowers. The bride's gown was of white cretonne. Her bouquet was of white sweet-pea blossoms. The bridemaid, the bride's sister, Miss Minnie Bolsterle, wore a gown of pink and carried a bouquet of pinks. The bride's brother, John Bolsterle, was the best man.

Many beautiful gifts were presented to the bride. After an hour with their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Woolley left on the 10:17 train. Next Monday, after their wedding tour is finished, they will go to Asbury Park, where Mr. Woolley is employed, to reside.

Among the guests at the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. James Stewart, Mrs. Kline, Mrs. Schlereth, Mrs. Mary Everett, the Misses Sadie and Anna Searing, Jennie and Margaret Shepherd, Minnie Zalez, Nellie and Sophie McGinness, Clara and Florence King, Jennie Everett, Harry Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Casper Bolsterle, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bolsterle, the Misses Dollie, Minnie and Emma Bolsterle, John and George Bolsterle, Rev. and Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, Mrs. Woolley, Mr and Mrs. Lindsley Woolley, and the Misses Ada and Emma Woolley of Westfield, Mr. and Mrr. Herbert Bolsterle of Lorraine, and Mrs. Woolley of Elizabeth.

THOUGHT 'T WAS A BEE STING.

But Instead, Some One Had Shot Him.

A colored man named Peters was working in a yard on Sherman avenue yesterday afternoon when he felt a pain in his right shoulder. He thought a bee had stung him until he found that the wound was bleeding a great deal. He hurried to Dr. O. L. Jenkins.

The physician found that Peters had been shot from behind, the ball entering at the shoulder-blade. He probed for the ball but was unable to find it. The wound having been dressed, Peters went back to where he had been shot, and after a short search discovered the bullet lying on the ground. It had struck the bone and glanced back.

The ball was of 22 calibre, and as the Negro heard no shot fired, it is thought that it came from a Flobert rifle. It must have passed between two boards two inches apart in a fence near where the man was working. Peters was brought from the South to work here two months ago. He thought yesterday that he had been shot by some jealous local laborer.

—An armature was burned out in one of the electric cars last night, caused by the carrying of too heavy a load.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious developments of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

TRIBUNE SLURS REPUDIATED.

Gallant Defense of the Governor and His Wife from the Republican Organ's Insults.

CAMP WERTS,
SEA GIRT, N. J.,
July 18, 1894.

The correspondent who was the author of the article in The Tribune this morning headed "Trouble at the New Jersey Camp", must have forgotten that he in being admitted to that camp was a guest of the Commander in Chief whom he so grossly insulted.

The Brigade to a man are furious at the implied insults also heaped upon Mrs. Werts.

Carefully analyzed, the article is ridiculous on its face, as for instance the statement that a maid-of-all-work could be braced against a flag pole and at the same time be outside a cordon of 7th Regt. men formed around it to prevent her interfering with the officer while he raised the flag.

This instance is simply on a par with the entire article, and the person who penned those lines does not dare repeat them in the hearing of any man of the first brigade, for he would quickly realize the fact that the Commander in Chief of the National Guard of New Jersey is to be respected by casual visitors as his orders are implicitly obeyed by the officers and privates of the brigade.

It is reported that this fellow's animus is the result of his disappointment in not obtaining an invitation to the Governor's ball. Why he should cast his vile and infamous slurs upon a lady is more than we can understand, but when we get hold of him he will understand more about American manhood.

A REPUBLICAN PRIVATE.

John Head, the cornetist of Bandmaster Voes's corps, serenading Col. Lee Monday evening, gave an exhibition of triple tongueing in his solo which would be hard to equal. One of the Governor's staff remarked that "With that fellow Levy ain't in it".

Held Up for a Quarter.

A colored man named King stopped the rig in which another named Hankerson was driving on Park avenue, last evening, and held him up for a quarter. Hankerson was at the corner of North avenue when King grasped the horse's bridle and demanded a quarter which he said the driver owed him.

A crowd collected and watched the quarrel which ensued. Sergeant Kiely came up and made King give up his hold on the horse. Hankerson admitted that he owed the money to King for cutting a lawn, but said he had not collected from the owner of the property, and could not therefore pay the sub-contractor. King finally left with a threat that he would sue for the money.

In Justice Nash's Court.

The contract cases of VanNess against Stelle and of Noel against Beach will be tried by Justice Nash next Thursday.

A judgment for $90.25 and costs was given the plaintiff in the case on contract of Grace Tingley against Theresa Radin yesterday afternoon. The plaintiff was represented by Clifford Brady of Craig A. Marsh's office.

THIS TELLS THE STORY.

FROM ATLANTIC TO PACIFIC

Praises Come, Unlimited, Heralding the Success of One Woman's Work.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

From all sections of this great country. No city so large, no village so small, but that some woman has sent us her words of joyful thanks for health restored.

From San Francisco Mrs. Detwiler writes, from her Laurel Ave. home, that she unwisely left her room all too soon when her baby was born.

The result was an aggravated case of displacement of the womb that wholly prostrated her.

The doctors tried medicines, apparatus, and she suffered everything.

"I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The effect was wonderful, and, thanks alone to her, I am now well."

Mrs. Kate Morris, 100 Mulberry St., New York, says:—

"For years I suffered with womb trouble. I was so sick and nervous that I could not stand or sit, the pains through my back made me crazy. I tried several doctors but found no relief. I was advised to try your Vegetable Compound. I did, and to-day I am a well woman."

From far-away Texas comes word from Mrs. Jennie Arthur of the town of Taylor:

"I did not know what rest was for months. I was so dizzy and faint at times I thought I was dying, and, oh, how my back did ache! I am a living witness of the miraculous effects of Mrs. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Relief came with it at once. I sleep all night, and am now as well as ever in my life."

From the great state of Pennsylvania, Mrs. L. Travis, of Thurlow, tells a similar story of utter misery resulting from womb trouble; all the fearful results of this dread trouble was upon her when the Lydia Pinkham Vegetable Compound came to change the whole current of her life, and she ends up her letter by declaring: "I owe all to you." Thousands of other names are here. Let your faith lead you to the certain remedy for all your troubles. Your druggist has it for you.

DOINGS IN CONGRESS

Indian Appropriation Bill in the Senate.

It Calls for About $9,500,000—Sundry Civil and Deficiency Bills Yet To Be Reported—An Animated Colloquy in the House of Representatives Between Crisp and Others.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The Indian appropriation bill occupied the attention of the senate yesterday. It was taken up at 1 p. m., and was considered until 6 o'clock when it went over without final action until to-day. It appropriates about nine and a half million dollars—one and a half million more than the amount appropriated for the fiscal year 1894. The bill gave rise to very little discussion, that little being on the subject of education of the Indian children and of the disproportionately large share of the money which has gone in recent years to the Catholic church. No change was made in the provisions of the bill, one million dollars being appropriated for the support of Indian day and industrial schools and for other educational purposes. All the committee amendments were disposed of, and the only obstacle to the final passage of the bill was the offering of independent amendments and the discussions to which they gave rise.

With the passage of the Indian bill, there will be only two other appropriation bills left to be passed by the senate, and these two have not yet been reported from the committee on appropriations. They are the sundry civil bill and the deficiency bill.

The conference report on the naval appropriation bill was presented to the senate and agreed to. Several bills were passed, including one to encourage the reclamation of arid lands and their cultivation and sale in small tracts to actual settlers. The senate adjourned at 6:15.

House of Representatives.

Before the committee on military affairs got control of the time in the house there was an interesting and somewhat animated colloquy participated in by Messrs. Reed (rep., Me.), Terry (dem., Ark.), Richardson (dem., Tenn.) and Speaker Crisp, growing out of a statement made by Mr. Baker (rep., N. H.) correcting the record of the previous day's proceedings. He was shown by that record upon the report of the tellers (Messrs. Terry and Ray) to have been present and not voting. He stated that when that vote was taken he was probably at least a mile from the capitol. Mr. Reed thereupon contrasted the method of counting a quorum in vogue in the 51st congress with that under which the house is now acting. He insisted that the experience of mankind demonstrated that the former system was better than its successor. Speaker Crisp defended the present system, asserting that it was superior to any that had gone before, in that it eliminated the liability to intentional error in the count.

Bills were passed authorizing the construction of a bridge over the Missouri river at Lexington, Mo., and adding the towns of Manchester, Vernon and Rockwell to the customs district of Hartford, Conn.

The agricultural bill was sent to conference, Messrs. Hatch (dem., Mo.), Foreman (dem., Ill.) and Waugh (rep., Ind.) being the managers on the part of the house.

A PERILOUS TRIP.

The Heliglo and Carries Naphtha in Bulk Across the Atlantic.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Shipping men will watch with interest the voyage across the Atlantic of the steamship Heliglo and, which sails from here to-day for Hamburg with a cargo of 1,200,000 gallons of naphtha in bulk. It is the first time that naphtha has ever been shipped in bulk as, the dangerously explosive character of the fluid has heretofore deterred vessel owners from taking it in that form. It has been shipped up to this time in carefully cooperated barrels but if Heliglo and araives in safety at Hamburg, naphtha hereafter will probably be shipped in tanks and the expense much reduced.

CANDIDATES FOR STATEHOOD.

Favorable Report Likely on the Bill To Admit Arizona and New Mexico.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The senate committee on territories has taken action that can only be construed as an intention to make a favorable report on the bill for the admission to statehood of the territories of Arizona and New Mexico.

This does not necessarily mean that admission will follow at this session of congress; the contrary is more likely. At the meeting yesterday the sub-committees having charge of these bills were instructed to report them to the full committee at the next meeting.

No Reprieve for Wallwitz.

TRENTON, N. J., July 19.—Governor Werts refuses to grant a further reprieve in the case of convict Joseph Wallwitz, who is to be hanged here to-morrow for the murder of State Prison-keeper Lippincott and preparations for the execution are now being finished at the county jail. Wallwitz is no longer violent in his cell, but receives the two priests who are calling on him, quietly. He tells inconsistent stories about himself and his true history is unknown.

Whipped by White Caps.

COLUMBUS, Ind., July 19.—Last night the entire household of Percy Bloomfield, consisting of father, wife and three brothers named Stephens and their wives, were given a severe whipping by white caps, who have invaded this county and warned many to leave within a given time. One of the Stephens brothers was shot through the leg while trying to escape.

Was Not Eaten by the Cannibals.

NORWALK, Conn., July 19.—Information has been received here that Frederick B. Lynch, a former physician at the soldier's home, now doing missionary work at the mouth of the Congo river, South Africa, who, according to current rumor, was captured and eaten by cannibals several weeks ago, is safe.

ARE UNABLE TO AGREE

Tariff Conferees Adjourn After a Brief Meeting.

President Cleveland's Desire To Be Kept Posted—Has Been in Nightly Consultation with Representative Montgomery, of Kentucky, Over the Matter.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Now that the tariff conference is over for the time being, the conferes speak with more freedom regarding their deliberations. Considering the almost impenetrable veil of secrecy thrown about their meetings, it is seen that the reports published in this paper were remarkably correct. These reports showed that tentative agreements had been reached on nearly every schedule except coal, iron ore and sugar, and subsequent events prove them to have been well founded.

The house conferees, as was repeatedly stated, held out stiffly for the house bill, and in a great number of cases the senate conferees showed a willingness to agree. The determination to maintain this position by the house conferees is still unshaken, and it has the hearty approval, not only of many democrats in the house, but also of Speaker Crisp and President Cleveland.

The fact was not known until yesterday that Mr. Montgomery, of Kentucky, one of the house conferees, was in almost nightly consultation with the president. The latter has manifested an eager desire to acquaint himself with the successive steps taken by the conference and the spirit of the discussions in the committee room. This information was fully imparted to him by Mr. Montgomery, who enjoys the full confidence of Mr. Cleveland and Speaker Crisp.

The attitude assumed by Mr. Montgomery in the conference furnishes somewhat of a denial of the recently printed report that the president is luke-warm in the cause of tariff reform. It may be stated as a fact that none of the house conferees were more insistent in favor of the house bill than he, and he is said to have repeatedly declared in the conference that a bill much more radical than that which passed the house would be more acceptable to him.

The decision of the conferees to report a disagreement and that the disagreement should be on the entire bill, was reached after a fifteen minutes' session of the full conference late yesterday afternoon. Arrangements were at once begun for consideration of the report in the house to-day.

The proceedings of the full tariff conference were both brief and formal, consisting merely of a statement by Senator Voorhees to the effect that the democratic members of the conference had found themselves, after another effort, unable to find common ground to stand upon and had decided to recommend a report for a general disagreement upon the bill as a whole. There was no discussion.

The house democratic members indicated, though not by a formal vote, that they should elect to stand by the house bill, while the senators, democratic and republican, voted not to recede from the senate amendments.

Chairman Wilson met Speaker Crisp and members of the house committee on rules as soon as the conferees adjourned. As a result of the conference between Mr. Wilson and the speaker the committee on rules is considering the desirability of a special rule to operate to-day when the tariff disagreement is reported.

SOLDIERS FIRE AT EACH OTHER

They Quarreled Over a Pretty Girl Who Visited the Camp.

CHICAGO, July 19.—After doing yeoman service at the Stock Yards, the Second regiment has become involved in a scandal, and residents of that district are talking indignantly about a shooting affair which occurred last night. About midnight shots were heard in the vicinity of Forty-ninth and Throop streets, and bullets whistled through the windows of several adjoining cottages.

People who ran out to see what was the matter say that they found a crowd of Second regiment soldiers firing at each other. When the skirmish died down it was found that no one had been shot, most of the bullets having gone very wild. A number of the soldiers were said to have been taken to the guardhouse.

The general explanation of the disturbance was that the soldiers had quarreled over a pretty young girl living in the vicinity of the camp, and who was said to have been a great favorite with the soldier boys, or at least two or three of them.

Annoyed by Kelley's Army.

RICHMOND, Va., July 19.—Gov. O'Ferrall received a telegram from Clifton Forge stating that Kelley's army of the commonweal, 125 strong, was encamped there, and that the citizens were greatly annoyed by the presence of the tramps. His excellency wired the commonweal attorney of Alleghany to strictly enforce the vagrancy laws and wire him at once in case the unwelcome visitors became riotious or troublesome. If the army shows the least disposition to become disorderly the militia will be called out against them.

Effort To Cut Down the Force.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The Dockery commission of experts has begun the investigation of the general land office, interior department. The object in view is the reduction of the force, if possible. This, if successful, will cause the reduction of the force of employes in the offices of registers and receivers in the land offices in the west.

Against Woman Suffrage.

ALBANY, July 19.—The constitutional convention committee on suffrage voted, 13 to 14, to report adversely all the proposed woman suffrage amendments except the proposition to give women the right to vote for school officers, and upon this no vote was taken.

Did Not Convene.

SEAGIRT, N. J., July 19.—The court of pardons which was to have met here yesterday to take action on several important cases, did not convene. Governor Werts directed that the meeting be postponed until next Wednesday at the same time and place.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.
THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.
Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make Is True.
To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.
Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.
Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Elmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."
This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

DR. STARKWEATHER.

NEW EVIDENCE

Of Dr. Lighthill's Success.

A Flattering Testimonial From Col. John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE, Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,

304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact, it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

TARIFF JEOPARDIZED

House Conferees Reject Senate Amendments.

Mr. Wilson Makes a Statement and Declares in Favor of Never Adjourning Until the Duty on Refined Sugar Is Repealed—The President's Call for Action—Free Raw Materials the Keynote of Tariff Reform—What Senator Hill Says.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—The first battle in the open over the differences between the house and senate was fought yesterday in the house of representatives in the presence of a large and deeply interested audience. For the first time in a month the galleries were full, and nearly every seat on the floor was occupied. Hostilities began immediately after the journal had been read, when Mr. Outhwaite (dem., Ohio) presented an order from the committee on rules providing for two hours' debate on the report of the conference on the tariff bill and restricting the action of the house to voting on a motion to insist on disagreement to the senate amendments in bulk. The order was antagonized by Mr. Reed (rep., Me.) and Mr. Johnson (dem., Ohio), the latter of whom wanted an opportunity to vote separately on the sugar schedule. It was agreed to without a division, however, and then Mr. Wilson (dem., W. Va.), chairman of the committee on ways and means, with his face hidden under a handkerchief binding a bandage about his eyes, in which is seated the neuralgic trouble from which he is suffering severely, reported the failure of the conferees to agree, and moved that the house insist upon its disagreement to the senate amendments. Speaking to the motion Mr. Wilson gave a very frank statement of the differences between the house and senate conferees and the reasons therefor. He was frequently interrupted by applause from his political associates, which arose to the tumultuous when he declared in favor of never adjourning until the duty on refined sugar had been repealed, whatever might be the fate of the general tariff bill. In conclusion he had read a letter from President Cleveland approving the features of the Wilson bill as it passed the house and advising the conferees to stand firm for the principles contained in the bill at that stage of its existence. After further debate by Mr. Reed, Mr. Wheeler (dem., Ala.) and Mr. Grow (rep., Pa.) the motion was agreed to and Speaker Crisp re-appointed the conferees on the part of the house.

Senate.

Although the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill was closed before the adjournment of the senate on Wednesday, so far as the amendments recommended by the appropriations committee were concerned, the bill occupied the attention of the senate during all of yesterday's session. The main cause of delay was an amendment offered by the senator from Washington, Mr. Squire, to allow the Puyallup Indians holding lands in severalty on their reservation near Tacoma, in that state, to sell portions of them. The discussion of this question occupied over three hours, and was finally decided in the negative—the amendment being laid on the table by a vote of 26 to 19. The bill was finally passed.

The conference report on the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was agreed to, and the statement was made by the chairman of the committee on appropriations that the two remaining appropriation bills—the sundry civil and the deficiency—would not be reported to the senato for some days yet.

The consideration of the Indian bill was temporarily suspended at 3 p. m., when the message from the house asking a further conference on the tariff bill was laid before the senate, followed by an oral report from Mr. Voorhees (dem., Ind.), chairman of the finance committe, to the effect that the conferees had not been able to agree. He gave notice that he would call the matter up for consideration and action this morning, and Mr. Hill (dem., N. Y.) followed that up with a notice that he would then move to instruct the senate conferees to vote to place coal and iron ore on the free list, and would address the senate on the subject. With a smile of sarcastic humor Mr. Manderson (rep., Neb.) asked Mr. Voorhees whether there was any message from the president to be delivered on the subject, and was responded to in three brief words, delivered in a somewhat sad tone, "Not to me." The senate at 6:15 adjourned until to-day.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER.

Read by Permission of Mr. Wilson to the House.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Much interest was created yesterday when Mr. Wilson announced that he had a letter from the president which he would make public. The letter was in Mr. Cleveland's vigorous style and is in part as follows:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, July 2, 1894.

TO HON. WILLIAM L. WILSON.

MY DEAR SIR:—The certainty that a conference will be ordered between the two houses of congress for the purpose of adjusting differences on the subject of tariff legislation makes it also certain that you will be again called upon to do hard service in the cause of tariff reform.

Every true democrat and every sincere tariff reformer knows that this bill in its present form, and as it will be submitted to the conference, falls far short of the consummation for which we have long labored, for which we have suffered defeat without discouragement; which in its anticipation gave us a rallying cry in our day of triumph, and which in its promise of accomplishment is so interwoven with democratic pledges and democratic success that our abandonment of the cause or the principles upon which it rests means party perfidy and party dishonor.

One topic will be submitted to the conference which embodies democratic principle so directly that it cannot be compromised. We have in our platform and in every way possible declared in favor of the free importation of raw materials.

It is quite apparent that this question of free raw material does not admit of adjustment on any middle ground, since their subjection to any rate of tariff taxation, great or small, is alike violative of democratic principle and democratic good faith.

I hope that you will not consider it intrusive if I say something in relation to another subject which can hardly fail to be troublesome to the conference. I refer to the adjustment of tariff taxation on sugar.

Under our party platform and in accordance with our declared party purposes sugar is a legitimate and logical article of revenue taxation. Unfortunately, however, incidents have accompanied certain stages of the legislation which will be submitted to the conference that have aroused in connection with this subject a natural democratic animosity to the methods and manipulations of trusts and combinations. I confess to sharing in this feeling, and yet it seems to me we ought, if possible, to sufficiently free ourselves from prejudice to enable us coolly to weigh the considerations which, in formulating tariff legislation, ought to guide our treatment of sugar as a taxable article.

While no tenderness should be entertained for trusts, and while I am decidedly opposed to granting them, under the guise of tariff taxation, any opportunity to further their peculiar methods, I suggest that we ought not to be driven away from the democratic principles and policy which lead to the taxation of sugar by the fear, quite likely exaggerated, that in carrying out this principle and policy we may indirectly and inordinately encourage a combination of sugar refining interests.

I know that in present conditions this is a delicate subject, and I appreciate the depth and strength of the feeling which its treatment has aroused. I do not believe we should do evil that good may come. But it seems to me that we should not forget that our aim is the completion of a tariff bill, and that in taxing sugar for proper purposes and within reasonable bounds, whatever else may be said of our action, we are in no danger of running counter to democratic principle.

In the conclusions of the conference touching the numerous items which will be considered the people are not afraid that their interests will be neglected. They know that the general result, so far as they are concerned, will be to place home necessaries and comforts more easily within their reach, and to insure better and surer compensation to those who toil.

We all know that a tariff covering all the varied interests and conditions of a country as vast as ours must of necessity be largely the result of honorable adjustment and compromise.

I expect very few of us can say, when our measure is perfected, that all its features are entirely as we would prefer. You know how much I deprecated the incorporation in the proposed bill of the income tax feature. In matters of this kind, however, which do not violate a fixed and recognized democratic doctrine, we are willing to defer to the judgment of a majority of our democratic brethren. I think there is a general agreement that this is a party duty.

This is more palpably apparent when we realize that the business of our country timidly stands and watches for the result of our efforts to perfect tariff legislation, that a quick and certain return of prosperity waits upon a wise adjustment, and that a confiding people still trust in our hands their prosperity and well being.

The democracy of the land plead most earnestly for the speedy completion of the tariff legislation which their representatives have undertaken, but they demand not less earnestly that no stress of necessity shall tempt those they trust to the abandonment of democratic principle.

Yours very truly,

GROVER CLEVELAND.

SENATOR HILL ON THE LETTER.

Says It May Complicate the Whole Situation.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—When asked what he thought of the president's letter, Senator Hill replied:

"In the language of the novelist, the plot thickens. I prefer to say nothing at this time as to the propriety or wisdom of the letter. It comes rather late, and may complicate the whole situation and defeat all tariff legislation whatever. If the president, instead of writing a letter, had exercised his influence to assist me in getting votes for free raw material when I was making the fight therefor in the senate the present unfortunate complication might have been avoided.

"I trust that there will be more votes now for free raw material when I bring forward the proposition again in the senate, which I expect to do. The skies are becoming brighter."

FIVE MINERS KILLED.

Crushed to Death in a Pennsylvania Mine.

PINE GROVE, Pa., July 20.—A fearful accident took place in the mines at Williamstown, several miles from here, last night, just as the miners were being hoisted out of the colliery. A number were in the wagon which had just started when the pulley underneath failed to work and they were crushed against the top rock, five being killed instantly.

Terrible scenes were witnessed until the bodies were gotten out. Those killed were:

John Raudenbush, John Llewellyn, M. A. Tate, William Clark and Charles Woodman.

All lived at Williamstown, were married and had children. Their bodies were horribly mangled and the affair created great excitement.

EL PASO'S BIG FIRE.

Nine-Tenths of the Business Portion Wiped Out.

EL PASO, Ill., July 20.—The most destructive fire in El Paso's history wiped out nine-tenths of the business portion of the city yesterday involving a loss of $250,000.

The fire was occasioned by a burning match to warm a curling iron, falling into a pan of gasoline in Shaeffer's restaurant. Twenty barrels of gasoline and 20 of kerosene ignited and the building went up in a sheet of flame.

The loss is all west of the Illinois Central railroad, Bloomington sent a steamer, hose and full crew of men. Minonk and Gridley also sent assistance.

OPERA AT BAYREUTH.

"Parsifal" Not Up to the Standard of Former Years.

BAYREUTH, July 20.—The opera festival opened with "Parsifal" before an audience which filled the great theatre and followed the performance from begin ning to end with rapt attention, applauding, however, only at the conclusion of the opera which is the rule at all the performances here. There have been many other presentations of the opera which deserved greater approval, but there was no lack of enthusiastic applause at the close of each act. The performance was good, although not up to the high standard of former years.

SENATORS DISPLEASED

Disagreement in the Tariff Conference the Cause.

They Declare, It Is Said, That the Senate Idea of a Tariff Should Prevail or There Would Be No Bill—Messrs. Smith, Gorman and Brice Will Warn the Conferees.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—From talks with senators the indications are that the president's letter to Mr. Wilson will precipitate an animated discussion on the floor of the senate to-day.

There will be no limit to debate and before the consideration of the conference report as an incidental and the letter as the main subject is over, some very plain language, it is asserted, will be used by some of the senators who have been designated as the "conservatives."

It is also said that three of these senators will make their replies when Mr. Voorhees calls up the report immediately after the reading of the journal. These three are Senators Smith, Gorman and Brice. Mr. Hill will also speak.

Mr. Smith, if the rumors about him be true, will make a speech in which he will warn the conferees that they have violated the faith placed in them when they receded from the senate amendments and agreed, as has been reported, that they would accept the house schedules on woolens, cottons, etc. He will outline the situation as he sees it and will, it is said, in conclusion tell the senate, the president, the country and the house of representatives that they can accept the senate bill or no bill at all so far as his vote is concerned.

Mr. Gorman, who was in close conference with Mr. Jones and Mr. Murphy all the afternoon, went home as soon as the senate adjourned. It is said that he, too, will echo the sentiments that Mr. Smith will utter and will warn the house that if it persists in the course adopted by it yesterday it will end in defeating a bill which is for the best interests of the whole country and which was the product of very serious attention on the part of the senate and formulated as the only bill that could hope to meet with success. Mr. Gorman, if the statements of his friends mean anything, is more firmly ground in his original plan than ever. Mr. Brice will have a few words to say about the senate bill, in which he, too, will join his colleagues in letting the country know that it is the senate bill and not the house bill that is ultimately to become the law of the land.

There was a rumor about that the senate democrats were now declaring that their bill should pass without the dotting of an "i" or the crossing of a "t," but one of the conservatives denied this, saying that there were many items in the senate bill upon which concessions would be made, but that in the main the senate idea of a tariff should prevail or there would be no bill. The idea also prevails in the senate that the bill will not be defeated, but that the house will ultimately give in rather than see no tariff bill passed at all.

Mr. Gorman, with some indignation, denied the story that had been circulated to the effect that he had surrendered coal and given his consent that it should go back to the free list.

A BOY'S FATAL MISTAKE.

Supposed His Brother Had on a Bullet Proof Coat.

WICHITA, Kan., July 20.—Garfield Wilkesson, aged 14 years, was killed by his brother Willie, aged 11, and the mother of the boys has become violently insane from the shock of the tragedy. The story is particularly sad. The dead boy had been engaged for some time in making what he thought would prove a bullet proof coat fashioned, he imagined, after one of the recent inventions, and having completed it, he put it on and gave his younger brother a pistol and told him to shoot at him. The boy's aim was good and his brother fell dead, the bullet having pierced his heart.

Duel over a Glass of Beer.

BALTIMORE, July 20.—The price of a glass of beer was the cause of a duel last evening in which two men received mortal wounds and a third was seriously injured. Harry Ports, 20 years old, was ordered out of John E. Fagan's saloon at 800 Columbia avenue, by the proprietor because he refused to pay for a drink. He returned in a short time and began firing at Fagan. Fagan returned the fire and both men are thought to be mortally wounded. Samuel Lavicz, who was standing at the bar when the shooting began received a bullet in the shoulder.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., July 20.—A pay-day fight between Hungarians and Polanders took place last night in a suburb of this city, two men, Paul Lorak and John Shinski being fatally injured and a number of other men being badly cut about the head and face by bottles and knives.

A TRUE TEST OF BEAUTY.

Only the Fairest and Freshest Faces Can for a Moment Stand It.

Next time you go to a party, watch some of the women as they stand under the chandeliers. Notice how a light shining from above brings out unsuspected lines and angles in all but the youngest and freshest faces. It is a severe test of beauty.

Perhaps you will wonder at the number of thin, lanky women. They all want to be plump. Why are they not? They get enough to eat, surely. Oh, yes, but they don't digest their food, and there's no fire without consumption of fuel. A pre-digested food called Paskola is welcomed by these women; they find in it flesh forming properties.

They are told that it is nourishment, not medicine, and that its good effects are lasting. Such letters as this one from J. C. Kenyon, druggist, Oswego, N. Y., tells the story:

"Two of our best ladies told me this week, one that she had gained five pounds the other two pounds, entirely through the use of your great food, Paskola."

This is the testimony of Mrs. Chas. E. Lothian, 111 West 45th street:

"For the past five years I have suffered from gastric indigestion and have tried all so-called remedies for indigestion, besides courses of treatment from physicians all over the country, from which I only received temporary relief. My symptoms were heart burn, flushes of heat, dizziness, bloated feeling after eating, depression of spirits, severe and acute attacks of cramps and inflammation and chronic constipation.

"About two months ago, through an advertisement in the New York Herald, I resolved to give Paskola a trial, although without any faith in it, owing to my past experience with so-called remedies for indigestion. After taking one small bottle of Paskola I felt better, very much better I have now taken only seven small bottles, and have never felt better in my life. I have gained ten pounds and now eat anything my appetite craves. All my friends say, 'Why how fat and well you look; what have you been doing?' My answer is always 'Paskola.' I have recommended it to all my friends and even to strangers, as I feel it my duty to do so owing to the great benefit I have derived from it.

"A friend of mine has taken only three small bottles and says she feels like a new woman. This may seem rather fulsome praise, but I conscientiously feel that I cannot say too much in praise of Paskola."

All druggists sell Paskola. Descriptive pamphlet sent free on application to the Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade street, New York.

ASK THEM WHY?

Ask the men who are making imitations of COTTOLENE, the new vegetable shortening, why they give up lard and try to trade on the merits of COTTOLENE? Perhaps you can guess why.

ASK HIM WHY?

Ask the grocer who attempts substitution, why he tries to sell an imitation when people call for that pure, palatable and popular vegetable shortening, COTTOLENE? Perhaps you can guess.

ASK YOURSELF WHY?

Why should not YOU use COTTOLENE, instead of lard or any other compound, for all cooking purposes? It has the highest possible endorsement; from Physicians as to healthfulness; from Cooking Experts as to superiority; from housekeepers as to economy. Use COTTOLENE and stick to it.

The Beginning of a Blaze.

As James Donahue was entering the borough by way of Somerset street about 5 this morning he noticed smoke coming from the building where is located the plumbing shop of Alfred B. Thorn. At the same time the people who live upstairs smelled the smoke. Mr. Thorn was sent for and the shop was opened. The yellow pine flooring was found to be afire in a single spot. The fire had not spread rapidly because all of the windows and doors were closed tightly and the flames had no draught to fan them. With water brought in pails from the pump by the bridge the fire was speedily extinguished. A hole about a foot in diameter was burned in the floor. The cause of the fire is unknown.

SUMMIT'S SEWERAGE SYSTEM.

Visit of Interested Plainfield Officials to the Filtration Plant on the Mountain.

Mayor Gilbert and Councilman Frost of the Sewerage Committee went yesterday to Summit to inspect the intermittent filtration system in use there. They found that the plan there is similar to that employed in South Framingham, Mass., where they recently made a thorough examination of the system which Plainfield is to adopt.

The filtration beds are locatad on the main road between Summit and New Providence, about one-quarter of a mile from the more thickly settled part of Summit. The grounds cover about 26 acres, 12 acres being now in use. Instead of five men as in Framingham only two men are employed in managing the disposal of sewerage. No crops are raised on the land used, and their condition did not seem to indicate that the beds in Summit are as well kept as those in the Massachusetts town.

There was no offensive odor apparent, however, and the ground does the work which is required of it very satisfactorily. Several very fine residences are located within an eighth of a mile of the plant. Persons driving along the road nearby would not notice anything about the land that would show what it was used for. The effluent seemed to the visitors to be as clear as that which runs from the Framingham beds.

PRODUCTS OF THE PASSAIC.

A Tree, a Turtle and a Bass Rise From the Water on a Minstrel's Line.

Among the party of Plainfielders who went fishing in the Passaic river yesterday was George Thatcher. His fishing was of the ordinary character until he got a strike from a bass which to the minstrel appeared to pull the hardest of any he had ever had any experience with.

The line was finally shortened, and then Thatcher discovered that along with the bass was a portion of a tree about ten feet long, in which the line had become tangled. The bass was landed with a net, but the pull on the pole seemed scarcely diminished at all. Further investigation brought to view a snapping turtle of perhaps 15 pounds weight. The turtle got away, leaving the tree and the bass in the hands of the fisherman.

HYMENEAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Schroeder will reside for the present on Regent street.

A Profitable Picnic.

The officers and members of the Plainfield Street Railway Association are well satisfied with the financial results of their picnic in Vail's grove Wednesday evening, and are rejoicing over their successful start at entertaining the public and themselves. The festival next year will be all the larger because of the success of the one just held. The way in which the affair was conducted was the subject for praise from all who attended. Order was perfectly preserved, and the crowd was so goodnaturedly happy that one could not help but enjoy the occasion to the fullest extent. The success of the repetition next year of this first festival of the new association is already assured.

DISCOVERED IN TIME.

The Blaze Started by an Evona Fire-bug Does but Little Damage.

The attempt of an incendiary to burn a barn in Evona was discovered this morning in time to prevent the destruction of the building.

Theodore VanNest lives on West Front street. In the rear his barn is next to the Central Railroad tracks. He has rented his place and this morning his son John VanNest, a young man of 19, began to clean up the barn, preparatory for the entrance of the tenant. He went into the building about 7 and noticed that the small door which opens on the track in the rear had been broken open. It had previously been fastened with a wooden cleat which was nailed across it. Nothing was missing about the barn, and so John went upstairs and began to clean up the floor.

After working about 15 minutes he had occasion to go downstairs. As he reached the head of the flight he saw that the stairs were afire. The smell of kerosene was plainly apparent.

The young man called for help, and members of the family of Special Officer Jacob Kriney, who lives next door, responded. The fire was easily extinguished with buckets of water. It was then found that someone had placed paper and rubbish under the bottom step of the stairs, sprinkled it with kerosene and set fire to it, either by slipping in unnoticed and lighting the pile with a match or by leaving there some chemical which would generate spontaneous combustion. The floor and part of the stairs were burned nearly through. Mr. VanNest came to Plainfield immediately and took Chief Grant to his place. The captain examined the premises thoroughly. He is sure that the fire was started by an incendiary.

WELCOMED TO THE WORK.

Hearty Reception to the New Pastor of the Craig Place Church.

The members and friends of the German Reformed Church, North Plainfield, showed their feelings of appreciation last evening, when they gave their new pastor and his wife, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. George Hauser, an informal reception. All available space in the church was used to accommodate the very large attendance.

Judging from the hearty and enthusiastic manner in which the newcomers were received by the congregation the members intend to be loyal and to join earnestly in assisting them in the growing work of the church.

Eighteen members of the Saengerbund Singing Society were present and rendered a pleasing selection. After this Rev. Cornelius Schenck of the Trinity Reformed Church made the address of welcome. His remarks were much appreciated and the many ideas advanced were helpful to all.

Mr. Schenck then introduced Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Hauser to the people present, who responded by marching around the room greeting them with a hearty handshake.

All were then invited to room below where refreshments were served in abundance by the women of the church. Another enjoyable selection by the Saengerbunds closed an evening of great pleasure.

Rev. and Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, Rev. William E. and Mrs. Honeyman, Rev. Frederick Koechli, and Rev. Edward Klonka were among those present.

CHURCH CHIMES.

The theme of Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis in the Seventh-day Baptist Church tomorrow morning will be "The Ever-perfecting Christian Life".

The Sunday school scholars of Washington Chapel who went on their annual excursion to Boynton Beach yesterday all report having had an excellent time.

With the weather and the temperature in their favor, the Sunday-schools of the First Presbyterian, the Park Avenue Baptist and the Congregational Churches took a large crowd with them on their union excursion to Asbury Park. Fourteen cars left the North Avenue station at 8 this morning, and the railroad officials promised to have two more cars attached at Roselle to accommodate those who had to stand. A delegation from Dunellen was among the excursionists.

The Society Excursion.

The time of leaving the North Avenue station of the special cars which will convey the society excursionists to the city on their way to West Point tomorrow has been changed. The cars will leave by the 8:15 train instead of the 8:01, as was intended at first.

His freedom was once more considered dangerous to others, however, and he is again an inmate of the asylum.

PLAINFIELD AIR LINE.

CARS TO WHIZ THROUGH SPACE AT 300 MILES AN HOUR.

Charles G. Loeber Explains What His Wonderful Discovery Can Accomplish, and Promises to Demonstrate That His Secret Force Is Real, Not Visionary.

Charles G. Loeber of 658 Carroll street, Brooklyn, whose visit to Plainfield in the interest of his proposed air car factory was exclusively announced in The Press of yesterday, called on Mayor Gilbert again last evening. The Mayor seemed favorably impressed with Mr. Loeber's offer to come to this city. The matter is receiving the careful consideration of the Plainfielders who have been approached in regard to it, and a definite conclusion will soon be arrived at.

For the information of those who have had their curiosity aroused by the statement that Plainfield was proposed as the home of a plant for the building of airships, Mr. Loeber has prepared especially for The Press the following statements of what he has discovered in his years of study, explaining the means he will use in attaining a speed of 300 miles or more per hour in aerial navigation.

For more than a century man has ascended into the air, far beyond where the bird can fly, despite his ignorance of the law of flight. Let him comprehend that law, and he will bring forth a means of conveyance that will carry him through the air as much better than the bird flies, as steel and steam power are superior to feathers and animal muscle. The writer has the good fortune to have elaborated the method for air conveyance, in his invention of air car. This invention is based on his discovery of means, which make the air unyielding to force and impact; and this unyielding state of the air the writer has named Anthexis, from the Greek, meaning: that which sustains force without yielding.

Anthexis is the unyielding state of the air to weight (gravity) and force in any required direction obtained through peculiar means, which are embodied in the apparatus against which Anthexis acts. Anthexis decreases with altitude, like atmospheric pressure; it sustains at sea level a force of 2,116 pounds, and at a height of 20,000 feet a force of 1,100 pounds to the square foot of impinged air.

The explanation of Anthexis, briefly stated, is as follows: The air is a powerful substance, but its power is occult and made manifest only by the use of means. The balloon is the means to obtain two opposite vertical air columns, and the excess of pressure of the lower over the upper air-column; vacuous space in the pneumatic tube is the means to obtain the full pressure, force, of one air column; and a third means, which I have discovered, brings forth Anthexis.

Anthexis is the foundation and embodiment of my invention of air car.

The air car is designed of practical material, preferably steel or iron, to render it fire-proof.

It is provided with vertically movable wings, through which the air car is made to ascend, descend, and to be supported in the air. These wings embody the means through which Anthexis is obtained as herein before mentioned, that is to say: the air underneath the wings is made unyielding through the means embodied in the wings, to the extent of sustaining a maximum force of 2,116 pounds (namely at sea level), and a force of 1,100 pounds at a height of 20,000 feet, to each square foot of wing area. And thus, the air underneath the wings sustains their weight, together with the weight of the air car proper, which rests upon the wings when the air car is in the air; and also the power exerted upon the wings, to make the air car ascend and descend.

The air car is, further, provided with a propelling machine and rudder, for onward propulsion and steering; and these two are constituted as the wings, embodying the like means, through which the air becomes unyielding to their power of impact.

Steam power machinery in the air car works the wings and propelling machine; the wings are worked for ascent and descent, and remain stationary for the support of the air car in the air.

And as the means, through which Anthexis is brought forth, are constant, permanent, not liable to be impaired and yet readily replenishable, the support of the air car upon the air becomes so secure as to make any fall of it impossible.

The beneficent consequence of air conveyance to humanity and civilization—as a means of transport that affords exceptional speed, comfort and safety, at minimum cost—the inevitable abolition of war; the accessibility of every part of the globe are apparent.

Anthexis, then, is real, and the air becomes unyielding in any required direction, to the extent hereinbefore stated, and through means other than force. Nor is it necessary to argue that those means are within human reach. Just as the pressure and buoyancy of the air were once unknown and obtainable, so may Anthexis be obtained by the successful investigator. And if the writer were called upon to account for having obtained Anthexis, he would ascribe it to his providential good fortune and many years of unremitting, severe labor, expended upon a subject, as to which as good as nothing was known, and all had to be elaborated by original conception and design.

Animal locomotion is the prototype of artificial locomotion. The railway locomotive conforms to animal locomotion in the matter of fulcrumage; and coincident with this conformity is the locomotive's capacity for speed, obtained at an abnormal expenditure of power. But the steamship diverges from animal locomotion, both in sustenance of ship and its fulcrumage; and coincident with this divergence is the steamship's deficiency in speed and safety, and in requiring an abnormal amount of power for the limited speed it does make, doubly limited, as compared with the speed of the locomotive, and because the resistance of water is so much less than that of land.

Animal locomotion is governed by one and the same law, but for the air that law has a different method of application from that obtaining on land, namely as to sustentation and fulcrumage.

If the foregoing premises were understood, there would be no attempts to utilize the balloon, or to float an air vehicle by means of huge vacuous space. Nor would there be any revamping of that grossly stupid vagary—to attain air conveyance by mere brute force, by means of an emasculated kite, called aeroplane. But the flight of the bird would be the pattern, as it is the object lesson, and specifically the phenomena of soaring, of carriage of prey in flight, and of high speed.

Animal locomotion comprises four requirements, namely: (a) a proportion of weight to volume of body in the locomotor, such as to make this heavy and firmly adhesive to its locomotive element; (b) support of the locomotor by its locomotive element; (c) locomotion of the locomotor through its own force; (d) fulcrumage, to enable the locomotor to apply its force against itself.

In the flight of the bird the first requirement of locomotion is exhibited in the fact, that the bird weighs proportionately nearly as much; and the bird loaded with prey, which is sometimes even heavier than the bird, weighs quite as much—as the horse.

The second requirement of locomotion in air is exhibited in the phenomenon of soaring, and it is proven by the fact that, if the flying bird were to be sustained in space through its force, it could not fly continuously nor with such great speed, nor could it carry prey in flight, for want of force; for, it would be burdened with double its weight of body, once by reaction, and a second time by the exertion of a force equal to its weight. The fourth requirement of locomotion is exhibited differently in air than on land; for, on land fulcrumage is afforded by gravity, i. e., the weight of the animal, and the ground; but in air fulcrumage is afforded solely by the air, it being the sustenance of the bird's wing impact by the air without yielding, in consequence of which the bird is able to push itself upward and onward through space. If the air were not unyielding against the wings of the flying bird, the vulture could no more carry the heavy prey it does, nor fly with a velocity of over 100 miles in an hour, than the horse could pull a heavy load, or gallop at top speed, if the ground were not unyielding underneath its feet.

CREDITABLE COUNCIL WORK.

Franklin Juniors Entertain Visitors With Initiation and a Banquet.

Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., had a busy and enjoyable session last evening. Several visitors from other councils were present. They witnessed with much pleasure the initiation of four new members.

The initatory work of Franklin by the team, under the command of E. R. Pope, Jr., was the admiration of everyone. Each of the Juniors present contributed to the good of the order.

About midnight all retired to the banquet hall where an excellent supper was served by the Good and Welfare Committee.

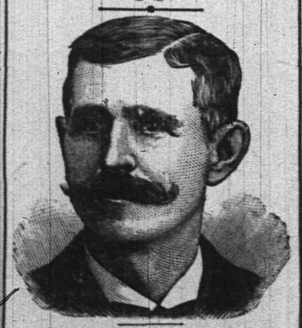
The way in which Franklin Council conducts its business is highly creditable to the earnest working members of it.

Bluer Than Plainfield.

No ice-cream was sold except in restaurants in Cambridge, Mass., last Sunday, owing to the enforcement of a "blue law" which was a dead letter until a certain class in the community called the attention of the mayor to the existence of the ordinance and served notice on him that he was expected to make it respected. To add to the discomfort of the citizens, no ice was sold, and the drug stores were closed. There is no law prohibiting apothecaries from selling drugs, but as they are not allowed to sell soda water or cigars they do not care to keep their stores open.

Beneath a Boat-House.

The Brockville Times of Monday last says of the little son of U. S. Consul Demarest that unnoticed by his mother he fell between the boat-houses of Messrs. Bann & Cole, last evening, coming up underneath the platform of one of them. Mrs. Demarest could not see him, but reached down and luckily caught him in the first attempt. It was a matter of only a few seconds until Master Demarest was on sure footing again.



A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, cold sensation that existed in my arms, hands and legs. I had to rub and beat those parts until they were sore, to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a strange weakness in my back and around my waist, together with an indescribable 'gone' feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis, from which, according to their universal conclusion, there is no relief. Once it fastens upon a person, they say, it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the sufferer dies. Such was my prospect. I had been doctoring a year and a half steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvelous as it may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me, and there has not been even the slightest indication of its return. I now feel as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 127. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recommendation, and it has been as satisfactory in their cases as in mine."—James Kane, La Rue, O.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Clarence Titsworth of Watchung avenue fell while riding near Perth Amboy Wednesday night, fell and broke one tooth and cut his lip quite badly.

Monte Scott made a fast mile in the handicap race among the training cyclers on the Crescent track yesterday afternoon, overtaking a limit man who had 475 yards start.

Miss Florence Petrie and her brothers, John and Edward Petrie, left Plainfield this morning at 3:30 on their wheels for Asbury Park. They will return tonight with friends who went with the excursion.

An effort is being made by New Jersey wheelmen to have a 100-mile relay race, the teams in which to consist of ten men each, each relay to cover ten miles. Either the Newark-Princeton and return or the Newark-Asbury Park course will be used.

The Elizabeth Journal claims to have reliable authority for the statement that Charles Brown, the crack rider of the Elizabeth Athletic Cyclers, who made the Plainfield track record of 2:17 at the meet of July 4, is soon to ride under the Crescents' colors.

No definite arrangements have yet been made by the Crescents for the proposed local races and games to be held Saturday, August 4. It is probable that no admission will be charged, and that the public will be invited out to the grounds to witness friendly contests arranged in order by the management.

H. P. Walden, Chairman of the Race Committee of the Century Road Club of America, has sent to the racing committee of the Elizabeth Wheelmen, official notice of the achievements of A. H. Barnett in the Irvington-Millburn road race, which he won Decoration Day under the colors of the Elizabeth club. He writes that Barnett smashed and still holds the following records: State record, five miles, 13:45; American record, 15 miles, 42:40; American record, 20 miles, 57:12; State record, 25 miles, 1:11:18.

What Competition Does.

An electric street-car war in Savannah has driven fares down to the lowest possible figures, and the inhabitants now ride no matter how short the distance is they have to go. On short trips the fare is one cent, and on long trips three cents, and the president of one of the companies threatens to make all fares one cent. He says that his company has actually taken in more money during the last two months than during the same months last year. The increase in travel has been very nearly double what it was.

Let Them Go Back.

Now that the price of a ticket to Europe has been reduced to $10 there would seem to be no valid reason why any foreigner who is dissatisfied with this country's laws and institutions should stay here. All such are urged not to remain upon the order of going but to go at once.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

On the Second Charge.

The case of the State against Shay and Adams for stealing chickens at Fanwood came up before Judge McCormick in Elizabeth this morning. The defendants pleaded not guilty and trial was set for next Wednesday morning at 10. George DeMeza is their lawyer.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost positive cures are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

TO GAIN POPULATION.

SUCCESSFUL PRACTICES PUT FORWARD IN GROWING TOWNS.

Boards of Trade and the Spirit That Must Actuate a Community In an Endeavor to Build Up Manufacturing Interests—Line of Work to Be Followed.

No city is so large or town so small that its growth cannot be materially and advantageously advanced by the united effort of its citizens. Notable instances are on every hand. The west doubtless has acquired the palm for distinctive booming, but there is not a factory town of the hundreds in New England that does not owe its prosperity in a measure to the mission work of its own people.

Boards of trade, associations of business men, committees of improvement and kindred organizations are efficient in directing a campaign for the acquirement of capital and increased business for any community. There are between 600 and 700 of these throughout the United States, and though many are inactive their position is such that, does occasion demand, they are quickly in the field and ready for concerted duty. Individual effort in town advancement is practically unavailing. Few men undertake it, and if they do their acts are usually handicapped by a selfish desire to locate a prospective manufactures upon lands of their own, thus limiting the town's possibilities in the case if not entirely destroying them.

A successful board of trade should be cosmopolitan in character, embracing in its membership the butcher, the baker, the minister, the banker, the merchant, the manufacturer, the house owner, the workingman and as many others as can be induced to declare themselves unreservedly for the public good. If a church feud exists or a school quarrel is on at the time of organization, the principals in the premises should not only be studiously avoided, but absolutely debarred from taking part. Almost every town some time in its history has experienced one or the other of these cancerous maladies. Hearty and unreserved co-operation of every distinctive element is primarily essential to the success of any undertaking having for its object the growth of a town. There may always be found many public spirited citizens possessed of the correct idea, but there are, too, those who must be convinced that they necessarily form an important factor in the movement which should eventually become universal. A liberal minded and generous policy must needs be assumed, and those who have not tried it in public affairs will be happily surprised to see how quickly a leaven of this sort properly prepared will lead to philanthropic acts and kindly purposes upon the part of actual croakers, who by grace of polite practices are often improperly styled conservatives. All trade jealousies must be buried under a broad expanse of good fellowship, and prejudices must die of their own volition.

Once organized upon correct principles, the possible indulgence of personal selfishness will be precluded by rendering positively unpopular those acts which have a tinge inimical to the public welfare. Enterprising citizens will grasp the idea of progress and come forward with helpful suggestion, lending aid as one man to the accomplishment of the high purposes undertaken.

An association should have a regular income sufficient to meet incidental expenses and for liberal and judicious advertising. Ordinarily from $5 to $10 membership fees and a like amount in annual dues will aggregate enough for these requirements. The affairs of a society may safely be intrusted to an executive committee of five of the right kind of men. They should represent wealth, liberality and progress and be possessed of an abiding confidence in the advantages of their own town over all others. Other committees should be formed to look after subscriptions for new enterprises, membership, sites for factories, municipal improvements and the many and varied departments that may properly and naturally be consigned to the care and championship of a board of trade.

Cities do not happen. The fact that any town larger than a mere country hamlet exists is because there are adequate causes for such existence. These form advantages, and to determine and publish them should be an association's first duty. To create new forces and develop and direct them should ever after mark the line of work to be followed. Energy should characterize every move. If a letter of inquiry is received from an outside manufacturer, a telegram should be sent in response, one asking when he can visit the town and accept its hospitality. He should be met at the station by two or three representative citizens and received as a distinguished guest. His wants should be anticipated and every means afforded him for gathering the information he desires.

Impressed with the commercial importance of the town and with the wide awake methods of its citizens, a man would naturally be predisposed to avail himself of the agreeable surroundings, so that if the advantages are such as are available and his propositions are met in a spirit of fairness and liberality negotiations can quickly be consummated looking to the location of his factory and the acquisition of his capital.

MANY ARE INDICTED

Wholesale Rounding Up of Railroad Strikers.

Forty-three Individuals To Be Arrested and Bail Will Be Fixed at $10,000 in Each Case—Considerable Apprehension Felt in Labor Circles as to Who Is Named.

CHICAGO, July 20.—The drag-net of the Federal law was cast into the waters yesterday, and when the ropes were drawn taut, and when it was pulled to shore, it was found to contain no less than twenty-nine indictments charging offenses against the inter-state act and the laws relating to the transportation of the United States mails forty-three individuals. It was, as District Attorney Milchrist put it afterward, "a wholesale rounding up of everybody and anybody concerned in the railroad strike within the jurisdiction of the Circuit court for the northern district of Illinois."

Just as soon as the indictments had been laid upon the desk of the court they were seized by an attache of the district attorney's office and locked up in a vault in the quarters of Circuit Clerk Burnham. The court in the meantime had fixed the bail on each of the indictments in the sum of $10,000 against each and every individual concerned.

Several of the directory of the railway union have lectured during the past week to organize lodges east and west, but they are equally liable to arrest as though they remained within this jurisdiction. When asked regarding the method of procedure in such cases, District-Attorney Milchrist replied:

"We have no authority under the United States statutes to secure the arrest and holding of any one by telegraph. All that we can do is to forward certified copies of the indictment and warrant to the jurisdiction within which the people we want may happen to be at the time. They can then be arrested and brought before a United States commissioner. Ample proof must be afforded that they are the person or persons named in the warrant, and, this having been established with satisfaction to the commissioner, they can be held in bonds to appear for trial in this city whenever wanted. We cannot, however, enforce arbitrary arrests or extradition."

The news that the grand jury had returned an omnibus indictment obtained wide circulation in labor circles last night and was productive of considerable apprehension both at the headquarters of the labor union and about the resorts of other labor leaders. The large number of men indicted gave rise to the belief that representatives of organizations who had taken part in ordering a general tie-up had fallen under the ban of the grand jury, and so pronounced was this impression that the report obtained considerable, circulation that General Master Workman Sovereign of the K. of L. was one of those for whom a warrant would be issued to-day under the general conspiracy law. No corroboration of this rumor, however, could be obtained at the federal building. The indictments were locked up in a vault and the office was closed at dusk.

DISTRESS AT CONSTANTINOPLE.

Sufferers from Earthquakes Homeless and Half-Fed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 20.—The suffering caused by the earthquakes is more widespread than was at first supposed. The loss of property is felt more keenly every day by the homeless and half-fed families who have camped in the parks and cemeteries. The local relief funds are entirely inadequate to the emergency here, and in the provinces, especially in and around Adabazar, Tchalaldja, and Gallera, the sufferers have been left helpless in their wretchedness.

As soon as communication with the provinces shall be restored, the reports of privation and disease will probably begin to reach this city.

New York's New Commander.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Capt. Robley D. Evans, popularly known as "Fighting Bob" Evans, has been ordered to command "the finest ship in the navy" on the detachment of Capt. John W. Philip on Aug. 30. The competition among naval officers to secure command of the New York has been exceedingly keen, but the honor came to Capt. Evans entirely without solicitation.

Wisconsin Towns Destroyed.

MARSHFIELD, Wis., July 20.—Reports received here from Newton, a small sawmill village, 18 miles east of here, state that the place has been totally destroyed by fire. Pittsfield, a town of 1,000 inhabitants, on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road, in this county, is also on fire. The smoke of the big fire can been seen from this place.

Scotch Miners' Wages.

LONDON, July 20.—The board of conciliation who have been considering the differences between the Scotch mine-owners and miners have decided that wages shall not be reduced more than 30 per cent. below the standard of 1888, and shall not be pushed more than 45 per cent. above it. The agreement in question will be valid for two years.

Strikers' Places Filled.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., July 20.—Four carloads of new men have arrived at the Donnelly works. Forty families were evicted to make room for them, and the works will be started to-day. The old men at the Mullen works have returned to work.

Rifles for Illinois.

BOSTON, July 20.—In response to an order from the adjutant general of Illinois, William Read & Co., of this city, have shipped 1,500 Springgeld rifles to that state. This is the second shipment within a week.

Catholic Church Burned.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 20.—The French Catholic Church of St. Clotilde was burned yesterday, the fire being caused by the explosion of one of the altar lamps. Loss about $17,000; partly insured.

An Old Farmer Killed.

UTICA, N. Y., July 20.—Henry W. Wheeler, of Rome, 81 years old, fell from a mowing machine on his farm, and one of the horses attached to the machine stepped on his chest, killing him.

Thirty Cows Slaughtered.

UTICA, N. Y., July 20.—Thirty-one tuberculosis cows of the Oneida community herd of 59 were slaughtered by State Examiner Henderson, of Syracuse.

Returning to Work at Hammond.

HAMMOND, Ind., July 20.—The employes of the G. H. Hammond Packing company, who struck in sympathy with the American Railway union boycott, returned to work in a body. The local A. R. U. last night decided to return to work provided the railroad companies took back all the old employes, and a committee was appointed to wait on President Debs. The strikers have not yet been ordered to return to work.

New Car Company Organized.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 20.—The secretary of state has chartered the Continental Palace Car company at East St. Louis. Its object is to manufacture, sell and operate palace sleeping, dining and buffet cars, and other apparatus in connection therewith. The capital stock is $5,000,000. The new company enters the field as a rival of the Pullman factory and has already begun the building of their plant.

Miners in an Ugly Mood.

ALTOONA, Pa., July 20.—Mr. J. L. Mitchell, one of the mountain coal operators who were just seen, says that everything at Bens Creek is quiet to-day, but that all the mines are idle. The miners of this section are in a very ugly mood at present, and it is difficult to tell what the present trouble will result in before it is finally settled.

Under Martial Law.

MARQUETTE, Mich., July 20.—Reports from Ironwood state that Col. Lyon has decided to place Gogebic county under martial law and place Andy Burns, chief of the Ironwood police, under arrest. Burns is known to be in sympathy with the strikers, and his connivance at their violence is a subject of general comment.

Strikers Got Hold of Them.

PHILIPSBURG, Pa., July 20.—Yesterday one car load of new men arrived at Eureka No. 14 mine, operated by H. Liveright. The men on strike got hold of the new men, and they now refuse to go to work. Deputies were placed at this mine about two weeks ago.

The Highest Degree.

ALBANY, July 20.—Bishop Burke, of the Albany diocese, has received, through Rome, an appointment by the patriarch of Constantinople the highest degree in the order of the Holy Sepulchre, of which he was already a knight.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.
THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.
Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make Is True.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

DR. STARKWEATHER.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays 4 to 6 p. m.

Those living at a distance can consult the Doctor by letter.

Send or call for our Book of Testimonials.

MAGIC

IRON-TONE

For Nerve, Brain and Blood.

MAGIC IRON-TONE is an ideal summer drink. Served at fountains with soda it is incomparable. It must be remembered that the average summer drink is just so much syrup and water, having no medicinal properties, and which only serves to provoke instead of to assuage thirst. But MAGIC IRON-TONE not only quenches thirst, it gratifies the longing for "something that will go to the spot;" it sparkles and bubbles along the palate and the throat; it gratifies the parched stomach and immediately clears the films from the brain. It dispels the despondent, depressed feeling inseparable from weariness and overwork; it lightens the load the system seems to be carrying, causes the eye to flash, the mind to spring into activity, and the nerves and muscles to jump from a flaccid to an elastic condition.

MAGIC IRON-TONE EXTRACT FOR HOME USE.

25 CTS. A BOTTLE.

One bottle makes thirty-five Delicious Drinks when prepared as per directions, and served with Ice Water or Ice Cold Carbonic Water.

SUPERIOR AS A BEVERAGE TO ROOT BEER

And prepared with less trouble. Ask your Druggist for it.

MAGIC IRON-TONE is especially recommended for Brain-Fag or Mental Exhaustion, Nervousness, Physical Weakness, as in convalescence, or from Excesses, Sour Stomach, Flatulence, Mal-assimilation, Night Sweats, Insomnia, Gravel, etc.

Nursing Mothers will find it a True Tonic, not beneficial to themselves alone, but also to their offspring. Bottles for home use, 25c.

BEATEN IN NEW JERSEY

A Young Woman's Thrilling Experience.

Hired by a Stranger To Go to His Country House—Inveigled Into the Woods on the Pretense That His Home Was There—Rescued by a Farmer and His Help.

ELIZABETH, N. J., July 21.—Two women were enticed to Linden Thursday night and one of them had a fearful experience at the hands of the man who brought them to the place. Who the women are is not known as those who befriended them after the occurrence did not take their names and allowed them to take a train for New York.

The facts as told by the neighbors are, that about 8 o'clock in the evening a well-dressed man, a stranger to all who saw him at Linden, alighted from a New York train. With him were two women. One was young, the other was but a few years older and had a suckling baby in her arms. They passed along to the Edgar turnpike which leads to Rahway. On reaching the turnpike they turned toward Rahway.

This was the last seen of the three together by the people in Linden. John Eggans, who was sitting on his stoop on the Edgar turnpike, heard screams coming from the direction of a patch of woodland known as "Stinson's woods." He called his farm hands and with them started down the road on a run. In a few seconds they met the woman who carried the child. She was running toward them and screaming as loudly as her almost breathless condition would permit.

By this time others had been attracted by the cries and a dozen men surrounded the woman when she stopped. She said the man with whom she and her companion were with was killing the girl.

The men hurried along until they heard a noise in the woods. They plunged in a short distance from the road and came upon the man and his victim.

The girl was lying on the ground. Her clothing from the waist down had been torn off, and the man was stooping over her with one knee on her breast. One hand clutched her throat and with the other he was beating her on the head.

The girl's assailant saw the men approaching and leaping up started to run. A part of the men followed him, but could not overtake him. He lost himself in the dark woods. The girl was badly cut about the face and head. After her cuts had been dressed and clothing provided for her, she told her story.

The woman with the baby had secured a position as a wet nurse. The man engaged her to go into the country. The engagement was a good one, but the woman did not want to go alone, so prevailed upon the younger one to accompany her.

When they arrived at Linden, she said, the man told them the house was some distance from the railroad and took them to the woods. When in the densest part the man put his arm around the younger woman's waist and picked her up.

This action so astounded the women that they did not even scream. He then placed his hand over the girl's mouth and started into the woods with her. This aroused the girl, and she struggled to get away.

A short distance in the woods the man threw her to the ground, and, with one hand still over her mouth, began to tear her clothing off. The older woman had begun to scream, and this made the man frantic. He desisted in his efforts to disrobe the girl and began to beat her. He alternated between the two acts until the arrival of the men.

TO TURN OUT SILVER DOLLARS.

Orders for an Unlimited Number Sent to the Mints.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 21.—John Daggett, superintendent of the San Francisco mint, has received orders from the secretary of the treasury to coin an unlimited number of silver dollars during the remaining days of July, and during the present money stringency to coin gold currency to the full capacity of the mint. As similar instructions have also been sent to the mint officers at Carson City, New Orleans and Philadelphia, Superintendent Daggett says that fully $3,000,000 will be turned out by September.

Shot at the Primaries.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 21.—During a row at the democratic primaries Policeman King was shot through the breast and fatally wounded and Ed Ryan, a fireman, received a bullet in his jaw. Tom Slattery and Jim Kinnane did the shooting, but it is not known which fired the fatal shots. All the parties except Officer King have been involved in similar affairs before.

Packing House Strike Unchanged.

CHICAGO, July 21.—The strike at the packing houses remains unchanged. President Taylor, of the National Cattle Butchers' union, made a statement to-day, in which he claims that the men are now on strike far a restoration of the wages which the packers cut last February. The big packers are now badly crippled as a result of the strike.

EXPLOSION AT FORT PULASKI.

An Ordnance Sergeant's Carelessness Results Fatally.

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 21.—An explosion of 400 pounds of loose powder at Fort Pulaski, fatally wounded Ordnance Sergeant William Chinn, seriously injured Mary Washington, his mother-in-law, and set fire to the fort, causing intermittent explosions of ammunition and doing much damage to the fort.

Just after breakfast Sergeant Chinn went into the storeroom, where he had his carpenter tools, to do some work. In the room were several casks of powder, in all 400 pounds, and a lot of fixed ammunition. He did as he had been in the habit of doing for some time during the summer months, took a handful of the powder from one of the open casks, wet it at the pump and then placed it in the middle of the room. He ignited it in order to drive out the mosquitos, which had been abundant. It seems that, in carrying the handful of powder from the cask, he had left a trail of dry powder from the middle of the floor right up to the cask. As soon as he had ignited the powder it burned along the trail and the 400 pounds exploded.

There were three large explosions, each within a few seconds of the other, and he was knocked down three times in trying to get out of the door. He managed to get as far as Foreman Austin's quarters, where the medicine chest was kept.

Mary Washington, his mother-in-law, who was approaching the door at the time, was knocked 40 feet and badly burned about the face and arms. The woodwork of the casement in the southwest corner of the fort ignited, and the heavy beams burned slowly and for a long time.

PREPARED TO FIGHT.

Miners at Bens Creek Have Cannons Loaded With Railroad Spikes.

ALTOONA, Pa., July 21.—On the surface affairs are quiet at Bens Creek, but the miners there are nevertheless preparing for a fight. Every person who gets off a train at the station is closely scrutinized and in some cases questioned, and the watch for the landing of deputies is constantly kept up. The miners have 75 guns stacked on the hill near the depot. They are all loaded, and a quantity of ammunition is on the ground ready for use. They also have three cannons made of pipe. These weapons are loaded with railroad spikes.

The miners tested one of the cannons to see whether it would do effective work. The result was very satisfactory. A large hole was torn in the side of the mountain and great pieces of plate were hurled in all directions. One of the miners was knocked down by a piece of flying slate, but soon recovered from the shock.

The cannons and guns are within range of the depot, and the strikers claim they can make it "hot" for 200 or 300 deputies. If the deputies should attempt to force their way up the creek the strikers assert they will be fired on from both sides and that the cars at the head of the slope will be run down on them.

TILLMAN AND BUTLER.

Conducting Lively Campaign Meetings in South Carolina.

CHARLESTON, S. C., July 21.—The features of a campaign meeting at Lexington were the crying down of Cal Caughman, candidate for congress, Butler's endorsement of Vice President Stevenson for president and Tillman's abuse of Cleveland.

During Butler's speech the following occurred:

"We want Tillman for president," from the crowd.

Senator Butler—Upon reflection, you can make him president and send me back to the senate. (Applause and laughter.)

Mr. Thomas Seay, a prominent politician—Do you think we ought to expect any relief from the democratic party, and who is your man for president?

Senator Butler—I think the best man for us is Stevenson. He is in symyathy with us. He favors an enlargement of the currency.

Tillman severely denounced President Cleveland for his letter to Congressman Wilson. He charged that those congressmen that Cleveland did not buy with patronage were bought with money from Wall street.

BARS TITLE TO PENSION.

Important Decision Rendered by Assistant Secretary Reynolds.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Assistant Secretary Reynolds in a decision rendered holds that a soldier of the United States, who was confined as a prisoner of war in a confederate prison, is not excused from enlisting or serving in the confederate army for the mere purpose of escaping the hardships of prison life; that such enlistment is voluntary aiding or abetting the rebellion against the authority of the United States as under section 4,716 revised statutes will bar title to pension. That where an enlistment and service in the confederate army is sought to be palliated or excused on the ground of duress, or that it was not voluntary, or that it was for the purpose of escape to the union lines, the presumption of voluntary aiding or abetting can only be overcome by the most positive, direct and satisfactory evidence and the uncorroborative testimony of a claimant will not be accepted to overcome such presumption.

Disease From Unclean Italians.

CLEVELAND, O., July 21.—A scourge has developed in the Italian settlements in this city that has greatly alarmed the health officials and physicians. The symptoms are not unlike those of smallpox and the doctors cannot agree upon a diagnosis. Some 500 cases have been reported to the health officers. There have been two deaths and many more are expected. The health officer says that the disease is caused by the uncleanliness of the Italians. The filth and squalor in which they live is almost beyond belief.

BALTIMORE, July 21.—Otto Sarsdorf and Fred Campbell, who escaped from the Buffalo, N. Y., jail on April 9, are under arrest here. Sarsdorf waylaid and robbed the paymaster of the Standard Refining company of $1,700. He was captured and put in jail, but he and Campbell escaped on the morning set for his trial. The men were arrested here a week ago on a charge of assault to kill and robbery and were recognized to-day by a Buffalo detective.

THE INDUSTRIAL STATE

No General Revival Is Expected Soon.

Effects of the Recent Disturbances in Railroad Transportation and Other Trade Circles Now Making Themselves Felt—Merchants Buying Only for Actual Wants in Sight.

NEW YORK, July 21.—In the weekly review of the state of trade for the past week Bradstreet says, the disappearance of the great railway strike of 1894, the revival of regular freight schedules, and the customary movement of produce and merchandise by water and rail, have done much to restore something like the preceding volume of trade. The most encouraging statement is merely that general business is only approaching the usual midsummer proportions. The return to work of potters at Trenton and Wheeling, employes at Pullman, tube makers at McKeesport, Pa., a further return of coke operatives in the Connellsvile region and of coal miners in western and southern states, together with nearly all recently striking railway employes, will furnish more industrial employment within a fortnight than at any previous date since April 1.

Larger eastern business centres report a feeling among jobbers and other wholesale houses favorable to a revival in trade as soon as tariff legislation shall have been definitely settled. Dealers west, northwest and southwest at larger distributing centres announce that country merchants are running with very small stocks—that they continue to buy only for actual wants in sight. The effects of the recent widespread disturbances in transportation and industrial circles are now making themselves felt in bank clearings return s the aggregate this week being only $820,000,000, a drop, as compared with the preceding week, of about 3 per cent, and as compared with the third week in July, 1893, of 16 per cent. There are 213 business failures reported in the United States this week, against 220 last week, as compared with 207 in the corresponding week one year ago, when the effects of the financial panic were making themselves severely felt. In the corresponding week of 1892 the total was 179, and in 1891, following the disturbance due to the Baring crisis, the like week's aggregate was 252.

No general revival in industrial lines is reported or expected soon. Shoe factories are running on low-priced goods and at less than full capacity, which exercises an influence on leather. Woolen mills are running on fall fabrics, and will delay exhibiting spring samples until next month. Stocks of brown and bleached cottons are accumulating. Activity is noticeable only among retailers and jobbers of cotton goods. Improved demand for wool within a week is the result of lowest prices on the clip.

The same reports of dullness, no new features, and no prospect of early improvement come from Boston, Providence, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburg and Buffalo. Exceptions are that Baltimore reports a slight increase in southern orders for light fabrics; Pittsburg, that iron and steel are selling 50c. cheaper for future delivery than for spot, and Buffalo that the price of coal is downward.

Southern cities which have felt the effects of the railway blockade report shipments are now making regularly, crop prospects generally favorable, and the feeling in jobbing circles one of improvement. Aside from this no change is reported from Memphis, Nashville, Birmingham, Charleston and Savannah. Atlanta advises that fall trade is opening satisfactorily and manufacturers are busy; Chattanooga that demand has improved, and Augusta that while demand is more active, the crop outlook is less favorable, owing to recent excessive rains.

Among western cities where general trade remains quiet or dull and without material change, except that due to the resumption of railway traffic, are Cleveland, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth. Cincinnati and Louisville report some gain in volume of trade, with a tendency on the part of currency to move in the country. Kansas City jobbers find orders for fall delivery fairly numerous, and at Omaha country merchants are ordering more freely. The total volume of trade at Chicago, notwithstanding resumption of railway traffic, is relatively light, that for groceries being more active; prices of leather are demoralized, and some building projects are temporarily abandoned, owing to labor disturbances.

PULLMAN STRIKERS UGLY.

Trouble Feared if Non-Union Men Are Employed.

KENSINGTON, Ill., July 21.—The determination of the Pullman company to reopen its works and operate them with a force of non-union employes if the old employes refuse to return has aroused the strikers to a white heat temper and both militia and police are looking for trouble before Monday night.

Last evening there was a conference between Col. Turner and Police Lieutenant Bassett and it was decided to keep a close watch on the Burnside and Roseland districts throughout the night.

There were no less than four incipient riots in Pullman and its surroundings during the day. The most threatening occurrence was at 3 o'clock when a big crowd surrounded the fire station where a senatorial primary election was in progress. The militia were compelled to charge bayonets and the mob retreated. One of the most demonstrative of the crowd, a striker named Edward Herzog, was arrested and taken to Burnside.

When the batch of 75 Hollanders that had been working in the car shops quit work they were followed by a crowd of over 200 strikers.

A detail of police from the Seventeenth district under command of Lieut. Bassett followed at a short distance. At Michigan avenue and 117th street near by Roseland, where the Hollanders are quartered, the strikers made a concerted move toward the foreigners. Thereupon the police charged and the strikers fled in all directions. The police then formed a square about the workmen and kept them company to their quarters.

The strikers turned out in force in the primary election and the A. R. U. ticket selecting delegates pledged to W. Roby for state senator was successful by a vote of 244 to 103 for the ticket in the interest of George W. Miller. It was the largest vote ever cast in Pullman.

LUCKY BRITANNIA.

Beats the Vigilant 1 Minute and 50 Seconds at Kingston, Ireland.

KINGSTON, July 21.—It was the same old spectacular story of variable breezes, calms, rain squalls and thunder showers. The Britannia's luck again attended her, and she won by one minute and fifty seconds actual time, and three minutes and seven seconds with her allowance of one minute and ten seconds.

The course was somewhat better, except in the matter of turns, of which there were twelve, than either the Clyde or Belfast Lough courses. Three-quarters of the Dublin Bay course, that of the Royal St. George's Yacht club, is in the open. It is nearly kite-shaped. From a mark-boat at the mouth of the harbor, opposite the breakwater, the first leg extends to the northeast to Roseberg, about three and a half miles; second leg runs seaward five miles, about east southeast, to the Kish lightship; thence southwest to the Muglins; the final leg is from the Muglins home, about two and a half miles. The course was sailed over three times for a prize valued at $400.

CANNOT BE PIERCED

Armor of the Battleship Indiana Invulnerable.

Shells Weighing 850 Pounds Each Fired from 12-Inch Rifles Failed To Penetrate an 18-Inch Plate—The Harveyized Process Firmly Established in All Ordnance Work.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The side armor of the battleship Indiana has demonstrated that it cannot be pierced at close range by one of the most destructive guns in the world and American steel makers using the Harvey process invented by an American and adopted by the United States government have proved their product unsurpassed by that of any other nation. Carpenter shells weighing 850 pounds each fired point blank from the 12-inch rifle have failed to penetrate the 18-inch Bethlehem plate and 600 tons of armor, worth $400,000 have been accepted by the navy department. These are the results of ballistic tests at the Indian Head proving ground. The Harveyized process has been vindicated and its use firmly established in ordnance work of all kinds, the first of the heavy armored battleships which has been so long delayed waiting for its protective belt will now be rapidly completed and the experimental stage of armor testing is passed.

The successful plate was selected at random from the entire lot of 615 tons manufactured for the Indiana. It was 16 feet and 1-2 inch long and stood 7 feet high when resting on edge. From the top edge for about half its height, or 43 inches, its uniform thickness was 18 inches throughout its length. For the remaining 41 inches it tapered off in thickness to 8 inches at its lower edge. Twenty-six 3-inch armor bolts fastened it to a solid backing of 37 1-2 inches of solid oak, which was supported by the natural bluff which bounds the proving grounds. The plate weighed 68,000 pounds, and its centre was exactly 337 feet from the muzzle of the test gun. A cross was chalked on the face of the plate 34 inches from its right edge and 30 inches from the top, and at this the gun was aimed.

A Carpenter shell weighing 850 pounds, from the same lot that scarcely a week ago so easily pierced the Carnegie 17-inch plate, was inserted in the gun. The charge consisted of 249 3-4 pounds of brown hexagonal powder, of which 11 lumps made a pound. The breach of the gun was closed, and, a moment after, with a concussion that shook the earth, the shell, having a striking velocity of 1,465 feet per second, hit the plate exactly as aimed with an energy af 12,666 foot-tons.

Ten minutes later the crucial shot was fired, a similar shell, but driven by 397 1-2 pounds of powder with a striking velocity of 1,926 feet per second and a striking energy of 21,880 foot-tons being used. This was the the heaviest test ever given to armor. It struck 32 inches from the top edge and 50 inches from the other shot, practically in the centre of the plate, but it penetrated scarcely an inch deeper than the first, its point being similarly welded in the plate and its body falling entire at the base of the plate. It had twisted slightly as it struck, however, and the huge block of metal was split vertically across its face. The extent of the fracture and the amount of bulge on the back of the plate cannot be discovered until the wooden backing is removed. But the announcement was made that the plate had passed the ordeal and the armor was accepted.

The Vigilant and Britannia Will Race on Aug. 4.

SOUTHAMPTON, July 21.—The Southampton regatta committee have communicated with the Prince of Wales and Mr. George Gould asking them to change the date of the special match race between the Britannia and Vigilant, which is fixed to be sailed in the Solent on Aug. 4. This request was made with a view of entering both boats in the chief race of the Southampton regatta, which will take place on the same date of the match race.

Sir Francis Knollys has replied that the Prince of Wales regrets that the present arrangement in regard to the match can not be altered.

DOLGEVILLE, N. Y., July 21.—The latest advices from all points between New York and Buffalo indicate that the crowd of visitors who will attend the great Turnfest in Dolgeville next week, beginning on Wednesday and lasting until Sunday, will be much larger than was at first expected. NEW EVIDENCE

Of Dr. Lighthill's Success.

A Flattering Testimonial From Col. John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

DEAR SIR—Accompanying this letter you will receive circulars of the Christian Conference to be held at Northfield, August 1-13. In addition to the information there given, will you please make it known that the Conference will probably practically continue through the entire month by daily Bible readings and evening meetings conducted by Mr. Meyer and other speakers, with Mr. Sankey and Mr. Stebbins in charge of the singing.

Now I want to get as many young men as possible to come here through the month and get a lift for Christian work. Can you not form a club among the members of your Association, and buy or hire a tent, and send up parties of young men, for five days at a time, to camp out, and combine recreation with the instruction and spiritual quickening?

We have splendid camps for camping, on the hills among the trees, or upon the banks of the Connecticut, and with tent and cots provided by the club, a camping party doing its own cooking, could live for 25 cents each a day. Should a camping shanty be preferred, boards could be purchased and if a carpenter is sent to do the work, a shed could be erected for from $20 to $50.

What I would like is, that your Association should have a tent or shanty here, and make this a camping out place for your young men. Can you not bring this about? I shall be at Northfield through August and shall have other good men besides Mr. Meyer to help me.

Our new Auditorium is one of the finest halls in New England, and will give ample accommodations for hearing, in one of the coolest possible situations anywhere to be found.

I believe that if you get some of your men men here they will return to you quickened and eager for the work you want them to do.

Yours very truly,
D. L. MOODY.

Those who do not wish to camp can obtain accommodations at the Seminary buildings during the time of the meetings for $1.50 a day.

The Betsey Moody cottage will be open as last year, for the convenience of any who may desire more quiet and retirement than is possible in the larger buildings. The rates there will be $2.50 per day for room alone, or $2 per day in the room with another person. The Northfield, a beautiful quiet hotel, also furnishes first-class board.

Among the speakers will be: Dr. A. J. Gordon of Boston; Dr. A. T. Pierson of Philadelphia; Rev. F. B. Meyer of London; Dr. David Drake and Dr. A. C. Dixon of Brooklyn; Major D. W. Whittle and Rev. George C. Needham of Northfield; Prof. W. W. White and Rev. R. A. Torrey of Chicago Bible Institute. The service of song will be conducted by Ira D. Sankey and George C. Stebbins.

After the Strike.

Fred Endress, the proprietor of the Excelsior meat market, 203 Liberty street, advertises in this issue a general reduction in the price of meat, the re-action having set in after the strike. A specialty of the market is the quality of the Jersey lamb, mutton, chicken and pork products that Mr. Endress deals in. The excellence and the low prices of steaks are other attractions at the popular establishment.

A Pretty Variation.

At Tufts college class day this year the girl students marched in the procession for the first time. It was only the freshman class whose ranks were thus varied. The Boston Herald says, "A very pretty variation they were, too, and a much more unfamiliar one than they will be in the future."

Mrs. Palmer's Appointment.

Mrs. Fanny Purdy Palmer of Providence has been appointed state factory inspector under the new law by Governor Brown. She will hold the office for three years, with a salary of $1,500 a year. Mrs. Palmer is a woman of broad culture and a writer of ability.

Miss Margaret Foley is still overseer of the stone yard in New Brunswick, where she was engaged last year. The yard is owned by Mr. Nelson, city treasurer, who is reported as saying that his overseer has all the common sense, physical endurance and force of character of the best men.

Mrs. Grace M. Kimball of Oakland, Cal., has recently been granted an important patent for a "sash fastener" which holds the window securely when it is either open or closed. It is described as an ingenious, simple and effective device.

An English woman writes in one of their journals: "The mannish woman is peculiar to England. An American woman does pretty nearly everything a man does, but she doesn't do it in a mannish way."

Buckles are now seen on almost every costume. Twisted ones of sterling silver and gold rope are among the latest designs and are worn at either the throat or belt.

Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, the only daughter of the late woman suffrage advocate, Lucy Stone, has taken up her deceased mother's life work.

A Moral.

There was a man in a faraway town
Who thought him wondrous wise,
He swore by all the fabled gods
He'd never advertise.

His goods were advertised at last,
And thereby hangs a tale.
The ad was set in nonpareil
And headed "Sheriff's Sale."

A Light Is Needed There.

The electric lamp which is suppose to light its share of East Front street from the pole in front of A. J. Gavett's store has not been in operation for the past three nights.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 22. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Christ's lowliness our example.—Isa. liii, 1-12.

The lowliness or humility of the Lord Jesus Christ is apparent throughout all His life. In this wonderful description of the sufferings and death of Christ, hundreds of years before they occurred, this characteristic is strikingly set forth. He took upon Himself the form of lowliness. He might have come to earth in royal splendor had He desired, but He did did come just the opposite of this. "He hath no form nor comeliness, and when we shall see Him there is no beauty that we should desire Him." He also took upon Himself the spirit of lowliness. He was despised and rejected of men. He was oppressed and afflicted, yet he opened not His mouth. He might have resented the insults of His enemies, but He did not. He was as silent amid the sneers of men as the sheep is dumb before the shearer.

He also exemplified the practice of lowliness and humility. He washed the feet of His disciples that He might teach them lessons of lowly mindedness and that the master is not greater than the servant. This exemplification of humility is heightened by the character of Christ. He was divine. He was the Son of God. He was conscious of His equality with, for, "being in the form of God, he thought it not robbery to be equal with God," and yet in the face of this exalted character he "made Himself of no reputation and took upon Him the form of a servant, and being found in the fashion of man He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross."

We cannot but admire this sublime humility on the part of God's son, and this admiration should lead us to imitate it. In speaking of this lowly mindedness of Christ Paul says, "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." Christ's character should be our model in every respect, but particularly so in this respect. Humility is the essence of Christianity. It guards us against pride and vainglory. It leads us to respect the rights and feelings of others. It inspires us with a willingness to make sacrifices for others, as Christ sacrificed Himself for us. Let us cultivate this spirit of humility. It is a grace of the Spirit. It is pleasing to God, and He makes many promises to its possessor. "He forgets not the cry of the humble." It leads to our exaltation. "He that is least shall be the greatest."

The Most Blessed Work.

He who works on material things leaves results that will perish. The noblest buildings crumble. The finest pictures the artist puts on canvas fade out. Nothing done in matter is immortal, for matter is perishable. But he who works on the unseen, the spiritual, leaves impressions that shall endure forever. The touch of beauty you put upon a life yesterday by the earnest word you spoke, by the new impulse you started in the heart of your friend, by the vision of heavenly purity you gave in your own life to one who was with you, will be bright when sun and stars shall have burned out to blackness. What we do on immortal lives is immortal work. Then of all work on human lives the saving of souls is the most blessed. He who adds the least touch of beauty to a saved life does more than he who paints a masterpiece, but he who brings a lost soul to the Saviour, who seeks and finds a wandering sheep and bears it back to the fold, does the noblest, greatest work possible on this earth.—J. R. Miller.

God Cares For Us.

Christ is the divine proof to us that God cares for us, not as a race, but as individuals. God has always cared. It was because He cared that He sent Christ on His mission of reconciliation, and it is our undoubted privilege to come to Him freely with all our wants and woes in gladness as well as sorrow of heart, with the fullest confidence that, as He Himself has suffered being tempted, He is able to succor them that are tempted, and that He is well pleased to have us express our thanks to Him and cast our burdens upon Him.—New York Independent.

Knowledge.

Know and you will feel. Know and you will pray. Know and you will help.—Dean Vaughn.

A Hundred Years From Now.

The surging sea of human life
Forever onward rolls
And bears to the eternal shore
Its daily freight of souls.
Though bravely sails our bark today,
Pale death sits at the prow,
And few shall know we ever lived
A hundred years from now.

Why should we try so earnestly
In life's short, narrow span,
On golden stairs to climb so high
Above our brother man?
Why blindly at an earthly shrine
In slavish homage bow?
Our gold will rust, ourselves be dust,
A hundred years from now.

O patient hearts, that meekly bear
Your weary load of wrong!
O earnest hearts, that bravely dare,
And striving grow more strong!
Press on till perfect peace is won.
You'll never dream of how
You struggled o'er life's thorny road
A hundred years from now.

Earth's empires rise and fall, O Time,
Like breakers on thy shore!
They rush upon thy rocks of doom,
Go down and are no more.
The starry wilderness of worlds
That gem night's radiant brow
Will light the skies for other eyes
A hundred years from now.

Our Father, to whose sleeping eyes
The past and future stand
An open page, like babes we cling
To thy protecting hand.
Change, sorrow, death, are naught to us
If we may safely bow
Beneath the shadow of thy throne
A hundred years from now.

Charles Johnson has engaged Miss Minnie VanMiddlesworth of the borough to look after the interests of his business at his store, as he is away much of the time.

George Taylor will enjoy a week's vacation next week. He intends taking his team of trotters and driving through Warren and Morris Counties, visiting friends on the way.

Mr. and Mrs. Keefe of Bound Brook made two complaints before Justice Huff Thursday, against Thomas Corrigan for alleged assault. The justice placed him under $200 bonds to stand trial.

"The Strife between Capital and Labor. Shall the Church take a Part in the Conflict", will be the topic tomorrow evening of the third sermon in the series being given each Sunday evening by Rev. W. C. Kinney, pastor of the Methodist Church. Commencing at 7:45 a 15-minute song-service will precede the discourse.

While Daniel Kneutter and several other boys, among them Thomas Lynch, were bathing in Greenbrook yesterday, Lynch became rather pugilistic and assaulted Kneutter. The latter was given such a pounding that he at once went to Justice Huff and had a warrant issued for the arrest of Lynch. Constable George Huff served it and Lynch was placed under bonds to appear for trial in New Brunswick.

Scotch Plains and Fanwood.

Arthur Chapman of Mountain avenue is quite ill.

Baker & Meade are now delivering groceries with a new wagon.

Otto Brandt and family of Newark are boarding at the home of Henry Cook on Westfield avenue.

The Elizabeth Wheelmen made Scotch Plains the turning point of a club run Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Lowe is still quite ill at her residence in Norwalk, Conn. Her infant child is also unwell.

The Junior League of the Methodist Church holds devotional meetings in the church every Friday afternoon.

A. D. Beacon and family of Park avenue have gone to the Adirondacks to remain during the rest of the Summer season.

The Baptists, the Methodists and the Episcopalians will all go to Asbury Park with the Westfield churches, Wednesday, August 1.

Vincent J. Steer, the proprietor of the old Lilsley Hotel, now has a large St. Bernard dog, which is the delight of all the children about the Plains.

Haying has been finished by most of the farmers, and they are now turning their attention to the harvesting of oats. All crops have turned out well this year.

Dr. F. W. Westcott and his bride return from their wedding tour this evening. Dr. Harrison of Westfield has been attending to Dr. Westcott's patients during his absence.

Through Thomas Paff's agency Groceryman James A. Baker has rented his cottage on Westfield avenue to G. W. Smithers of Netherwood who now occupies the dwelling with his family.

John Badin has given up his position as clerk in the store of Baker & Meade and returned to his old trade of carpenter, working at present with his father, Philip Badin. Frank Hollingsworth is filling his place in the store temporarily.

John Cook has finished the rebuilding of his stone-crusher on the mountain-side that fell last week. The plant was not considered safe by residents of the neighborhood, and its collapse had been expected for years. It finally fell at 6 in the morning, an Italian who was backing his team towards it narrowly escaping death.

The gypsies broke up their camp and went to Berkley Heights yesterday. During their extended stay in the vicinity they have conducted a large traffic in horses. Several of the farmers think they have made good bargains with them. Stage-driver William E. Collins is among those who have recently made trades. Then Stage-driver Jacob Kline tried his hand with a team of mules, but was unable to agree on terms.

The Twilight Athletic Association of Scotch Plains have completed the grading of their grounds just out of the village on the Westfield road. The work has been done by Fred. Clark. The diamond has been laid out, and all is in excellent shape. The first ball game on the completed grounds is on this afternoon with the Oritani nine of Plainfield. Next Saturday the Twilights will play here with the Garwood team that they defeated in Westfield last Saturday, 12 to 11.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Two young women rode from Elizabeth and lunched in McVey's restaurant this afternoon. They wore short divided skirts.

Monte Scott now holds the record for the Crescent Wheelmen's track. He made the time 2:12 3-4, flying start, yesterday afternoon.

A subject for discussion among the members of the Crescent Wheelmen is the failure of committeemen to receive notices of meetings.

Besides running down to Asbury Park yesterday, Tunis J. Carey and Fred Bird made the return trip on their wheels, an unusual achievement for pleasure seekers who go to the Park on warm days.

Plainfield is ahead of New York in the possession of a bicycle track. The question is being agitated in the metropolis of having built a track with proper banking at the turns, there being none of the approved pattern in the city.

With the union excursion last evening Miss Florence Petrie and her brothers, John and Edward Petrie, returned from Asbury Park. They went down in the morning on their wheels, and made the trip in good time in spite of the fact that Miss Petrie has not had much practice in cycling this Summer.

The officials of the Crescents deny the report in an Elizabeth paper that they have applied to the L. A. W. for admission as a club. The matter has been frequently discussed by them, but while they are all greatly in favor of joining, they do not think it advisable to ask at present for the expenditure that the admission of the club with its 135 members would necessitate.

FROM STORE TO DWELLING.

Netherwood's New Postmaster Will Move the Office Monday.

Charles J. Noel announces that next Monday he will take possession of the Netherwood post-office, transferring it from the store of James Guttridge, near the station, to his home, 229 Netherwood avenue. The new location is about half-way between the railroad and East Front street.

While the change is made necessary by the refusal of Mr. Guttridge to let the post-office remain where it is, it is certain that if the new official continues to keep the office in his house the free delivery agitation in Netherwood will undoubtedly lead to the abolishing of Mr. Noel's position.

Might Have Killed Many.

The excursion train of 16 cars, returning from Asbury Park, stopped at the North Avenue station just before the 7:41 Blue Line from Washington was due. The express had no passengers for Plainfield, and as the engineer did not know that the special was a passenger train, he did not slow up but passed through instead at full speed. He saw the people leaving the train in time to give one wild shriek of the whistle. It was fortunate that the express was on the track opposite the station, where but few people were standing.

Vacation for the Chief.

Chief Marshal William N. Pangborn has a vacation at last. He has had but six days of freedom from duty since he began as marshal two and one half years ago. He spent that time on a trip to Washington in 1892. The Chief is very grateful to Councilman Lounsbury of the police committee for giving him this opportunity to recuperate and enjoy himself. Special Marshal J. W. VanHorne will act as chief marshal during Pangborn's absence.

The African's Achievements.

Rev. Royal H. Brown will lecture in the Emmanuel Baptist Church on Fillmore avenue Thursday evening, August 2, on "The African and his achievements from the time of the repopulation of the world, and his loyalty and trueness to the white man, 272 years in America". The proceeds will be expended in reducing the amounts of indebtedness on the new church building.

In Private Practice.

Such strong proofs of the marvelous cures made by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy have been brought to public notice lately, through the various newspaper investigations, that it has become now the standard medicine for the diseases for which it is prepared.

Dr. G. H. Ingraham, of Amsterdam, N. Y., states, where the regular prescriptions used in a case of kidney disease and gravel utterly failed, he prescribed Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and it cured the patient.

Dr. Wm. Smith, of Jewett's Heights, N. Y., prescribed Favorite Remedy for Mrs. Casper Brooks of Athens, N. Y., who was suffering from kidney disease, ulceration of the stomach, complicated with sickness peculiar to her sex; after the second day steady improvement was noted, and final permanent recovery.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy acts directly upon the kidneys, liver and blood in cases of nervousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism and Bright's disease; it has made most pronounced cures after all other treatments have failed. Druggists sell it.

PLEASURES AT THE GAP.

How the Guests Enjoy Themselves, Out of Doors and in the Parlors.

WATER GAP HOUSE,
DELAWARE WATER GAP, PA.,
July 20, 1894

The throng is large and merry at this delightful resort. Boating, fishing, driving and mountain climbing are varied with games and dances. A charming hop took place in the large parlors last night. The young people were out in force, and the rich gowns and animated faces proclaimed that the Gap House is blessed with some of America's handsomest and most vivacious young women.

The little people find this a splendid region for health-giving pleasures. There are many of them, all well bred and interesting. Little Zelma Schurr, the pride of the household of Albert Schurr, the well-known Newark chemist, had a gay party in honor of her second birthday anniversary, today. She is a merry little girl, and all love to hear her lisp in baby accents.

Little J. Lynn Truscott is the horseman of the juveniles. He is only four years old, but is a born equestrian, and manages the fiery steed with great skill and self-possession.

The life of the young people's set is Miss Perry of Philadelphia, a handsome and cultured Philadelphia belle. She dresses in exquisite taste, and is a graceful leader of the dance.

Among the Plainfield neighbors recently visiting here are Charles S. Edgar and wife of Metuchen, who reveled in Nature's glories by a carriage drive through this region.

CLARKE.

THE SECRET ORDERS.

Miantonomoh Tribe, Red Men obligated three members in the hunters and warriors degrees at their meeting last evening.

Rudolph Spiegel of the Crescent Hotel was initiated into the first rank at the meeting of Perseverance Lodge held last evening.

Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., will install their officers-elect Monday evening at which time the grand officers will be present. A banquet will follow.

Henry Liefke, William A. Woodruff, and B. A. Meeker, of Columbia Lodge, No. 58, A. O. U. W., paid a fraternal visit to Bayonne Lodge, No. 9, A. O. U. W., in Bayonne City, last evening, the occasion being a visit from Grand Master W. E. Haverstick, of Rahway, and a number of his staff. The initiation of the one hundredth member of the Bayonne Lodge was witnessed with great pleasure. An elaborate collation was served and all had a very enjoyable time.

From the first number of The American Eagle, the semi-monthly organ of the State J. O. U. A. M., published by the American Eagle Publishing Company, under the management of Gilbert S. Martin, of the borough, which has just been issued through the Plainfield postoffice, it will be seen that it is a journal eminently worthy of the support of the enterprising order. It is an eight-page sheet, well printed and arranged; and contains, besides items of interest from the lodges of the State, and the work at large, a complete account of the National Council session held in Asheville, N. C.

For the third time Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., is preparing to send a creditable delegation of Plainfielders to Asbury Park to participate in and witness the order's celebration of American Day, August 16. The parade and the memorial meeting of the members of the order whose statement of principles is full of patriotic sentiment will be well worth going to, and with the added attractions of the sea-shore to aid, the Council is confident that their excursion will be a monster affair. The special train will begin to pick up passengers from Dunellen. It will leave the North Avenue station at 7:45. The start on the return trip will not be made until 9:30 in the evening.

Zimmy Resumes.

Zimmerman has resumed his old form again and walked away from the champion English cyclist. All athletes, it is conceded, have their good and bad intervals; in this respect they differ greatly from Collier's array of jeweler's novelties. These are always in the van and never disappoint those who put their money on them.

Are Natives of Alaska Indians?

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The secretary of the interior has rendered an opinion defining the status of certain Alaska Indians. The secretary quotes the report of the superintendent of the eleventh census relating to Alaska, wherein it says that there is room for doubt as to whether the natives of Alaska may properly be designated as Indians, and arrives at the conclusion that Alaska is not an Indian country within the meaning of the law, and, therefore, what are generally known as the aborigines are not Indians.

Immigrant Fund.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Superintendent Stump has instructed Commissioner Senner, at New York, to examine on shipboard immigrants of those lines which decline to pay for the maintenance of immigrants while undergoing examination at Ellis Island, New York harbor. The immigrant fund, he says, should not be charged with any expenses not necessarily incurred in the inspection and examination of passengers on board ship.

A Large Order for Blooms.

PITTSBURG, July 21.—The Carnegie Steel company has received an order for 10,000 tons of blooms from the Johnson company at Johnstown, controlled by Tom Johnson, the Cleveland representative in congress, to be turned out at the Edgar Thomson Steel works at Braddock.

Gladstone's Eye Better.

LONDON, July 21.—Drs. Nettleship and Haberden examined Mr. Gladstone's eye, which was operated on several weeks ago and found the vision fairly good. A film which has formed on the pupil will necessitate a slight operation, as is frequent in cases of cataract.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

CHURCH CHIMES.

The first section of the special train for the excursion of the First Baptist Sunday-school next Wednesday will not leave Asbury Park until 6 in the evening.

The union excursion of yesterday to Asbury Park passed off without the occurrence of any annoying incident. The sea breezes were comfortably cool in the afternoon although the morning air was hot. The water was not very warm.

The three-days fair in Emmanuel Baptist Church ended last evening. It was a very pleasant and profitable affair and the workers in the new church are much encouraged. A short progoamme given last evening was greatly appreciated by the audience. One of the best features was the reciting of a number of young women, each of whom represented a different State.

Off to West Point.

About 175 society people left the North Avenue station this morning, bound for West Point on the excursion arranged by John M. Whiton. They went in four special cars attached to the 8:15 train. They will return late this evening, after spending the afternoon about the famous fort and town on the Hudson.

SENATE UP IN ARMS

A Lively Fight Over the Tariff Bill Begun.

The President Praised and Denounced—The Speeches of Senators Hill and Vest Cause Great Excitement—Mr. Smith Favors Further Conference.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The senate yesterday was the theatre of a great oratorical display, which was witnessed and enjoyed by an immense audience composed of senators, members of the lower house, and spectators in the galleries. The occasion was the presentation of the message from the house asking a further conference on the tariff bill. The speech of Mr. Voorhees (dem., Ind.), chairman of the senate conferees, was a model of brevity. "Mr. President," he said, "the conferees on the part of the senate now await further action on this bill."

After saying these words he took his seat and had no further part in the day's proceedings except in a slight controversy with Mr. Hill. Then Mr. Smith (dem., N. J.,) made a speech of nearly an hour's duration, favoring further conference, and admitting that the country was confronted by the danger of no tariff legislation at this session. He favored saying to the house conferees: "Such as the bill is, there it lies; you're at liberty to take it or leave it." He was followed by Mr. Hill (dem., N. Y.), who prefaced a long speech with a motion that the senate recede from its amendments placing coal and iron ore on the dutiable list. He gave a partial approval to the president's letter and declared that democratic senators would have to rally around the president or else they would go to the wall, while the president would come to the front, and he added that this was the time to yield before further humiliation, further embarrassment and further discord. There was great excitement during the delivery of Mr. Hill's speech; but there was still more when Mr. Vest, in a fervid and impassioned burst of oratory defended the course of democratic senators against the intimation in the president's letter. A motion was made by Mr. Vilas (dem., Wis.) to recede from the differential duty of one-eighth of a cent on sugar; and this motion provoked a long discussion, participated in by Senators Vilas, Sherman and Palmer, in support of the motion, and by the two Louisiana senators—Caffrey and Blanchard—against it. No vote was taken on any of the propositions, and the senate at 5:30 adjourned till Monday next.

House of Representatives.

Very different from that of Thursday was the scene in the house. The galleries contained only such persons as could not gain admission to the senate, while on the floor, at least until near the hour of recess, there were scarcely sufficient members to do business, certainly not enough to impede its transaction. The committee on judiciary was entitled to the morning hour, and, virtually without objection, the eight bills called up by Chairman Culberson were all passed. One of them was Representative W. A. Stone's bill providing for consular inspection of immigrants coming to the United States at the point of departure, and the bill to prevent interference by United States courts with the collection of state taxes levied against railroad corporations, notwithstanding they are being operated by receivers appointed by United States courts.

Conference was ordered on the disagreeing votes of the two houses on the amendments to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill.

While all but a handful of representatives were listening to the proceedings in the senate the Tucker joint resolution providing for the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people was discussed for three hours.

Without action on the result, the house at 5:20 o'clock took a recess until 8 o'clock for the consideration of private pension bills.

Laying of Cables Anniversary.

LONDON, July 21.—The 25th anniversary of the laying of the Eastern submarine cables was celebrated last evening at the Imperial institute. Sir John Pender, who is at the head of the Eastern, the Eastern Extension, the Cape and other cable systems presided. The Prince of Wales telegraphed congratulations. Several colonial governors, a crowd of scientific men, many military and naval officers and a host of noblemen and society leaders were present. United States Ambassador Bayard spoke on "Submarine Telegraphy in Its International Aspects."

Tarsney Refuses To Testify.

DENVER, July 21.—Adjt.-Gen. Tarsney has written a caustic letter to Judge Campbell, of Colorado Springs, refusing to testify before the grand jury in regard to the tarring and feathering which he received in that city. He denounces the assistant district-attorney, the sheriff and the foreman of the grand jury, declaring that if they really wanted to discover and punish the perpetrators of the outrage the jury would not have delayed the investigation a month.

Armor Frauds Investigation.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The house naval affairs committee will resume its investigation of the alleged armor frauds on Wednesday next. Mr. Hunsicker, superintendent of the armor plate department of the Carnegie works, will be examined and General Superintendent Frick will also be called.

HEALTH AND HAPPINESS
come to you if you're a suffering woman. The manager in this case is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It's a tonic and nervine, a remedy prescribed by an eminent physician and specialist for all the peculiar ills and ailments of women.

MISS MEEKER.

My daughter, Miss MEEKER, was sick and was called in one of the best doctors here. She got so weak that I had to lay out of bed and draw her in a chair. She then tried some of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. In less than a week she was out of bed and has been working about five weeks now, and looks the picture of health. As for myself I am much better of my female complaint. Before taking the "Favorite Prescription," I suffered most of the time from catarrhal inflammation. Yours respectfully,
Mrs. NANCY MEEKER,
Dunraven, Delaware Co., N. Y.

PIERCE Guaranteed CURE.

It's Right Against Common Sense

to suppose that an imitation offers the customer any guarantee like the original does. Take Cottolene for example, FAIRBANK & Co. discovered it, perfected it, and spent thousands in making its merits known. It is plainly to their interest to make and keep it what it is to-day—the most popular shortening in the world.

But when you come

To accept any Counterfeits for Cottolene

these guarantees all disappear, and the housekeeper is at the mercy of an imitator who deals on others' reputation and who profits only by others' loss.

To ensure having good cooking and healthful food stick right to COTTOLENE and let all imitations severely alone.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.

Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make Is True.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

DR. STARKWEATHER.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays 4 to 6 p. m.

Those living at a distance can consult the Doctor by letter.

The crew was rescued from the rigging by life savers.

Catholic Summer School.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., July 23.—The second week of the Catholic Summer school opened most auspiciously. A solemn pontifical mass was celebrated in the morning by Bishop Michaud, of Burlington, Vt. Father Elliott, of the Paulist order, preached a powerful sermon, urging missionary work among non-Catholics. The sermon was well received. Among the prominent visitors present were the Right Rev. Monsignor Farley, and the Hon. M. Gorman. Every train and boat brings more students, and the hotels and boarding houses are crowded.

Sherry Wine Industry Threatened.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—The Phylloxera plague has appeared in the sherry wine district of Spain, and the United States consul at Cadiz in making the announcement to the state department says some of the principal vineyard proprietors are discussing the advisability of importing American stocks upon which to graft native vines in case the ravages of the parasite should destroy the vines. This remedy was successfully applied at Bordeaux. The sherry wine industry is said to be seriously threatened.

Judge Seeds also issued an order approving the actions of the receivers of the Santa Fe road in discharging striking employes and in filling their places with new men.

TARIFF IN MORE PERIL

Democratic Senators Hopelessly Divided.

Danger To-Day of a Move To Postpone Consideration of the Bill—History of Importance to the Whole Country Expected To Be Made by To-Morrow Night.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—All interest in congress the coming week centres about the senate where the fate of the tariff bill may be decided by the vote to be taken on the conference report which is now before that body for action. By to-morrow night history of importance to the whole country will probably have been made, and events, fraught with great results to the democratic party, will have transpired.

There was nothing in the shape of a caucus yesterday, although senators charged with responsibility in connection with the tariff bill called upon their colleagues and endeavored to get some light upon the situation.

Tariff Bill Doomed.

A prominent democratic leader, chairman of one of the most important senate committees, and who does not belong to the so-called conservatives, told a United Press reporter this morning that unless something altogether unexpected happened before another day—something to which no one looks forward—all hope of tariff legislation at this session of congress would be doomed to disappointment.

This view comes from a senator honest and earnest in his efforts to secure a bill of some sort, and was candidly expressed only after a consultation he had last evening with some of the members of the senate finance committee.

Say There is Nothing To Discuss.

There will be no caucus to discuss the situation and it is known that thus far the dissatisfied elements, the men who insisted that the compromise bill should be passed or none, have kept clear of their colleagues and have declined to talk the situation over. They stand as firmly as ever where they have always stood, and declare that there is nothing to discuss; it must be the senate bill or nothing.

The managers of the bill on the part of the senate realize this, and as one of them said this morning, "What can we do? There is nothing to compromise; we went to the extreme of compromise when the bill was in committee, and there is nothing further that we can yield except immaterial matters. The house asks us to do something that is impossible, and the president, who knew beforehand what we were compelled to do, has turned and placed the responsibility upon the shoulders of the senate."

The Conference Report.

When the conference report comes before the senate again to-day it will be with four motions bearing upon its disposal pending. Of these the first made were the two of Mr. Hill to instruct the conferees to recede from the senate amendment placing coal and iron ore on the dutiable list. Then came Mr. Vilas' motion that the senate recede from the one-eighth of a cent differential duty which it had placed on refined sugar, and, fourth, Mr. Gray's motion that the senate insist upon its amendments and agree to the request of the house for a further conference.

There is thought to be no doubt that the occupant of the chair to-day will rule Mr. Vilas' motion out of order, as it contemplates an amendment to a senate amendment which is now in conference and out of the power of the senate to amend at this time.

Vilas' Motion May Prevail.

A motion to recede from the sugar amendment in its entirety would be in order, but it is at least doubtful if that would prevail. If Mr. Vilas can secure a vote upon his motion it is believed it will prevail. Mr. Vilas and Mr. Palmer announced in their remarks Friday that they would support it. So will Mr. Hill and Mr. Mills. Mr. Coke and Mr. Irby and possibly Mr. Berry would also vote that way, and these votes, with the republicans, would give a majority.

If, as is expected to happen, Mr. Vilas' motion should be ruled out on a point of order, it is said by parliamentarians that he can accomplish the same result in another manner—by moving that the senate instruct its conferees to recede from that part of the senate amendment which provides for a differential duty on refined sugar.

Mr. Hill's motion to instruct the conferees to recede from the amendment putting coal and iron ore on the dutiable list is in order, and Mr. Gray's providing that the senate insist upon all its amendments is also in order and would be gladly voted upon by the senate. There is another degree appertaining to this motion, but it can hardly be brought forward until another disagreeing report has been made. When one body of congress "insists" it is not taken as a finality, but a motion to "adhere" is looked upon as an ultimatum.

What the Democrats Fear.

After all, however, it is none of these motions that managers of the bill most fear. According to democratic information, before Mr. Vilas gets a chance to put his motion striking at refined sugar, or if he does make it, before the motion can be voted down, one of higher parliamentary standing will be made.

It will be a motion that consideration of the message from the house asking a further conference be indefinitely postponed. This motion the managers of the bill were warned this morning might be made early in the day, and they have some reason to apprehend that it may secure five democratic votes. Of course, the republicans would vote solidly for it. A motion of this kind was about to be made Friday, when Mr. Cockrell hurriedly moved to adjourn over until Monday in the hope that a cessation of the debate for a day or two might improve the situation.

It Would Mean Defeat.

Should the motion to indefinitely postpone the conference report prevail, the tariff bill will be defeated so far as the senate is concerned, for it would be a refusal on the part of the senate to agree to a further conference.

Mr. Gorman, Mr. Mills and Mr. Brice are expected to speak to-day. Mr. Gorman will reply to some of the statements made by the president in his letter, and it is said will claim that Mr. Cleveland knew before the public did what concessions the senate committee had to make. Mr. Gorman will also, it is said, quote from Mr. Carlisle's interview about the time the Jones' amendments were prepared and use this as going to show that the administration knew the difficulties in the pathway of the senate, and gave the committee its support in its arduous task.

PARIS CYCLE RACES.

Zimmerman's Performance the Finest Ever Seen in the French Capital.

PARIS, July 23.—The contest for the Baden prize was the principal event in the bicycle tournament at the Velodrome de la Seine. A. A. Zimmerman led throughout the first heat of 2,000 metres and won it without an effort. He won the final heat of 1,000 metres with equal ease and carried off the prize. Harry Wheeler was second, Medinger third.

In the one-mile handicap Zimmerman rode from the scratch. Harry Wheeler, Barden, Jacquelin and others had 30 metres start. It was a big field, but Zimmerman overtook all in the first lap, riding at a pace which brought round round after of applause and cheers from the spectators. He finished five lengths ahead of Jacquelin, who was second. Mercier, who had 90 metres start, was third. Zimmerman's performance was one of the finest pieces of riding ever seen in this city.

BEGGING FOR A THRONE.

Prince Ferdinand's Sickening Exhibitions Before the Czar.

BERLIN, July 23.—Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria is still at Kharlsbad. The last instalment of his interviews, as given to the editor of the Novoe Wremja, shows him prostrate before the Czar.

"All Bulgarians love Russia," he said. "To me the Czar is the sacred redeemer of my country. If Russia recognizes me, I shall accept the gracious act with bowed head."

Not content with this nauseating exhibition, the Coburger has reviled incessantly his old premier, Stambuloff, but for whose aid he would have tumbled long ago from his shaky pedestal in Sofia.

The St. Petersburg journals agree that Ferdinand's bids for recognition and a crown can do him no good, as Russia would be satisfied with nothing short of absolute control of Bulgaria.

SHERIFF EXPECTS TROUBLE.

Effort To Be Made To Resume Work at Glen Campbell Coal Mines.

INDIANA, Pa., July 23.—The eight workings of the Berwind-White Coal company, at Glen Campbell, this county, will resume operations to-day.

Sheriff Mack has thirty deputies armed with Winchesters on the ground.

There are about 800 miners in the town, a number of whom are willing to go to work, but the larger portion of them are in an ugly mood and threaten those who attempt to work.

The sheriff anticipates trouble when the attempt to open the mines is made. His deputies have orders if they have to use their guns to shoot to kill.

ALBANY PRINTER KILLED.

Fell from a Bridge While Trying To Assist a Little Girl.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 23.—Thomas McCloskey, a well-known printer, while trying to assist a little girl to recover her pocketbook lost his balance and fell from the Greenbush bridge yesterday afternoon.

His head struck the projecting stones of the pier. His skull was crushed and when his body was recovered from the water a few minutes latert, life was extinct.

NEW SOUND RECORD.

City of Lowell Steams from New York to New London in Six Hours.

NORWICH, Conn., July 23.—The new steel steamer City of Lowell made her trip from New York to New London Saturday night in just six hours.

This is the fastest time ever made between these two ports. The Boston has held the record of 6 hours and 5 minutes for thirty years.

Killed by Lightning.

BEDFORD, Pa., July 23.—The barn of J. B. Graybill in Woodbury township, was struck by lightning Saturday evening and burned. Thomas Noel and William Barkman who were in the barn were killed by the lighting and their bodies cremated. Another man, name unknown, was also seriously stunned and badly burned.

Cholera at Adrianople.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 23.—Four cases of cholera and three deaths have been reported in Adrianople. An order has been issued against trains stopping within ten miles of the city. A five days' quarantine has been declared against all vessels arriving here from European ports.

Effort To Settle Mine Trouble.

PHILIPSBURG, Pa., July 23.—At a meeting of miners in Houtzdale yesterday afternoon, a committee of the Berwind-White coal mining company's employes was selected to go to Philadelphia to-day and try to effect a settlement, if possible, with that company. They were instructed not to accept less than 45 cents a ton, the Altoona scale.

Mine Troubles Settled.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., July 23.—A compromise of 68 cents per ton was made at Leetonia by a committees of coal miners and operators representing the New Lisbon, Washington, Leetonia and East Palestine districts.

SALVATION ARMY LOVE FEAST.

Commander and Mrs. Booth To Visit Prohibition Park Next Sunday.

PORT RICHMOND, S. I., July 23.—A grand Salvation Army love feast and experience meeting was held at National Prohibition park yesterday afternoon, conducted by the officers of the New York central staff. Brigadier Evans, who was promoted from a majorship by General Booth two weeks ago, was given an ovation by the fifteen hundred persons in the audience when he arose to open the exercises.

The crowning event of the day was an announcement made by Adjutant Hunter to the effect that next Sunday afternoon and evening commander and Mrs. Ballington Booth, who recently returned from England, would be present and address the meetings. Mrs. Booth will also dedicate to the army the five-months' old child of Adjutant and Mrs. Sammons.

MASONS EXPEL BRECKINRIDGE.

His Name Missing from the List of Members of His Old Lodge.

CINCINNATI, July 23.—The Masons have, it is believed, expelled Col. Breckinridge. An eminent Mason showed a responsible gentleman a newly printed list of the members of Lexington lodge No. 1, issued since a recent meeting, remarking as he did so:

"Masons are not permitted to divulge the secrets of the lodge-room, and I can't say whether Col. Breckinridge was expelled from our lodge or not, but here is a complete list of the present membership and you can see for yourself who are members."

An examination of the printed roll showed Col. Breckinridge's name to be missing.

GERMAN ARMY MANŒUVRES.

The Coming Evolutions of Unusual Interest to Cavalrymen.

BERLIN, July 23.—The coming manœuvres round Thorn in East Prussia will have unusual interest for cavalrymen, as cavalry will practice crossing bridges made of boats and light wooden frame-work covered with waterproofing. The bridges can be built very rapidly. The riders will dismount and cross on foot, leading their horses, which will swim the rivers.

A new kitchen which will be tried on the marches will enable the troops to carry warm food for ten hours without injury from rain or snow. A conspicuous feature of the naval manœuvres is to be an attack on Heligoland.

CASERIO'S TRIAL.

Remarkable Precautions To Be Taken by French Authorities.

PARIS, July 23.—Remarkable precautions will be taken during the trial of Santo Caserio, the murderer of President Carnot. The trial will begin in Lyons on the 27th. On his way to court and back the prisoner will have a strong police and military escort. The court house will be guarded by infantry, and a battalion of police and an unbroken line of policemen will surround it. Detectives at every entrance will scrutinize all persons attending the trial. Only those having permits and cards of identification will be allowed to enter.

WORK OF GREEN SWITCHMEN.

Passenger Cars Wrecked or Damaged by a Switch Engine.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 23.—By the misplacement of a switch last night at the Union depot by a green switchman a switch engine with five cars dashed into 21 passenger coaches on the Chicago & Alton side track.

Three of the coaches were wrecked and others badly damaged. Two men were injured.

Pullman Denounced from the Pulpit.

BROCKTON, Mass., July 23.—Rev. George W. Hunt preached in the South street Methodist church yesterday on the subject "Justice for workingmen, or two sides to the great strike question." He first reviewed the Pullman side of the strike and then stated that the troubles lay deeper than the Pullman strike. The great cause of these troubles was the oppression of labor by capital. He concluded by severely arraigning the Pullman company for its treatment of starving employes. He also denounced President Cleveland's partisanship.

Call for Bi-Metalist Conference.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—The officers of the American Bi-Metallic league have issued a call for a conference to be held in this city of those who believe that no permanent improvement in the condition of the country can be hoped for as long as the present gold standard policy is pursued, and who favor the immediate restoration of the bi-metallic standard in the United States, with the free coinage of both gold and silver at the ratio of 16 to 1.

140 Persons were Lost.

ODESSA, July 23.—It is now certain that 140 persons went down with the Italian steamer Columbia, which collided with the Russian steamer Vladimir in the Black Sea a few days ago. All the evidence badly inculcates the Russian seamen, who deliberately abandoned the Columbia and her crew and passengers to their fate, although the vessel floated an hour and a quarter after the collision.

MUNCIE, Ind., July 23.—Word reached Muncie yesterday of the strange death of W. Martin, a glassworker, at Dunkirk. On a wager he drank two gallons of water without stopping for a moment, and he died a few hours later in frightful agony.

DEBS' HEARING TO-DAY

Strike Leaders Map Out Their Defense.

An Appeal to the American Public To Boycott Pullman Cars Issued from the Jail—Altgeld Warns Pullman To Resume Work or State Troops Will Be Withdrawn.

CHICAGO, July 23.—The line of defense of Debs, Howard, Keliher and Rogers at the hearing in the contempt proceedings which comes up in Judge Grosscup's court to-day was decided upon last night. Messrs. Erwin and Gregory will open their side with a vigorous attack upon the injunction which the defendants are charged with wilfully disobeying. Charges will also be made, it is said, that the federal court has been deceived by corporation lawyers employed by the Michigan Central.

It is claimed that the attorney for the company mentioned drew the injunction granted by Judges Grosscup and Woods and that Mr. Milchrist adopted it as the bill for the federal government.

Mr. Debs said yesterday that when the injunctions were served on him he, to act in good faith, immediately called a halt and declared that no more meetings to consider the strike should be held by the directory. He then consulted Clarence S. Darrow.

"I explained to Mr. Darrow just what we had been doing before the injunctions were granted," said Mr. Debs, "and after considering the matter he advised us to go right along in the same line. He assured us that we could not possibly be declared in contempt. The injunction is a piece of nonsense and is admitted to be wrong by the attorneys for the government. I have no doubt that it will be knocked out completely.

An Appeal to the Public.

Debs, Howard, Keliher and Rogers issued their first manifesto from their new headquarters, the county jail, yesterday. The document, prepared by the president of the organization in the seclusion of his cell calls upon the traveling public to stop patronizing Pullman cars as another means of bringing the company to terms. The manifesto is in part as follows:

"We propose that the Pullman company shall be brought to justice and this in a way that will not necessitate a strike with its attendant ills. It may be suggested that this should have been thought of before the great strike was inaugurated. In that case little, if any attention, would have been paid to the appeal that we are about to make.

"As one of the results of the strike the country is aroused and any proper appeal will command attention. The Pullman company, still defiant, and as cruel to its former employes as it is indifferent to the public weal, is determined to starve its employes into submission. As remorseless as a man-eating tiger it waits complacently until their last penny is gone and they are thus forced to crawl back into their heartless opponents employ.

"We have faith in the American people. They uphold justice and they love fair play. And now, in the name of justice and fair play, we appeal to the great American public, to every good man and every good woman, not to ride in a Pullman car until the Pullman company does justice to its employes. Let the cars run absolutely empty. No friend of labor, no friend of humanity, will occupy a seat or berth in a Pullman car. Let this policy be inaugurated and we will then see how long the railway companies will be bound by their contracts, as they have induced the public to believe, to haul Pullman cars.

"Persons desiring to contribute money and supplies to Pullman employes will please forward the same to David W. V. Gladman, treasurer, Pullman, Ill.

"It is requested that all papers throughout the land favorable to justice, to humanity, copy this statement and keep it standing in their columns as long as possible."

This document practically contains the admission that there is no longer any strike by authority of the A. R. U., and that the efforts which have been made by the union and other organizations of labor to force the Pullman company to arbitrate by means of strikes have failed, necessitating a change of tactics in the plan of anti-Pullman campaign.

GOMPERS APPEALS FOR DEBS.

Calls on All Labor Organizations for Funds To Assist in His Defense.

NEW YORK, July 23.—President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, has written over his signature an appeal to all labor organizations for aid in behalf of Debs. The appeal opens with the statement that Eugene V. Debs stands as one of the most conspicuous figures before the country.

Then it says that none doubts his honesty and fidelity to the cause of the wronged against the wrongdoer, and yet he is in jail awaiting the action of United States courts upon the charge of contempt of its injunctions, and is required to appear before four different courts situated hundreds of miles apart at one and the same time. Law is being strained and distorted, it says; corporate power is exerting its effort to incarcerate this unselfish, earnest and sincere lover of humanity. Then it continues:

The corporations have now their claws ready to fasten them upon the body of Debs, not simply to try and crush him, but they hope to awe the men of labor into silence and slavish submission. That purpose cannot, dare not, and will not succeed. Debs must be defended, and ably defended. In his person he represents the rights of labor before the law to organize, to quit work in defense, protection and advancement of its interests.

The corporations have their creature, Attorney-General Olney, and others most skillful, to prosecute Debs. He must be defended by counsel equally able, and with equal zeal.

A. R. U.'s Finances.

CHICAGO, July 23.—President Debs, of the A. R. U., denies the Cincinnati dispatch reflecting on the disposition of large sums of union money. The statement that the A. R. U. had had $146,000 in its treasury at one time he said was absurd. There had never been over $25,000 in the treasury at one time, and at the present time there was about $24,000 on hand.

Americans Flocking to Berlin.

BERLIN, July 23.—Americans are swarming to Berlin, many stopping a few days on their way to Homburg, Karlsbad and other resorts.

NEW EVIDENCE

Of Dr. Lighthill's Success.

A Flattering Testimonial From Col. John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE, Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT, 304 and 306 Park avenue.

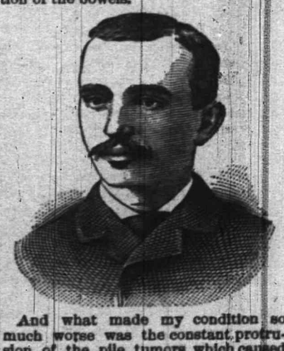
Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact, it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.



And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

THAT BRIDE FROM BRAZIL.

THE STORY, NOT THE "MATCH", A ROMANCE.

The False Tale of the Coming Wedding of W. Lee Simmonds of Plainfield to President Peixoto's Daughter—Complete Denial by the Simmondses.

It was a story of romance,—the young Plainfielder's trip to Brazil, his meeting with the beautiful daughter of the president of the republic, the rapid realization of love, the hurried engagement, the announcement to surprised society.

The Daily Courier said Saturday:

The engagement of W. Lee Simmonds, of Watchung avenue, to the daughter of President Peixoto, of the Republic of Brazil, is announced.

The news must be sent to New York, of course, so The Courier man who is the correspondent of The Herald decorated the somewhat dry statement with a few additional "facts". Yesterday The Herald announced "details" of the "engagement" in the following manner:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., July 21.—The latest international engagement has just been announced. Mr. W. Lee Simmonds, a popular member of the best set here, has just made public the news of his bethrothal. His affianced bride is the daughter of President Peixoto, ex-chief executive of the Brazilian republic.

There is quite a romantic side to the story. Young Simmonds is the son of Mr. Hermann Simmonds, for many years a well-known coffee importer in New York, with large interests in the South American trade.

The young man is engaged in his father's business house. A short time ago he was sent upon a business trip to Brazil. While there he met the daughter of the ex-president.

Occupied though he was with the details of business, he nevertheless managed to improve an acquaintance which soon ripened into friendship and finally the young coupled exchanged their vows and became engaged.

The Simmondses have for the past six years occupied a handsome house on Watchung avenue here and have moved in the best circles.

It is not known where the pair will live after the marriage. Mr. Hermann Simmonds went to New Orleans early in January and opened business there. His family will follow him in the fall, and after that young Mr. Simmonds will take charge of the New York branch of the firm.

The future bride is said to be very beautiful.

The World, supplied from the same office, told in fewer words of how "society people in Plainfield were startled yesterday by the announcement that Herman Simmonds of that city was engaged to marry a daughter of President Peixoto of Brazil." Mr. Simmonds is described by the World as a young man who is in the export trade to Brazil, and one who stands high in social and business circles. The paper evidently mistrusted the truthfulness of its source of information, as it printed the paragraph under the heading "May Wed the President's Daughter".

The family were very indignant today over the publication of the story. They emphatically denied every statement of alleged news in the articles. W. Lee Simmonds, much less his father, as The World had it, has not "made public the news of his betrothal". He never made the trip to Brazil alluded to. He never met "a daughter of President Peixoto of Brazil". The family are not to go to New Orleans. The family, in short, state positively that the story was manufactured from whole cloth.

The only incident of interest to the public in which the Simmondses have been concerned recently was the return of Herman Simmonds from a business trip to New Orleans, noted in The Press of Saturday.

Promoted by a Woman.

Miss Lucy Smith, who in 1892 was superintendent of public schools in Racine county, Tenn., is credited with first suggesting the idea of the American Temperance university at Harriman. In her report to the county court for January, 1893, she stated that this part of Tennessee ought to have a first class institution for the higher education of young people, and that Harriman was the place for it. This led to talk, consideration and effort, with the result that Harriman has a university which ranks well with other colleges in the state, and with a prospect that is full of hope. It recently had its first commencement and graduated a class of 10, equally divided in number as to sex.

TUBERCULOSIS DISCOVERED.

THE DISEASE ATTACKS A PLAINFIELDER'S COW.

The Animal Was Killed and Precautions Were Taken to Prevent Further Contagion—No Danger to Milk-consumers.

A post mortem examination held Saturday afternoon by Dr. Pocock confirmed the suspicion of a certain Plainfielder that one of his cows had tuberculosis.

The man, who owns a number of cows, called the attention of the veterinarian last Friday to the cow which was finally killed, and said he feared the cow was suffering from the disease. He examined the animal, a fine, thoroughbred Jersey, according to the Koch system and decided that the disease actually existed in her. The owner was anxious to have the matter settled for certain, and the cow was accordingly killed Saturday.

The examination was made in a field near Netherwood. Present with Dr Pocock were Board of Health President George W. Rockfellow, Inspector M. M Dunham, Dr. George W. Endicott, Dr. J T. Fritts, and a number of interested citizens.

The lungs of the animal were found to be badly affected by the disease, the tubercules ranging in size from that of a pin head to nearly that of ones fist. It was one of the worst cases the doctor had ever seen.

The owner thinks that perhaps another of his cows is affected. The milk from the cows in question has not been given to customers for a considerable time past, and it is not thought by those of experience that there is any danger of the disease having been communicated to any other animals or to any milk-consumers.

MUSLIN GOWNS.

They Are All Made Full and Are Lavishly Trimmed.

Striped muslins, ginghams and nainsooks have appeared in wonderful profusion this season. Pink, blue lavender and black stripes of varying widths on a white ground are seen everywhere, and a peculiar shade of sea green has also lately been brought out which, in combination with white, looks refreshingly cool. Thin gowns are all made very full and are lavishly trimmed, even if it be only with the same goods. Ribbons and lace are much employed, however, and as an expensive variety of lace is not required a very pretty gown may be produced at slight cost, at least for the materials. Of course the dressmaker's bill is large whether she does her work well or ill. It is a good plan for everybody to have at least a little knowledge of dressmaking, enough to allow of the venture of making thin summer gowns at home, even if more expensive goods are put into professional hands. To pay $15 for the making up of materials that cost less than $5 seems scarcely a reasonable outlay when the purse is only moderately supplied.

The home dressmaker will find that skirt and sleeve patterns are more to be relied upon than corsage patterns unless she has the latter cut specially to measure. If she has not and doubts her ability to adapt one selected from the general catalogue, she may make the skirt and have a regular dressmaker cut and fit the bodice, which she herself can afterward trim to match the skirt. If it is intended that much dressmaking shall be done at home, the easiest way is to go to a good tailor and have a pattern cut to measure. This will give a correct foundation upon which to construct a variety of gowns both for street and evening wear.

It should be borne in mind that, next to a good pattern, a hot flatiron is the dressmaker's best aid to the achievement of a workmanlike result. Seams, hems, facings and buttonholes should be conscientiously pressed as soon as they are finished—not allowed to wait until the garment is all completed. This advice has more particular reference to heavy goods, although muslins will look the better for such treatment.

A picture is given of a green muslin gown trimmed with applications of butter colored guipure. It has a round skirt and full, round bodice gathered in at the throat and waist. The puffed elbow sleeves, which are finished with a frill, are trimmed with two diagonal bands of guipure, the corsages with two horizontal bands.

STATE TROOPS TOO EXPENSIVE.

Pullman Must Resume Work or Employ His Own Guards.

CHICAGO, July 23.—Gen. Wheeler, in command of the Illinois militia now in this city, has, it is said, intimated very strongly to Vice-President Wickes that unless the Pullman company comes to a decision immediately in the matter of operating its works the state will order hands off.

Gen. Wheeler's attitude is said to be dictated by Gov. Altgeld, who is strongly averse to further expense being piled up against the state.

If the Pullman company cannot resume work it will have to employ its own watchmen, as the state will refuse to foot the bills.

The Idaho Cyclone.

BOISE, Idaho, July 23.—The cyclone at Elk City appears to have been chiefly remarkable for its violence. There was no loss of life, the region being sparsely settled. Cyclones are unknown in Southern Idaho, and it is seldom anything of the kind is experienced in the northern section where this occurred. Pine timber was literally swept from large tracts of land.

PARADISE ON THE HEIGHTS.

HAPPINESS THE ONLY FEELING AT THE WATER GAP.

The River and the Mountain Nature So Has Placed Together that Those Who Summer There Know Nothing Else than Joy.

WATER GAP HOUSE,
DELAWARE WATER GAP, PA.,
July 21, 1894.

The week was ended tonight by a grand hop at the Water Gap House. The large parlors were thronged with merry dancers, and the broad verandas, seven hundred feet in length, were gay with promenaders. The list of dances and the music were of a high order and excellent selection. A happy innovation was the "Carmen" skirt dance by the graceful little Miss Maud Shedwick of Philadelphia.

The guests of the Water Gap House are cosmopolitan. Philadelphia and Baltimore are fullest represented, but the East and the West send a considerable contingent. New Jersey has a liberal proportion, and four plucky cyclists wheeled all the way from Montclair this week to enjoy the glories of this region. They were W. J. Durfey, Fred L. Smith, Albert E. Johnson and George F. Trowbridge.

From Washington, Warren County, this morning, came a large excursion. The people brought a lively brass band, which kept the mountain echos busy, and the fleet of boats on the river was assembled to take them all to the Gap and the Cold-Air Cave. This cave is an underground chamber whose temperature is kept at freezing point by swift currents of air like the icy blasts of winter issuing from the fathomless depths.

We have been keeping comfortable here, despite the intense warm wave that has made New York and New Jersey swelter. The weather is the only thing one can ever possibly complain about in this paradise on the heights, for the hotel is so perfectly managed that it is positively above criticism.

The delight of exploring the secrets of the mountain paths, the glory of the view from the summits so easily attained, the music of the cascades and waterfalls, the pleasure of boating and fishing, or the indoor amusements of cards, billiards and dancing have by no means been forsaken, but driving parties are the rule just now. They have fine horseflesh at the Water Gap House, the roads are fast, and the country is revealed in splendor in the full day's glare or in the softened glow of moonlight. Merry are the coaching trips, and long are the drives, but somehow it is always a contented happiness to come back to the Water Gap House as the inevitable finale. C.

Death of a Valuable Cow.

Thomas B. Fenton, Jr., of Rockview avenue lost a valuable Alderney cow Saturday at noon. The animal was at pasture in Jasper Cadmus's lots on West Front street, when she was taken ill. Three veterinary specialists were called and offered $50 as a reward if they saved the life of the cow. They were unsuccessful. This is the second cow that Mr. Fenton has lost within a month.

The men in attendance were Dr. L. S. Pocock, Dr. Frank C. Herbert and Andrew Love, Jr. They state that the cow died from purpurient apoplexy.

To the Beach With the Baptists.

Wednesday of this week is the day fixed for special enjoyment for the people of Plainfield. The Baptists' popular excursion will leave the North Avenue station in the morning at 8 in two sections for Asbury Park and Ocean Grove. The Committee have arranged for the Grace Episcopal Church the use of the last two cars of the first section, and the first three cars of the second section for the Mount Olive Mission.

The attractions this year are greater than ever, and no one should miss this opportunity of spending a day at the sea shore. Lunch baskets will be taken care of in each of the baggage cars, and delivered at the Excursion House in Asbury Park.

Plainfield's Using Water.

In speaking this morning in relation to Plainfield's consumption of water, Supt. Andrews of the pumping-station said that the rain of Saturday and yesterday, and the resulting lack of necessity to water streets and gardens, has caused a large decrease in the quantity used. Last week there was pumped and consumed 2,500,000 gallons daily, 1,500,000 coming to Plainfield and the remaining million going to Elizabeth. The consumption of the corresponding week last year was but 700,000 gallons. Still the water in the wells is much higher than it was a year ago.

NEWS OF NEAR NEIGHBORS.

Dunellen and New Market.

Louis Hilderbrand spent Sunday in Everittstown.

Miss Katy Sickle of Broadway, Warren County, is visiting Mrs. James Toozeau.

Mrs. William Laible and her children spent Sunday in Plainfield with relatives.

Benjamin Carpenter of Co. H of Somerville returned Saturday from Sea Girt with the company.

Dunellen was not blessed Saturday afternoon with the first shower which our neighbors received.

A party of young people have arranged a moonlight excursion to Washington Rock for Wednesday night.

Day Switchman Charles Tilton was off duty Saturday. His place was taken by George Craig, the night man.

William Jennings rode to Glen Gardner Saturday on his wheel. A. Randolph went to Quakertown by similar means.

Charles Johnson and Frank Covey were both taken suddenly ill Saturday morning with cholera morbus. They have recovered, however, and are able to be out again.

The election of nine school commissioners for the township of Piscataway will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 in the New Market Public School. It gives promise of being a lively one on account of its importance and the varied views of the voters.

DUNELLEN, July 21, 1894.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The question of the electric road's being extended to Dunellen is once more being agitated by progressive citizens of Dunellen, and a general cry of "put it through" is heard on all sides. To a person who is not prejudiced in forming his opinion, the advantages of the road are innumerable and calculated to build up the borough and give it that life and that activity which a place of this kind needs. The objections offered by obstructionists are not sufficient to withhold this needed improvement, and those in favor of it should keep everlastingly at it till the object is accomplished. To this end the Plainfield Councilmen can assist very materially, and we look to them for their hearty support. Let the extension be laid under the same conditions that the Plainfield road was, and the company will be willing to go ahead. The way in which rights of way have been offered by property owners shows that the people want the extension. Let us have it.

FRONT STREET.

FAST TROTTING AND PACING.

An Afternoon of Sport Furnished by Local Thoroughbreds.

The meeting at the Gentlemen's Driving Park Saturday afternoon included several lively heats, some excellent trotting being witnessed by those present.

A notable event was the breaking of the State record, 2:24½, held by J. W. Arkel's horse Royal, by A. C. Vail's trotter Bud Onward. The time made was 2:22½. Mr. Vail trained and drove the horse Saturday, and her performance was a surprise to all as the track is conceded to be a slow one. Bud Onward will probably do better work still in the hands of Mr. Vail.

The trot between Dorcas, owned by J. W. Arkel, and Richard Wilkes, owned by J. W. Johnson, was won by Richard Wilkes in 2:31. C. C. Brower drove Dorcas and J. Osborn the latter.

J. W. Johnsen's colt Barney Williams won two heats against C. C. Brower's colt Marclay in 2:35 and 2:37.

Next Saturday Dorcas and Richard Wilkes will be given another trial, and following Saturday Richard Wilkes and Royal will meet.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Nate Titsworth is getting into form again.

To Plainfield cyclers who travel towards the shore for recreation, the movement for the building of a bridge between the Amboys is important.

Fred Pope and Curt Gotthiel rode their wheels to Boynton Beach Saturday. Fred says he will never ride with Curt again unless he has a Hy-lo on his wheel.

George Firstbrook of the West End Wheelmen and John Cose of the Crescents go on their wheels Wednesday morning for a trip of three or four days to Lake Hopatcong.

Immediately after Barnett decided that he would join the ranks of the Class B riders, he notified Chairman Raymond of his intention. In acknowledging the receipt of the letter Mr. Raymond complimented him highly on his prompt and unusual action.

Boyd Gray, the colored bootblack of Yonkers, left New York May 10 to make a trip to San Francisco, to return by way of New Orleans and reached Chicago Friday. Gray carrries his shining implements with him and stops whenever an opportunity offers to make a dime. In this manner he supports himself, and at the same time is saving to pay off a mortgage of $800 on his father's house. He resumes his journey from Chicago today, according to schedule.

Charles Brown, the crack racer of the Elizabeth Athletics, went to the Crescent track Saturday afternoon to try to do some record-breaking. He was to have been paced by the triplet riders, but the machine was not in the best of order, and the trials were postponed. Brown rode around the track in slow time several times. He left his racing traps in the house. Brown arranged to come to Plainfield again this afternoon at 4 to try at the records as arranged for Saturday. The triplet machine has been put in condition for speeding again.

Fits Caused the Fall.

George Vanderbilt, a resident of Scotch Plains, tied his horse in front of Ed. Thorn's saloon on Park avenue shortly after 11 this morning. The animal was much annoyed by the flies, and, finally in brushing them off with one fore-foot caught in the tie-rope and was thrown. Considerable difficulty was experienced in raising the horse from the gutter.

THE FAME OF PLAINFILD.

THE GLORIES OF THE TOWN TOLD FROM THE CAPITAL.

Related in a Woman's Weekly, Plainfield's Attractions Are Further Advertised.

Crowded from The Press of Saturday was the tribute to Plainfield's beauty, its manufacturing enterprise and its greeting to the editorial visitors, written by a woman of Washington, D. C., Mrs. Clara Bewick Colby.

Mrs. Colby, whose husband, by the way, is the assistant of Attorney-General Olney, visited Plainfield as a member of the National Editorial Association, saw the great presses in Walter Scott's works, and went on the drive about the city. In describing her doings as a delegate in last week's number of her paper, The Woman's Tribune, a woman's suffrage weekly, she refers to the final excursion as follows:

The closing and crowning event of the round of delights prepared for the Association was the trip on the 9th, to Plainfield, New York, down the sound to Glen Island and the evening repast furnished by President Harper of the Mutual Reserve in the magnificent building belonging to that company and which was only completed in May. As Mr. Harper said in his speech, which led the bright and pithy toasts of the evening, this was the first organization that had ever been in it. He welcomed them to it as their home which they had created (by advertising the company). The banquet hall was decorated with the banners of all the States and the tables were loaded with costly and exquisite flowers.

The two hours' stop at Plainfield was especially delightful. In the first place the visitors were treated to a lunch by Walter Scott, head of the Printing Press Co., then escorted through his works where are manufactured the largest printing presses in the world. One press we saw in operation was turning out 48,000 twelve-page papers per hour. Another was capable of twice this amount. The papers dropped from the press as fast as one could distinctly count, all cut and folded. It seemed like magic and when Mr. Stead gets his great daily, which is to take the news of the world into every home in civilization, he will doubtless use the Scott press.

The editorial party was then driven around the city in carriages loaned by the citizens, a little courtesy that won everybody's heart. It seemed indeed like a friendly greeting instead of a perfunctory expenditure of so many dollars to exhibit the glories of the town. Plainfield is a city of beautiful homes and the double rows of trees along the streets give it a charming air of seclusion, notwithstanding its population of 17,500 and several manufacturing interests, in addition to the extensive works already mentioned.

It is one of New York's breathing spots, where many of the business men of the metropolis live and it is about to be connected both with New York and Philadelphia by an electric railway. From Washington Rock, just back of the city, so called because General Washington stood there while watching the movements of the enemy, one can discern several populous towns, Raritan Bay, the Bluffs of Staten Island, New York Harbor with the Statue of Liberty, the Highlands of Navesink with many a winding river and fertile field. A large seminary for young women is called "The Chestnuts". Of women's clubs there are two, the Monday Afternoon and Sub Rosa, besides two cycle clubs, the Women Wheelmen and the Plainfield Lady Cyclers.

Ice of Artificial Make.

The Hygiene Ice Company, with headquarters at 147 North avenue, advertise the sale of ice made from distilled water, offering to deliver the pure product of machinery to any part of Plainfield at reasonable rates. The purity and the freedom from disease germs of water frozen after it has been distilled cannot be questioned. Impurities and microbes can't stand boiling, and the manufacturers are careful to keep the water clean after it has been distilled. Nature's means have been improved upon.

The Minstrel's Manager.

W. H. A. Cronkhite, George Thatcher's genial manager, arrived in the city today to complete arrangements for the opening of Our George's season in Music Hall Thursday, August 23. Mr. Cronkhite has been spending his vacation with relatives in Little Falls, N. Y., where he has made his home ever since he first arrived in America some fifteen years ago. He is a native of Amsterdam.

Visitors in Plainfield.

New arrivals at the Hotel Albion today were: W. P. Sullivan, Chicago; George C. Southard, Brooklyn; Miss E. H. Skillman, Newark; William H. Heeser, Perth Amboy; A. A. Pomer and James J. Ayer, New York.

A VETERAN'S VERDICT.

The War is Over. A Well-known Soldier, Correspondent and Journalist Makes a Disclosure.

Indiana contributed her thousands of brave soldiers to the war, and no state bears a better record in that respect than it does. In literature it is rapidly acquiring an enviable place. In war and literature Solomon Yewell, well known as a writer as "Sol." has won an honorable position. During the late war he was a member of Co. M, 2d N. Y. Cavalry and of the 12th Indiana Infantry Volunteers. Regarding an important circumstance he writes as follows:

"Several of us old veterans here are using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, Heart Cure and Nerve and Liver Pills, all of them giving splendid satisfaction. In fact, we have never used remedies that compare with them. Of the Pills we must say, they are the best combination of the qualities required in a preparation of their nature we have ever known. We have none but words of praise for them. They are the outgrowth of a new principle in medicine and tone up the system wonderfully. We say to all, try them."—Solomon Yewell, Marion, Ind., Dec. 5, 1893.

These remedies are sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles $5, express prepaid. They positively contain neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

ADVANTAGES OF VANITY.

Self Esteem Is the Best Soul and Heart Padding in the World.

Time out of mind the vanity of women has been held up to public execration and ridicule as the cause of extravagance, envy, jealousy and other undesirable things. For the sake of argument let us admit the soft impeachment and not venture to suggest that a woman's vanity has the effect of inspiring the least cultivated of her sex to some attempt at neatness and decoration, while that of a man of the same class is so strong that he often conceives himself irresistible enough to dispense with all pretense of personal care. Nothing need be said about that, because it is undesirable to habitually draw lines of demarcation between men and women and place them in comparison unfavorable to either of them. But there is much to be said on the affirmative side of the question, "Is vanity to be desired or not?"

A woman who has a reasonable share of vanity will dress becomingly as well as neatly and thereby help to brighten the world, which needs all the brightening that is to be had. She will be courteous because she desires to appear well. She will read a little, even if she has no taste for it, because she does not wish to be thought an ignoramus. But these are mere externals not worth considering in view of the main advantage, which lies in the fact that self esteem is the best soul and heart padding in the world. It is sensitive to small pricks, but is a shield against wounds in a vital part. Given a thick cushion of vanity, the possessor is secure from all fatal thrusts in the region of the affections, all stabs of conscience, all lasting, soul imbittering humiliations.

Dress is a vain subject, and a sketch of one is therefore appropriate. The gown illustrated is of electric blue diagonal cloth. The double breasted Eton jacket fastens with large pearl buttons and is cut short enough to show a folded white silk sash at the waist. There are double revers of blue cloth and white moire. A white bosom, collar and cuffs are worn, and a black necktie.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

AIDS TO GROWING OLD.

How a Woman of Forty-five May Appear Sixty.

When youth is openly admitted to be a desirable thing, it seems strange that many women who are past their first bloom should choose to appear so much older than they really are by means of the wholesale use of cosmetics. Bleached hair, face enamel, rouge and penciled brows and eyelids would make a girl of 15 look 25, and they make a woman of 45 appear at least 60 in spite of the fact that they are patently artificial in all eyes except those of the wearer. Although such accessories are employed by many a woman of undoubted social position and perfect propriety, they invariably give the idea of vulgarity and arouse a feeling of disrespect in the observer. In itself there is no moral transgression involved in the use of cosmetics or artificial coloring for the hair, but such practices are indications of frivolity and bad taste, and their suggestions and associations are unpleasant in the extreme. But leaving that consideration entirely out of the question it remains undeniably true that face enamels bring into ghastly and unnatural prominence the wrinkles that they are supposed to conceal; that golden locks and penciled brows make the pleasant middle aged eyes beneath look positively bleary, and that it requires only the additional touch of rouge to convert a woman of 40 thus "made up" into an octogenarian.

Simple cleanliness, which means washing the face as many times a day as is necessary with the aid perhaps of some sort of fine soap; good health; the use of an emollient, such as camphor ice in cold or sunburning weather, and a dust of rice powder—no bismuth—on hot days, will keep the complexion in as good condition as it is possible for it to be, provided there is not some disease of the skin that requires medical treatment. Face specialists as a class are to be regarded with suspicion. Many of them make up their own complexions artificially, although they profess that the phenomenal pink and white fairness is a natural effect caused by special scientific treatment. A good digestion and philosophic views are the only certain aids to youthfulness of appearance. A clear skin depends more on the general health than on anything else, and no invention that human beings have yet produced will prevent one from growing old.

A sketch is given of a tea gown of black mervelleux lined with grass green shot silk, the sleeves being of the latter, covered with black net. Accordion plaited black net drapes the side of the gown and falls from the lower edge of the sleeves. The ruffles are of mervelleux, bordered with ecru guipure. JUDIC CHOLLET.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Fred E Smith, President of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed Church, will report tonight his experience as a delegate to the great convention in Cleveland last week. Visitors are always welcome.

For true relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints it almost prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numerous cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

THE PLAGUE IN CHINA

Spreading Rapidly and May Reach Other Countries.

Stringent Measures May Become Necessary To Keep It Out of the United States—At Least a Hundred Thousand Chinese and Many Europeans Have Fled from Hong Kong.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—Surgeon-General Wyman, of the marine hospital service, has received a report regarding the "plague" in China from Dr. Stuart Eldridge, a member of the imperial board of health of Toyo and health officer of the port of Yokohama.

The plague, he says, has been known to be present in the Yunnen district of southern China for at least fifteen years past, in form generally sporatic, at times epidemic in malignant form.

At the end of February last the disease broke out in Canton and almost simultaneously was epidemic in Pakhoi, a port at the head of the gulf of Tongking, not often visited by European trade. During March and April the epidemic in Canton steadily increased until in the latter month it had assumed gigantic proportions.

The authorities of Hong Kong, the centre of trade in the far east, half a day's journey from Canton, and in constant communication therewith, utterly ignored the existence of danger, even as concerned their own city, until the first ten days of May, theplague broke out violently and extensively in Hong Kong.

Since its appearance in Hong Kong the epidemic, which is unquestionably genuine bubonic plague of a most fhaligmant type, has steadyily increased until by the latest reliable advices, the mortality is certainly over 100 per diem, and this, despite the fact that at least 100,000 Chinese and many Europeans have evacuated the place—the former, in many cases, leaving on feeling the first symptoms of the disease in the hope of dying in their native villages. At least a dozen Europeans have been attacked, most of them succumbing.

From Canton and Hong Kong the disease is spreading through the neighboring country and will probably in a short time appear in the coast towns of China to the northward of Hong Kong.

"If I may presume to advise," says Dr. Eldredge, "I would say that the most stringent measures may need to be taken to protect the United States, particularly as regards certain classes of goods from China likely to convey infection, e. g., rags, old cotton, etc., and also such manufactured articles as are made in the little native workshops with perhaps a case of plague dying in the same room; such things are straw matting, embroideries and every sort of textile fabric.

"So long as the disease is kept out of Japan; so long will this country be the best bulwark for the United States against the importation of the disease. Should it break out in any part of Japan I shall see that you have early information by cable."

THE HONG KONG PLAGUE.

A Former Student of Koch Discovers the True Bacillis of the Disease.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 23.—News received from Hong Kong shows that Dr. Kitasato, of the Japan imperial commission, has discovered the true bacillus of the plague which has slain thousands in Canton and Hong Kong. Kitasato studied under Koch, and is the foremost biologist of Japan. He declares that the bacillus of the plague, which develops in all patients after the second day and ravages the internal organs is distinct from any ever found before in human blood. It resembled the "Milzbrand" and "huhner" cholera" bacteria heretofore found in animals only. The bacillus consists of slender, short, straight filaments. Kitasato bred these bacilli and inoculated several animals with the virus. Every animal developed plague symptoms and died.

The experiments showed clearly that the bacilli were generated in filth, and that patients who led cleanly lives recovered. One doctor wore clothes of an infected patient, but escaped the disease. Kitasato and his associate, Prof. Aoyama, are experimenting with bactericides, which may expel this deadly bacillus from the human system before they are securely lodged, when the patient is doomed. The doctors agree that the Hong Kong plague is identical with the great plague of London, and with the Strakhan plague of five years ago.

ARRESTED FOR ASSAULT.

Jack Taylor, Phillies' Crack Pitcher, in Trouble.

WEST BRIGHTON, S. I., July 23.—Jack Taylor, the crack pitcher of the Philadelphia baseball team, whose home is at this place, was arrested here yesterday, while home on a visit, on a charge of assault and battery preferred by Thomas McNamara, of Port Richmond.

On the night of the Fourth of July Taylor, McNamara and a number of friends were celebrating at a Port Richmond hotel when, in a quarrel, Taylor attacked McNamara and gave him a severe whipping.

Taylor was released on his own recognizance, to appear for a hearing to-night.

BROUGHT ABOUT BY CITIZENS.

Action of the Sacramento A. R. U. in Declaring the Strike Off.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 23.—The action of the local lodge of the American Railway union in this city Saturday night, declaring the Southern Pacific strike off was brought about by a committee of citizens, who showed the strikers that their cause was helpless and persuaded the men to try to get back while there was yet a chance.

Rossa Speaks at Birr.

DUBLIN, July 23.—O'Donovan Rossa spoke at length in Birr after unveiling the monument to the Manchester martyrs. He said that he doubted the sincerity of the government in the cause of home rule. The meeting passed resolutions condemning the rejection of Rossa in the recent election of city marshal in Dublin.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.

Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make Is True.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

DR. STARKWEATHER.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays 4 to 6 p. m.

Those living at a distance can consult the Doctor by letter.

Send or call for our Book of Testimonials.

A RECKLESS GENERAL.

How the Duke of Wellington Trifled With Great Danger.

One day the Duke of Wellington's French cook came to him for orders.

"Oh, get anything," said the Duke, impatiently. "I never think of what I put into my stomach."

The chef was horrified. Whether Wellington was punished with indigestion or not, history does not tell. One thing is certain. People who don't care what they eat soon find themselves unable to eat anything at all without agony; their offended stomachs go on strike. Natural digestion ceases.

What is to be done, then? One cannot live without eating; the only possible help is in a pre-digested food, which science has furnished in the form of Paskola. It replaces wasted tissue and invigorates the entire system without aid from the stomach. Willard Hettrick, of Bridgeton, N. J., says:

"I have been a great sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion until I was induced by a friend as a last resort to try Paskola. I am more than pleased to testify that Paskola has worked wonders in my case, as I have no distress after eating, and eat whatever the appetite craves I advise all like sufferers to use Paskola."

This is the story of P. A. Hank of Valparaiso, Ind.: "Before I used Paskola I was very weak. I could not digest anything. I tried everything to gain strength but failed. My doctor told me to use Paskola and I am satisfied that it is the only thing for a weak stomach.

"I have gained two pounds in a week. There is nothing that helps indigestion like Paskola. I have tried about twelve doctors and have been suffering more than twelve years.

"At times I could work only two days in a week. For nearly three years I spent all I had for doctoring and had given up hope."

Any up-to-date druggist will furnish Paskola. If you want to know how it works, send for free pamphlet to the Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade st., New York.

Graduated from the Printers' Case.

BUFFALO, July 24.—The police have arrested Frank Ward, alias Burns, alias Moran, a notorious house-worker, wanted in New Orleans, Chicago and other cities. He is a native of Mobile, Ala., and until half a dozen years ago earned his living at the printers' case. He is wanted by the Chicago police for a most daring piece of robbery committed in the house of Philip Armour, the pork packer, and at New Orleans for a similar job done at the house of a Mrs. Ware on Lee circle.

Valkyrie's Damage Not Serious.

GLASGOW, July 24.—Lord Dunraven's Valkyrie, which was sunk at the beginning of a Clyde race by the Satanita, has been pumped dry, towed to Greenock and docked. The damage to her hull is less than was supposed. The Satanita, which suffered some damage in the collision, has been repaired and put in fit condition to take part in the races in the Solent. She will leave the dock to-day.

A Miser Starves to Death.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y., July 24.—Peter Miller, a miser, who was found dead in bed at his home in Bleecker Sunday afternoon, is believed to have starved himself to death. Considerable money was found about the house and on his person. A bank book was also found, which showed that he had over $1,000 on deposit.

BOMBARDING KOREA

Japanese Gunboats Start the Fight.

European Powers May Step in To Participate in the Conflict—Alarm Felt in London Over the Situation. Japan Emphatically Insists Upon Certain Reforms.

LONDON, July 24.—The Central News says it has been learned from a high source in London that the relations between China and Japan have grown much more serious within the last forty-eight hours. Japan insists emphatically upon certain reforms of Korea's internal administration while China resists Japan's demands with equal determination.

Under no circumstances will China allow Japan's claim to the right to interfere.

The Earl of Kimberley, secretary of state for foreign affairs, had long conferences with the Chinese and Japanese ministers. He urged upon each the great need of moderation and forbearance in both Tokio and Pekin and spoke emphatically of the dire consequences of war between the countries. His representations, while received with great courtesy and expressions of satisfaction by both ministers, failed to elicit an affirmative response from either of them.

The Central News has just received this dispatch from Shanghai:

"The telegraph between Pekin and Shanghai has been restored. The rumor that war has been declared is denied officially, but there seems to be no hope of a pacific settlement.

"Apparently war can only be averted by the interference of the European powers to protect their commerce and the lives of their subjects from the injury which Japan's action threatens to cause them.

"It has been again reported that Japanese gunboats have begun bombarding the Korean coast towns."

WOMEN MISSIONARIES IN CHINA

Stories of Their Danger from Natives Greatly Exaggerated.

BOSTON, July 24.—Miss Nichols, of the Methodist New England society, said this morning, regarding the exposed condition of women missionaries in China, reported by George Lidderdale:

"The girls sent out by Dr. Simpson go there on their own responsibility and are not under the protection of any church or society.

"We have 14 lady missionaries in northern China. Missionary socities are recognized by the government and the consuls, and our missionaries are under their protection. We never hear any complaints, although recently we received word that one of our women missionaries in Japan had been stoned, her eye-glass broken, and it is feared she will lose her eye-sight.

"We are constantly receiving letters from missionaries telling us not to believe what we see in newspapers, as the reports sent out from China and other far away places are very much exaggerated.

"Very sensational reports have been sent out about the troubles in Korea, giving the impression that the missionaries were in danger there. The letters we receive, however, say these reports are greatly exaggerated, and not a missionary has been in the least danger.

"The girls sent out by Dr. Simpson, I presume, go there under much the same conditions as those who are sent out from Boston. They go there without any promise of protection or salary. Simply going out with faith or with foolhardiness, I don't know which.

"Our missionaries are sent out on salary and they are protected. A house is built for them and a high wall built around it, then a trustworthy native is secured to guard the gate.

"The girls sometimes take long journeys, but they always have converts whom they can trust, to accompany them. The sensational stories sent out are not at all justified, so far as the missionaries sent out by church societies are concerned."

Believes the Powers Will Back Japan.

BERLIN, July 24.—The Vossische Zeitung expresses confident belief that Japan will be backed up by the European powers in her dispute with China. War between the two countries, the Zeitung predicts, will inevitably result in the extinction of Korea as a state.

SUCCESSFUL ARMOR TESTS.

Carnegie 17-inch Harveyized Plate Gives a Good Account of Itself.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The Carnegie 17-inch Harveyized plate that was so easily pierced by the 12-inch gun at Indian Head July 12 gave a good account of itself yesterday. The first or cracking shot which attacked it, with the comparatively low velocity of 1,410 feet per second, penetrated 13 inches and rebounded 25 feet, being recovered whole. The second, with 1,856 feet velocity, was also recovered entire, after going through armor backing sand heap and dancing through the woods for a hundred yards. These were Wheeler-Sterling shells, however, and it was claimed by the Carnegie officials that they were extraordinary in hardness, and far superior to the Carpenter shells.

As the plate has now stopped three out of four shells it is believed the navy department will not demand further trials, but accept the lot of armor.

EULALIE IS WEALTHY.

The Story of Her Being Destitute in London Absolutely False.

NEW YORK, July 24.—The Spanish people in this city are discussing a report to the effect that the Infanta Eulalie is at present living in poverty in London. All unite in denying the story.

At the office of the Spanish consul a reporter was informed that the report was without any foundation in fact. One of the attaches of the consulate said:

"The report is absolutely false in every particular. The Infanta Eulalie, in the first place, is a wealthy woman, independent of her annual income from the government of something in the neighborhood of $40,000. Besides that, her husband is worth $30,000,0.0, so you see how absurd that cabled report is."

HOUSE FORECAST.

Work of Importance Mapped Out for the Balance of the Week.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—To four committees of the house will be given a day each for the consideration of bills agreeable to an understanding reached yesterday afternoon by the committee on rules.

To-day public lands has the floor, on Wednesday invalid pensions, on Thursday commerce, and on Saturday patents. Friday will be private bill day as usual.

The committee on rules feel that in view of a probable early adjournment of congress and the fact that a number of important committees are urging time for the consideration of their bills, it is not practicable to give any committee more than one day.

The invalid pensions committee have reported a number of general pension bills. The most important of these is a bill permitting a widow of a soldier who remarries and who is again widowed or divorced to be placed on the pension roll.

The bill which the committee regard as the most important as yet formulated by them—the Nicaragua canal bill—is not likely to be called up on Thursday, inasmuch as the debate upon it would occupy a week, and it will therefore probably go over until the next session.

The commerce committee have reported seventeen measures, one being a resolution to investigate the recent Chicago and western railway strikes so far as they related to interstate commerce.

BIG HOTEL IN DANGER

And Cottages Threatened at Long Branch.

A Treacherous Sea Rapidly Washing Away the Bluffs — Residents at Threatened Points Ready To Leave at a Moment's Warning—Damage at Seabright and Other Places.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 24.—The huge rough sea and northeast wind are causing great havoc along the bluff from the new iron pier to Seabright. The surf is eating away hundreds of feet of the ocean driveway north of the pier, and from 60 to 100 feet of the bulkheads have been carried away and ugly gaps have been made in the roadway to the extent of 60 feet near the Brighton hotel.

The summer homes of Mrs. Scott and Judge Brown, adjoining the hotel, are in danger of being washed out into the sea. The surf has eaten its way to within 50 feet of the houses, and the waves are making big headway.

Gangs of men are stationed at this point and are in readiness to move as much of these buildings as possible should the occasion require.

At Sea View avenue the surf is also causing much damage and great lengths of the bulkheads have been torn away by the fierce waves. The occupants of the hotels and cottages at this point have their goods packed and are in readiness to vacate at a moment's notice.

Great fear is entertained by those near the Brighton hotel, as foot after foot of the bluff is being carried off with every wave.

At Seabright the sea is extraordinarily high, and it is feared that much damage will be done. The storm at sea is severe. The huge breakers dash upon the shore along the coast with terrific force, and in almost every instance some damage is done.

NEW EVIDENCE

Of Dr. Lighthill's Success.

A Flattering Testimonial From Col. John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

FAIR OF THE COACHMEN.

The Beneficial Association Begins a Week of Trade and Amusement in T. A. B. Hall.

The members of the Coachmen's Beneficial Association held possession of T. A. B. Hall last night. They opened their first fair there, and they started it in a way that shows that the outcome will be more than satisfactory. Each member is enthusiastic, and each has hosts of friends who will turn out to help, especially when they gain so much pleasure from the way in which they can assist.

To start the occasion properly, dancers were allowed to enjoy themselves on the floor to the music of E. M. O'Reilly's orchestra free. They took advantage of the opportunity and danced till the end of the evening. Dancing will be charged for hereafter. An extra attraction for Thursday night will be that the music will be kept up all night long, with extra music and guests from out of town.

The floor manager of the evening was P. Kiely. The committee that did the decorating, aroused the interest of the members, obtained the gifts and arranged other details consisted of Chairman Harry Forrestel, James Wierengs, Daniel Dugan, Charles Lang and Dominick McNamee. Among the women who assisted were the Misses Lizzie Gill, Katie Savard, Katie Dugan, Katie Mahoney, and Nellie and Abagail Walsh of Amherst, Mass.

A Credenda bicycle is being contested for by Charles Lang and Frank Connelly Other contests are to be arranged during the week, and features that will make the fair more successful will be added.

CYCLING COMMENT.

A number of Crescent Wheelmen who have not entered the races will witness the events on Manhattan Field next Saturday.

Charles Brown of the Elizabeth Athletics was unable to come to Plainfield yesterday afternoon, and accordingly his trainer took his wheel and racing outfit from the Crescent track. He will come to try at the records later on.

Secretary Teel this morning received a notice from the L. A. W. authorities that the proposed racing of Saturday, August 18, was sanctioned by them. A meeting of the Board of Governors will be held this evening to decide upon the events to be run at the meet.

Should Have Chosen Trustees.

The meeting for the election of school trustees in North Plainfield Township, which, as was reported in The Press, was attended by but four voters, and abandoned because of the small attendance, may cause a complication in the affairs of the district under the new law. The County Superintendent of Schools will take charge of the matter, and trustees may be appointed by him. A movement will be made to have the outlying district brought under the borough organization.

He's a Worker.

Secretary Thomas of the Colored Y. M. C. A. has not conducted meetings for the last two weeks, and it is probable that he will give up the work here altogether. He will run a lawn party in Rahway and may then leave this section of the State. His reception here was somewhat discouraging.

KILLED BY THE BLAST.

HORRIBLE DEATH OF A SCOTCH PLAINS LABORER.

His Head Nearly Blown Away by the Explosion—How it Came About No One Can Tell.

An Italian laborer met with a terrible death at a stone-crusher in Scotch Plains yesterday afternoon. His head was directly over a blast when it exploded and blew off the front of his head.

His name was Rocco Diniozio. He was a blaster employed by John Wahl at his crusher by his quarry on the mountain-side, at the side of the road to Feltville. It is just this side of Seeley's paper mills. Diniozio has been employed by Wahl since he came to this country two years ago. He has done all of the blasting necessary to break away the wall of rock.

He prepared two blasts yesterday afternoon. One he intended should explode about half a minute after the other. The holes had been drilled in the rock at the bottom of the quarry near the cliff which has been formed by the taking away of rock. At 2:30 he inserted the charges and all was ready for the blasting.

The men stopped work. Wahl and a workman went to the road to warn carriage drivers. Foreman Hees, the engineer and several Italian laborers who are employed about the quarry sought safety by going into the little shanty at a sufficient distance away, as they were accustomed to. Diniozio was left outside as is usual, to fire the blasts and to get to a place of safety behind the house, or by running to another part of the quarry.

What Diniozio did after the men entered the shanty, no one knows. They heard the first blast explode An interval passed, and they heard the other. When they went out after the two, they found the Italian dead by the rocks the second charge had sundered.

He had evidently leaned over rocks which were lying about the blast hole just as the charge went off. A story of suicide was started, but it had no place in the thoughts of those who knew the man and the circumstances. Perhaps the second fuse was damp and did n't burn quickly, bringing the man out from shelter to light it again, and burning down to the charge just as he leaned over to light it. Perhaps the fire in the fuse went out, Diniozio lighting it again, miscalculating the time it would take to burn to the cartridge.

However it happened the man's death was terrible. His body had been thrown back. His face had blown away, the brains with it, leaving only the back of the skull. The rest of his body had not been reached by the force of the explosion.

The man's mother came to the scene of the accident, saw the body of her son, and became frantic with grief. She could not be pacified. The remains were taken to the home of the Diniozio family, word having been sent to Undertakers Terrill & Cole of West Second street.

Rocco Diniozio, the man who was killed, was 38 years of age. When he came from Italy two years ago he left there a wife and a blind child. He lived with his mother and brothers in a house which they own on the "commons", a piece of land lying along the Feltville road toward the mountain where a number of Italians have their homes. His brothers, James and Williams, are both employed at Cook's crusher, next to Wahl's.

Funeral services were arranged for this afternoon at 2 in the Catholic Church at Rocky Hill.

Work at the crusher has been stopped.

Clara Barton's Work.

Miss Clara Barton, president of the American National Red Cross, with a corps of assistants, has completed the relief work begun last September for the sufferers from floods on the Sea islands of South Carolina. They have saved thousands of lives, redeemed hundreds of thousands of acres of land and placed upward of 35,000 people in a position to look after themselves. The citizens of Beaufort have formally tendered their thanks to Miss Barton and the Red Cross for rendering impartially that aid without which thousands of their friends and citizens must have perished.

No Mixed Shoes and Dresses.

In every complete line of summer shoes there are from six to eighteen good browns, all the same price and all good styles in their proper places. Brown is an art shade, but it takes an artist to use it effectively. A brown shoe needs a brown stocking every time, and brown shoes and stockings are most effective against brown. The dress may not be brown, but a ruffle, band or hem of that shade should come near the leather; otherwise the foot is conspicuous. Many well dressed women never mix their shoes and dresses.

The Business Woman's Uniform.

Look at nine women out of ten and one will see that the business dress for working women has solved itself. It consists of a shirt waist, dark skirt and sailor hat. This costume is cool and comfortable and saves heavy laundry bills. It has been in vogue for three summers now and is more popular than ever.

Nor is it the costume of the working girl alone. The belle who shops and the clerk who waits on her wear exactly the same costume. Verily it is a great leveler.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

THAT ENGAGEMENT.

THE FALSE STORY OF THE "ALLIANCE" REPEATED.

The Press Alone of Plainfield Papers Denied the Story Yesterday—Connection of the Simmondses with the Peixotos.

The Courier last evening referred to the "exclusive announcement" of that paper of the engagement of W. Lee Simmonds to the daughter of President Peixoto of Brazil. Accompanying the second statement of the paper that such an engagement existed were alleged details of the meeting of the two, their engagement, and a description of the young woman, who is said to have been "the reigning belle in Rio Janeiro society for two years". The News remarked that the engagement was one which had been known for some time, and entered into an improvement on the story sent from the Courier office to The Herald.

The Press yesterday published the complete denial made by the Simmondses of the reported approach of an "international alliance". The Press took the trouble to investigate the story, the others seized upon the opportunity to "startle society" with a false announcement. False in every detail were their accounts.

Statements like these bring great annoyance to the family, although the Simmondses regarded the story in The Herald with amusement mingled with natural surprise and indignation.

Herman Simmonds has lived in Plainfield since 1888. He is the general manager of Steinwender, Stoffregen & Co., of 87-89 Wall street, New York, one of the three largest coffee importers in the world. The son referred to, W. Lee Simmonds, is the manager of the polish coffee department of the same business. The younger Simmonds has never been to Brazil, and so he never met the President's daughter whom The Courier says he is about to marry. His father's trip to New Orleans was made for the firm whom he is employed. He started a branch house, making the complete list of locations of such branches: London, Paris, Chicago, St. Louis, and New Orleans. He returned Saturday for a stay with his family on Watchung avenue, and expects to go South again Thursday or Friday of this week. It is possible that the family will spend part of the Winters in New Orleans.

The Peixoto family with which the Simmondses are acquainted are residents of Paris, of course being descended from the one old family of Peixotos of Spain. The family name is Madura. Their friendship was brought about by the education of the Misses Simmonds in Paris. There they met the Misses Peixoto in Madame Yeatman's school. The girls became fast friends. Last year Miss Victoria Maud Madura Peixoto spent part of the Summer with her married sister in New York, and visited at the home of the Simmonds. June 14 last she came again to this country on the Brittania and came to visit the friends whose acquaintance she formed at school.

The young woman is not yet 19 She is a cousin of President Peixoto of Brazil. She has never been to that country Whatever may be the feeling between W. Lee Simmonds and the young friend of his sisters, it is certainly not property for public comment nor public print. No engagement has been announced.

Miss Ackerman's Reward.

Miss Jennie Ackerman had a gift of £1,000 offered her in Australia, but declined it, saying she preferred to leave it for the women's white ribbon work. Such an outcry of protest was made at her refusal that the matter seems to be still pending. Miss Ackerman, who has invested seven years of work in Australia without fee or reward, except as it came in collections, might well allow friends to give her this deserved testimonial.—Boston Woman's Journal.

"Queen Elizabeth."

The town of Williamsbridge, N. Y., is controlled politically by a woman "boss." She is Mrs. Elizabeth Hielman and is known as "Queen Elizabeth." She is postmistress, deals in real estate, is a lobbyist at Albany, is a notary public and has made Williamsbridge a good, bustling town out of the sleepy village it was. Incidentally she has made $150,000 during the past four years. She is a comely widow, "fair, fat and 40."—Chicago Tribune.

Food For Thought.

Here is food for thought in a question propounded by a Boston woman. "What would prevent," she asks, "if we were to have universal suffrage in Massachusetts, our disfranchising the male population? Nothing in the world if we are united. There are 49,000 more women than men in this state, and we should have it all our own way and would soon be masters of the political situation."

Will Fete the Yale Men.

Mrs. Phipps, whose husband is a partner of Andrew Carnegie, and who has taken Lord Lytton's place at Knebworth, has invited the Yale men to visit her, and she will give a ball in their honor. Her son, a Yale undergraduate, knows the men of the team well and went over on the New York with them.

SEWERS IN THE BOROUGH.

No Immediate Action on the Introduction of a System Expected.

The committee appointed by the Borough Council to confer with a similar committee from the city met in the rooms above H. N. Spencer's store last evening. The members were Councilmen Lounsbury, Peck and Neal. Mayor Needham attended the meeting.

No definite action was reached in the matter of whether the borough should join the city in putting in sewerage. It was thought best that each of the committees should have a separate meeting before discussing the matter together.

The tendency in the borough seems to be to act slowly in the matter. The improved system is not needed so much as it is in the city, say those who wish to delay the work, and it is not thought that the borough can legally build the lines with assessments on neighboring property. The proposition to raise the money by taxation would meet with much opposition, as those who owned property which the sewers did not reach would only be paying for the improvement of the property of others, and the consequent decrease in the relative value of their own. The comparison between the improvements of macadamizing streets and laying sewers does not bear examination. The sewers are local conveniences entirely, while it is possible for everyone to use the streets. All who wish will have opportunities to attend meetings and express views on the question.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

For the union meeting of the Christian Endeavorers of Plainfield and the vicinity, which will be held in Trinity Reformed Church Friday evening, the following programme of the reports of delegates to the Cleveland convention has been prepared:

Christian Endeavor on Wheels—Miss Emily Coriell.

Decorations and Hospitality at Cleveland—W. J. Foster of Somerville.

Music at the Convention—Horace J. Martin.

Fellowship as Shown at the Convention—Rev. John Hart of Neshanic.

Inspiring Words—Rev. J. A. Davis of Nyack, N. Y.

The Spiritual Side of the Convention—Rev. A. L. Mershon of Bound Brook.

Impressive Scenes—Rev. T. E. Davis of Bound Brook.

The report of President Fred Smith, the delegate from the Trinity Reformed Church Christian Endeavor Society to the international convention in Cleveland, was given at the meeting of the society last evening, a large number being present. Miss Sadie Searing presided.

For 35 minutes Mr. Smith kept the audience interested in the acts and words of the delegates and speakers. He was hampered in giving a clear idea of the events by having to keep from encroaching upon the territory to be covered by those who will make addresses next Friday evening at the union meeting. It was an excellent paper, however, and served to give those who heard it a knowledge of parts of the general work that will of necessity be omitted at the coming meeting. The president referred to each speaker, telling of his manner, of his theme, of the effect of his remarks, and giving gems of thought from the different addresses. At the close the chairman expressed the thanks of the society to its president. Another feature of the meeting was the short talk given by Horace J. Martin. He spoke of the work in the Junior Endeavor movement, as shown at the rally of the Juniors.

How in a Race on Race Street.

Seven colored residents of Race street came before Borough Magistrate Crosley last evening, charged with quarreling last Friday evening. They were Cæsar Taylor and wife, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. VanBurgen and her son Charles VanBurgen, and Frank Scott and wife. The disturbance originated with a fight among colored children related to the defendants. The Magistrate suspended sentence with a reprimand, saying that if they were caught quarreling again they would be fined or sent to Somerville for ten days each.

Against the Telephone Trust.

A meeting is called for in the Board of Trade rooms this evening of all members who are interested in the Board. It is expected that the result of the meeting will be the formation of a mutual, local telephone company, the projectors claiming that by combination in this way they can furnish a local telephone service that will be satisfactory, both from its efficiency and because it will include more people in the circuit than the company now in the field.

Used for Years.

The tobacco box furnished by Groceryman Newton Spencer for the use of the Cracker Barrel Club and occasional callers is now 38 years old. During all that time it has never been without enough tobacco in it to furnish free of cost the pipe of the guest.

No More Found Yet.

Dr. L. S. Pocock is continuing to examine cows which their owners fear are affected with tuberculosis. He has not discovered another case of the disease.

Contemplate a Reduction.

The Plainfield Gaslight Company are considering the advisability of reducing the price of gas for illuminating and cooling purposes.

—Clam chowder will be served free to the patrons of the Manhattan Hotel on Somerset street tomorrow night.

—A president and a clerk will be elected at the organization of the newly-elected borough school trustees to be held in the school this evening.

A Moral.

There was a man in a faraway town
Who thought him wondrous wise.
He swore by all the fabled gods
He'd never advertise.

His goods were advertised at last,
And thereby hangs a tale.
The ad was set in nonpareil
And headed "Sheriff's Sale."

QUEEN CITY INSTALLS.

Members of the Odd Fellows Start to Serve Six Months in Office.

It was installation night with Queen City Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., last evening. Past Grand Kellum of Memorial Lodge, No. 165, of Elizabeth, came to Plainfield with his staff, and conducted the necessary ceremonies. The following are the officers:

Noble Grand—Joseph E. Mosher.
Vice-Grand—Frank Smith.
Secretary—John Anderson.
Warden—Charles H. Randolph.
Conductor—William H. Ford.
Outside Guardian—Thomas Wells.
Inside Guardian—Thomas Young.
R. S. of N. G.—T. C. Smith.
L. S. of N. G.—E. W. Titsworth.

L. S. S.—Charles Jeter.
Organist—J. Moore.

The installation over, the members and their visitors, to the number of 73, sat down to an elaborate banquet in the Hotel Grenada. General jollity prevailed. Speeches were made by the new noble grand, and by other members. They enjoyed themselves in the way that Queen City always does on a festive occasion.

A PICNIC THERE A PLEASURE.

The Beach to Which St. Mary's Church Excursion Goes.

The congregation of St. Mary's Church are prepared for a day of healthful pleasure at Highland Beach when their excursion takes place Thursday next. This great day Summer resort is said by those who have visited it to afford greater diversity of pleasure than any other spot on the Jersey coast. Surf bathing, still-water swimming, calm boating waters, are afforded by the ocean and the Shrewsbury. Across the river, cool, shady groves adorn the mountain-sides, giving an opportunity for family parties to enjoy a quiet picnic.

Those who revel in the beautiful panorama of Nature's own handiwork, may climb the hills, visit the lighthouse, and enjoy a view of land and water scenery second to none in this part of the country. But, lest these attractions should not be sufficient to make the day enjoyable to all, music has been secured and dancing may be indulged in by all who desire it. Those who fail to attend will miss a great day of healthy outing and pleasure.

ODD LADIES OFFICERED.

Installation of Those Who Will Manage the Local Lodge.

The officers-elect of Odd Ladies, a list of whom were given in these columns yesterday, were duly installed last evening. The installing officers were: R. W. L. G. M. Mrs. Skilling of Boston; R. W. V. L. G. Mrs. S. Holmes of Hyde Park; and R. W. C. Mrs. H. K. Wilson of Boston.

In addition to the officers the following committees were also installed:

Finance Committee—Mrs. E. Cox, Mrs. E. Radin, Mrs. T. Snyder.

Investigating Committee—Mrs. C. Denecklau, Mrs. E. Busby, Mrs. L. Kurtzahls.

Relief Committee—Mrs. A. S. Corwin, Mrs. J. D. Smith, Mrs. S. A. Mattox, Mrs. R. Mattis, Mrs. E. Welgman, Mrs. H. Westphal, Mrs. J. Huntington.

After the installation all enjoyed the excellent refreshments provided by the women. Everyone present was very much pleased and gratified with the work of the evening.

PROGRESS OF THE CAMP.

Work of the New Body of Sons of Veterans.

John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, received and mustered Frank Hand of Park avenue last evening. The Camp Council, composed of E. T. Bowman, Willard V. Sutton and W. C. Dobbins, were installed by Past Commander Asa Collier of Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R. Mr. Collier complimented the Sons for the way in which they conducted their meetings.

A Good and Welfare Committee was appointed by Captain Lewis who named Herbert McVoy, S. C. Terry, Jr., and Willard V. Sutton.

They will provide occasional entertainments and socials for the members and their friends.

The Camp is progressing in a very satisfactory manner. After the meeting the by-law committee met and about completed their work. The by-laws will soon be ready for the Camp to consider for adoption.

A Painful Accident.

Contractor Thomas Doud of the corner of Duer and Emily streets carries his right arm in a sling, and one of the fingers of his right hand in a bandage. Last Saturday he was working in Cranford coupling two pipes when his hand slipped and the end of one of his fingers was cut off. The bone was not injured, but the small flesh wound caused is very painful.

Hastened to Buy from Crane.

U. B. Crane, the hatter, says that the local notice in The Press yesterday brought him a customer before the ink was dry on the issue. A party bought a ticket for the Baptist excursion and asked for the lunch box and shawl strap he gives with every ticket purchased at his store, notice of which appeared only a few minutes before in The Press.

Horse Loose on Highway.

John Scott, colored, recovered his horse from the possession of the North Plainfield authorities yesterday. The night before, Constable Samuel G. Taynor was driving on Washington avenue when he saw Scott's horse walking, uncared for, about the street. He led the animal to the pound, where the owner paid rather heavily for the free pasturage.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

The death occured yesterday of Edith, the twelve months-old daughter of Mr and Mrs. A. L. Heyser, from cholera infantum. Funeral services will be held this evening at 8, from the home of her grandfather, John Heyser, Rev. Frank Fletcher officiating. The burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery, Brooklyn, tomorrow morning.

Peter V. Huff was appointed agent for the Union News Company in Dunellen recently, and a stand was erected at the railroad station. For the past twenty years Dr. Brakeley has been supplying the reading public with New York papers. When Mr. Huff took charge of the stand he thought the doctor should stop selling papers at the station. But papers were sold there by the doctor's boy and he has not stopped. The agent of the News Company was notified and he in turn sent word to the superintendent of the road. The matter was considered and yesterday morning Mr. Huff received a letter from headquarters informing him that he would be sustained in his position and that he only could furnish papers to those at the station. The News Company have always made a practice of prohibiting the sale of papers at railroad stations where they locate a stand, and this custom is always followed. The doctor has a large number of friends who claim they will stand by him, while Mr. Huff has many friends who think he has the sole right to the privilege. The matter is the subject of considerable discussion and results will be awaited with interest.

Miss Tiney Rudd of Brooklyn is spending two weeks with her cousin, Miss Sophie Rudd.

Miss Susie Pound who was poisoned with poison ivy while out berrying has entirely recovered.

The horse which Willie Havens was driving Saturday afternoon became unmanageable and backed on the sidewalk at Front and Somerset streets but came out all right.

DIVISION IN DUNELLEN.

The Vote of a Caucus Held to Nominate School Directors Not Unanimous.

A meeting of the citizens of Dunellen was called last evening to prepare a ticket for the school commissioners election which is being held this afternoon.

About seventy-five people were present They organized by choosing Rev. Frank Fletcher chairman, and Frank Nelson secretary.

There seemed to be two factions, one from the Dunellen district and one from New Market. The latter thought that Dunellen was entitled to but one representative and a lively debate ensued. After quiet had been restored the following were nominated for Commissioners: A. F. Nelson, Fred Wilcox and Dr. Whitford. It is thought the above will be elected as they appeared to be the choice of the borough citizens.

Baker Gardner of 41 Somerset street, who has been so successful with his home-made specialties since his coming to Plainfield a short time ago, announces a number of changes in the business which indicate how his trade is increasing. He now has a man to do his baking, and will hereafter drive his own delivery wagon. Another department to be added to his business will be the manufacture of ice-cream. He has ordered the necessary machinery, and as soon as it arrives he will show his skill in this part of the trade which he has mastered.

THE CHANGING OF THE OFFICE.

Netherwood's Fight for Free Delivery Complicates Matters.

Charles J. Noel, postmaster of Netherwood, thinks it more than the people should demand from him, that he should erect a building near the station for the post-office, while the present agitation for free delivery may be successful at any time and leave him with the building on his hands.

He says that the office will stay where he moved it yesterday on taking possession, 229 Netherwood avenue, until he has to give up his section to the service of the Plainfield office, or until he is sure he will be permitted to serve his term out. In the latter case he will arrange to make the mail more convenient.

DECORATIVE NOTES.

Paper Screens, Dressing For Beds and Laundry Bags.

Woven letters, red on white, for marking clothing and household linen are now shown set two abreast on double width ribbon in all combinations of initials.

Japanese paper screens are to be bought for a song now, but they are scarcely worth even that price, not that they are not frequently pretty and decorative, but they are very fragile. An unusually careful woman, living all alone and never receiving a guest, might possibly keep a paper screen intact for a month, but under ordinary circumstances the paper is punched through in a dozen places before that length of time elapses. If the man who delivers it at the house has not already burst it with his fingers, it is sure to be set within reach of the heels of a rocking chair, so that the first person who sits down sends the rockers through it, and if there is a projecting corner of a furniture knob anywhere about the screen falls over on it and spikes itself at the first gust of air. Black and gold cloth screens are inexpensive in these times, and it is worth the extra money to have something that will last a little while.

The fashion of dressing up beds in lace spreads and pillow covers laid over colored muslin has given way to a more artistic style of ornamentation. A silk or tinted linen spread is embroidered by hand with decorative floral or conventional designs and bordered with wide, heavy lace, or the spread is made of embroidered squares separated by drawn work and hemstitching.

For persons who do not care to give up space to a large basket for holding soiled linen a laundry bag is the only resort. This may be made of plain ticking or may be elevated to the rank of a decorative object, and it is a laundry bag of the latter description that is illustrated. It is made of strips of heavy canvas embroidered in a cross stitch tapestry design separated by bands of colored crocheted insertion. The bottom of the bag is finished with a crocheted edge to match. The embroidered sides are divided by straight plain end pieces to make the bag capacious, and the whole thing is lined. The top of each side has small brass rings attached at intervals, through which are run brass rods which hold the bag in shape.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

AN AMERICAN QUEEN

AND HER FOUR DAUGHTERS.

A Scene on the 3 O'clock Express Between Boston and Worcester, Mass.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

It was a pretty sight.

The passengers turned around in their seats to better note the something unusual.

A noble looking woman had entered the car, followed by four daughters, ageing from fifteen to twenty years. The mother had one of those good and wholesome faces that one so rarely sees, but that men and women always admire. The daughters had the same healthy, wholesome look. They were well born, well cared for, and, without doubt, never suffered from any of the ills that curse many women.

Mothers owe a duty to their daughters that in too many cases is neglected.

Nature has provided a time for purification, and if the channels are obstructed, the entire system is poisoned and misery comes.

Mrs. Chas. Hines of Duncannon, Pa., a woman of large experience, in speaking of a mother's duty, says: "Watch carefully your daughters' physical development.

MRS. CHAS. HINES

"Mothers should see that nature is assisted, if necessary, to perform its office, and keep their daughters well informed as to matters concerning themselves."

Irregularities, from whatever cause, are sure indications of organic trouble. With irregularities come disturbance of the stomach and kidneys.

Violent headaches often attack the victim, pains shoot everywhere. Extreme irritability follows quickly, and then utter despondency overwhelms the already overburdened life. Unless the obstruction is removed at once, your daughter's whole future will be darkened.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will accomplish the work speedily. It is the most effective remedy for irregular or suspended action known.

THE TARIFF DEADLOCK

No Change Apparent in the Situation.

Much Depends on the Success of Mr. Vilas' Motion To Strike Out Differential Duty on Sugar — Democratic Senators Will Probably Caucus To-Night—Gorman and Others Declare That the President Approved the Senate Bill Before He Wrote the Wilson Letter.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Not for many a year has the senate chamber, rich as it is in historic reminiscences, witnessed a more stirring spectacle than that which took place there yesterday. The knowledge that Senator Gorman was to take up the gauntlet thrown down by President Cleveland, attracted to the capitol a large part of the visitors and people of leisure who take delight in the combats of political gladiators.

Mr. Gorman was in his best fighting trim. Without a note or memorandum to refer to, or to refresh his memory, he held the floor for nearly three hours, exhibiting powers of oratory which few even of his warmest political admirers would have given him credit for.

While unsparing in his attack on the president, he directed his efforts principally to sustaining the proposition that the conference bill as fixed up by Senators Jones, of Arkansas, and Vest, of Missouri, and as finally passed by the senate, had been submitted on several occasions to the secretary of the treasury and the president and had received the assent and approval of both of them; and that it was not until after the publication of the Wilson letter that the hostility of the president to the senate bill had been known or suspected.

Mr. Gorman's assertions on that point were corroborated and with detail by Senators Jones and Vest, and also by Mr. Harris, (dem., Tenn.), who related two interviews which he had had with the president, the last of them while the bill was in conference—from which he had come away with the distinct understanding that the president was strongly in favor of the bill as it passed the senate "if no better terms could be obtained."

Senator White, of California, made a short speech in favor of the motion to insist on the senate amendments and to agree to further conference; and then, without action on any of the pending motions, the senate at 3:45 adjourned.

Gorman's Visit to the White House.

As soon as Mr. Gorman reached the city yesterday from his summer residence at Laurel, he was notified of the president's wish to see him, and went at once to the executive mansion. What occurred there in all its detail will probably never be known, but it is learned from a senator prominent in the party that the president expressed a hope that the bill would be sent back to conference without further debate and that the conferees would be able to come together and agree upon a measure that would have the approval of the party.

It is said that Mr. Gorman spoke in very plain language to the president in regard to the position he had taken on the senate bill and especially his reflections upon the senate as expressed in the letter to Mr. Wilson.

The statement was made this morning, on the authority of a gentleman, that the president in his interview with Mr. Gorman, asked him to refrain from making the speech that he had been credited with having in view, and to use his influence to put a stop to further debate on the bill in the senate.

Refused To Abandon His Speech.

Mr. Gorman is represented, on the same authority, as having told the president that this could not be done; that he had a duty to perform and if he was permitted to reach the senate chamber he would make the speech he had contemplated and which he felt to be justified and necessary in the defense of the honor and integrity of the senate and the men who had framed the tariff bill.

Immediately after the adjournment of the senate yesterday a number of senators, including Mr. Gorman, Mr. Cockrell, Mr. Vest and Mr. Blackburn gathered in a committee room and discussed the advisability of calling a caucus for the purpose of discussing the situation, but no conclusion was reached. After the conference one of the participants said that the question would be decided to-day, and if the caucus was held it would not take place until to-night.

The Situation Unchanged.

Judging by the statement of one of the managers of the bill, as made this morning, there appears to be no change in the situation. Much depends upon the persistence with which Mr. Vilas pushes his motion to strike out the differential duty on refined sugar, and the attitude of this senator led a number of democrats to-day to make the statement that it looked as if the administration wanted to see this action taken. It is known this morning, however, that if an effort is made to push this motion some of the democrats, it is asserted, are prepared to take the responsibility of settling the fight at once by moving to indefinitely postpone the conference report, and if made by a democrat, a senator said that it would prevail beyond any possible doubt.

House of Representatives.

The attractions of the tariff debate in the senate were too strong to be resisted by the great number of representatives and it was found impossible to secure the presence of a quorum. After vainly endeavoring, for an hour and a half to effect the passage of the bill which came over as unfinished business from Saturday, directing the reemployment of railway postal clerks who were discharged between March 15 and May 1, 1889, the house at 1:30 o'clock adjourned.

Wiped Out by Fire.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., July 24.—The business portion of Great Bend, Pa., about 15 miles from here, was wiped out by fire last night. The blaze started from an exploded lamp, and at 12:30 o'clock, when the flames were under control, seven buildings had been consumed, including several places of business and the office of the Great Bend Plaindealer. The loss will be heavy.

New Trial for Shipswriter Magee.

The proclamation reads:

Whereas, Under the provision of an act to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage within the state, except as herein provided, approved Dec. 24, 1892, the state assumed control of the legal liquor traffic in South Carolina, commencing July 1, 1893, and

Whereas, The said policy and purpose of the state to permit the sale of liquor by and through the state officers only, was reaffirmed by an act, approved Dec. 23, 1893, and,

Whereas, the supreme court of the state of South Carolina, by a decision rendered the 19th day of April, 1894, declared the first act, above mentioned, unconstitutional, except one small proviso of one section, the executive, in obedience to what he conceived to be the will of the court, closed all the dispensaries and discharged the constabulary. In a subsequent decision, the court, still ignoring the act of 1893, above mentioned, construed its decision to mean "there can be no legal sale of liquor by license," but has seemingly on purpose omitted to construe the act of 1893, and,

Whereas, the state of South Carolina, acting in good faith through the executive branch of the government, and relying upon the decision of the supreme court in the case of Hoover vs. the Town Council of Chester, in which it was declared that the act of 1892, "was in effect an act to regulate the sale of spiritous liquors, the power to do which is universally recognized," has invested large sums of money in liquors for sale under the provisions of the two acts mentioned; and,

Whereas, this liquor is being held at heavy expense, while the state is flooded with contraband whiskey sold without authority of law,

Now, therefore, I, B. R. Tillman, governor of the state of South Carolina, in exercise of my discretion as executive, do issue this, my proclamation, and declare that the said supreme court having adjourned without, and in any wise, giving expression in regard to the act of 1893, that the said act is of full force and effect and will be enforced in accordance with my oath of office until the court shall have passed upon the same, or until the legislature shall have repealed it.

The county dispensers in the various counties will open their dispensaries on Wednesday, August 1. All persons interested, including public carriers, are notified that importation of liquors will be at the risk of seizure and prosecution, and all contraband liquors found in the borders of the state will be seized and confiscated according to law.

Seized by Canadian Government.

AMHERSTBURG, Ont., July 24.—The Dominion government revenue cutter Petrel arrived here last evening with the fishing tug Louise, of Sandusky, which was seized near Point Palee, Lake Erie, yesterday. The Louise is owned by Post & Co., of Sandusky, and the charges against her are infringments of the Canadian fishing laws by fishing in Canadian waters. The Louise was turned over to the collector of customs at this port. She has a large load of fish on board.

THERE'S DANGER

in a cough—more than ever when your blood is "bad." It makes things easy for Consumption. But there's a cure for it in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. A positive cure—not only for Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma and all lingering Coughs, but for Consumption itself in all its earlier stages. It's reasonable. All these diseases depend on tainted blood.

PIERCE GUARANTEES A CURE OR MONEY IS RETURNED.

HARRISON DAVIS, of Tompkinsville, Monroe Co., Ky., writes as follows: "My daughter, Miss Florence E. Davis, had been afflicted for several years with a cough and lung trouble, and tried several remedies but none seemed to do her any good. I bought a bottle of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets' and commenced giving them according to directions, for she was past doing anything, and now she is perfectly well and the cough is gone. I am thankful to you for such a wonderful medicine." Sold by all medicine dealers.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.

Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make Is True.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 165 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

DR. STARKWEATHER.

There is not a penny to pay for the fulles' medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays 4 to 6 p. m.

Those living at a distance can consult the Doctor by letter.

Send or call for our Book of Testimonials.

NEW EVIDENCE

Of Dr. Lighthill's Success.

A Flattering Testimonial From Col. John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Years of Suffering and Distress Promptly Cured by Dr. Lighthill.

Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs is a well-known merchant of Rocky Hill, N. J., and a prominent resident of the town, having for years been the Treasurer of the borough. For a long time he has been a sufferer from bleeding piles of the very worst kind, until he was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, as will be seen by the following statement:

ROCKY HILL, N. J., Jan. 9, 1893.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have often read of the wonderful cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in bad cases of piles, but I feel confident that no case ever came under his professional notice as bad as mine when I placed myself under his treatment. The pain which I suffered was simply terrible; in fact, it was so intense that at any time I would have preferred to have a tooth pulled than to have an operation of the bowels.

And what made my condition so much worse was the constant protrusion of the pile tumors, which caused the most severe suffering, and was often attended with hemorrhages so profuse that the blood came in streams and fairly flooded me. I had despaired of getting relief, when I applied to Dr. Lighthill, but I am most happy to state that he effected a complete and perfect cure in my case in a few weeks' time. The piles have disappeared, the pain, distress and discomfort is gone entirely, and I feel, indeed, like a new man. Nothing but my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lighthill and my desire to bring relief to those who suffer as I have done, prompts me to make this public statement. J. V. Z. GRIGGS.

GAGGING THE PRESS

Row in the French Chamber Over Anarchist Bill.

Article 5, Forbidding Publication, Passed During a Stormy Scene—Newspaper Reporters Draw Lots To Select One To Challenge M. Denoix to a Duel for Insulting Journalists.

PARIS, July 25.—The discussion of the anti-anarchist bill in the chamber of deputies was attended with a number of stormy scenes. The trouble began the moment the fourth article was reached, the second and third articles having been previously passed without difficulty. The fourth article provides that anarchists imprisoned under the bill shall be kept in solitary confinement.

The article was strongly opposed by MM. Hugues and Millerand, radicals, and Sembat, socialist. A number of cases were instanced by the speakers in which insanity had resulted from solitary confinement.

In the course of his speech M. Sembat declared that President Casimir-Perier must have advised the government to assume an inflexible attitude against any amendments to the bill.

The members of the centre protested against this remark, and the president of the chamber forbade speakers to introduce M. Casimer-Perier's name, declaring it to be unconstitutional.

M. Millerand contradicted the president and challenged his ruling.

After rejecting an addition proposed by Rouanet, socialist, making false denunciation punishable, the chamber passed the fourth article by a vote of 335 to 181.

The fifth article, which forbids the reporting of trials by the press, was then taken up. M. Denecheau, republican, declared that the fifth article was an absurd one unless all foreign newspapers containing the reports in question were to be seized on crossing the French frontiers.

M. Guerin, minister of justice, interrupted to say that venders of foreign newspapers containing reports forbidden by the article under discussion would be prosecuted.

At this point M. Lockroy, radical, jumped up and exclaimed: "Do you think that you can terrorize the press? You are reverting to the worst practices of the empire."

M. Denoix, republican, sneered at journalism, saying that it was a trade, not a profession. This remark elicited a chorus of protesting "Oh's" from the press gallery.

These expressions were immediately followed by a burst of applause from the socialists, and the confusion became general.

The acting president, Vice President de Mahy, ordered that the press gallery be cleared. This was done, but several members of the press refused to go voluntarily, and they were removed forcibly.

The confusion was so prolonged that several members demanded that the sitting be suspended.

M. Humbert, socialist, held that the expulsion of the journalists from the press gallery was perfectly proper and in fact necessary to the dignity of the chamber.

A vote was taken on the motion to suspend the sitting and it was rejected, 348 to 120.

M. de Mahy said that, the president's authority being obeyed, the members of the press would be allowed to re-enter the press gallery. The reporters were sulky, however, and remained in the lobbies, where they excitingly discussed the situation with a number of deputies.

When the debate was resumed speeches against the article were made by M. de Ramel, conservative, and M. Isambert, republican. Then M. Grousset, radical, proposed an amendment that reports of trials be published in the official journal. France, he said, was making herself the laughing stock of Europe. The amendment was rejected. A similar fate befell an amendment offered by the socialist, Viviani, which M. Goblet warmly supported, limiting the judges' power to forbid publications. Similar amendments were offered by MM. Millerand, de Ramel and Gaquet, all of which were rejected.

Finally the first paragraph of article 5, forbidding publication, was carried by a vote of 333 to 157.

The newspaper reporters drew lots to decide which one of them should challenge M. Denoix to a duel for the insulting remark he made about journalism. The lot fell to Jean Drault, of the socialist journal La Libre Parole.

Actor Sydney Weeks Acquitted.

NEW YORK, July 25.—The sensational trial of E. Sydney Weeks, the actor who was charged with grand larceny by Laura St. James, a well-known actress, ended in a verdict of not guilty. Weeks and Miss St. James were stranded in Baltimore several weeks ago and agreed to come to New York, the railroad accepting their trunks as security for transportation. Miss St. James afterward charged that Weeks stole her trunk, and his arrest followed. The trial attracted wide attention.

LONDON, July 25.—A dispatch to the Central News from Shanghai says:

"When war has been declared the non-combatant powers will exact a pledge that the treaty ports shall be exempted from attack, their respective squadrons combining to ensure the fulfilment of the pledge.

"China has embargoed the fleet of the China Merchants' company, the vessels to be employed as transports when needed. Negotiations are proceeding with other vessel owners.

"The partial blockade here is aimed only against passenger an cargo steamers owned in Yokohama, Nagasaki and Kobi.

"Some owners propose to sail their vessels under the American flag.

NEW ENGLAND BATTLEFIELDS.

Itinerary of the Historical Pilgrimage from Fifteen States.

PHILADELPHIA, July 25.—The registration for the historical pilgrimage to the New England revolutionary battlefields will not close until Saturday night, but about 50 pilgrims have already been enrolled, coming from 15 states. They include college professors, clergymen, lawyers, business men and public school teachers.

The educational committee of the Old South church has issued an invitation to the leading citizens of Boston to attend a town meeting at the Old South church on July 31 to welcome the pilgrims to Boston.

For want of time it has been necessary to decline invitations to visit Pomfret, Bedford, Providence and Newport.

The itinerary will include Philadelphia, Hartford, Boston, Cambridge, Lexington, Concord, Salem, Plymouth, Newburgh, West Point, Tarrytown, Tappan, New York, Trenton and Princeton.

SURPASSES ALL PRAISE.

Official Report of the Minneapolis Shows Her To Be a Great Boat.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—The official report of the trial of the Minneapolis, which will be made to the secretary of the navy in a few days, shows the vessel to surpass even the highest praise that has already been accorded to her. It appears that she made an extraordinary record for efficiency and economy in her great race against time and that she may be fairly expected to do still better after she has been in regular naval service a short time.

She was designed to make 23 knots, with a maximum development of 21,000 horsepower. The official figures show that it took but 20,500 horsepower to make 23,073 knots.

ROUND TO BREAK THE STRIKE.

Operators in the Phillipsburg District Preparing To Resume Under Guard.

PHILLIPSBURG, Pa., July 25.—If the long strike in this section is not effectually broken by the end of the week it will not be the fault of the operators. Fifty guards have been placed at the Atlantic shaft, forerunners of a large body of new men expected to arrive to-morrow. Captain Clark has been transferred from Punxsutawney to this section and will be in command of affairs.

The committee sent to Philadelphia on Sunday to confer with the Berwind-White company wired that the company would not pay more than 40 cents.

Interviews with a number of miners today are to the effect that the proposition will not be accepted.

Great Forest Fires.

CUMBERLAND, Wis., July 25.—Forest fires are raging for more than a hundred miles along the line of the north Wisconsin division of the Omaha road between Ashland and Superior on the north and Chippewa Falls and New Richmond on the south. Thousands of cords of wood and cross ties are on fire, also fields of standing as well as harvested grain and hay.

Little Activity at Pullman.

PULLMAN, Ill., July 25.—The car shops of the Illinois Central railroad at Burnside were opened yesterday with a force of nearly 200 men at work. This was the only activity in the Pullman district, as none of the strikers reported for duty at the big works.

WILSON BACK IN WASHINGTON.

House Conferees May Make a Few Slight Concessions, He Says.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Mr. Wilson, of West Virginia, the chairman of the ways and means committee, returned to Washington yesterday. The neuralgic pains from which he suffered last week have disappeared, but his face is still so badly disfigured as to require the use of a bandage.

Mr. Wilson could not say when the conferees will meet again, but he will remain in Washington until the senate shall have concluded its discussion of the house message asking a new conference, in order that there may be no delay in beginning at once the work of harmonizing the differences in the tariff bill between the two houses.

He was not disposed to say much in regard to the action of the house conferees, except to remark in a general way that the latter would endeavor to secure a report as nearly as possible on the lines of the original bill. He intimated that the house conferees might be willing to make a few proper compromises, but added that their line of action could only be properly determined after they had again met the representatives of the senate in the conference committee.

PENSION BILLS.

Several Measures of Importance To Be Reported to the House To-Day.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—The invalid pensions committee of the house will call up five measures to-day, for which they will ask consideration, and which they will endeavor to pass during the three hours and a half set aside for them.

One of these is the bill to pension the widow of Gen. John M. Corse, of Massachusetts. Gen. Corse had one of the brilliant and picturesque records of the war, and it was his defense of Altoona, when Gen. Sherman signalled "Hold on," and he signalled back that he would, which formed the basis of the well-known gospel song "Hold the Fort, I am Coming." The bill passed the senate early in the present session. The other bills are as follows:

Restoring the widow of a dead soldier to the pension rolls who has again married and is again a widow, or divorced.

A bill permitting a soldier who was not mustered, but who went into the service and was wounded, to receive a pension.

An amendment to the act of June 27, 1890, which permits the widow of a man who dies while not a deserter, but still not in the line of duty, to receive a pension.

LABOR'S FRESH EFFORT

A New Union Launched at Chicago.

To Embrace the Entire Country, All Industry and To Enlist Soldiers—"So-Called Leaders Thriving on Toilers' Earnings" To Be Sat Upon. Other Reforms Promised.

CHICAGO, July 25.—A new labor union, the American Labor union, has been launched forth on the troubled seas of the labor world, which its leaders say will gather under one banner the whole army of the toiling masses. It was decided to admit militiamen as members of the new organization, which the directors claim will take the place of the Knights of Labor. The declaration of principles, says the directors, have taken into consideration many obstacles that will be encountered. It declares:

"First will be the assailing of the characters of the prime movers by the so-called labor leaders, caused by the fear of our disrupting older organizations and their leaders' pull with politicians, corporations and shysters of every description.

"Second will be the arduous task of convincing the masses that the so-called labor leaders are too numerous and are thriving on the hard-earned wages of the toiling masses, and that the time has arrived when only one organization of labor is sufficient.

"One general head shorn of all power to precipitate the order into any conflict or strike, the grievance of any one member will be the concern of the whole organization.

"Trades and classes have frequently been fighting corporations single handed to be overwhelmingly defeated in nearly every instance.

"The American Labor union protects its members to its full strength, sacrificing every member to meet combined capital with combined labor under one grand brotherhood of men. Its motto is:

"'The cause of one is the cause of all.'

"The late struggle of labor has clearly convinced the most skeptical that united action must be used, and this action shall be left to the power of the rank and file. We have been for years liberally contributing a share of our hard-earned wages in support of so-called labor leaders, whose asperations have been in many cases to become politicians. The time has arrived for an honest labor organization, with each and every member a leader."

Temporary headquarters will be at McCoy's hotel. There will be chosen two directors from New York, one from Philadelphia, one from Buffalo, one from Kansas City, two from St. Louis, two from the Pacific coast and one each from St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The officers of the union are: W. C. Walsh, president; W. H. Overton, vice president; M. A. Cogley, secretary and treasurer.

HAWAIIAN REPUBLIC.

The United States Government in no Hurry To Recognize It.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—It is understood that no immediate action will be taken by the United States in the way of formal recognition of the Hawaiian republic. The state department is not yet advised with the formality that the occasion requires of establishment of the new republic—that is to say it has nothing but telegraphic information—no mail advices from our minister at Honolulu.

The president regards the Hawaiian matter as transferred to congress. When he receives Mr. Willis' formal announcement of the proclamation of the republic he will transmit that to congress for its action.

Up to the present time Minister Willis has only officially advised this government that the constitution was finished and about to be proclaimed.

LURAVILLE, Fla., July 25.—About 2 a. m. a mob of negroes, led by a negro preacher named Marshall, went to the house of a negro named Jack Thomas to lynch him for assaulting a young negro girl. As the mob approached, Thomas opened fire with a Winchester. His first shot killed Marshall. The mob fired at Thomas without effect and then fled. Thomas has surrendered to the authorities.

Not Worried About Wellman.

CHICAGO, July 25.—Friends of Walter Wellman, while somewhat exercised, are not unduly alarmed over the reports from Norway which state the belief of experienced navigators that his entire expedition has perished in the Arctic seas. A gentleman interested in the expedition said that in the last letter received from Mr. Wellman he said that we need not expect to hear from him again until the latter part of July or the first part of August. Until that time there is no real occasion to worry.

Wants His Wife To Support Him.

She says she was forced to leave him because he would not work, and now he wants her to support him as well as their child.

The government officials are averse to his mission, but they are not likely to interfere now, owing to his position and to the services he rendered during the famine two or three years ago.

All that's Yellow is not Cottolene

There's hardly a housekeeper in the country but has heard of Cottolene the new vegetable shortening. It is a strictly natural product; composed only of clarified cotton seed oil, thickened for convenience in use, with refined beef suet, pure and sweet. So composed,

COTTOLENE

Was bound to win, and to drive out lard from the kitchens of the world. When housekeepers wish to get rid of the unpleasant features and results of lard, they should get Cottolene, taking care that they are not given cheap imitations with vegetable names, spuriously compounded to sell in the place of Cottolene.

It's easy to avoid disappointment and ensure satisfaction. Insist on having Cottolene.

—Attorney Swackhamer this morning won two contract cases in Justice Newcorn's court, by securing a dismissal in the cases of the Standard Oil Company against Benjamin S. Braider, and of Karet against Picke, in each of which cases he represented the defendant.

—Another stroke of enterprise is made by those wide-awake merchants, Putnam & DeGraw, in the sale they are now conducting, at special prices, of things that every woman wants. The list published is only a sample of the immense line of goods at amazingly low figures.

—"Westfield" sends to The Press a long letter submitting further proof of his superior knowledge of local history over the clergyman whose historical accuracy he has been criticizing in his letters. As this series of contributions is too one-sided and too lengthy, The Press must bring it to a close.

THE TELEPHONE SCHEME.

Board of Trade Investigates Manager Pucci's Proposition.

The meeting of members of the Board of Trade was fairly well attended last evening. President Rockfellow presided. Promoter Pucci presented the advantages of the formation of a mutual telephone company, and explained the workings of such an organization. A number of subscribers signed, agreeing to pay $100 to get the line into operation, and to take the service at an estimated cost of $25 per year thereafter.

Others were not yet prepared to say definitely whether they would join in the movement or not, and at the next meeting some definite conclusion in the matter will be reached. Mr. Pucci is working about the city, interviewing merchants and others about the proposed scheme, and is hopeful of meeting with great success, when, through his efforts, the desirability of forming such a company is more generally recognized than it is just now.

It weighed 16½ pounds, and measured 33 inches in length. Nearly ten minutes was spent in trolling the fish to the shore.

ROCKAWAY RECEIVER.

Farmers Get a Change of Financiering for Their Peach-Crop Funds.

The Rockaway Valley Railroad has gone into the hands of Peter N. Honeyman as receiver. The road was built by the farmers of the peach district, and they allege that it has been mismanaged and its funds squandered. They made the application for a receiver to prevent the old management from handling the funds of the season's peach crop, which will be large.

The receiver is regarded by the stockholders as a careful and honest financier. He is a brother of A. V. D. Honeyman of North Plainfield and cousin of Rev. W. E. Honeyman of Somerset street.

The officials write to Mr. Spangenberg that the matter is being considered, and the tenor of their remarks indicates that the proposition is favorably viewed.

Netherwood real-estate holders who desire to have the proposed change effected, and all who suffer from the inconvenience and annoyance of having to go to the north side for their mails, are urged to write to the Postmaster-General at Washington.

WEALTH OF THE RELIGIOUS SECTS.

Preaching Better Than Teaching in the Opinion of Dr. Carroll.

In his article in the August Forum on "The Pay of Preachers" Dr. H. K. Carroll of North Plainfield reaches the conclusion that there is a better prospect for the young man who enters the ministry than for him who makes teaching his profession. He further says:

The wealthiest denomination in the United States, if we estimate denominational wealth according to the average value of the church edifices and sites, is the Jewish. The next is the Unitarian, the third is the Reformed (Dutch), and the fourth the Protestant Episcopal. The average value of the churches of Reformed Jews is $38,839; of the Unitarian, $24,725; of the Reformed (Dutch), $19,227; and of the Protestant Episcopal, $16,182. The Episcopal Church is, however, much more widely distributed than any of the other bodies named. The Jews are almost entirely in the cities, and the Reformed Jews also are largely so, but the Episcopalians are found not only in all the larger cities, but are represented in all the States and Territories. This fact adds to the significance of the high average value reported for its churches. Its ministers, like those of the Presbyterian Church, are well cared for. It makes no separate return for ministerial salaries; but by correspondence I have gathered these facts.

SHOULD MOVE TO PLAINFIELD.

Seventh-Day Adventist in Tennessee Heavily Fined for Working on Sunday.

A Dresden, Tenn., despatch says: "W. B. Capps, a quiet, orderly citizen of this county, is being made the victim of what appears to be a case of religious persecution, the only charge against him being that he performed some work on the first day of the week. Mr. Capps was arrested June 8, 1893, and at his trial before the Circuit Court of Weakley County, June 27, 1893, he was fined $10 and costs, amounting in all to $51.80. His case was appealed to the Supreme Court of Tennessee, which affirmed the judgment of the lower court, May 24, 1894, at Jackson, fixing the costs at $58.65, making as a grand total the sum of $110 45, to be served out at the paltry rate of 25 cents a day. This will necessitate the confinement of the prisoner 442 days, or one year and nearly three months.

"Mr. Capps has a wife 24 years of age, and four children, the eldest being only 6 years old, and one of them sick at the time of its father's imprisonment. His family is left all alone a quarter of a mile from any house. He is a poor man, and unable to support his family during his confinement. He does not deny working on Sunday, but did so because he had rested the day before, according to the Bible; because he recognized his God-given right to labor six days in the week, beginning on the first, as did his Creator; and because, in acceding to the demands of the State to rest on Sunday, he would be denying his Lord. Hence he refuses to pay the fine and costs, regarding them unjust, since the State is attempting to enforce upon him a dogma of religion, with which it can of right have nothing whatever to do. Therefore he has gone to jail, though a physician stated that he could never live in that unhealthy place the time required by the enormity of the State's assessment."

Anne Frances Springsteed.

Miss Anne Frances Springsteed, the author of "The Expert Waitress," is as practical as she is poetic. She is a dainty lady, with her hair prematurely gray. Blessed with serene temperament, she is naturally unlike in habits of study and devotion and yet is alive to the claims of society and well known in the Nineteenth Century club. She is as nearly as possible akin to the Cheeryble brothers. She is guilty of doing delightful deeds of which her right hand never informs her left, but which are nevertheless recorded. She read a fine poem last month before the alumnæ of the Female academy of Albany. She has a talent for investigation; is herself an expert waitress at the hand of science.

Mrs. Mackay's Reception.

At Mrs. Mackay's big reception at her lovely Carlton House Terrace mansion, London, recently it was universally admitted that the prettiest woman present was an American—Mrs. Walter Winans. She was dressed very simply in pearl white satin. Young Lady Craven also was a fair specimen of transatlantic transplantation. She also wore white satin, trimmed with silver embroidery and a good many diamonds. Mrs. Mackay herself looked remarkably well dressed in absolutely unadorned black velvet. Her only ornaments were a few of her splendid pearls at her neck and in her ears.

They Did Well.

Some of the women who came from oriental countries to the World's fair seem to have done very well here. Mme. Hanna Korany is still in New York city and adopts American ways more every day, at least much of her foreign appearance has disappeared except when she is in her national costume. Another woman, Zuleika Sorabji-Cavalier, from India, has recently been married to a Denver man and is now lecturing to procure funds to aid in building a hospital in Bombay for high caste women.

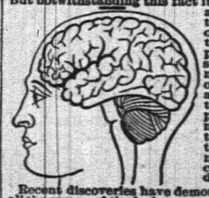
The Champion Girl.

The champion girl of the period lives out on the Muck. From April 1 to June 1 this year she planted three acres of potatoes, did all the cooking and sewing for the family, milked four cows, fed the calves, pigs and chickens, shot three chicken hawks and a wildcat, set the dog on 18 tramps, attended 13 dances and three picnics, read five dime novels and sat up up four nights in the week with her beau.—Tacoma Union.

MYSTERIES!

The Nervous System the Seat of Life and Mind. Recent Wonderful Discoveries.

No mystery has ever compared with that of human life. It has been the leading subject of professional research and study in all ages. But notwithstanding this fact it is not generally known that the seat of life is located in the upper part of the spinal cord, near the base of the brain, and so sensitive is this portion of the nervous system that even the prick of a needle will cause instant death.



Recent discoveries have demonstrated that all the organs of the body are under the control of the nerve centers, located in or near the base of the brain, and that when these are deranged the organs which they supply with nerve fluid are also deranged. When it is remembered that a serious injury to the spinal cord will cause paralysis of the body below the injured point, because the nerve force is prevented by the injury from reaching the paralyzed portion, it will be understood how the derangement of the nerve centers will cause the derangement of the various organs which they supply with nerve force.

Two-thirds of chronic diseases are due to the imperfect action of the nerve centers at the base of the brain, and that the ordinary methods of treatment are wrong. All headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion, pressure, blues, mania, melancholy, insanity, epilepsy, St. Vitus dance, etc., are nervous diseases no matter how caused. The wonderful success of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is due to the fact that it is based on the foregoing principle. Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It contains neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

Lady Mayor Yates.

Mrs. Yates, the lady mayor of Onehunga, New Zealand, has now had some months in office, and to the Melbourne Argus has been given her impressions. She has found no difficulty in the work, and some of the townsfolk say she is the best mayor Onehunga has ever had. Determined to know her duties, she had studied them, and when she found certain members wanted to talk away time—why, she had introduced the closure. The work, Mrs. Yates added, she had not found incompatible with her position as a woman, "nor had she found anything objectionable about being a justice of the peace, but she had only sat on the bench on one or two occasions, one of these being when a little girl was charged with stealing. She refused to attend in an affiliation case when she was asked. She thought that in such cases a right minded woman is inclined to be harder on her sex than men, and she did not think it would be beneficial to adjudicate."

Don't Block Up Fireplaces.

"It is all very well to want to decorate an open fireplace," said a prominent woman physician of New York as we sat waiting in a charming up town flat for the hostess to appear. "Now, Mrs. L. thinks she is way up on hygiene and would be horrified if she was told to the contrary, but with that gaudy screen concealing the fireplace she is shutting off one of the best means of ventilation the room has in summer. The draft which keeps the fire burning in winter doesn't stop because July has come. An open fireplace, with its draft, is a splendid means of keeping any room well ventilated and also cooler. In hotels, where the ugly black iron screen is fastened tightly over the opening, it should be removed. With one window open and the fireplace not stopped up with a lot of truck, a fine current of air can be secured that is a blessing. Nothing more than a potted plant or palm should ever impede that air current."

Suffrage and Immigration.

The practical benefit of woman suffrage in increasing the political power of intelligence is illustrated by the statistics compiled by Dr. Joseph S. Senner, and recently published, in regard to the immigrants landed at Ellis island, New York, during 1893. There were 362,885 males, 122,964 females, almost three men to one woman. This is about the usual proportion. Woman suffrage would double the American vote, while it would add only one-third to the foreign vote, thus vastly increasing the educated majority, while doing no injustie to our naturalized fellow citizens. At present men of foreign birth exert a much greater relative power than their number entitles them to do, since they represent fewer women than do the American voters.—Boston Woman's Journal.

NINE TOWNS, NINE TRUSTEES.

SCHOOL ELECTION IN THE TOWNSHIP OF PISCATAWAY.

Dunellen's Demand for Representation on a Basis of Population Not Recognized—The Borough's Nominations Set Aside.

The school election was held in the New Market public school yesterday afternoon as provided for by the new law. The polls were opened at 3:20 and were closed at 4:20, 110 votes being cast in that time.

A very large number of citizens of Piscataway township were present and the interest taken was intense.

Dunellen presented a claim for three of the commissioners, as about half the population of the township lives in the borough. The nine places in the township each wanted a representative, however, and a discussion of the subject followed. The meeting favored equal town representation.

The places in Piscataway township that they represent are: Dunellen, New Market, Maple Grove, South Plainfield, Union, Raritan Landing, Fieldville, Greenbrook, and Newtown.

The action of the meeting of Monday evening in Dunellen when three commissioners were nominated was set aside and Chairman Frank Fletcher appointed the following committee to nominate men for the positions: Abner S. Corriel, chairman; William Fitz Randolph, Captain Bilsh, Dr. Nelson, and H C. Gaskel.

They presented a list of names and then those present were given an opportunity of making their own nominations. Fifteen men were nominated as follows:

George Conover,	Dr. M. J. Whitford,
C. T. Rogers,	J. H. Rogers,
Albert Sopher,	Taylor Jelliff,
Wm. Fitz Randolph,	F. O. Nelson,
J. C. Morris,	Samuel Pyatt,
Isaac Dayton,	J. H. Sebring,
A. B. Nelson.	Fred Wilcox,

Joseph E. Meeker.

George Day was clerk of election and James Dunham and Martin Nevius were tellers. They announced the following as the result of the voting:

Dr. M. J. Whitford	90
Wm. Fitz Randolph	81
George Conover	72
C. T. Rogers	71
Albert Sopher	71
Taylor Jelliff	58
J. C. Morris	52
Isaac Dayton	61
F. O. Nelson	46

Joseph E. Meeker also received 46 votes making a tie with F. O. Nelson, but the former withdrew and Mr. Nelson was declared elected. There was some dispute as to whether this could be done without another election, but it was finally decided in favor of such action.

Dr. Whitford represents the 340 children in the one Dunellen district with an average attendance of 200, while the remaining eight districts with 440 children and an average attendance of 100 are represented by eight.

Mr. Thomas's Departure.

Secretary Thomas of the Colored Y. M. C. A. has, as was mentioned in The Press of yesterday, severed his connection as active leader of the Association. He resigns because of his acceptance of an offer from the New England Baptist Missionary Convention as a general agent in the educational department.

He has, in his new position, entire charge of the collections for the work in the New England and Middle States. The work takes up so much of his time, and takes him away from the vicinity so often, that he will be unable to do more than call occasionally at Association meetings. The meetings in Central Hall have been discontinued until September 1.

SHAY & ADAMS ACQUITTED.

ATTORNEY DEMEZA SCORES A NOTABLE TRIUMPH.

Takes Plainfield Lawyers to Win Cases, and This Was a Difficult One, in the Face of So Much Bitter Prejudice.

The case of John Shay and Wm. Adams of Fanwood, charged with stealing chickens from Mrs. Julia Wallace of Fanwood, came up the criminal court of Oyer and Terminer in Elizabeth this morning, before Judge McCormick and two associates. Both men were acquitted. The counsel for the defendants was Attorney George DeMeza. Senator Frederick C. Marsh prosecuted the case.

The complainant alleged that the two men had broken into her chicken coop and stolen fifteen fowl the night of July 12. The coop was ten feet away from the house. It was a moonlight night. She had heard a racket, and went downstairs and saw Shay and Adams. She said "Shay and Adams, I want you to leave those chickens alone, or I'll have you arrested". The men then ran away.

Her direct evidence having been finished, Counsel De Meza began an adroit and successful cross-examination He asked Mrs. Wallace how many chickens she had all told. She said she could not tell Asked how she knew then how many had been stolen, she said she had counted them when she put them into the coop that night, ten feet from the house. Her next answer was that the men entered her yard between 12 and 1. The examining counsel turned to her then, and, pointing to the clock in the court-room, asked her to tell the Court what time it was. She could not tell.

Mrs. Wallace's son Lawrence, whose trial on a charge of incendiarism will come up at the next term of court, was then sworn. He testified that he had seen the chickens referred to running about in Adams's yard. Under cross-examination he admitted that he had given Adams some eggs and was not positive that the flock he saw might not have been hatched from those eggs.

The defence then opened by proving a complete alibi. Shay's mother swore that on the night in question her son had not left his home after 10, and Adams's mother testified the same concerning her son. The case was finished at 12:10, when an immediate decision in the favor of the defendants was handed down. Counsel DeMeza deserves great credit for the way in which he handled the case with such decided result.

Judge Moore was not present at the trial. Justice Mosher was an attentive witness.

A Midsummer Magazine.

How girls were courted in the old Puritan days, and the difficulties, now unknown, to marriage are delightfully described by Alice Morse Earle in the August Ladies' Home Journal, which article is put next to a snake story by Max O'Rell, reminiscent of his life in the bush of Australia, and which he calls "My First Snake". Julia Bond Valentine's charming story, "The Whistling Girl", is the subject of two most exquisite illustrations by Irving R. Wiles. Sketches, with portraits, of "Four Famous Young Authors", Richard Harding Davis, Rudyard Kipling, John Kendrick Bangs and Jerome K. Jerome, comprise the biography of the number. Mr. Howells' literary biography, which he has aptly named "My Literary Passions", continues to grow in interest and charm. John Gilmer Speed writes of "Mud-Imprisoned Women", making a strong plea, in behalf of women, for the improvement of country roads. Frank R. Stockton continues to amuse with Pomona's letters to her old mistress, as does A. B. Frost, the original "Rudder Grange" artist, with his clever illustrations. Edward W. Bok writes of "The Boy in the Office", and Grace Ellery Channing of "Politeness in Two Countries". The clever and funny Brownies are at Newport, and their escapades at that fashionable resort are exceedingly amusing. Florence Morse writes of the advantages and disadvantages of "Suburban Life for Women", and Mrs. Garrett Webster gives a very novel idea for a Summer fair under the title "The New Athletic Carnival". Mrs. Mallon writes of "Dainty Styles in Lingerie" and "The Art of Dressing the Hair". Miss Scovil's "Suggestions for Mothers" are valuable, as is the column devoted to "Musical Helps and Hints". Altogether this August issue, with its pretty Summer cover by Alice Barber Stephens, is a particularly dainty issue, and no woman can afford to be without it. Sold by The Curtis Publishing Company of Philadelphia, for 10 cents per number and $1 per year.

Ex-Councilman Emmons in Real Estate.

P. A. Emmons of 15 Jackson avenue has purchased of the Marsh estate a lot 60x180 feet on Somerset street on the upper end of the property occupied by W. F. Williams. This purchase makes Mr. Emmons's Jackson avenue property L-shaped, with an entrance on Somerset street. It was a diplomatic move on the part of Mr. Emmons, but that's the kind of a man he is.

For THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

HANDMADE LINGERIE.

It Costs a Small Fortune and Demands Special Care.

Every now and then some writer on the subject of the wardrobe comes out with the discouraging statement that no woman of refinement will wear undergarments not made by hand. This would seem to be rather a broad generalization, arguing that only women of great wealth deserve to be considered refined, for handmade clothes cost a small fortune and therefore demand special care in the laundry. There are millions of well dressed and well bred women who wear machine sewed underclothing because they cannot afford the outlay for handmade garments and can still less afford to keep a servant especially to do fine washing. Delicate clothing sent to the best of laundries comes back eaten to holes by chemicals and torn by careless handling. Unless one is able to engage a skilled maid to take entire charge of all delicate washable articles it is foolish extravagance to pay $7 or $8 for the simplest sort of a nightgown and for other garments in proportion. Washed in the usual way, the stock of underwear has to be continually replenished, and at the rate of cost mentioned it would take all of an average woman's allowance to keep her in lingerie. Of course she can make it herself if she has no more improving way of spending her time and eyesight. Her grandmother did so, but in her grandmother's day there were no sewing machines, and underwear could not, as a rule, be bought ready made. Not only was the young lady of olden days satisfied with a very plain outfit, but her washing was far better done. The undergarments of the women of 75 or 100 years ago lasted half a lifetime, but the same garments under the present laundry system would not last six months. When neat and pretty clothing, made of good muslin and carefully finished, can be bought at such a moderate price as it is sold for at present, it would be a silly woman who would refuse to wear it because it is sewed by machine unless she were a millionaire, who could afford every luxury in keeping. And it would be an equally silly woman who would sit stooping over her needle hours in succession making clothing destined to endure very little longer than the length of time consumed in its preparation.

An illustration is given of a tea gown made of cream mousseline delaine embroidered with light blue figures. It has a wattoau back and a princess front and is trimmed with cream lace.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

USES OF ALCOHOL.

It May Be Employed In Innumerable Ways. A Handsome House Gown.

Alcohol is one of the most useful adjuncts of the toilet table, as many persons know. Cologne in the bath is often recommended, but it is beneficial chiefly on account of the alcohol which is its basis. Used once a week mixed with water it stimulates the skin, makes it smooth and keeps it in good condition. Pure alcohol rubbed on the neck, shoulders and arms before going out in evening dress in the winter will act as a preventive of catching cold. After painful or exhausting experiences, like a morning at the dentist's, for instance, a cloth wet with alcohol rubbed briskly over the face and throat will revive one greatly.

Alcohol will take oil paint off the hands, and the best spirits of camphor can be made at home by putting gum camphor in a bottle and pouring alcohol over it. Alcohol also affords relief from the pain of insect bites and stings and is usually effective when applied as a liniment for lameness, strains or weak muscles. It is often used thus as a daily treatment for weakly infants and children, with favorable results. In fact, its uses are innumerable, from cleaning jewelry to washing the face, but it must not be spilled on lacquered silver toilet articles, as it dissolves the transparent varnish and leaves the silver exposed to the air, which soon turns it black.

Pink is greatly favored in Paris for tea and house gowns just now. Alone and in combination with white and colors, it is much used. An illustration is given of a house gown of white embroidered gauze. The full gauze skirt is made over a skirt of pink taffeta, and a ruche of the same material trims the bottom. The blouse bodice is of taffeta and is gathered in at the waist by a belt of rose moire, with long ends. The gauze pelerine is made over a taffeta lining and trimmed with a taffeta ruche. The sleeves are of gauze similarly lined and trimmed. JUDIC CHOLLET.

NO COMPROMISE YET

And None in Sight on the Tariff Deadlock.

Democrats in Caucus Express Themselves Firmly for the Senate Bill—Hill Again Indorses the President's Stand on the Tariff and Declines To Attend the Conference.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—One of the most entertaining and remarkable features in the present great national performance on the floor of the senate was the part played in it by Senator Hill (dem., N. Y.) as the defender of President Cleveland against the assaults of democratic senators in connection with the president's now famous letter to Mr. Wilson, the chairman of the house conferees on the tariff bill.

Mr. Hill took the ground that the letter being unofficial was no violation of the constitution; that it was no attack upon the senate, or upon any senator, but that it was an honest effort to carry out the policy and theories of the democratic party, and to advance the interests of the people. As to its being an unwarranted attempt to interfere with pending legislation, Mr. Hill asserted that the blame lay with those senators who, instead of acting on their own judgment and responsibility, "badgered" the president to give them his views upon the compromise bill which they had prepared.

He wound up a two hours' speech (bristling all over with the spikes and spears of wit and sarcasm) by comparing the senatorial conspiracy against President Cleveland to that which compassed the assassination of Julius Cæsar. In this historical parallel Senator Gorman, of Maryland stood for the "lean and hungry Cassius," of whom Cæsar said: "He thinks too much; such men are dangerous;" Senator Jones, of Arkansas, for "Honest Brutus;" Senator Vest, of Missouri, for the "envious Casca;" Senator Voorhees for Trebonius; and "the distinguished senator from Tennessee," Mr. Harris, for Cinna. He carried out the parallel by declaring that these senators made the same plea which the conspirators of old made—"not that they loved Cæsar less, but that they loved Rome more"—"not that they loved Cleveland less, but that they loved their party and the country more."

Mr. Hill was followed by Senator Caffer, of Louisiana, who submitted a motion looking to the restoration in the sugar schedule of a bounty for 1894. In a short speech (which was however not concluded) he accused the democratic managers of bad faith in striking out the sugar bounty and declared explicitly for himself and his colleague (Mr. Blanchard) that they would not vote for the tariff bill if it put sugar on the free list.

Democratic Caucus.

A few minutes after the senate adjourned the democratic senators went into caucus for the purpose of formulating a programme in regard to the disposal of the tariff bill. For three hours the discussion continued, and at that time, without having reached any conclusion, an adjournment was taken until to-day at the same hour.

Three members of the democratic party were conspicuous by their absence from this conference. These men were Senators Hill, Murphy and Irby, two of whom are said to be ready to vote against the bill in certain emergencies, and one, Mr. Hill, who has time and again declared his opposition to the bill so long as the income tax remains a part of it. Every other senator now in the city was present, except Mr. Voorhees and Mr. Daniels, but their absence was due to illness.

Hill Declined to Attend.

Mr. Hill was not notified officially of the caucus until a few minutes before the adjournment of the senate. He was then notified in the cloakroom by Mr. Gorman and requested to be present. Mr. Hill frankly told the chairman of the caucus that inasmuch as he was opposed to the bill, and would do all he could to defeat it so long as the party saw fit to keep the income tax in it, he did not believe he ought to participate in a conference that had for its object the passage of the measure and the settlement of party quarrels.

The caucus discussion partook of the nature of conversation more than of speech making, although there were some very pertinent and emphatic observations indulged in.

Soon after the caucus convened Mr. Jarvis, of North Carolina, offered a resolution that the bill be sent back to conference without instructions of any sort to the conferees, and upon that resolution all of the discussion was based.

Insist on the Senate Bill.

The conservatives, so-called, the men who formulated the present bill, did none of the talking, but one of the senators said after the caucus was over that those who did talk—and there were few who did not—were as zealous in their advocacy of the senate bill as any member of the conservatives could be and insisted as strenuously that the senate bill should prevail.

Almost all of the debate and cross-fire between senators was directed at Mr. Vilas in an effort to induce him to withdraw his motion to strike out the differential on refined sugar. Mr. Vilas did not indicate to the caucus just what he would do in this connection, but made a plea for the administration, saying that in view of the strong letter the president had written there should be some sort of concession on the part of the senate and he believed the concession should be, among other things, on the sugar schedule.

House of Representatives.

The committee on rules gave the day's session to the committee on public lands and in two and a half hours Mr. McRae (dem., Ark.), chairman, succeeded in having passed fourteen bills reported from his committee. Two of these were of particular importance, one providing for a settlement of the claims by and against the state of Arkansas and the United States, and the other providing for the separation of the mineral lands in the Northern Pacific grant in Idaho and Montana and granting patents to the settlers thereon.

The bill which came over from Saturday and Monday as unfinished business was passed, directing the re-employment as first as vacancies occur of the railway postal clerks who were discharged between March 15 and May 1, 1893.

An hour of the session was spent in an unavailing effort to consider the bill directing the payment to West Virginia of the amount of direct tax collected from it, irrespective of claims by the federal government against the state.

RETURN OF THE SQUADRON

A Cordial Welcome Extended Admiral Goncalves' Fleet at Rio.

RIO DE JANEIRO, July 25.—June 23 was the day fixed by the government for the return of the legal squadron, and the day was decreed a national holiday, orders being issued to all the forts and fortified points in Rio and Nictheroy to fire a salute of 21 guns.

Various popular commissions were organized to meet Admiral Goncalves, chief of the squadron, and the time for the entry was announced as between 10 o'clock and midday.

The town was well decorated, and almost all business houses were closed. Many flags were hung out, the American and Brazilian predominating; in the government circles the two hung together.

The day proved a very dull and rainy one, it being difficult to make out the other side of the bay; but this did not prevent thousands of spectators from lining the shore and hills in order to witness the entry. Many launches, ferry boats and small vessels steamed down the bay to accompany the returning fleet.

About 12:30 the vessels were seen arriving at the bar, where they manœuvred for some time, taking up positions.

The Gustavo Sampaio, the torpedo catcher which damaged the Aquidaban at Santa Catharina, entered first, being saluted by Santa Cruz, and the roar of artillery increased as the vessels entered one after another, all joining in the saluting.

The rebel cruisers Republica, Iris and Meteoro were among those that entered. The Aquidaban, towed by the Nictheroy, arrived about 8 o'clock the same night. The only foreign war vessel present was the French cruiser Duquesne, which returned the salutes as the vessels passed her.

The Aquidaban entered the dock at the Ilhadas Cobras yesterday afternoon. The damage inflicted by the Sampaio is plainly visible. She was struck by the torpedo in the bow just below the ram. It is surprising that she sustained so little damage from cannon fire, considering that she passed between three forts three times. She bears only eleven slight dents (the deepest not more than half an inch) on her armor plate, as though a few shells had struck her and glanced off. One of the davits is gone, one ventilator is crushed and the funnel is perforated by half a dozen bullets.

SUIT THE ONLY RECOURSE NOW.

Olney Not Surprised That Mrs. Stanford Refused To Pay Up.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Attorney-General Olney was not at all surprised by the dispatch from San Francisco stating that Mrs. Leland Stanford had declined to accede to the demand of the United States for the payment of $15,000,000 made against her late husband's estate in connection with the maturing indebtedness of the Central Pacific railroad.

He naturally did not expect that a demand of that kind would be honored like a sight draft.

The only thing now left for the government to do, said the attorney-general, is to bring suit as the bonds mature.

An Old Homestead Burned.

STAPLETON, S. I., July 25.—The Van Duser homestead, one of the oldest houses on Staten Island, was burned to the ground last evening, the fire being caused by a defective flue. The house was built over 150 years ago and the house adjoining at that time was the old Vanderbilt home, where Commodore Vanderbilt was afterward born.

STAMFORD, Conn., July 25.—Simon Ingersoll, the inventor of the Ingersoll rock drill, is dead at his home in Glen Brook, aged 82 years. NEW EVIDENCE

Of Dr. Lighthill's Success.

A Flattering Testimonial From Col. John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure, in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose statement is published below. I can personally vouch that every word which it contains may be relied upon as absolutely true and correct in every particular.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

A HAPPY EXPERIENCE.

The Interesting Testimony of Mr. W. E. Dilts, the Popular Passenger Conductor of the N. J. Central.

ROSELLE, N. J., July 1, 1894.

To My Friends and the Public:

I take pleasure in calling public attention to the remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case. For the past ten years I had been afflicted with a severe form of piles which finally gave me the greatest pain and distress nearly all the time, and from which I could not obtain any relief, in spite of all my efforts.

Hearing of a number of cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in similar cases, I placed myself under his care, and I rejoice to say he effected a complete cure in my case and gave me new life in doing so, for I am sure that I could not have endured my misery much longer. And it will be a matter of importance to those who are suffering from this disease to learn the happy fact that Dr. Lighthill effected my cure without giving me pain or detaining me from my work.

W. E. DILTS.

Dr. Lighthill

SENATE WILL INSIST

The Tariff Bill Must Go Back To Conference.

The Sugar Schedule May Be Changed—Coal and Iron Ore Will Not Be Changed—Mr. Smith Warns Senator Vilas That He Is Trifling With a Weighty Subject.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—If the action of yesterday's democratic caucus is obeyed to-day will witness an end of the debate on the conference report on the tariff bill and that measure will go back to the conference without instructions.

The caucus met promptly at 3 o'clock and the first speech was that of Mr. Gordon, who counseled unity of action and said he hoped that the result of the meeting would be that all proposed motions looking to instructions to the conferees would be withdrawn and the bill sent back with a simple insistence of the senate upon its amendments. Several other speeches were made in this strain by Senators Gray, Jarvis, Lindsay, Walsh and others.

The first step in this direction necessitated the ascertainment of what Mr. Vilas intended to do in regard to his motion to strike out the differential duty placed upon refined sugar. In response to a direct question put to him Mr. Vilas said that he was in favor of striking out the differential duty because he believed by so doing much of the opposition that was manifested against the bill would be removed and the way would be paved for the adjustment of the differences between the two houses. With this duty, which he said was the chief bone of contention, out of the way, there could be nothing to interfere with the speedy settlement of all the troubles and the early passage of the bill and the approval of the president. For that reason Mr. Vilas said it was his intention to press the motion and cause it to prevail if possible.

Mr. Caffery and Mr. Blanchard both spoke on the sugar schedule and advocated a "flat" duty of 45 per cent. on all sugars and the payment of the bounty for this year, which they asserted with some feeling had been promised by the finance committee and had not been given them. Both the Louisiana senators declared that if this change to 45 per cent. was not made the Louisiana people would insist that the full measure of protection promised them in the pending bill should be granted or they would vote against the bill. Unless this was done, they served notice on the caucus that they would vate against the bill. It mattered little to them what instructions were given the conferees; what they were concerned about was the final agreement. If it did not include these points it could not receive the sanction of the Louisiana senators.

Mr. Vilas spoke in reply to this and again urged that the differential duty be struck out. This called Mr. Smith, of New Jersey, to the floor and he made a speech in tones that even the marble rooms of the building could not keep from penetrating the outside. Mr. Smith was emphatic and vehement. He warned Mr. Vilas that he was trifling with a weighty subject when he talked of changing the bill which had been the result of so much hard work in the senate and which had only passed by a very slim majority of one vote. Mr. Smith said that a number of senators who had been opposed to the income tax had been induced to vote for the bill because the schedules relating to the industries of the great states they represented had been arranged so their shops would not be compelled to shut up or their workmen thrown out of employment. Because this had been done they consented to swallow the income tax and given their pledge in caucus that they would stand by the party. A duty had been placed on raw sugar and if that was right, it was, he said, no more than right that a differential duty should be placed on refined sugar, an industry that gave employment to thousands of men in the states where refining of sugar was conducted. Any attempt to change this schedule or any other schedule striking at the salient points of the bill would, Mr. Smith said, be hailed with satisfaction by those who had bolted the income tax, because they were very sick of their bargain and would jump at anything that would release them from it.

Mr. Brice reminded Mr. Vilas of the trouble the finance committee had in getting a bill that would command the support of the necessary 43 votes, and said that as a member of the steering committee he had at the outset analyzed the vote in the senate and found that a bill could only be passed by carefully considering the concessions demanded by the senators who represented the manufacturing and industrial states.

In the further discussion participated in by Mr. Vest, Mr. Smith and Mr. Brice, it was shown Mr. Vilas, as these gentlemen viewed the situation, that the bill was weaker to-day than it was when it passed the senate by its very small majority.

"With your own vote for the bill counted," said one senator, addressing Mr. Vilas, "there is to-day but 42 votes solid for the bill which is now on the vice-president's table. And yet you propose to push a motion that must, that will inevitably drive from us more of our own votes." This was intended, as one senator who described the situation said, to refer to Mr. Murphy, and particularly Mr. Irby, both of whom have declined to enter the caucus and who are looked upon as at least lukewarm in their friendship for the bill, although both of them voted for it before.

The subject of coal and iron was again brought up, but they did not cut much of a figure in the debate which raged chiefly over sugar. There was a hint that it would be wise for the senate to reduce the duty on coal and iron, but Mr. Pugh at once took issue with this suggestion and reiterated what he said yesterday, telling the caucus that if those two matters were touched neither he nor his colleague would vote for the bill.

Finally as the hour of 5 o'clock approached and Mr. Vilas was continually pushed for an answer to the one question that was on the mind of the democrats present, he said that he had become possessed of a good deal of information that was news to him. He did not want to defeat the bill, he said; he was earnestly in favor of passing a bill as soon as possible, and ending the trouble and giving the country rest and quiet. He said that he would take the matter under careful advisement and would decide it in his own mind in the morning.

It is the programme to have this done to-day. A prominent senator who took an active part in yesterday's caucus said last night that the result meant the senate bill. The sugar schedule may be changed in its language so as to make the specific duty given refined sugar an ad valorem rate, but if this was done, he said, it would be the equivalent of the specific rate and would not jeopardize the bill. Coal and iron ore will not be changed and the indications are, indeed, as was said in the caucus, that it was known the house would ultimately yield and accept the senate bill with some modifications.

Debate in the Senate Without Excitement.

Tariff Discussion Creates Little Interest—Senators Daniel and Hunton Correct an Error in Mr. Gorman's Speech—Several Bills Passed—Proceedings in the House.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—The debate in the senate yesterday on the question of agreeing to the request of the house of representatives for further conference on the tariff bill was not of so exciting or interesting a character as was the debate on the first three days; and there was not an illusion made, except a very remote one, to the president's famous letter to Mr. Wilson. There were three speeches made—the longest by Senator Caffery (dem., La.,) and two short ones by Senators Daniel and Hunton (dems., Va.). Mr. Caffery's speech was in advocacy of his motion to have a modified sugar bounty paid for 1894, and in favor of a fair revenue duty on sugar. Failing in getting such protection for the sugar interest of Louisiana, Mr. Caffery declared, "more in sorrow than in anger," that himself and his colleague would be forced to antagonize the bill and to part the ties which now bound them to the democratic party.

The speeches of Senators Daniel and Hunton were called out by a desire to correct an error in the report of Mr. Gorman's speech of Monday last which represented them, with senators from four or five other states, as being so inimical to the house bill that they would have voted against it. Mr. Daniel declared that he had named no conditions to command his vote, and that, whether the bill as it would be finally fixed in conference suited him or not, it would have his support. Mr. Hunton expressed himself in favor of the proposed duty of 40 cents a ton on coal and iron ore and of 40 per cent. ad valorem on sugar, as fair revenue duties, and hoped there was patriotism enough in the democrats of both houses "to give and take." A motion was made by Mr. Quay (rep., Pa.) so to amend the motions of Senators Vilas and Gray as to put sugar on the free list. The whole matter then went over till to-day without action.

During the morning hour there were seven bills taken from the calendar and passed; the conference report on the legislative, executive and judiciary appropriation bill was presented and agreed to; and a resolution was offered by Mr. Allen (pop., Neb.)—and went over till to-day—calling for copies of all telegrams and correspondence of the department of justice with the representatives of railroad companies and with the United States district-attorney of Chicago on the subject of "the recent industrial troubles" in that city.

The senate adjourned at 5:12.

House of Representatives.

The day was set apart by the house committee on rules for the consideration of measures reported from the committee on invalid pensions, and Chairman Martin succeeded in having passed three bills of a general nature. These were house bills to amend the general act of June 27, 1890, by providing pensions for widows and orphans of soldiers who died or were killed in discharge of duty and who did not therefore receive discharges from the service; authorizing fourth-class postmasters to administer oaths to pensioners; to extend during the term of their natural lives the pensions granted to insane, idiotic or otherwise permanently helpless orphan children of a deceased soldier.

The senate bill to pension Frances Corse, widow of the late Gen. John M. Corse, at the rate of $100 a month, was also passed.

The conference report on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill was submitted by Mr. Dockery, (dem., Mo.), and after half an hour's desultory debate was agreed to. The bill carries a total appropriation of $21,308,203, being a decrease of $557,507 from the bill for the year ended June 30, 1894.

Speaker Crisp laid before the house the letter of the French minister of foreign affairs announcing the fact that he had presented to the chamber of deputies the resolutions of congress on the death of President Carnot, and expressing the thanks of the French government for the sympathy of the United States with France in her grief.

NICARAGUA CANAL.

Money Enough To Finish It Offered by English Capitalists.

NEW YORK, July 25.—James R. Bartlett, the chairman of the Nicaragua canal reorganization committee, and Smith M. Weed, a member of the committee, sailed on the steamer Teutonic, of the White Star line, for London. They go at the invitation of a coterie of English capitalists who have offered to furnish the money necessary to complete the canal.

For some weeks the offer of the foreigners has been under consideration. It had been hoped up to a few weeks ago that the money to carry on the work could be raised in this country. A number of gentlemen, it is said, offered to come to the front with the amount necessary, but they failed to make good their promise. The last hope of the committee was, in consequence, gone, and so they decided to see what there was in the offer of the London people.

Messrs. Bartlett and Weed go authorized by the committee to take any action that they see fit. The capital required is about $80,000,000.

BROWNSON DETACHED.

Ordered the First Shot at a Man-of-War Since the Rebellion.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Commander Willard H. Brownson, of the Detroit, has been detached.

He was selected at his own request by Admiral Benham at Rio to convoy American merchant vessels to their dock, at the height of the revolution, and covered his ship with glory by steaming past the heaviest ships of Mello's rebel fleet and firing the shot that virtually ended the blockade. It was claimed to be the first shot fired by an American warship at a man-of-war since the civil war.

It is understood that Commander Brownson will be attached to the naval academy.

PLOT TO MURDER WHITES.

Simpson County, Miss., Stirred Up by Bad Negroes.

JACKSON, Miss., July 26.—Several parties are here from Simpson county and confirm the reports of a plot by the negroes to murder the whites by wholesale in the Rocky Ford neighborhood. They report that section greatly stirred up over the matter. That section of the county has few negroes, comparatively, which makes the plot the more extraordinary. It is said, however, the county contains some very bad negroes. Several negroes were whipped, which, it is thought, will quiet them down. The report of the lynching of the negro Grower, the leader, is doubted here.

Tommy Danforth Knocked Out.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 26.—Harry Finnick, the "Arkansas Kid," put Tommy Danforth out in seven rounds before the Twin City Athletic club last night. Finnick was weak as the result of getting to 128 pounds on too short notice or the fight would not have lasted as long as it did. Danforth was clever enough, and four of the seven rounds were good and lively. In the seventh he worked the pivot blow successfully and nearly landed the Kid, but the latter finally got in a punch with his right that sent Danforth down so hard he stayed there.

DEBS OUT OF JAIL

The President of the A. R. U. Ready for Work.

Will Not State What He Intends To Do—Claims His Organization Is Gaining Strength—He and His Associates Are Under Heavy Bail—Grand Master Wilkinson's Order.

CHICAGO, July 26.—Messrs. Debs, Howard, Keliher and Rogers, of the American Railway union, are at liberty under bail pending the hearing of the various cases against them. They were required to give $7,000 bond each, covering five new indictments in addition to the contempt cases brought by the government and the Santa Fe railroad. The hearing of the contempt cases was continued until Sept. 5, and it is the purpose of the defendants' attorneys to force a hearing on the indictments before the contempt cases are again called.

Messrs. William Fitzgerald and William Skakel, the two gentlemen who were already on the bond of the defendants for $3,500 each, signed the additional twenty-eight bonds and the aggregate amount of their guarantee is $9,500, on each of the four men $33,000.

On account of the large number of bonds to be furnished Judge Grosscup reduced the bonds on contempt to $1,000 in each case. The defendants all declared themselves ready for work.

A meeting of the board of directors is to be held to-day after which President Debs will decide on his future course. He is desirous of going to his home in Indiana for a short stay, and will probably leave for there this evening. He refuses to say what he intends to do until he can look around and get his bearings after being locked up for a week. He claims that his organization is increasing in strength daily and talks as if he would be doing business at the old stand within 12 hours.

Wilkinson, grand master, of Galesburg, Ill., to report for expulson any member of the order who struck in sympathy with the American Railway union. ONLY RUMORS OF WAR

No Authentic News of Battles at Korea.

There May Be an Amicable Settlement of the Affair—Great Britain Says She Will Not Interfere Unless Her Rights Are Infringed Upon—Russia Keeping Her Hands Off.

LONDON, July 26.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Central News says:

"Numerous rumors of further fighting at Seoul are current here, but none can be confirmed. The Koreans continue to menace the Japanese of the Seoul garrison. Intelligent native opinion here is that there will be an amicable settlement in which the Europeans will have no share.

"The Chinese arsenals and arms factories are busy night and day. The officers of Chinese gunboats are filling the numerous vacancies on the vessels with seamen attracted by generous bounties."

There is a strong impression at the Japanese legation here that fighting is in progress in Korea, although no official notice to that effect has been received. The officials at the Chinese legation have heard nothing of the reported sinking of a Chinese transport by a Japanese vessel. They say that their information indicates an improvement in the situation, and they are hopeful that peace will be restored, if it has been formally broken. It is understood that the British squadron in Chinese waters has been ordered to defer its cruise northward.

The Central News says: "Great Britain has informed China and Japan that in case they infringe upon her interests, she will take whatever steps are necessary, but otherwise will not interfere in the present dispute. Important cablegrams were sent last night to Admiral Fremantle, commander of her majesty's squadron in Chinese waters.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—The Japanese minister has received no further advices in regard to the bring by Korean forces (instigated as was alleged by the Chinese representatives) on the Japanese forces now encamped in Seoul, the capital of the curious aggregation of tribes which forms the kingdom of Korea. He therefore was inclined to believe that the incident would not bring about any immediately serious results.

An official of the legation said to-day concerning the reported landing of 1,000 Russian troops at Gensan that it was extremely improbable, because Russia would have no interest in landing troops there except to take part in some hostilities. In view of the fact that Russia has tendered her good offices to China and Japan for the settlement of the present controversy, it does not look from this official's view point as if Russia would attempt such an invasion. He was amused at the report published that the Korean king had been kidnapped by the Japanese, and said it was ridiculous, for the reason that Japan was not making war against Korea. He added: "In the event of a war between Japan and China, the ports in China and Korea where the United States and European powers have received certain concessions by treaties, would unquestionably be respected, and left outside of the limits of hostilities."

Chinese Troops Landed at Korea.

SHANGHAI, July 26.—It is reported that 12,000 Chinese troops who sailed on July 20 with eight warships have been landed in Korea. This report, although unconfirmed, has been received with satisfaction by the foreign residents of Shanghai. If the facts be as stated, they say, the Japanese, who must have known of the expedition's plan to land, refrained from attack because they had become more amenable to the pacific counsel of the treaty powers.

Gen. Trumbull Declines.

CHICAGO, July 26.—Gen. Lyman Trumbull stated to-day that he had wired President Cleveland his declination of the appointment as a member of the strike investigation commission. COWARDLY JULY.

Strikes Down the Precious Babes—Fatal Cases of Cholera Infantum Terminate Inside a Few Hours—May Be Prevented by the Use of Lactated Food.

The big plants with their roots deep in the earth grow strong when the July sun beats down on them, but the flowers droop and die before the fierce heat.

Babies and young children feel the disastrous effects of heat more than others.

But physicians positively declare that where the strength is carefully kept up, and every possibility of contagion removed by using "a splendid nutriment," as doctors call lactated food, the presence of high temperature can do no harm. For at the bottom, cholera infantum is the result of a condition of things that follows improper feeding.

During hot weather the slightest signs of indigestion or diarrhea should receive immediate attention and be met by close scrutiny of the diet. Babies and young children who do not eat with relish, who are weak and debilitated, "pick up" marvelously when they are put on a diet of lactated food even for a few weeks. Lactated food is taken with relish when all other nutriment is refused.

Every element of pure mother's milk is met in lactated food.

Keep baby upon lactated food and it will escape cholera infantum and dangerous summer illness.

No household with little children in it should feel safe during these hot days and nights unless they know lactated food is at hand for emergencies.

It is the food upon which hundreds of happy mothers have nourished their little ones. Says Mrs. H. E. Chapman of Newton Centre, Mass., whose baby is shown above, in a letter to the makers of this food:

"I wish to tell you about our baby. We tried a food at first that baby did not seem to like, so he always left half in his bottle. Finally he was taken very sick and the doctor advised us to use lactated food, which we did at once, and from that time until this he has cried for it every 2 hours, and although we always give him one and one-half cupfuls, he has never left any in his bottle. He is now one year old and has grown to be such a fat and healthy boy."

Every mother should try lactated food. Any druggist will sell for 25 cents a package large enough to make 10 pints of nourishing food, and in large packages it is even less expensive.

CIRCULATION EXCEEDS THAT OF ALL OTHER PLAINFIELD DAILIES COMBINED.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., JULY 26, 1894

AND THAT'S SO!

The Daily Press is Proud to Echo This Honest, Manly Tribute to the President.

(The Sunshine in Town Topics.)

When Grover Cleveland was nominated for a second presidential term by the Democratic party and afterward elected, a fine lesson was taught to the insincere and sneaking part of this nation. It was then shown, to the glory of God and the honor of man, that an honest gentleman can triumph over his cowardly enemies and that humanity at large recognizes and values purity and true courage. In the face of the most contemptible opposition in his own political party, insulted, hounded and knifed by half the so-called Democratic newspapers in the country, Mr. Cleveland, without the least sacrifice of dignity or principle, commanded the respect and confidence of the majority of the people and was re elected President. It was denied that he could get the nomination, but he got it. It was declared that he could not be elected, but he was. At every point, with a quiet ease that was beautiful to see, he won.

To day Mr. Cleveland is as honest, as wise, and as capable, as ever. His enemies have become doubly malignant and active, but Mr. Cleveland, knowing the situation he is in, does not yield an inch, but continues the same upright, dignified and honest gentleman that it is his nature to be. And he is as strong as ever in the hearts of the people. Mr. Cleveland has done all that one man may do to preserve the credit of the Government. He is bound hand and foot, but even then he is greater than his relentless enemies, and will rout them in the end. History will recall him as a President that dared to do right at all times and in the face of every species of intimidation.

SUICIDE OF AN OLD MAN.

He Was Found Dying on the Roadside Near Elizabeth.

(Special to The Press.)

ELIZABETH, July 26.—This morning a provision dealer of Newark of the name of Marks, while coming to Elizabeth, saw an aged man writhing in great pain at the roadside on Newark avenue, near Elizabeth. He alighted from his wagon and went to the man's assistance. The man could not speak Marks dragged him near the road, but the sufferer died in his arms.

A short distance off in the bushes was found a four-ounce bottle which had contained carbolic acid, most of which the dead man had taken. In a pocket book was a receipt made for a $50 bond by the New York Metropolitan Life Insurance Company to Adolph Lins. The bottle was labeled "Kugler's drug store, Newark." Lins was about 55

THE SECRET ORDERS.

Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., meets this evening, and the Orient degree may be worked.

The Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance held an all-day session in Somerville yesterday. About fifty were present. From Plainfield attended Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Mattox, Miss Gertrude Rittenhouse, William B. Ayers, and Miss Sarah E Mattox. In addition to the routine of the session, money was raised by subscription, and a floral piece purchased. The members of the order then marched in a body to the grave of the late Most Worthy Grand Patriarch Ransom, who was formerly at the head of the international organization. It was decided that Temperance Day at Boynton Beach would be celebrated Wednesday, August 8 The Division adjoined to hold the next session in Camden Wednesday, October 31.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Rev. Charles E. Herrick will speak tonight in the East Third Street Mission. His discourse will have reference to the Society of Christian Endeavor.

Unpleasant Sewing.

While Harry Rand was standing on a step-ladder putting up screens this morning in his brother's store on West Front street, he slipped and fell. His right foot and leg went through the glass in a show-case, cutting him in several places. Dr. Lowry was called and found it necessary to take three stitches in the cuts.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

Devilled Clams.

The clams are first scalded five minutes in their own liquor, drained very dry and chopped fine, then mixed with the following mixture: Put into a double boiler a half pint of cream. Rub together one tablespoonful of butter and two of flour; stir this, with a pinch of ground mace and a shake of cayenne, into the boiling cream with the clams and stir over the fire until it thickens; then add the beaten yolk of an egg and a teaspoonful of chopped parsley; stir until very thick and turn out to cool. When cold shape into small cylinders, dip in egg and bread crumbs and fry in smoking hot fat. This same mixture may be put into the clam shells (which should be nicely cleaned and washed), brushed over with the yolk of an egg, sprinkled with bread crumbs, a bit of butter on top and browned quickly in a hot oven. You may then call them "devilled."

A Sailors Suit.

The sailor suit is always popular. This year white is largely used. A very "chic" suit is shown in our illustration. The dress is of plain white serge; white vest, sleeves and zouave; revers of pale blue silk, the same shade as the sash; anchors are embroidered on the yoke of the vest and the sash ends above the fringe. Hat of white felt, trimmed with black and white striped silk and jetted crow quills.

Warm Drinking Water.

Warm water is preferable to cold water as a drink to persons who are subject to dyspeptic and bilious complaints, and it may be taken more freely than cold water, and consequently answers better as a diluent for carrying off bile. When water of a temperature equal to that of the human body is used for drink, it proves considerably stimulant, and is particularly suited to dyspeptic, bilious, gouty and chlorotic subjects.

JAMES CANNON DEAD.

THE WHOLE TOWN KNEW HIM AS "UNCLE JIMMY".

He Was the Oldest Man in the City Limits, and a Local Landmark—His Famous Cure for Rheumatism, and His Story of the Raffle.

James Cannon died in his 90th year at his home, 404 East Third street, last evening at 8:30. He had gradually wasted away since he was stricken with apoplexy six months and a-half ago.

In 1847 Mr. Cannon came to Plainfield from County Mayo, Ireland. He lived at first on East Fourth street, but 25 years ago he built the house on East Third street where he lived until he died. He was a tailor by trade, and worked steadily at it, being employed by various establishments in Plainfield. He was industrious and saving. For the past ten years he had not been able to work, except at odd jobs.

Decedent was twice married, bringing his first wife with him from Ireland. Their children, four daughters and a son, are Mrs. Owen Smith, Mrs. John Morgan, Miss Catherine Cannon and James Cannon, Jr. His first wife dying, Mr. Cannon married Miss Margaret Sullivan, who survives him. Their only daughter, Miss Annie Cannon, has always lived with her father and mother. The other children, those by his first wife, have left Plainfield. Other relatives are nephews and nieces living in Junction, Hackettstown and Brooklyn, and those related to his family in his Irish birthplace.

Mr. Cannon was a devout Catholic, being a member of St. Mary's Church. He was interested in all of the doings of the church people, and it is said of him that up to the time of his last illness, he never missed attending the funeral of a Plainfield Catholic.

"Jimmie" Cannon had all of the humor and jolly spirit of his race. There were two stories which he always delighted to relate. One was of a joke at a raffle when he assisted in removing the works from a clock which was put up to be chanced off for the benefit of a friend. The raffle proceeded without any unusual incident until a number was read and "Jimmie" Cannon was called. He was finally found and brought up to the table, and told that it was his turn to take a chance. He was not anxious to risk a raffle on a clock-case and dial, and his reply, "Jimmie Cannon's here, but his 50 cents is not", brought forth a roar of laughter. The words, used in reply to the calling of his name, remained a catch-phrase in connection with him all his life.

Another incident of his life which "Jimmie" was fond of telling about was his marvelous cure after suffering for years from rheumatism. The treatment consisted in the strapping him down to a platform and making thirteen marks with a red-hot poker upon his back, searing a checker-board pattern in his flesh. It was successful, and "Jimmie" never suffered from the disease thereafter.

Always full of fun, he would often of recent years stop into The Press office on his way about town with his tailor-work, to tell his friends of his condition, and prove how well he felt in spite of his advanced age by dancing an Irish jig just as he had danced it years before, when age had not yet brought its influence to bear upon his agility. Known by all the town, and a friend of every one, was "Jimmie" Cannon, for he had come to Plainfield when it was a hamlet at the crossing of two cowpaths, as he described it when he got into the mood and used to recall the appearance of the place when he came from Ireland 47 years ago.

The funeral will be held at the house Saturday morning at 9:30. Mass will be said in St. Mary's Church for the repose of the soul. The interment will be made in St. Mary's Cemetery.

A PLAINFIELDER'S FRENCH.

It is Set up as a Model for New York Newspapers.

(The Smatterer in Town Topics.)

I recommend to the notice of The Herald the masterly knowledge of French possessed by the contributors of the Century magazine. There is George Wharton Edwards, for example, who has occasion to write the following phrase in a sketch contained in The Century for July:

I leaned out of the window as the train started, to make him a chaste, if ironical, salute. "Tenez, m'sieur!" ("Hold, sir!) said a guard, rapidly running along the footboard. "You must not put your head out of the window. C'est defendu."

Now, you see, The Herald would not have known what "Tenez, m'sieur" meant, and if it did it would not have told its readers in parenthesis. And I ask The Herald staff to carefully note the fairly brilliant translation of this French phrase by Mr. Edwards. "Hold, sir." Mr. Claggett could not have done that. Even Mr. Van Cleef, who has been to Paris, could not have let such a final colloquial turn to it. When they are up to this sort of thing they can contribute to The Century. This is what Mr. Gilder calls "literatewer", and besides Edwards nobody is up to it except Mr. Brander Matthews, Edward Eggleston, Professor Boyesen, and Mr. Gilder himself.

BELVIDERE MAY LOSE HER GREATNESS.

Proper Place for Important Institutions, Along the Jersey Central.

A Phillipsburg despatch says: "There is a strong feeling here in favor of moving the county seat from Belvidere to this place, and the probabilities are that the matter will be agitated the coming Fall and enter very largely into the Assembly election. Hackettstown and Washington both favor Phillipsburg. The people here will agree to contribute $100,000 in money and land for the county buildings."

Two stages started from the home of Mrs. William A. Freeman of East Fifth street this morning, conveying the members of the Grace Church choir with the organist to Boynton Beach for a day's outing.

NEWS OF NEAR NEIGHBORS.

Dunellen and New Market.

The changing of the class of the borough is being considered.

Mr. and Mrs. William Snelle are now housekeeping on High street.

Mrs. Robert Marshal of Newark is visiting her sister, Mrs. C. D. Taylor.

Dr. Brakely went yesterday to Phillipsburg, to visit relatives there, returning this evening.

Frank Covey now drives a new horse and carriage which together compose a fine looking rig.

David Blackford, leader of the New Market Band, is erecting a new building in New Market to be used as a steam saw mill.

Dr. M. J. Whitford of the borough will probably be chosen clerk of the new board of school commissioners at their organization meeting.

Editor Elston Lowrie of the Call is enjoying a vacation of two weeks from his duties in the office of the Central Railroad Company. A part of his time he is employing in the painting of his front fence.

Two other Dunellenites will be initiated in Holton Council, J. O. U. A. M., at their meeting next week, following the example of Charles Tilton and Mr. Shevley, who joined the council Tuesday evening.

Rev. Frank Fletcher conducted funeral services over the remains of the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Heizer at the house Tuesday evening at 8. Yesterday morning the interment was made in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn.

If the white horse that wandered from its keeper, George Smith of Pluckamin, Monday night, and was found near Dunellen by Howard Woolston of North Plainfield, had waited until the next night before going astray, the person who waited until the 3:30 train in the morning would not have been delayed so long.

A horse owned by F. F. Hazard of Johnson avenue, Plainfield, ran away with a rag wagon yesterday morning at 11, starting from in front of the Park Hotel, Dunellen, and taking the road to the right to New Market. The animal turned into a cross street, and returned to the place whence it started by way of the other road. When the wheels struck the sand near the track on the return trip the horse became tired of running, and walked slowly back to the driver.

County Superintendent of Schools Willis of New Brunswick called the school meeting of Tuesday for an election in the afternoon. Both parties, the boroughites and the "down country" people, claim that they would have had more voters present had it been called for the evening. The Dunellenites refer to the number of citizens resident in the borough who are at work in the city or on the railroad during the day, and therefore could not possibly have attended. The farmers talk about how difficult it was for them to leave their crops.

WEST END NOTES.

Miss Essie Smith of West Front street is visiting in Hackettstown.

Alex. Muir has returned home after spending a few weeks in Ocean Grove.

Miss Law and Miss Howard of Newark are visiting Mrs. Divine of West Third Street.

Miss Alice King of New Brunswick is visiting Mr. and Mrs. John A. Kitchen of Lafayette place.

Harry Sharley of the Potter Press Works is at work again after six-weeks illness of pneumonia.

F. O. Smith is preparing to erect a new paint shop in place of the one destroyed by fire the night of July 4.

Large numbers go to the camp meeting every evening. Sister Wilson of Flemington will preach tonight.

Harry Foose of Poughkeepsie is visiting his parents on South Second street His old companions are glad to see him back again.

LIKE OLD TIMES.

Plainfielders May Take the Ferry from Elizabethport Again.

Arrangements are under way for establishing a new passenger and freight ferry between New York city and Perth Amboy; the boat to make stops at Elizabethport, Staten Island and Bergen Point. Eastern capitalists are interested in the project, and the steamboat which will be placed on the route early next Spring is now under charter in the east. It is a large steamboat, new, and well adapted for the business. It has accommodations for passengers and freight.

THE OLD MAN IN HARNESS AGAIN.

Somerville's Heart Stirred by a Return of Her Favorite Harkins.

John Harkins played last Saturday with the West Ends for the first time this season, and the ovation he received when he first went to the bat showed that he still has a firm grip on the heart of the Somerville base-ball krank. John hit the ball hard every time he tried, and fielded in good shape. Townley, from Plainfield, played centre, but the Somerville Messenger says the chances are against his winning further laurels as a West Ender.

NEWS OF THE PNEUS.

CYCLING CHAT GARNERED FOR PLAINFIELD ENTHUSIASTS.

A shore Town Gone Bicycle Crazy—Flirtation on Wheels—Tournaments to Come—Deterioration of Class B into Professionalism.

The postponed meeting of the Board of Governors of the Crescent Wheelmen will be held this evening.

George Taggart will go to Denver, Col., to represent The United Press at the races to be held there August 7.

Dudley S. Miller has purchased a handsome pneumatic wheel, and now finds riding a pleasure during his spare time.

It is expected that Charles Brown of the Elizabeth Athletics will come to the Crescent track in search of fame at record breaking this afternoon at 4.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has posted notices along the Delaware and Raritan Canal forbidding the use of the towpath as a highway by pedestrians or cyclists.

Miss Edith Lane and Nathan Lane, Jr., of Sycamore avenue, rode on their wheels yesterday to Brooklyn, where they will visit relatives. They expect to return this evening.

July 25 having passed, the cycling regulations in the borough are uniform with those of the city. No arrests have been made in the borough yet under the new ordinance.

Miss Ella Frentz of Scotch Plains, accompanied by her friend Mr. Hazel, passed through town this morning on their wheels. They will spend the day with friends in Evons.

A wheelman in New York city has received a letter from a prominent Class B wheelman offering to sell him a wheel, which he won, for $50, and yet Class B is said to be composed of amateur riders. Another case is known where a local Class B man offered to sell a prize won by him in less than twenty minutes after the race.

A two-days bicycle tournament will be given by the Asbury Park Athletic Association, August 10 and 11. Diamonds, bicycle, etc., will be given as prizes. The programme for the two days is as follows: August 10—One mile novice, class B, two-thirds mile open, class B, two mile handicap, class B, one mile open, class A, one mile handicap, class A, one third mile open, class A, one mile open, New Jersey riders only, class A, one-third mile, open to Junior Athletic Association only; August 11—One mile novice, two-thirds mile boys' race, under sixteen years, class B, one mile handicap, class B, one mile open, class B, five miles open, class A, one mile handicap, class A, two-thirds mile open, class A, two-thirds mile handicap open to Junior Athletic Association only. Entries close with W. M. Perett, Ocean Hotel, Asbury Park.

Asbury Park has gone bicycle crazy. Nearly every man, woman and child in the place owns one, while the Summer visitors have hired wheels from the large bicycle repositories till these places now look like vacant warehouses. Little bicycles, big bicycles, tandems, tricycles of every description, and even velocipedes, swarm the ocean drive day and night. The boys and men wear blue knee breeches and sailor caps, while the pretty maidens don their newly purchased "bloomers" with all the modesty and unconcern becoming a sweet miss of sixteen, and having mounted the wheels with all the skill and precision of an old equestrain, speed away, followed by the admiring gaze of many a gallant youth. Flirtations on wheels are all the rage, and the ocean drive between Asbury Park and Long Branch is crowded every night with sportive youths and coy maidens. The cyclers find plenty of ice-cream and soda water at each end of the route, and many a miss who has made the run to Long Branch comparatively alone rides back with an infatuated youth by her side.

The Good Roads bicycle tournament, which takes place at Asbury Park, August 30 and 31 and September 1, has caused a widespread interest. The Asbury Park Athletic Association will have extensive improvements made on the track immediately, so that the flyers may have an opportunity of lowering records and fighting out the championships. All the prominent cyclers of the East have written to the secretary that they will be present. Among the prominent riders who will attend are Johnson, Tyler, Sanger, Bliss, Bald, G. Marshall Wells, the champion of Canada; Titus and MacDonald, Blauvelt and Brown of Elizabeth, Murphy, Royce, Taxis, Lumsden, Githens, Edwards of California and other noted riders. The list of events is as follows: Thursday, August 30—One mile novice, two-thirds mile open, class A, one mile handicap, class A, two mile handicap, class A, open to New York and New Jersey riders only, two mile handicap, class B, one mile open, class B; Friday, August 31—One mile novice, two mile handicap, class A, one-third mile, class A, open to New Jersey riders only, one mile tandem, class B, two-thirds mile open, class B, five mile open, class B; Saturday, September 1—One mile novice, one mile open, class A, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania riders only, two-thirds mile handicap, class A, one mile open, class B championship, one mile handicap, class B, one-third mile open, class B. The class B mile championship will be run in heats, the winner of each heat to receive a special prize. Entries for races will close Thursday, August 23; other events, Monday, August 27. Races will commence each day, 2:30 p. m., sharp. The "Good Roads" Tournament will be given annually, and the proceeds applied by the Executive Committee to further and extend the agitation for better roads. The promoters intend to make this tournament the best possible success, and have secured reduced rates for parties and individuals, from the Ocean Hotel, (League Headquarters), Brunswick Hotel, and other hotels. Address all communications to W. M. Perrett, American Wheelman's office, 23 Park Row, New York.

SNAG FOR THE TELEPHONE SCHEME

Inventor Buell Points Out Difficulties in the Way.

Charles E Buell, who was in charge of telephone and telegraph statistics in the Tenth Census, and who has given special attention to the legal side of the question of telephone rights, informs The Press that it will be risky to enter into the scheme that is now being offered to Plainfield for a new telephone exchange.

He says that while the telephone itself can be used, as the patent thereon has expired, there are various supplemental features that are still patented and controlled by the present users, or by others.

There are certain devices that must be used to complete an exchange system, and these, Mr. Buell says, are owned by a syndicate that is preparing to enter the field, and which has just completed the organization of a company that has opened its general office at 250-252 Broadway, New York, and will control the exchange patents necessary to successful operation.

The connecting of the several exchanges, which is going to be so deftly accomplished in this new plan, would find itself deep in trouble on account of patents relating to connecting exchanges, in a so-called long-distance system.

Mr. Buell feels confident that the persons offering the new scheme do not control, or possess, the requisite devices, for the reason that those which are patented and must be used, cannot be so used without his signature, as he is a part owner in the patents.

Low Rates to Denver, Col.

The Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co., will sell round trip excursion tickets to Denver, Col., from all points on the line east of the Ohio river, August 8, 9 and 10, valid for return passage on trains leaving Denver August 19, 25, and September 13.

The rate from New York will be $47.75; Philadelphia, $47.75; Baltimore, $47.40; Washington, $47.40, and correspondingly low rates from all other points.

Passengers taking the B. & O. have a choice of routes going, via Pittsburg, Akron and Chicago; via Grafton, Bellaire and Chicago, or via Parkersburg, Cincinnati and St. Louis; double daily service of express trains, with Pullman sleeping and dining cars on all routes.

KATE JORDAN'S CHAT

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO THE UP TO DATE WOMAN.

Fashion, Fads and Foibles—A New Trade For Women—A Woman's Specialty. Sketch of Mrs. Kendal—Her Housekeeping.

HERE is a new material in the market that is exquisitely pretty and which is very popular. It is fitly called butter colored batiste and comes with embroideries of various lengths to match. This will be especially becoming to pale brunettes.

It seems that women are not the only ones who devour sensational literature. There must be a tremendous audience of men and boys throughout the country for writers of the daredevil books where the hero, unarmed, easily vanquishes 20 outlaws and where the detective surprises one by stopping from Europe to the Rocky mountains just in time for an important arrest, although how he manages it is a mystery to you. Harlan Page Halsey, better known as Old Sleuth, has made a fortune of almost a million out of stories of this sort. He has an office in one of the lower business streets of the city, where he literally grinds out these stories, so many words an hour.

The artichoke is a great creole dish. It is particularly beloved in New Orleans and occupies about the same place on the table as asparagus does with us. It is eaten when very cold with French dressing and is certainly worth the bother of cooking.

Sweet pea luncheons, dinners, etc., abound at this season. The pretty variegated flowers so deliciously fragrant have spring glamour to them.

If you would be quite correct and very English, get a rough straw walking hat to go with your street gown. They are trimmed with moire ribbon and have quills or black coke feathers at the side.

What will be done next in "sweet charity's name?" Private theatricals are voted tiresome and charades old, so that the belle of this advanced day turns her attention to amateur circuses. There was one in a small, aristocratic settlement not a thousand miles from New York only the other day. Around and around the ring went the pretty girls on horseback, striking at rings on bars, sitting sideways on a horse, etc. "Do you like this?" asked a disapproving man of a little blond who looked tantalizingly lovely in a jockey cap and red satin coat. "Well, you see," she answered, "when I was a little girl, I thought the circus riders the most beautiful things in existence and registered an oath in my baby brain to wear gauze skirts some day and jump through a hoop. So you can understand that this is partly a realization of a long cherished dream. Besides, although it's risky and maybe a little bold, it's for charity, so it goes!"

How much does the rich trousseau of a rich bride cost? Have you ever thought about it? I went into a shop on upper Broadway the other day where a French woman manufactures lingerie for those who tread on the velvet and lilies of life. The underwear for the trousseau of a banker's daughter was displayed to longing eyed women. It was all of finest linen, sheer as a butterfly's wing, with lace and ribbon so dainty they had the effect of frosting upon it. There were a dozen of everything. The cost? Seventeen hundred dollars. That's all!

No dessert is as grateful in hot weather as iced fruit. If you make pineapple sorbet once you will be sure to make it again. Take a quart of grated pineapple, 2 heaping spoonfuls of gelatin dissolved in hot water, a quart of water, a quart of sugar, the juice of a lemon and the beaten whites of 2 eggs. Put in just before freezing.

Ouida, who was very much in advance of her times when she wrote "Strathmore" a good many years ago, is very much behind the times now. She not only decries the idea of women being privileged to vote. She loathes the women who are fighting for it. She says: "So long as woman wears dead birds as millinery and dead seals as coats, so long as she invades literature without culture and art without talent, so long as she shows herself without scruple at every debasing spectacle which is considered fashionable, so long as she is unable to keep her sons out of the shambles of modern sport and her daughters out of the miasma of modern society, she has no title or capacity to demand the privilege or the place of man."

More trinkets are worn now, even with severe cloth gowns, than ever before. They are all in good taste, though, and each has a reason. There is the brooch at the high collarette; the sleeve links, just visible in the cuffs; the long empire chain having a vinaigrette, or little silver purse or watch at the end of it; then the chatelaine belt, from which trifles in silver are strung. I know a girl who carries on her belt a silver powder box, bonbon box, mirror, case for nail scissors and file and—yes, indeed—a dainty cigarette case!

Tremendous revers are worn on coats.

There is a new trade for women, and one as dainty and fitting as it is remunerative. On Broadway, at good distances apart, there are three windows which "bloom like the flowers of spring." As you approach them you fully believe that you are gazing at the luxuriant growths of nature in a florist's window. Lilies, Gloire de Dijon roses, sunflowers, are all there, making a color harmony against the smoky, blue-gray street. But are they flowers? Only when you have gained the window do you see that you are looking at nothing more nor less than a score of paper lamp shades, each heavy with a mass of paper blossoms so artistically true to the real thing that you stand dumfounded. In a big Japanese shop I stopped to watch half a dozen little Japanese women smiling around a table at which they were making the pretty things. How their fingers flashed! How the flowers grew under them as if the pointed, polished nails were tipped with veritable magic! They were like flowers themselves in their long robes of gold and blue, the pointed sleeves dropping back displaying the very prettiest arms and wrists to be found under the sun. Farther down the street in an American shop there were as many trim, brown haired girls quite as proficient. One bunch of pansies was so perfect a customer fell in love with them, waited until they were finished and bunched and then coolly pinned the bouquet in her dress.

"Oh, you'll never go out on the street with them there! That's not good taste at all," said her friend.

"Only until I meet Charlie," she replied. "I'd like to bet you a pair of gloves he'll think them real. Men are so confiding!" Then they went out to waylay Charlie.

"I suppose it is very difficult to make these?" I said to one of the girls as I examined a bunch of really lovely tiger lilies.

"Any one who has learned how to make the usual kind of artificial flowers can make them," she answered, "only these are so much nicer. They don't stain your fingers at all. There's one thing exrta you have to learn," she added, "how to paint just a little—enough to make stripes on a lily like that or give the proper shading to the heart of a rose."

Paper lamp shades are the fad at present. If you despise them because they are paper, you are behind the times. If you think them cheap or common, you will find out your mistake when you go to buy "a perfect beauty."

He was a lawyer, and what he did not know about this poor human nature of ours you may rest assured was not in the least worth knowing. He sat at his big desk, and a woman's daintily monogrammed letter fluttered in his hand. There was a smile upon his lips.

"Here is a woman made up of dashes," he said, raising his eyebrows. "The way women punctuate is one of the most curious things in the world!"

"Why, they all observe the same rules, don't they?"

"No, not in the least. Men do try to punctuate their letters according to the standard taught them with their grammar; but, however correct and painstaking a woman may be with manuscript, she lets herself go in a personal letter. I have among my correspondents a woman who uses a period all the time—sticks it in wherever she can—and a real black period too. That woman knows her own mind and is as obstinate and patient as a spider in gaining her point. Then there is the woman whose specialty is the semicolon. She is the sort who halts between two opinions and is apt to recapitulate. She is not one of your positive sort, although she is not flabby of will either. But oh, this woman of dashes! Impulsive, uncertain, hasty, malleable! As an example, this particular client, being consistent with her temperament and her dashes, married in haste and now is bent on moving heaven and earth to get free. I shouldn't be surprised if she fell in love with her ex-husband a year after the divorce. Pin not your faith on the reliability of the woman who uses many dashes for pauses," he said sagely.

Mrs. Kendal has been voted an excellent actress. All the world knows she is a good wife and a loving mother. Indeed she stands out as a shining figure that the people of the stage might well try to emulate. She believes in the old views. She has no use at all for the "new woman" who is being featured at present.

"My dears," she said at a young woman's tea lately, "I have never taken a single important step in my life without consulting my husband and obeying him. Why should women not obey? Is it not a happiness to fulfill the wishes of those we love? Obey, then, in a spirit of sympathy and faith. Love your husband first, and the rest will come easy."

Her methods of housekeeping are worth a hearing. In every room of her beautiful home she keeps a slate and pencil. When she makes a daily tour of her house, she writes on this slate what she finds amiss, and the housemaid is expected to consult it. If the housemaid has any reply to make, she writes it also. This saves all possible jarring, nothing is forgotten, and there is a dignity to it which a conscientious servant is sure to respect.

I bought Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and took one 'Pellet' after each meal. The boils soon disappeared and have had none since. I have also been troubled with sick headache. NEW EVIDENCE

Of Dr. Lighthill's Success.

A Flattering Testimonial From Col. John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

A HAPPY EXPERIENCE.

The Interesting Testimony of Mr. W. E. Dilts, the Popular Passenger Conductor of the N. J. Central.

ROSELLE, N. J., July 1, 1894.

To My Friends and the Public:

I take pleasure in calling public attention to the remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case. For the past ten years I had been afflicted with a severe form of piles which finally gave me the greatest pain and distress nearly all the time, and from which I could not obtain any relief, in spite of all my efforts.

Hearing of a number of cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in similar cases, I placed myself under his care, and I rejoice to say he effected a complete cure in my case and gave me new life in doing so, for I am sure that I could not have endured my misery much longer. And it will be a matter of importance to those who are suffering from this disease to learn the happy fact that Dr. Lighthill effected my cure without giving me pain or detaining me from work.

W. E. DILTS.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose grateful testimonial is in Dr. Lighthill's possession.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

STONES AND BULLETS

Non-Union Men Attacked by Strikers.

The Railroad Men Return the Fire—A Woman's Jacket Pierced—Police Come to the Rescue—A Cooper Savagely Beaten by Armour's Striking Employes.

CHICAGO, July 27.—Stones and bullets flew around a three-story brick building at 3934 Wentworth avenue last night. Inside the building, which had been rented by the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad company, were domiciled 25 non-union employes of the road hired to take the places of the strikers and their sympathizers who had been hanging around all day throwing stones.

The gang was bent on exterminating their enemies or driving them from their work. In order to give them better protection the 25 employes were sworn in as special deputy United States marshals and armed with revolvers. At 9 o'clock the gang got in at the rear and broke all the glass at the second story where all the men slept.

Two of the railroad men, Farrer and Farley, put their heads out of the window and fired two bullets into the crowd. One of the bullets pierced the jacket of Mrs. Haller.

A mob which stood back of the strikers began to fire recklessly towards the building and a dozen shots were exchanged before the alarm was responded to by the police from the Thirty-fifth street station. They came dashing up in a patrol wagon, but the mob had fled and the employes could not be arrested because they were deputies. To prevent a return of the gang, however, the police stood guard outside the building all night.

A Hine, who left his cooper shop at Rockford, Ill., to take the place of a striking butcher, at Armour's Packing house, left the place where the non-union men are boarding and was proceeding past Halsted and Thirtieth streets last night, when he was set upon and savagely beaten by several men. He was removed to the hospital in a serious condition.

CONVICTS TERRORIZED.

Lightning Strikes a Pennsylvania County Prison.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., July 27.—The most terrific thunder storm in years prevailed here last night for about two hours, and the downfall of rain was excessive. Many picnic parties were caught on their way home, and the women and children in them were panic-stricken by the fierceness and vividness of the lightning.

A number of houses in the city and country were struck. Among the the buildings struck was the Lehigh county prison. The bolt struck the wall against the women's cell and passing through the masonry struck Grace Desmond, a prisoner, charged with keeping a disorderly house, and badly injured her, and prostrated the other women prisoners in the room. The prisoners in jail were thrown into a state of great alarm, as they believed for a time the prison was on fire.

Harry Johnson, who drowned his little daughter, and who will hang in two weeks, was completely terrorized and thought that the day of retribution for his crime had come. Singularly enough, it was just a year ago last night since he threw his child into the river.

KING OF KOREA SEIZED.

War Declared Between Japan and China the Latest News.

LONDON, July 27.—The Central News has this dispatch from Shanghai:

"War has been declared between Japan and China. The Japanese have seized the King of Korea and hold him prisoner. Eleven Chinese steamers are on their way to Korea. Most of the troops aboard them are coolies armed with bows and arrows. Some Chinese steamers which have arrived at Korea have been prevented by the Japanese from landing troops. It is reported that the Japanese artillery sank several of them."

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Director Preston is informed that the San Francisco mint began the coinage of standard silver dollars, striking off Wednesday 30,000. The same number were struck off at New Orleans, bringing up the total coinage since it was renewed a week ago to $175,000. The coinage will be continued in the discretion of Secretary Carlisle.

"DEBS FOR CONGRESS."

The A. R. U.'s President Talks to the Chicago Strikers.

CHICAGO, July 27.—The directors of the American Railway union, headed by President Debs, attended a meeting of local strikers at Uhlich's hall yesterday. The hall will comfortably accommodate about 500 people, but on this occasion it held over 2,000. The cheers which went up on Debs' entrance could be heard several blocks away. The hearing of committee reports, which had been going on, gave way to the demand for a speech from the union's president, and he was not reluctant in giving it.

He told his fellow railway men that if the ruling of Judge Wood, in the United States circuit court, was correct, then the laborer was no longer a free man had no right to defend and protect himself, but was a common slave to capital and had no right to do otherwise than as his employer ordered.

He said he did not believe the ruling of the judge was sound, but that if it was, the only thing left to do was to muster their forces and carry to the polls a man who would bring about an amendment to the constitution which would give them their liberty.

"Debs for congress," was the cry on all sides after the speech.

The directors say that the strike situation will remain as it is until the convention of Aug. 2, at which time future tactics will be decided upon.

RYAN OUTPOINTS SMITH.

"Mysterious" Billy Severely Punished by the Chicago Man.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 27.—Tommy Ryan, of Chicago, and "Mysterious" Billy Smith, of Boston, fought last night before the Twin City Athletic club for the welterweight championship, held by Smith since he defeated Tom Williams, who held the championship of Australia and England, two years ago before the Coney Island club.

Ryan won the match handily. It was for points, twenty rounds. Smith was not out, however, and when time was called was on his feet fighting hard and giving Ryan about as good as he sent. Smith, however, had received the most punishment and was in the worse condition. He certainly could not have lasted over a round or two more, at the most, so the victory for Ryan was decisive.

Ryan won largely by his generalship. He was much quicker than Smith and kept away, coaxing his antagonist to waste his strength in wild blows. He never took the aggressive until he was sure he had Smith going, and even then he was cautious. Smith should have credit for taking the iniative throughout and forcing the fighting even to the last, when he was getting the worst of it.

K. OF P. CONVENTION.

Capt. Dance, of Buffalo, Accused of Swearing at His Men.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., July 27.—The Knights of Pythias convention has decided on Catskill as the place for the next session of the Grand lodge.

Quite a furore has been caused here by the criticism which has been made concerning the manner in which Capt. Albert J. Dance, of the Buffalo uniformed rank, treated his men in the prize drill. Officers say he swore at them when they made slight blunders, and completely lost his temper. Officers of the order express disapproval of his conduct.

EMIN PASHA'S MURDERERS.

Three Arabs Found Guilty by Court-Martial.

BRUSSELS, July 27.—Commander Baron Dhanis, of the Belgian troops in the Congo state, has reported that the Arabs Ismaila, Mamba and Gaunga have been found guilty by court-martial of having murdered Emin Pasha. Chief Mserera and his son, Amici, who are accused of having murdered the explorer Hodister in 1892, and Kitma and Ntambwe who are charged with conniving at the assassination of Emin, have been captured. Others implicated in the plots against the European explorers have been detained.

A Thousand-Mile Bicycle Tour.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., July 27.—James Horock and Edward Abbotson, two enthusiastic Utica wheelmen, have arrived at the Grand hotel, in the Grove, having come all the way through on their wheels. Their route took them through Richfield Springs, Cooperstown, Stamford, and so on down through the Catskills and by way of the Hudson river. Their homeward trip will be through Pennsylvania, striking the Delaware Water Gap, Stroudsburg, Mount Pocono, Scranton, etc., completing a ride of over 1,000 miles.

Japan's Minister Recalled.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Japanese Minister Gozo Cateno announced this morning that he had been recalled. He will be succeeded by Mr. Kaneko, graduate of Yale and a student of the Cambridge, Mass., law school. The recall of Minister Cateno is wholly in the line of rotation, and has no connection with the Korean trouble between China and Japan.

Wouldn't Let Mrs. Stebbins Dance.

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y., July 27.—Mrs. Genevieve Stebbins, of New York, gave readings and Delsartean poses in the Amphitheatre here. Mrs. Stebbins designed to give several dances typical of different countries, but the management would allow nothing of the kind and so the programme was necessarily abbreviated.

Gen. Pleasanton Dead.

PHILADELPHIA, July 27.—Gen. A. J. Pleasanton died last evening from old age and exhaustion. Augustus James Pleasanton was born on Jan. 21, 1808. He was educated at West Point, resigning from the army, and possessing ample means, devoted most of his time in experiments, scientific and otherwise.

Michael Walsh's Fortune Reduced.

QUEBEC, July 27.—The Michael Walsh, now in the house of correction in Boston, will not get as much out of the estate of his father, who died here a year ago, as was stated in the despatch from Boston. Instead of getting $75,000 it is possible that he may inherit $30,000.

Stabbed by an Anarchist.

BRUSSELS, July 26.—An anarchist hotelkeeper named Baseleer was arrested yesterday in Ghent by two policemen. He drew a dagger, stabbed one of them, and tried to stab the other, but was disarmed before he could succeed. The injured policeman is dying.

Yachts at Penzance.

PENZANCE, July 27.—George Gould's steam yacht Atalanta towed the Vigilant and Iverna into Mounts bay at 8 o'clock last evening. The Britannia, which had cast off outside, sailed in soon afterward, followed by the Satanita.

CLEVELAND DEFENDED

Senator Vilas Refutes Mr. Gorman's Charges.

Senators Seem Willing To Confer With the House Again—Withdrawal of the Instructions To Have Sugar Protected—Hill's Free Coal and Iron Ore Motion Lost.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Not until late in the day did the senate take up the question of agreeing to a further conference on the tariff bill. During the two hours that constitute what is technically known as the "morning hour," senators had bills taken from the calendar and considered by unanimous consent, and about twenty of them were passed, none of much public interest. Then the house message asking for a further conference was taken up, and Mr. Vilas (dem., Wis.) addressed the senate in a two hours' speech, delivered offhand and with much oratorical effect. His speech was highly eulogistic of President Cleveland, whom he defended from the charges of duplicity and of improper interference with legislation made by Mr. Gorman in his speech of Monday. He spoke of Mr. Cleveland as the "great first citizen of the republic" and as the representative of the national honor, and he declared, with vehemence and solemnity, that to assail Grover Cleveland was to strike at the republic; that to affront him was to insult every good citizen, and that to stab him was to strike the heart of every true American. In conclusion, he withdrew his motion of Friday to strike out the additional discriminating duty of one-eighth of a cent a pound on sugar, and favored Mr. Gray's motion to insist and to consent to further conference. He did this, he said, because he was a strict party man and desired to be in accord with his democratic brethren! And he expressed the hope that out of the conference would come a measure far better than that which had already passed the senate.

Mr. Vilas was followed by Mr. Stewart (p. p., Nev.), who criticized the president's letter as an invasion of the legislative power, such as had cost Charles the First his head.

At the close of the debate the vote was taken on Mr. Hill's motion to recede from the duty of 40 cents a ton on iron ore and on coal. There was only six votes, including his own, cast in favor it, as against 65 in the negative. Then Mr. Caffery (dem., La.) withdrew his motion in favor of a modified sugar bounty for 1894.

Mr. Quay (rep., Penn.) had already withdrawn his motion to have sugar put on the free list, and the only question left was Mr. Gray's motion to insist and to agree to the further conference asked by the house. As the vote was about to be taken Mr. Vilas' motion to recede from the one-eight cent a pound discriminating duty on sugar was renewed by Mr. Washburn (rep., Minn.) A point of order was made against it, and the point was discussed, without a conclusion being reached, until 5:45, when the senate adjourned.

House of Representatives.

The question whether or not an underground trolley is a commercially practicable and successful method of propulsion for street car service would be determined on an extensive scale in the national capital. A bill to authorize one of the street car systems in the city to extend its lines and change its motive power has passed both branches of congress, and the conference report on the bill was agreed to in the house. It requires the company to equip and operate its lines with an underground electric system within a period of two years, under heavy penalties for failure. It was stated in debate that this was one of the most important measures ever passed by congress, as the demonstration that the the underground system can be successfully operated will compel a change of power of thousands of miles of electric roads in the United States.

The day's session was devoted largely to the consideration of business reported from the committees on interstate and foreign commerce and eighteen bills were passed. Among the most important were those to extend the term for which life saving stations shall be kept open so as to include the months of August and May; extending the privileges of the Marine hospital service to employes of the life saving service; appropriating $75,000 to purchase a revenue cutter for use in San Francisco harbor; appropriating $5,750 to make a money testimonial to the sailors of the Netherlands steamship Amsterdam, who made a gallant but unsuccessful effort to rescue the crew of the American schooner Maggie E. Wells on Jan. 14 last; authorizing the secretary of the treasury to remit or mitigate penalties imposed on sailing vessels, as well as those imposed on steamers.

The conference report on the fortifications appropriation bill was agreed to.

It now carries a total of $2,427,000—an increase over that of the bill for the year ended June 30, 1894, of $216,949.

Gen. Hyde Not Selected.

BOSTON, July 27.—It was given out on what was said to be good authority that Gen. T. W. Hyde, of the Bath (Me.) Iron works, was to be the president of the new Boston Elevated Railroad company. Mr. George H. Towle, counsel for the Meigs incorporators, said that this statement was inaccurate; that Gen. Hyde had not been selected and that no meeting of the incorporators had been held yet to take action in the matter.

RIOTOUS EXCURSIONISTS.

Stamford, Conn., People Experience a Lively Time With Them.

STAMFORD, Conn., July 27.—The steamer Bay Queen and a barge carrying 2,000 passengers arrived at Shippen Point yesterday afternoon. The party came as excursionists under the auspices of St. Patrick's Alliance, of Orange, N. J. About 5 o'clock three men of the party claimed that they had lost their watches and money while in bathing and a disturbance was created in the pavilion.

In a very short time a serious riot was in progress, which the two officers on duty could not handle and they were driven away. At the time about a hundred Stamford people occupied the pavilion and they, too, were driven to a hill near by. Just here the remainder of the excursionists came into the pavilion and took possession of it. The proprietor and his assistants were driven out and the interior of the structure was completely wrecked.

All the windows in the building were broken and beer glasses and bottles were thrown about in a very lively fashion. Several shots were fired by the roughs. Finally word was sent to the city and the entire police force and a strong body of citizens left for the point. Meantime the rioters had boarded their vessels and pulled out into the sound. The police, however, were able to capture three of the rioters and it is believed that they are the ringleaders. Their names are Fred and Tilden Badgley, brothers, and John Rooney. It is said that two men on the barge were wounded by the shooting.

Officer Hall was wounded in the head by a bottle thrown by one of the roughs. It is believed that a number of the excursionists were more or less injured.

EXTRA-TERRITORIAL RIGHTS.

Japan Wants To Negotiate Treaties With All Foreign Powers.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—It is understood that Japan has been for some time engaged in an attempt to negotiate treaties with all the foreign powers that now enjoy extra-territorial rights in that country, but that the United States has not yet been brought to believe that Americans accused of offenses in Japan can be sure of justice before the tribunals of that country.

Under existing treaties, Americans, as well as the citizens of all the great powers, are now tried before the consular courts of their own nationality in both Japan and China. In the former country particularly, where considerable importance is attached to the great strides recently made toward western civilization, this extra-territorial jurisdiction exercised by foreign governments has become disagreeable as reflecting in some degree upon the national character.

It is claimed that Great Britain has expressed a willingness to enter upon the desired treaty with Japan on this subject, but the United States has made counter propositions which appear to Japan to offset her proposed advantages.

Officials here have known unofficially for some time that a change was contemplated in the Japanese legation and are confident it is wholly disconnected from the present strained conditions in eastern Asia.

MEUNIER CONVICTED

The Associate of Ravachol Sentenced for Life.

He Had Prepared Himself for the Death Sentence—Ghastly Relics Exhibited in the Court Room—The Jury Admitted the Plea of Extenuating Circumstances.

PARIS, July 27.—Meunier, the humpbacked anarchist and the associate of Francois and Ravachol, was placed on trial yesterday for having blown up the cafe Very in the spring of 1892. Meunier is supposed to have blown up the cafe to avenge Ravachol, who had been arrested there by the police with the aid of M. Very, the proprietor, and L'Herot, the waiter. Neither Mme. Very nor L'Herot were able to identify Meunier. Mme. Bricou, however, gave damaging evidence against the prisoner.

Meunier protested his innocence all through the trial, and repeatedly interrupted witnesses to deny their statements. Mme. Very and L'Herot failed to identify Meunier because he had raised a full beard since they last saw him. While court was adjourned the prisoner was shaved. The moment he returned with a smooth face to the room both witnesses exclaimed that they recognized him.

Meunier's friend, Francois, was brought in by wardors to testify. He denied everything, called Mme. Bricou a chattering old liar, and ridiculed the evidence given by her.

The leg and foot of M. Very, who died of injuries received in the explosion, were brought in bottles, filled with spirits, into the court-room and were exhibited for several minutes, to the great entertainment of the spectators, who rose and craned their necks to catch glimpses of the ghastly relics.

Meunier was found guilty and late last evening it was announced that he had been sentenced to penal servitude for life.

The jury admitted the plea of extenuating circumstances. Meunier evidently had prepared himself for the death sentence and, after the judge ceased speaking, shouted tragically:

"Courage, comrades. This state of society cannot last long. Death to tyrants. Long live anarchy."

MARCHING TO THE SEA.

Coxeytes Under Command of Carl Browne in the Quaker City.

PHILADELPHIA, July 27.—Carl Browne and his band of wandering Coxeytes have reached this city on their march to the sea. When they entered the city they sought the hospitable shelter of Labor Lyceum hall. Browne spent several hours here looking for lodgings for his men, and his persuasive eloquence finally induced the local labor leaders to offer Labor Lyceum hall as a resting place for the army for one day.

To-day Browne with his men, must move on or bunk in the streets. Browne expects to hold a mass meeting before he departs and gain converts for the Good Roads association, and incidentally to pass the hat. The police no longer regard the advent of the Coxeytes in the light of a menace, and they will allow them to march unmolested.

Minneapolis To Be Docked.

PHILADELPHIA, July 27.—The cruiser Minneapolis, which recently returned from her very successful trial trip, will shortly be docked at the League Island Navy yard by her builders. "This course will be taken, not because of a request to that effect from the navy department at Washington," said a representative of the Cramps to-day, "but because the firm does not wish to have the same trouble with her as they had with the Columbia." The Minneapolis went aground on a mud bank just as she left her dock at the works.

Drain on the Gold Reserve.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—The treasury lost yesterday $2,200,000 in gold—$2,000,000 at New York for European export, $100,000 at Boston for European export and $200,000 at New York for shipment to Canada. This drain on the United States gold reserve reduced it to $58,050,000, the lowest point ever reached, and $42,000,000 below the $100,000,000 reserve.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., July 27.—Another body was washed ashore near Seabright yesterday afternoon. As in three other cases, this was only a portion of the remains. KILLED IN A SHAFT

Well-Known Mine Officials Hurled To Death.

Col. Addison G. Mason Instantly Killed—Foreman Wilson Dies from His Injuries—Others Badly Cut and Bruised—The Shaft Had Not Been Used for a Number of Years.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., July 27.—The frightful accident which occurred at West Pittston yesterday has cast a gloom over that town by the taking away of two prominent citizens in a horrible manner. A number of officials connected with the Lehigh Valley Coal company, who have been on a tour of inspection, arrived at the Exeter mine, which is one of the company's collieries located on the outskirts of West Pittston. The party comprised Col. Addison G. Mason, division superintendent of the Lehigh Valley Coal company; Wm. Wilson, inside foreman of the colliery, both of West Pittston; Robert S. Mercur, assistant division engineer, of Wilkesbarre; Jos. Burrell, an instructor of mathematics in the Lehigh university, and Jacob Gales, a miner, acting as guide.

After having inspected the workings they started for the surface and got upon the mine cage. The engineer was signalled to hoist, and when they were about fifty or more feet from the bottom the cage guides in the shaft gave way and the bottom fell out, which precipitated them all to the slope below. Gales, who is an old miner, felt the timber slipping, and before it gave way, he grasped the side of the bunting and held on until he was rescued from his perilous position. Col. Mason was instantly killed by the shock. The deceased was 55 years of age and one of the best known mine officials in the state.

During the late war for his bravery at the battle of South Mountain and other engagements, he was selected by General Robert E. Meade as a member of his staff, and at time of his death was an honored member of the Loyal Legion. He leaves a wife, two daughters and one son.

Inside Foreman Wilson, who died from his injuries, was 45 years of age. He also leaves a wife and two children.

Robert S. Mercur is a single man. He was removed to the hospital where he is suffering from a broken ankle, a scalp wound and serious contusions about the body. It is thought he will recover.

Joseph Rurrell was also sent to the hospital. He received contusions about the body and is badly cut on the face and neck. He was able to walk from the shaft to the ambulance, but soon became weak. He will recover in a few days.

The party were ascending the air shaft when the accident occurred, as the main shaft was undergoing repairs. The air shaft has not been used as a passage way for a number of years and this accounts for the condition of affairs.

In 1870 twenty men and boys were suffocated by gas in the colliery caused by the burning down of the breaker.

DROWNED IN A POND.

Two Little Girls, Sent to the Country for Fresh Air, the Victims.

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS, N. J., July 27.—Katie Johnson and Sadie Johnson, aged 14 and 12 years respectively, were drowned in a little pond of one acre in extent, at Bay View Heights, West Chapel Hill, while bathing yesterday. John J. Mulligan, of this place, who was near by, attempted to rescue the children, but in vain.

Mulligan, however, recovered the bodies and took them to the Eunice home near by, where the children had formed part of a gathering of nearly 100 sent down for fresh air from St. Chrisostom chapel, New York, for a two weeks' recreation.

DON'T LET THEM DIE.

JULY HEAT WEAKENS BABIES' DIGESTION.

No Strength to Resist Cholera Infantum—Half the Funerals of July Are of Little Ones—Safety Lies in Lactated Food and Cleanliness—The Proper Food is Very Far From Expensive.

July is dealing even more cruelly with the babies than a year ago.

The fatal cases of cholera infantum of late in this city were many, and there will be many more.

Precious little lives sacrificed to ignorance.

Almost every one might have been saved!

All these diarrheal diseases, whether cholera infantum, diarrhea or summer complaint, are preventable. Physicians emphatically say so.

Hot weather alone will not produce these disorders; it simply weakens the infant digestion and makes it easy for improper feeding to bring on dreaded diarrhea.

What, then, is proper diet in July?

Healthy mother's milk has no rival; but when the child is being weaned, or when its natural food is thin and watery and unable to keep baby strong and well, lactated food must be used at once, either to supplement mother's milk or as a complete diet.

For years it has been noted that in countless homes and in the large children's institutions, wherever lactated food has been regularly used, there have been few or no returns of deaths from cholera infantum in July and August.

The reason is that this highly nutritious, predigested and especially palatable food is the very next thing in every respect to pure mother's milk. It is easily assimilated by the infant stomach with but a trifling expenditure of vitality. It keeps up the little one's strength and as it cannot possibly contain a particle of impurity, these two great causes of cholera infantum are successfully avoided.

And babies like it.

Any food, however nutritious, that the baby will not readily take, has small chances of doing good. And it is here that lactated food stands pre-eminent in the minds of medical men. When teething and during hot weather, when babies are most capricious in their appetite, it is found that they take lactated food with relish when nothing else will tempt them.

Members of boards of health and physicians, it will be found, feed their own children on lactated food. The fact known to physicians from the start that lactated food was prepared under the personal supervision of no less a man than Prof. Boynton of Vermont University gave it immediate standing among practitioners.

When a change of diet is needed because baby is not taking sufficient nourishment, lactated food is sure to delight mothers, by the evident relish with which babies take it.

Iron and Steel Trade.

PITTSBURG, July 27.—On the whole, prospects in the iron and steel trade are somewhat better this week than they were last. Throughout the east the short fuel supply is interfering with pig iron production. The coal supply is inadequate, and coke shipments are irregular. The demand for finished iron is a little better, and there is more call for structural material. Sheet iron shows more activity than any other line of the market, and slightly better prices for small lots for quick delivery are reported. Throughout the west and south there appears to be some little improvement in the business situation.

Six Masons Fall Thirty Feet.

PATERSON, N. J., July 27.—A crossbar holding the elevator in the new public school building on Fair street broke yesterday, precipitating six masons into the cellar, a distance of 30 feet. All escaped injury but two, George Glass and Richard Gill, who were seriously hurt.

Those are of course untrimmed. For trimmed hats the price ranges from 50 cents to $1.50. That's little enough to suit every purse.

—Paint covers a multitude of blemishes, and when you paint (this is no reflection on feminine readers) you want to use the purest of pigment, and lots of it. Yesterday he entered the store while the men were at dinner about 1 in the afternoon, and cut out the choicest parts of a round of beef, and took it home, thereby securing the money his mother had given him to buy meat with. He was charged with the crime this morning, confessed, and was therefore allowed to go away, with a threat of arrest for future wickedness.

THE RUIN OF A HOME.

Story of the Vicissitudes of the Allen Farm.

SAD MEMORIES REVIVED BY THE DEATH OF JACOB COLE.

How His Handsome Homestead Fell into Decay—Infatuation of Jacob's Daughter for Erratic Sam Allen—The Last of His Family Rescued from Neglect and Ministered unto by Strangers.

The last of his family, Jacob Cole of Mountain avenue, died yesterday afternoon at the age of 87. A strong, hearty man, who married happy, a prosperous farmer on a valuable estate he had inherited, he lived and enjoyed life until the last decade. Then his son, his daughter, and his wife, died, and trouble began for the old man. Although he had lived since May 6, 1807, his strong constitution remained almost unimpaired by old age, and had he received proper care during last year when he was ill, it is thought that he might still be alive. The last few months of his life he had been made comfortable by a kind family of neighbors.

Sam Allen first became connected with the Cole family when he worked, as a boy, for Randolph Cole, the only son of Jacob. His employer's only sister, a spinster who lived at the homestead, seemed to have become infatuated with Sam, for when she died in 1884, by will she left him property in Plainfield proper and parts of the home estate which made him wealthy, though Henry Ward Beecher had married Sam to another woman. Mrs. Cole died in 1885, leaving Jacob alone, the son Randolph having died previously. Sam went to live with the old man, and when the Maiers went to the house last Fall, after James Maier had bought the place from Jacob Cole, Sam had a fight with them. He said it was his home, and claimed to have a lease of the place while he cared for the old man. He did not produce the lease. The Maiers, out of pure philanthropy, took possession and have since cared for the old man in his last illness, providing him with cleanliness and comfort which he might not otherwise have had.

When the Maiers found old Mr. Coles after they had recaptured the farm from Allen, he was in a small room in the upper story which contained no window. The bedding was ragged and wet with the rains leaking through the roof, and everything indicated that the old man had not been cared for properly during his illness.

Jacob Cole retained his memory to the last, and could tell the story of his life with all the details that made it interesting. How Sam Allen had treated him he described in a way that completely contradicted Sam's assertions. Often, he said, while Allen was away on the excursions he used to make to Plainfield and New York, the old man was left with nothing to eat. The water poured in through the roof when it rained hard, soaking the bed-clothes and flooding the floor of the closet where the invalid lay.

The old homestead of the Coleses dated back to the last century in the time of Jacob Coles's grandfather. The site selected, a knoll at the base of the mountains on the back road between North Plainfield and Scotch Plains, now Mountain avenue, near Raymond street, was a most advantageous one for a farmer of the time. The estate extended then from the foot of the mountain range to Front street. The house was an elegant residence for its time. It was remodelled and repaired by each of the occupants, and kept up in excellent shape. The house is of the old-fashioned homestead type, and with the grounds reached the height of its glory in the last of the '70's, when Jacob's son, Randolph Cole, was living.

People used to drive there to see the beauties of the place, often driving in about the house. In front were two lakes in the lawn, in the smaller one of which a fountain played and gold-fish swam about. The lawn was well kept, and the rustic fences never wanted repair. The house was elegantly furnished with the heavy mahogany of the day. About the house were seats and arbors and paths and flower-beds. The trees and the piazza roofs were hung with shell ornaments, some of them sent North by the brother who died in Mobile while working as a ship carpenter there. The Cole place was celebrated in those days.

It is different now. The house is old, and of course needs constant attention in the way of repair. Nothing has been done for years. The lakes are simply pools of stagnant water, green and muddy and suggestive of disease. The iron fences are rusted and bent; the trellises and arbor are tangled heaps of wood and iron. The lawns are fields of weeds. The trees have not been trimmed lately. Parts of the house cannot be used, the wind and weather beating in through the boards and destroying the plastered walls. The crepe that shows that death has relieved Jacob Cole hangs at the rear door, reached by a climb up a roadway full of ruts and rocks.

THE CHILDREN MUST WAIT.

Abner Bartlett's Will Leaves All to the Widow for Life Tenure, and the Plainfield Son Gets His Share After Her Death.

The will of the late Abner Bartlett, the real estate operator, who died June 31, was filed yesterday in the New York Surrogate's office for probate. The decedent's estate is valued at about $250,000, of which $175,000 is in real estate. The widow, Medora S. Bartlett, is bequeathed a life interest in the entire estate, and after her death the four children, Grace Medora Stryker, Mary Sibley Horner, Cornelia Burrowes Kissam, and Abner Bartlett of Plainfield, are to share the estate equally.

A CEREMONY OF HER OWN.

How the Rev. Phoebe Hanaford United a Couple in Matrimony.

While higher education has made physicians, lawyers and college professors of women, it has not made woman a conspicuous factor in the religious world. There is but one ordained female minister in this city, Mrs. Phoebe F. Hanaford. Mrs. Hanaford has no charge at present, but she frequently assists at religious services, and at rare intervals she performs a wedding ceremony. Mrs. Hanaford is sixty-five years old, but she looks ten years younger. Her hair is jet black, and she adheres to the old-fashioned custom of wearing a long curl hanging in front of each ear. Her complexion is dark and her features have a strong masculine cast. She was originally a Quaker, but when she was ordained at Hingham, Mass., in 1868, she became a Universalist. Julia Ward Howe wrote a hymn especially for Mrs. Hanaford's ordination service. Mrs. Hanaford has had three charges during her ministry. A few calls have been sent her from small villages in the West, but all have been declined as being too remote from her children.

It is seldom that one hears of a woman clergyman officiating at a wedding. Frequently female leaders in the Salvation Army have undertaken to synchonize the beating of two hearts, but Salvation Army amazons are not ordained ministers. The only ceremony of the kind which has taken place hereabouts in many years occurred on June 20, when Mrs. Hanaford married Miss Aina Ayres, a New Hampshire girl, to Edward T. Lindquist of Glen Ridge, N. J. The wedding took place in the drawing room of the groom's country place. Mrs. Hanaford has adapted from the ceremony of her Quaker parents a wedding service of her own. The bride and groom are told to join right hands. Then Mrs. Hanaford asks of the man: "Do you take this woman at your side to be your lawfully wedded wife, promising through Divine assistance to be unto her a faithful and affectionate husband until it shall please the Lord by death you two to separate? Do you thus promise?" To the bride is put a similar question. When the groom has placed the ring on the bride's finger, Mrs. Hanaford gives the couple a few words of religious and domestic admonition. Then she announces: "By virtue of the authority vested in me by the laws of the Commonwealth, and as a minister of Jesus Christ, I pronounce you man and wife. Those whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder." After making an extemporaneous prayer, Mrs. Hanaford pronounces the benediction.

Mrs. Hanaford holds the record among female clergymen in having performed forty wedding ceremonies during her ministry.—New York Sun.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

FRESH HAPPENINGS AMONG THE SELF-PROPELLING STEEDSMEN.

Seven Events Decided on for the Crescent Meet of August 18—Local Racers to Be Given a Chance August 4—Scott Doing Well Away from Home—Romantic Run Through the Plainfield Mountains.

A. H. Barnett may change from the track to road training after the middle of August.

Another event has been added to the programme of the Good Roads tournament at Asbury Park, August 30, 31, and September 1, to be known as a coasting race.

The list of events for the Crescent Wheelmen's races of August 18 has been decided on as follows: 1-mile novice, 1-mile handicap, 1-mile scratch (boys under 16), 5-mile handicap, 1-mile 2:35 class, 1-mile scratch, 2-mile handicap. The races are all for A Class men. No B Class races will be ridden.

The attendance at the Crescent track each afternoon is increased by the frequent announcements that Charles Brown of Elizabeth is to attempt record-breaking. The track was in great shape yesterday, although the breeze was somewhat strong, and a successful trial was awaited. The triplet could not be repaired as promised, however, and word was sent to Elizabeth that Brown could not be paced.

The Crescent Wheelmen will give the local riders all a chance to show their speed without any outside opposition, August 4. This event, coming on Saturday, will afford the town a chance for a half-holiday. The price of admission to everything, for the general spectators, will be purely nominal, 10 cents. That will include grand-stand seat, and the concession is made for the purpose of giving everybody equal opportunity to inspect the new track and see what stuff Plainfield can show on wheels.

Monte Scott is making a name for himself away from Plainfield, as reported by C. E. Teel to the Crescent Governors. Mr. Teel sends word that Scott won first prize, a handsome diamond stud, in the 2-mile handicap in Middletown, and was third in the 2-mile lap race. Today he gives an exhibition race in Port Jervis, against the highest local trotting track time, 2:29. This is the first cycle racing on the track at that place. Scott's 2-mile time was 4:47½. The scratch men were Blauvelt, Elizabeth, Royce, George Coffin, and F. E. Doupe.

Few riders—says The New York Mail and Express—know of the fine scenery, brading air and good roads of New York's nearest mountains, the Watchung Range. Leave the city by Desbrosses Street ferry and Pennsylvania train at 6:15 a. m. for Newark, Broad Street station. Get a good, substantial breakfast, and then follow the Irvington trolley line to the suburbs; then the famous Irvington-Millburn course straightaway to Springfield, leaving Millburn to the right. West through the village on road marked "To Summit". Half a mile before reaching Summit at sign-post take left-hand road marked "Feltville", and at next fork go to the right, leaving the fine macadam road, but finding a fair country road with very few hills. This is the entrance to the Watchung Mountains, the range being on either side of the Washington Valley, which is about a mile in width for a distance of over twenty miles, running northeast and southwest. There are few farms, fewer villages and no railroads; in fact, one is nearly cut off from civilization, and could well imagine himself in some secluded valley of the Alleghanies. At Feltville crossroads keep straight ahead on Scotch Plains route, with now and then a magnificent view of the coast through the mountain passes on the opposite side of the valley. At the next fork follow the road marked "to Washingtonville", and on to Warrenville, leaving Washington Rock one mile to the left of main road. Follow directions to Springdale and Martinsville. Pass all the short cuts marked Bound Brook and do not turn to the left until within one-quarter mile of Martinsville, where take Bound Brook road leaving Mt. Horeb, the highest in the range, to the right at the sign-post. At the foot of a long series of hills is Middle Brook, which hustles and tumbles along in the regulation mountain stream style over numerous pretty waterfalls, and which the road crosses and recrosses several times as it winds its way through a deep gorge cutting through the eastern range. The surroundings are wild and romantic. Chimney Rock is to the left, near which are some copper mines. Leaving the mountains at this point take the first good left-hand road into Bound Brook, cross the railroad near the station and take turnpike along the banks of the Delaware and Raritan Canal, running also parallel with the Raritan River, to New Brunswick. Here one has a choice of three return trips to New York: A good road to Perth Amboy, and Staten Island road to St. George; fair road to Keyport via Old Bridge and Mattewan, with boat to New York at 5 p. m., or continue on from Keyport to Red Bank, with boat to New York at 4 p. m. The trip makes a good, comfortable ten-hours run to Red Bank. There are very few hills and but two sandy spots. Let no one attempt the ride, however, with anything but a good, substantial road wheel.

HEALTH MAXIMS.

"Six thousand persons die in New York City every year from wasting diseases. This statement, in the light of the knowledge that everyone of these cases was in the first instance preventable, shows how desirable it is that everyone should understand how to avoid taking the disease."

These are the words of a well-known physician, and here are some valuable suggestions made by him:

"It is indigestible food and food taken at the wrong time which causes that condition of the system which permits the taking of cold; whatever tends to weaken digestion and impoverish the blood hurts the entire system and opens the way to disease.

"The symptoms of indigestion are usually a flushed face, spots or blurs before the eyes, flashes of light, zig-zag lines or chains, sense of fulness over the stomach belching, despondency, etc., often followed by the most severe headaches; these symptoms are usually relieved when the gas is expelled from the stomach."

"Whenever a person gets run down in strength, reduced in weight or becomes thin by reason of some wasting disease, it is very fashionable to commence what might be well called the stuffing process. Cod liver oil preparations, farinaceous foods, beef teas, concoctions of malt, oats second rate wines and beef extracts are given to the unfortunate person continually, thus ruining what little digestive power he has left and causing untold suffering. If allowed to make a suggestion I would say that in place of this, Paskola, the predigested food, should be given; this not only builds up sound healthy flesh but rests and strengthens the digestive organs in a remarkable way.

"Food to the body is what fuel is to the engine. Life ceases when nourishment stops and the machinery won't go when the steam disappears.

"If a man suffers from indigestion there are seldom any fatal results, but when what the doctors call "complications" set in, then is the time to pray.

"The germs of consumption have no power over healthy tissue. Before they can attack or injure anyone, that person must be run down in health in some way, either by worriment, exposure or cold, long continued indigestion or over work or over study. Such persons should always exercise great care and use the best and most advanced discoveries. For this purpose Paskola is unequalled."

Paskola may be obtained of any reputable druggist. A pamphlet on food and digestion will be mailed free on application to the Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade st., New York.

GO WAY DAR, CHILE!

ON DIS YER MILE YOU'H AUNTIE'S SURE A WINNAH.

She, How You Talk—Guess I Can Walk, as Well as Any Sinnah—Don't Make No Break, Dat's Myah Cake—You'll Get a Slice for Dinnah.

The waiters of the Albion and Netherwood hotels conducted a cake-walk and dance in Central Hall last evening. Many attended, and the affair was a pleasant one throughout. Employes and guests from The Netherwood predominated in the attendance, quite a number of those who are staying at that hotel attending to witness the enjoyment of those who serve them. The judges were five prominent guests of The Netherwood, H. W. Williams, W. B. Ogden, Jr., F. H. Herrick, W. G. Brady and I. L. Wilsie.

A concert began the programme of the evening. A quartette composed of John Taylor, William Wilson, Oscar Nelson and Watson Randolph, sang a Chinese song, and then after applause, rendered "Down in Mobile". William Wilson and John Taylor then gave a buck dance, Wilson taking the part of the man, and Taylor that of the woman. James A. Glannagan closed with a stump speech, a humorous sketch which brought forth much laughter.

The cake-walk then began to the music of an orchestra furnished by E. M. O'Reilly. Eighteen entered and walked about the cake in their best manner, the judges noting all movements carefully.

Robert Washington and Mrs. Julia Randolph led the walkers. He wore a dress suit. His collar was high, and his lapel bore a bright red flower. His partner wore a light flowered challie gown, trimmed with green ribbons. In her hair were bows of pink and green. They walked very precisely. Washington setting the proper step for a soldier.

George Anderson and Miss Hattie Bailey followed, the two forming a pair which was considered by the majority of the spectators to have an excellent chance of winning. He carried his right arm gracefully at his side, unlike the others. Miss Bailey, who did not quite equal her partner in height, was attired in white with pink ribbons.

George W. Anderson and Miss Jennie Pennington walked steadily in line. Miss Pennington's gown was quite gorgeous, a combination of pink and green. Fourth in line were Hascott Butler and Miss Alberta Johnson. Miss Johnson wore bright blue. Her neck was ornamented with a necklace, and her gloves were of black silk.

William Wilson, who did not affect full dress, followed with Miss Carrie Cruse, who sought the prize in a gown of blue. Arthur Smith and Miss Nancy Kennedy were together, Miss Kennedy wearing a striking combination of black waist and white skirt. Walter Miller walked with Miss Jennie Bundy, who was attired in a simple white gown.

Lorenzo Hopkins and Miss Cornelia Jinkins were a pair who fulfilled the predictions of onlookers of their success. Hopkins wore a light business suit, and his collar was of the turn-down variety. Miss Jinkins's green gown was covered with black lace and fish-net. Last in line were William Austin and Miss Halloway. He was not in evening costume, while she affected a decolette style in old rose, with white lace and cream-colored gloves.

The last pair dropped out at the beginning of walking again after the first recess, and then the judges began to get excited and discussed the superiority of different participants at length. The contests was rapidly narrowed down to Washington and Hopkins, and then Hopkins and Miss Jinkins were awarded the cake. The explanation of the decision was that the judges decided that the affair was held to exhibit styles in ordinary walking, and not in military marching and evolutions at corners. Washington was referred to in the remarks about the military, he being considered the next best walker of the men.

After the walk had ended and the cake had been handed to the successful two, the committee, D. S. Godfrey, R. T. Bowden, J. W. Murray and George Henderson, invited the spectators to the dancing, and soon the colored attendants were making merry in the waltz.

The features appreciated by those not present in the hall were the shrill toots of a runaway cornet, and the frenzied yelling of the gent who called off the figures of the dance.

PIE-HUNGER CAUSES FIRE.

Two Artists and a Policeman Precipitate a General Alarm.

Night Watchman George Rockafellow went into Liefke's bakery at 11:10 last evening and asked one of the bakers at work there for a pie. The man went to get one for his customer from a front window. As there was no light in the store then, he twisted a piece of paper and used it for a torch.

As he reached into the window for the pie, the mosquito netting which extended across caught fire from the blaze of the paper, throwing a light into the street.

Fireman Harry Dreier, going home along Front street, noticed it, and called to three men, Artists Julian Scott and William H. Griffen, and Policeman Cooney, who were on the corner of Somerset street. They investigated before pulling an alarm, and found on running up the street that Rockafellow and the baker had extinguished the flames by that time.

REV. Daniel F. Warren, D. D., Rector Holy Trinity Church, Jersey City Heights, says:

"Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills are unquestionably good. They are, in my opinion, all they claim to be. I have tried them and found in them what I needed. I believe they will cure Dyspepsia, and that is saying much for any medicine. I am glad, therefore, to give my testimony."

A SPRAINED FOOT THE WORST.

Howard Wyckoff's Lucky Escape From Death.

Howard Wyckoff, an employe of A. M. Griffen, with several other workmen was painting the porch roof of a house in Lee place Wednesday afternoon. They had finished a portion of it, and to reach the other side necessitated moving a ladder which was being used, to the side of the porch.

Mr. Wyckoff was on the roof assisting, and when the corner of the roof was reached the ladder caught, at the same time striking him. He tried to throw himself backward, but was unable to do so, and fell from the roof to the ground, a distance of twenty feet. He landed on his feet, spraining his left foot and ankle. At the same time his chin struck his left knee, his teeth making several incisions in the lower lip. M. Wyckoff was unconscious for a half hour, and when he came to he was taken to his home, 622 West Eighth street.

Dr. Jenkins, who was called, at first thought that some bones were fractured, but discovered later that it was a bad sprain. His body is very sore from the fall, but he is able to get around the house with the assistance of two canes.

That he was not killed is a wonder to those who saw the accident.

The same foot sustained a severe sprain some time ago, and the present injury is in consequence very painful.

NORTH PLAINFIELD FIRE-ALARM.

The completion of the fire-alarm system in the borough has been retarded by delays in receiving wire from New York. The wiring is about completed, and it is expected that the whole system will be tested next Tuesday. The numbers will be arranged as follows:

134, Mountain and Westervelt avenues.
141, Pearl and Somerset streets.
142, Manning avenue and Somerset street.
143, Grandview avenue and Somerset street.
145, Hudson's lane and Somerset street.
151, Prospect place and Washington avenue.
152, Linden avenue and Grove street.
153, Girard and Willow avenues.
154, Rockview avenue and Rockview terrace.
156, Harrison and Cedar streets.
157, Mercer avenue and Park place.

THE SECRET ORDERS.

The New Brunswick Red Men went home from their Plainfield visit in such a confusion of happiness that they told The Home News the name of the Plainfield tribe was Panquananque.

Brethren Simmonds, Smith and Leland took the Orient degree in Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., last evening. The check of $250 was received for the family of the late J. Ran. Dunn, and will be paid immediately. On account of the absence of Councilor Harvey Thorn, Vice-Councilor Herbert McVoy acted in his place. The coming excursion of the J. O. U. A. M. to Asbury Park Thursday August 16, was talked of, and Brethren W. Force, M. Lunger and John Beekman, Jr., were appointed a committee to arrange for uniforms to be used on that occasion. Next Thursday evening there will be initiation.

The Tea Habit.

A cup of good tea taken with a meal is often very cheering and refreshing and is probably not injurious to any one, unless taken too strong. But this cannot be said when the tea is strong or is improperly made, and the habit of drinking tea that has been kept brewing and steeping on the range all day to make a hot drink ready for one or a dozen calls upon it at odd intervals through the day, is one of the worst of habits in its effects upon the digestive and nervous systems. It may not be the cause of murders, like alcoholism, but tea-ism is undoubtedly the cause of many family quarrels and of a great deal of physical misery.

Devonshire Cream.

To obtain Devonshire cream, put a pan of milk in a cool place for twenty-four hours. At the end of that time place the pan on the back of the range and heat the milk slowly to the boiling point, being careful not to let it boil. Put the pan in a cool place for six or twelve hours. At the end of that time skim off the cream, which will be found firm, and of a peculiarly sweet flavor. In very hot weather the milk may be scalded after it has stood for twelve hours. This cream is delicious if served with fruit, blanc mange, toast or hominy.

Queen Victoria's Favorite Soup.

It may be of interest to humbler housewives to know what the chief cook to Queen Victoria for many years says was the only soup eaten by Her Majesty during that time. It was made by the following receipt: Wash and scald one half pound of Frankford pearl barley and set in a stewpan with three pints of veal stock. Simmer very gently for one and a half hours. Remove a third to another soup pot. Rub the rest through a sieve. Pour it to the whole barley. Add half a pint of cream. Season with a little salt. Stir till hot and serve.

Fried Parsley.

Select full stalks of parsley and remove all dried or imperfect leaves. Wash it thoroughly in cold, salted water and dry on a clean, soft towel; when it is perfectly dry, gather a bunch at a time by the stalks, dip leaves in smoking-hot fat for one moment. If there is any moisture on parsley the fat will sputter and there is danger of burning the hand; but if carefully dried and dipped in, there is no trouble in frying the parsley as desired.

For Sore Feet.

When your feet are sore, as from long walking, take a teaspoonful of Epsom salts, five or six drops of tincture of capsicum, and put in a shallow basin of water—just enough to cover the soles of the feet—and soak them twenty minutes. One will be surprised at the relief this will give. It will also cure burning of the feet that so many are troubled with in the summer.

When Feathers Are Damp.

If feathers are damp at any time the curl may be retained by holding the hat over the fire and waving it until it is dry; then place in a cool room for the fibres to stiffen. Feathers may also be curled over a knife held near a hot flatiron, the heat making the curl more durable. A little blue in the water in which feathers are washed improves the color.

MARTYR TO HIS FAITH.

PLAINFIELD SEVENTH-DAYS SHOULD HELP THIS VICTIM.

Shameful Case of Religious Intolerance in the Republic—Christians Persecuting Christians in Tennessee.

The constitutionality and construction of "Sunday laws" have been considered by the courts of this country in nearly one thousand cases: the earliest of which there is an authentic record, being in 1650, when the Puritans indicted seven persons for being Baptists, and for not observing "The Lord's Day". In other words, for being Seventh-Day Baptists.

The latest case of this sort of persecution is that of a citizen of Tennessee by the name of W. B. Capps, at Dresden, Tenn., because he had performed common labor on the first day of the week.

The witness against Mr. Capps visited him on Sunday to see about the payment of a note on which Capps was surety, and found the farmer at work in his field, disturbing no one. There would seem to be a likelihood that some feeling growing out of the payment of the note might in part account for the arrest; but there is no mention of it in published statements. Mr. Capps has been convicted under the law of the State of Tennessee, for working on Sunday, and fined $51 80, with costs, and, on appeal, has has the judgment of the lower court affirmed and the total fine and costs increased to $110 45.

As Mr. Capps has a wife and four children, and for failure to pay the imposed sum has been sentenced to jail for 442 days to work out the fine, his case is now the most remarkable in the list.

Mr. Capps is a poor man, and unable to support his family during his confinement, and it is proposed to gather a contribution for this purpose, to be sent to A. O. Tait, Secretary of a Seventh-Day Adventist Organization who has asked for contributions, and is attending to the same. Mr. Capps is a member of this Seventh-Day Church, and is a man of the highest character. The Press will cheerfully undertake the forwarding of funds left in its care.

Recently, at Paris, Tenn., three Seventh-Day adventists were placed in the chain gang with criminals, for working on the Sunday, after having duly rested on the seventh day of the week. These men were of the best, and were well along in years. One being 58, one 60, and the other 62 years of age. Arrests have been made in Maryland of late, and one in Hall County, Georgia, resulted in the conversion of the court itself to the Seventh-Day belief, through the earnestness and directness of the prisoners who spoke in their own defence.

In Arkansas there have been many indictments. In almost every case the informer or the prosecuting witness was doing work, or out hunting on the same day, and often with the very persons accused; yet the man who kept the seventh day was convicted in every instance, while the one who did not keep the seventh day was left unmolested, and his evidence was accepted by the Court.

In the case of one convicted man the offence was committed seventeen days before the law under which he has tried went into effect, and, the judges, in several cases, as members of the Bar Association of the State, reported to the State on "Sunday laws":—"Our statute as it stands, provides that 'persons who are members of any religious society who observe as Sabbath any other day of the week than Sunday, shall not be subject to the penalties of this (Sunday Law) act.'"

The State Constitutions of these States say: "All men have a natural and indefeasible right to worship according to the dictates of their own conscience."

There is every evidence that the last case, that of Mr. Capps, is religious persecution, and those who sympathize cannot do a better act than to contribute his relief, and by their act to add one to the list of those who discountenance the persecution.

There are some who love a dogma more than they do liberty; and under a plea for law and order would destroy liberty. Order without liberty can be found in prisons.

C. E. Buell has interested himself largely in the matter, and has obtained consent to have contributions left at the following places:

Daily Press office; James Martin, corner Park avenue and Second street; H. P. Reynolde's, R. J. Shaw's, Frank Bowley's and L. W. Randolph's. If you can't give much, give a little.

Withstood the Heat.

A report was started last evening that James Harrison, a mason employed in Netherwood, had been taken to his home, suffering from sunstroke which it was feared might result in his death. When seen in his house on North avenue between Westfield and Fanwood, Mr. Harrison showed no signs of illness, and said that he had suffered no more from the heat during the day than any one else.

AUGUST WEATHER PROSPECT.

What We May Expect, Judging from the Past.

Forecast Official Dunn, having compiled the statistics of the weather during the past twenty-three years for the month of August, gives the following as a basis for the probable weather for the coming month, together with the temperature and precipitation:

There has been an average during the month of August of nine clear days, fourteen when the sky has been partly covered with clouds, and eight when it has been entirely covered. The average amount of rain that has fallen during the month has been 4.75 inches, with ten days of rainfall. In 1875 the month was noted for a precipitation of 10.42 inches, which is the largest aggregate on record; but in 1886 the month was comparatively dry, with a total rainfall of only 1.18 inches. During August, 1888, there was a precipitation of 3.93 inches in twenty-four hours. This occurred between 8 a. m. of August 21 and the same hour of August 22.

The mean or normal temperature for the month of August has been 72 degrees. In 1877 the average rose to 76 degrees, while in 1872 and 1874 it fell to 70 degrees. On August 13, 1881, and August 16, 1888, the mercury rose to 90 degrees, the highest record for the month in twenty-three years. The coldest days were on August 27, 1885, and August 24, 1890, when the thermometer recorded 51 degrees.

The prevailing winds for the month have been from the southwest, but on August 29 of last year it blew over this city at the rate of fifty-four miles an hour from a southeasterly direction, and caused considerable damage along the coast.

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception: "I had been troubled with heart disease 25 years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician continuously. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I was indeed in a serious condition when a gentleman directed my attention to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by the remedy, and was again a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could feel a decided improvement in the circulation of my blood. When I had taken three doses I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost putrified. Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down, and I was so much better that I did my own work. On my recommendation six others are taking this valuable remedy."—Mrs. Morgan, 509 W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, a discovery of an eminent specialist in heart disease, is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. WOMAN'S WORLD.

THE WINNER OF THE WOODFORD PRIZE AT CORNELL UNIVERSITY.

Baseball Women—The Reversible Pommel. Rescue of Virginia's Historic Shrines—Is This a Coming Fashion?—A New Club For Women—Items of Interest.

The recent commencement at Cornell was the most remarkable of any in the university's history for one reason—a woman took the Woodford prize in oratory, the highest honor that can come to any Cornellian. She is Miss Harriett Chedie Connor of Burlington, Ia., a slender, pretty girl, but unmistakably an orator. She had five male competitors. It was because Miss Connor is an orator that she won the prize. Her subject was "The Letter and the Spirit," and it dealt exclusively with the growth of tolerance and liberality in religious thought.

Women competitors for the Woodford prize—founded 25 years ago by General Woodford of Brooklyn and consisting of a gold medal or $100 in gold—are not uncommon. The men students outnumber the women at Cornell by about four or five to one, and frequently and for several years in succession a woman has competed for the Woodford. In the early eighties there were two women competitors for the prize in one class, and one of them secured "honorable mention." Until this year no one has ever considered the women seriously as competitors, and a place has been given to them in the contest largely out of compliment to the unusually good work they always do at Cornell.

This year it was generally recognized that Miss Connor would be a dangerous competitor for the men. She had won her way to the highest honors in Cornell, had obtained a Phi Beta Kappa key and was regarded as one of the best speakers that had ever come to Cornell. She had proved her capabilities long before the Woodford prize subjects were announced.

The young men of '94 knew, therefore, who and what they had to meet when it was announced that Miss Connor would try for the Woodford, but when it became known that Miss Connor was dancing at the senior ball the night before the competition and staying late, too, while most of her competitors were in their beds, the young men's supporters took heart and said they guessed Miss Connor was done for.

The usual critical audience was in the armory. The young men came and went. They spoke well and received the usual applause. All, however, were self conscious. They showed their nervousness, as they always do. They were not experienced speakers, although most of them were polished. But the polish was plainly artificial and studied.

Miss Connor's name was called. She was dressed entirely in white—probably her ball gown—and as she stepped upon the platform and the audience saw her case and the almost wonderfully pretty picture she made a tremendous outburst of applause was heard. She had won half the battle before she spoke a word. When she started to speak, her voice was somewhat unsteady. She was tired from her social pleasures, and she showed it. She pulled herself together quickly, and then all traces of self consciousness disappeared. She had views to present, and she seemed more desirous of convincing the audience of the seriousness and truth of what she was saying than of winning the prize. The prize was a secondary matter apparently. She was earnest and not artificial. Her few gestures seemed spontaneous, and she had quite forgotten her gown and whether she stood on her right foot while she delivered this paragraph or on her left foot while she spoke the other paragraph. The audience was absolutely still. There was no turning, no whispering.

Mrs. Lease and Mrs. Foster never had more attentive listeners. Every syllable was heard by every person in the audience of nearly 2,000 persons. Her voice filled the place, and her inflection and emphasis seemed perfect. When she finished, a storm of applause shook the building. The audience declared her the winner without waiting for the following competitors, and the judges tried to hold themselves impartial to the end.

When the decision was announced finally, the applause was tumultuous. Then Miss Connor became self conscious. She was in a whirl of congratulations, the people were excited, and she became the most marked girl that ever entered or graduated from Cornell.—New York Sun.

Baseball Women.

The average woman who attends the ball games does not know much about scoring. She merely keeps a record of the outs and runs by marking the figure "1" opposite the names of the players who make them, while a zero fills all other spaces on the score card. Such a thing as distinguishing between base hits and errors is far too puzzling to be thought of. But there are some who can score as well as the most accomplished critics.

Ball players' wives generally excel in this respect. For years Mrs. Anson, the wife of the famous Chicago captain, was the official scorer of the club, and some people were cruel enough to say that she gave "Anse" the benefit of the doubt to such an extent that he easily led the League in batting. At the time the identity of the club's official scorer was unknown, but later, when it was learned that Mrs. Anson had been the official talkkeeper, everybody appreciated the joke. Mrs. Nash, wife of the Boston captain, can score a game very cleverly, and John Clarkson's wife knows more about baseball than many men. She can also keep a correct score and knows when her husband is pitching well or not.

Mrs. Foutz, wife of the Brooklyn manager, is a most enthusiastic lover of the game. She knows the rules, can pick out good plays and shows a knowledge of what constitutes winning ball. She is particularly happy when the Brooklyns defeat the New Yorks, and when the game goes the other way she is disconsolate.—New York Sun.

The Reversible Pommel.

If you are about to invest in a side-saddle to take with you to the country, by all means take one with a reversible pommel. There is a danger of becoming one sided if a woman rides a good deal. The remedy, or rather the prevention, lies in the saddle which you can use either on the left or on the right side.

It was the Princess of Wales who first set the example in this direction. Other English ladies followed the fashion. In New York Miss Anna Brackett was the first woman to use a reversible pommel. Now nearly all the children in well regulated families who ride are taught to ride in this way. Doctors advocate the idea, and fashion seconds it.

Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt and the children of Dr. Seward Webb, who ride during the winter nearly every afternoon in the week at a riding club, have never been accustomed to any other style of saddle.

Mrs. Duncan Elliott also prefers this kind. So does Mrs. S. S. Colgate, who rides to hounds. This is also the case with Mrs. Kernochan (nee Stevenson), who, during the spring and autumn, is often days together in the saddle from 9 o'clock in the morning until late in the afternoon down at her country place at Hempstead. Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Miss Rockefeller, Miss Bird and Miss Frances Brayton Ives use saddles with reversible pommels.—New York Correspondent.

Rescue of Virginia's Historic Shrines.

From a condition threatening an almost total obliteration of much that is most desirable to cherish for reasons of history and of a just pride of lineage the women of Virginia are now coming to the rescue. They are doing what they can to save historic houses, to keep intact churches that have survived from the colonial period, to restore and preserve inscriptions in churchyards and cemeteries, to collect and insure the preservation of parish and county records and other interesting manuscripts and documents, to find and keep the furniture and household effects of the olden time and in short to save everything of antiquarian significance. When due regret has been expressed for all that was destroyed beyond recovery from 1860 to 1865, and for the far greater loss due to the neglect during the 25 years following the war, it is still true that Virginia is yet marvelously rich in surviving historical subjects and materials. The task of checking the further process of destruction is one in which the daughters of Virginia deserve the encouragement of the whole nation.—Review of Reviews.

Is This a Coming Fashion?

The mode of wearing different sleeves at the same time is again striving to intrench itself. At the last smart London ball one of the fashionable leaders appeared in a bodice of white brocade, one sleeve of which duly matched the gown material, while the other arm was incased in yellow velvet, softened by a puff of satin. A second prominent woman of the smart set had, with a bodice of cherry colored velvet, the top of one arm veiled in a fringe of cherries and velvet, while the other fitted into a small sleeve of pale blue gauze. A third member of the select few was charming, so it is said, in a gown of white satin, whose bodice, draped with pink chiffon, was held up over the shoulders with trails of black poppies. On the one shoulder a pink rose spray stood upright, with folds of pink chiffon falling on the arms beneath and caught up into becoming draperies, the other sleeve being of white satin and pink chiffon.

As these state balls are precedent of modistic novelties and conservatories of growing fashions, it is possible that harlequin sleeves are to be features of next season's gowns.

A New Club For Women.

The Victorian club in London was established by a woman. She is now its president. Its purpose is giving satisfactory accommodation to women who go to town for a few days and providing comfortable permanent homes for professional women at moderate prices. Subscriptions are on a very low scale, and women in town pay a guinea a year, and members from the country contribute only 18 shillings. There is no pecuniary responsibility incurred, so the whole expense is within the limit of a very modest income. Small rooms can be obtained for half a guinea a week, and meals can be served marvelously cheap because there are so many members. And the privilege of joining for one month for 4 shillings is another advantage the club offers. There are no restraining rules to interfere with the perfect independence of the members. They go out and come in when they please and have free access to all the clubrooms. In fact, it is a residential club, founded on principles which must appeal to every woman who earns her living.

Wants the Jobs Traded.

H. W. Allen is a man who lives in Rockford, Ills. He travels for a wholesale grocery house. He has a wife and a baby. The other day he threw his shoulder out of joint. He had a trip mapped out that it was necessary should be made. His wife told him that if he would mind the baby she would make the trip for him. He laughed her to scorn, but she was in earnest, and she took his sample case and went the rounds. The result was that while he made a rather poor fist of taking care of the baby she got 10 pages more orders than he ever secured in one day in all the years he has been on the road. The firm has written to Mr. Allen suggesting that he trade jobs with his wife permanently.—New England Grocer.

Looks Cool and Charming.

The girl in white is always a fascinating creature and never more so than when her frock is of fine silk mull, its sole trimming consisting of sash and stock of pale blue ribbon sprinkled with tiny rosebuds. These exquisite bits of floral prettiness are seen in all of the summer concoits from parasols to hosiery. A charming sunshade to be carried by an acknowledged belle is of white silk with narrow satin stripes, on each one of which there is a continuous line of the pretty pink blooms. The handles of Dresden china corresponds exactly with the combination in the main body of the parasol and completes a harmony that is sufficiently delicate and expensive to suit the most fastidious.

A Ribbon Threader.

Narrow ribbons threaded through lace or embroidery or wider ones under insertion are such a distinct feature of present fashions that a new threader that has been recently invented and patented ought to attain speedy popularity. Like most useful things, it is really quite simple, being a flat shaped piece of metal, with a long shaped slit at the top, through which the ribbon is passed. The ribbon is held securely and kept entirely flat and is thus inserted without crease or injury, while the threader is constructed especially to avoid tearing the lace. It is made in three sizes, suitable for the various widths of ribbon.—London Lady.

Kate Douglas Wiggin.

Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin, a well known society woman of New York as well as the popular author of some clever New England stories, is at present in London, where she is welcomed as an addition to the fashionable intellectual circles there. A writer in the last number of the Pall Mall Budget says of Mrs. Wiggin that she is "tall and elegant, dresses exquisitely and is the very type of the pretty and brilliant American." Mrs. Wiggin owes her success entirely to her own efforts, having once taught school in California. She is remembered there as the founder of the free kindergarten system in San Francisco.

The Rage For Buckles.

At this moment it is almost impossible to keep track of the new belt buckles. Flowers are seen. An embossed crescent is a new buckle. Silver cable twisted into nautical designs is for yachting belts. Silver gilt and enamel are seen in new designs. In this case the enamel is in sections, wreathed in gilt, in which manner it is very effective. Slides are almost as conspicuous. In many cases the slide is a single bar. In others it retains the original form. Renaissance belts with cross sections hold their own.—Jewelers' Circular.

Organdies and Muslins.

There is one thing the wearer of organdies and muslins must remember—that is, to be extremely particular as to the under petticoats and skirts. The material is not stiff enough in itself to look well for any length of time, and to keep a skirt hanging properly a very thin haircloth or moreen petticoat should be worn, or else under the silk slip a skirt of very stiff muslin carefully starched, or a taffeta silk, with several ruffles and a tiny steel tape run through the hem.—New York Dispatch.

Women Eligible to a Degree.

At a meeting of the trustees of the University of Pennsylvania on July 3, Acting Provost Harrison presiding, it was resolved to establish a four years' course in natural history under the charge of the biological school. Women will be admitted on the same terms as men and be equally eligible to the degree. This is the first offer in the history of the university of a college degree for women.—Philadelphia North American.

Mattings In Fine Houses.

Mattings are taking the place of carpets in many fine houses, particularly for bedrooms. No matter how nice the floor nor how many rugs, there is always a time when one steps with bare feet upon the wood and receives an unpleasant sensation. Matting is so clean, cool and airy that it is a delight, and the new designs and patterns are really beautiful, and it feels good to walk on.

Shedding Her Gloves.

The summer girl of the past two or three seasons has begun to throw off another shackle of fashion, and the throwing off process is now almost completed. This is wearing gloves during the warm weather. They are uncomfortable, warm, extravagant, as they are soon spoiled, and altogether are a nuisance.

Mme. Bidi-Radya-Kouldbouiarow, the first Mohammedan woman to pass the examinations and receive a diploma as doctor of medicine, has been appointed by the Russian government as principal medical officer of the town of Kasiman.

A lady was recently seen cycling in Paris thus attired: A skirt of purple velvet to the knee, with knickers to match; purple velvet bodice, with lilac silk frills; black stockings, high laced boots and an immense black hat and veil.

The appointment of Miss Ella Lewis as postmistress at Gallatin, Tenn., meets the general approval of the people, although three men wanted the place and tried hard to get it.

Sheriff Hannan of Rochester has appointed his wife matron at the jail in response to a petition signed by many societies and clergymen asking that a matron be appointed.

A Catholic young women's association has been formed in Brooklyn, which will be modeled after the existing Young Women's Christian association.

Miss Blanche H. Hill is the first woman to compete for the Goddard prizes for oratory at Tufts college. She won the first prize in the first division.

NEW EVIDENCE

Of Dr. Lighthill's Success.

A Flattering Testimonial From Col. John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

A HAPPY EXPERIENCE.

The Interesting Testimony of Mr. W. E. Dilts, the Popular Passenger Conductor of the N. J. Central.

ROSELLE, N. J., July 1, 1894.

To My Friends and the Public:

I take pleasure in calling public attention to the remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case. For the past ten years I had been afflicted with a severe form of piles which finally gave me the greatest pain and distress nearly all the time, and from which I could not obtain any relief, in spite of all my efforts.

Hearing of a number of cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in similar cases, I placed myself under his care, and I rejoice to say he effected a complete cure in my case and gave me new life in doing so, for I am sure that I could not have endured my misery much longer. And it will be a matter of importance to those who are suffering from this disease to learn the happy fact that Dr. Lighthill effected my cure without giving me pain or detaining me from work.

W. E. DILTS.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose grateful testimonial is in Dr. Lighthill's possession.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

IN A SEA OF FLAMES

Several Towns Destroyed by Forest Fires.

Women and Children in the Woods Without Shelter—Wisconsin Central Unable To Move Trains—Railroad Bridges Burned and Cars Ditched—Train Hands Injured.

WEST SUPERIOR, Wis., July 28.—On the Wisconsin Central railroad it is impossible to move trains. Phillips, the headquarters of John R. Davis' lumber company, a manufacturing town of 2,000 population, is totally destroyed by fire and only a few buildings remain standing.

At dispatch received from Fifield, a small station a few miles this side of Phillips, says that 500 women and children are in the woods there without shelter. They sent requests for food, as the supply at Fifield is very short, but the train that started from here last evening was obliged to return, as bridges are totally destroyed a few miles south. Communication with Fifield is now shut off, and it is feared that the town is also on fire.

Along the Omaha line fires raged with terrible fierceness. Shores Crossing, a little village eight miles west of Ashland, has been destroyed. Not a building remains standing and the homeless families were brought to Ashland.

The railroad bridge near there was destroyed and a fast Omaha train was ditched and the engine and sixteen cars entirely burned. Both the engineer and firemen were injured and the brakemen are missing. Loss to cars and freight is many thousand dollars.

IRONWOOD, Mich., July 28.—The forests surrounding Ironwood, Hurley, Bessemer and Wakefield are almost a virtual sea of flames and the smoke is so dense a person cannot see over a few hundred feet.

AFFAIRS AT PULLMAN.

Troops Will Be Withdrawn If Work Is Not Resumed.

PULLMAN, Ill., July 28.—The Pullman company has been given to understand that the works must resume operations next Monday or the militia will be withdrawn permanently, if terms are not made with the strikers. If the order is not given to start the works, if possible without new operatives, it is believed the company intends to play a game of freeze out with the strikers and a campaign of eviction for non-payment of rents may be inaugurated at Pullman.

The militiamen are eager to be relieved of their tiresome duty. Vice President Wickes, after his conference with Mayor Hopkins yesterday, said he would make known the decision of the company tomorrow morning. The officials claim they are able to get workmen for three-fourths of the work waiting to be done.

CHICAGO, July 28.—Richard Lawrence and Edward Rhodes, two strikers from Chillicothe, Ill., were found guilty of contempt by Judge Grosscup, of the United States Circuit court, and were sentenced to forty days' imprisonment each. Lawrence is to be sent to jail in McHenry county and Rhodes goes to Mercer. Bert Cornell and Peter Downd, the other strikers from Chillicothe, who were heard at the same time on a charge of contempt, were discharged for lack of evidence.

Knocked Out in Four Rounds.

BOSTON, July 28.—Walter Johnson, of Philadelphia, and Sampson Crawford, of Boston, colored heavyweights, faced each other for four rounds at the Cribb club. The fight was in Johnson's favor from the start and he showed himself a very clever man. In the fourth round he scored a knock-out and got the decision.

Coxey Sticks to His Army.

MASSILLON, O., July 28.—Jacob Coxey denies the charge that he has deserted his army and says he is sending them all the money he can spare. He said: "I suggested that they get arrested and the government would have to provide for them."

Spanish Smugglers Seized.

TAMPA, Fla., July 28.—The United States revenue cutter McLane seized six more Spanish vessels off Auclote. They were engaged in smuggling. A few weeks ago the McLane seized six vessels at the same place charged with the same offense.

GREENSBURG, Pa., July 28.—The 21st congressional conference at Jeanette, after taking 72 ballots without nominating, adjourned until Aug. 21. The candidates are Congressman Heiner, Senator Brown, Editor Weaver and Capt. Nesbet.

Race War Stories Exaggerated.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., July 28.—Reliable information received here from the Linton coal mining district states that the stories sent out from that place about a race war between white and negro coal miners have been exaggerated.

Nineteen Years for McGough.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., July 28.—H. C. White's woolen mill at Chepachet, R. I., has started up after a shutdown since last April. It employes 125 hands and will run on Clay worsteds.

CONVICTS MUTINY.

Kill a Warden and Wound Two Keepers at Tracy City, Tenn.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., July 28.—Convicts at Tracy City are in a state of mutiny and as a result two men are dead and two others are suffering from slight wounds. The convicts loaded a pipe with explosives, placed it in a coal car and attached a slow fuse to it.

Deputy Warden Nelson and assistants were passing along another entry to bring the convicts out for the night and when they arrived opposite it, the bomb exploded. Nelson was instantly killed and Guards Terrel and Thurman were slightly wounded.

A negro convict named Pete Hamilton was killed by a volley from the other guards.

There were 115 convicts in the mine at the time, and all but 70 surrendered. These remained inside and swear they will not come out.

Nelson was a member of the last general assembly from Maury county. State officials here were at once notified and they, in turn, telegraphed Superintendent of Prison Kirk to go at once to Tracy City. Telegrams late last night say that it will hardly be necessary to send troops, as it is believed all convicts will surrender before morning. Escape was probably the object of the mutineers.

EMPLOYMENT OF SOLDIERS.

Their Duties as Defined by an Act of Congress.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—General orders have been issued by direction of the Secretary of War calling attention of all officers of the army to the act of congress, approved June 18, 1878, declaring that "it shall not be lawful to employ any part of the army of the United States as a posse comitatus, or otherwise, for the purpose of executing the laws, except in such cases and under such circumstances as such employment of said force may be expressly authorized by the constitution or by act of congress; and no money appropriated by this act shall be used to pay any of the expenses incurred in the employment of any troops in violation of this section, and any person wilfully violating the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor; and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by fine not exceeding $10,000 or imprisonment not exceeding two years, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

STRIKE INVESTIGATION.

House Committee Has About Abandoned It.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—The house committee on inter-state and foreign commerce has about abandoned their proposed investigation of the late A. R. U. strike, as proposed by a resolution reported from the committee several weeks ago.

At first it was intended to press the matter in the house and to begin this inquiry at an early date and, if necessary, continue it during the recess of congress. The appointment of a commission by the president to make the investigation led the committee to allow the matter to go over, and it is now thought that it will be abandoned entirely.

A BAD MAN ARRESTED.

Harry Upp Sent Obscene Literature to School Children.

YORK, Pa., July 28.—Anthony Comstock, of New York, caused the arrest in this city of Harry Upp, on a charge of sending obscene literature through the mails. Upp advertised his literature all over the United States, and had a lucrative trade. His principal business was done with school children. Anthony Comstock corresponded with him and came here to make a purchase from him. A decoy letter addressed to Upp led to his arrest. He was taken to Philadelphia to appear before a United States commissioner. Upp came here from St. Louis eighteen months ago.

K. of P. Want Cheaper Rates.

CLEVELAND, O., July 28.—The Second Ohio regiment K. of P., embracing nearly all the knights in northern Ohio, has had trouble with the Pennsylvania railroad, and unless it is fixed up this part of the state, which has many thousand knights, will not be represented at the grand conclave in Washington next month. The difference is one of principle, the knights claiming to have been discriminated against in rates. They ask for a $10 rate and the road will not come lower than $11 for the round trip.

Connecticut's Fire-Escape Law.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 28.—The state fire-escape law, which requires a rope fire-escape to be kept in each room of a hotel, is to be tested in the courts. Mrs. Woodruff, who keeps a large boarding-house, known as the Leavenworth, has been ordered by Building Inspector Garvie to put rope fire-escapes in each room. She claims that the law applies only to hotels which take transent guests and not to boarding-houses.

Lindsay, Ont., Shocked.

LINDSAY, Ont., July 28.—About midnight a very perceptible shock of earthquake was felt in this town, lasting for two or three seconds, and followed by a report or explosion, sounding like cannon fired a long distance off. Houses were shaken, windows rattled, and citizens rushed from their homes in alarm. No damage appears to have been done.

Chico, the Human Gorilla, Dead.

DAYTON, O., July 28.—Chico, the human gorilla, attached to Barnum & Bailey's circus, died at the fair grounds here shortly after the performance Thursday night. Mr. Bailey had an offer of $10,000 from Hagenbach, which he refused. The body was embalmed like any human and sent to New York.

Southern Pacific Strike Off.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 28.—The Oakland local branch of the American Railway Union has decided to declare the strike against the Southern Pacific off.

THE KOREAN IMBROGLIO

More or Less Blood Has Been Shed Over It.

Cable Interruption Prevents Securing Accurate Information from That Curious Country—The Present Contest Designated as a Partial or Limited War—Great Excitement at Shanghai—London Press Comments on the Situation.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—The extent to which war is now flagrant between China and Japan is not clearly settled by any dispatches that have thus far been received either at the state or navy departments or by any of the foreign diplomats, though much interest is manifested in the situation. Of course it is accepted as fact that active hostilities have broken out in Korea and that more or less blood has been shed and still more will be shed before any possible end to the trouble can be arrived at. But it is as to the relations which other nations bear to the contest that uncertainty exists.

One difficulty in the way of obtaining information is found in the entire interruption of cable communication with Korea. This probably accounts for the absence of any dispatches from Mr. John M. B. Sill, our minister resident at Seoul, the capital of that curious country.

The cablegram received by Secretary Herbert from Capt. Day of the Baltimore, announcing the capture of the Korean king and the landing of United States marines, is from Cheefoo, China, whither the Baltimore had gone to send it. Cheefoo is the nearest Chinese port to Korea, being only 300 miles from Chemulpo. Capt. Day found it necessary to make this trip because all telegraphic communication with Korea had been ruptured.

The importance of this test between Japan and China is almost exclusively in its possible bearings upon the commerce of Chinese and Japanese ports. Each nation has a considerable navy, the Japanese quite a powerful one, with which it might be possible for it to attack any one of the leading Chinese ports.

The Japanese minister here asserts positively that Japan would avoid interfering with any Chinese port which by treaty was opened to American or European powers. But if either side has formally "declared war" against the other, by the well-defined provisions of international law, it would be required to serve notice upon all powers having treaty relations in regard to commerce, and, after reasonable notice to such powers, it might be justified in establishing a blockade or otherwise interfering with commerce.

In the standard work on international law prepared by Dr. Francis Wharton, so long the law adviser of our state department, a most interesting chapter is devoted to the consideration of the limitations which may be placed on wars. It shows that a formal declaration of war abrogates treaties and authorizes the members of both nations to commit hostilities against the other in every place and under every circumstance permitted by the rules of war. But a "partial" or "limited" war can be carried on without such wide-sweeping results.

Officials of the state department incline to the belief, inasmuch as neither our own government nor any other government represented in Washington has yet been officially advised by China or Japan that war has been declared between those nations, that the present contest falls under the designation of a partial or limited war.

They assume that the use of the phrase "war has been declared," in press dispatches, merely implies that hostilities have been commenced and that the terms as used in dispatches from the east do not convey the technical meaning which in diplomacy attaches to a "declaration of war" as affecting non-combatant nations.

The singular fact is pointed out that the Franco-Prussian war is the only great war in modern times which was accompanied by a declaration to other nations. Even our own great civil war was fought out without that accompaniment. In this particular difficulty between China and Japan a "formal declaration" as already pointed out would have grave significance, because it would involve the relations of other nations to the treaty ports of both countries.

Great Britain and Russia are apparently agreed that any settlement of the Chinese-Japanese difficulty must be effected through the good offices of the United States.

NEWS FROM SHANGHAI.

Great Excitement and Business Suspended There.

SHANGHAI, July 28.—The Chinese transports sunk off the Korean coast by Japanese guns belonged to the fleet of eleven steamers which sailed from Taku on Friday, July 20, with 12,000 troops. The fleet left Taku under an escort of gunboats. The majority of the transports proceeded slowly with the gunboats, while the faster ones steamed at full speed so as to land their troops as soon as possible. On the transports which arrived first at the Korean coast were a few hundred soldiers from the army of the north. Most of the force, however, consisted of coolies with inferior firearms or merely bows and arrows.

The attack upon the steamers from the Japanese last Wednesday is described briefly in a dispatch received from Nagasaki. The firing was begun by a Japanese battery on the shore, while the Chinese officers were trying to debark their men from the first steamer. The cruisers then steamed up and opened fire on all the transports which were lying to, waiting to discharge the men. The Chinese were unable to make any effective resistance. They were thrown into great confusion and many jumped overboard to escape the hot fire, under which two transports suffered severely.

The declaration of war has caused keen excitement among all classes here. Business is virtually suspended, although many smaller firms have made desultory egorts to sustain their trade. The Europeans have gathered at the Shanghai club to discuss the meagre reports from Korea. The position of the Japanese residents is precarious.

Japanese and Chinese Navies.

NEW YORK, July 28.—The Hochi Shimbun compares the fighting capacity of the Japanese and the Chinese navels, and arrives at the following results: Japan—number of vessels, 32; their tonnage, about 61,000; horse-power, about 95,000. China—number of vessels, 45; tonnage, about 63,000; horse-power, about 72,000.

THE STATE OF TRADE

Outlook Not Favorable for Improvement.

Delay in Tariff Legislation Has a Disorganizing Effect on Business—Iron and Steel Industries Hampered from Lack of Coke—Demand for Summer Specialties Fair.

NEW YORK, July 28.—Bradstreet's report of the general state of trade for the past week sums up the situation as follows: Leading influences affecting the course of trade throughout the United States within the week have not resulted in a net gain. Prolonged drouth and hot winds have damaged corn and other crops in Nebraska, and fears are entertained of like losses in Kansas. Without early rains there reduction in the yield of Indian corn is expected to be considerable. The outlook for the yield in spring wheat states is regarded as unfavorable, which reacts upon country merchants and checks demand.

Several thousand striking miners in Ohio, Indiana and Alabama refuse to return to work at rates agreed upon in conference, and this continues to depress business throughout tributary regions. Iron, steel and other industries are hampered throughout the Pittsburg district for lack of coke, which restricts production in the face of a mildly improving demand, and keeps the price of spot Bessemer pig and billets about a dollar higher than quotations for future delivery. Continued exports of gold from New York are regarded as an unfavorable influence, and there are more unfavorable reports as to mercantile collections. More serious in its disorganizing effect on general business is the continued delay to tariff legislation, few merchants caring to try to provide for prospective wants in view of the uncertainty.

The other side reveals reports of moderate improvement in general trade at a larger number of southern cities than last week; improvement in the outlook for the Columbia river canning pack; increased activity in all leading lines at San Francisco; full and regular fruit shipments east from the Pacific coast, and an improved demand for iron and steel at St. Louis, Pittsburg and other centres; practically complete restoration of railway freight service throughout the country; a tendency to buy very sparingly for fall delivery at Philadelphia, Baltimore, New York and Boston; excellent crop prospects in most southern states, and increasing orders among Providence manufacturers of dry goods, specialties and novelties in jewelry.

The spurt in demand for wool at Boston and at Philadelphia is attributed on the one hand to expectation of failure of tariff legislation and on the other to demand by speculators, who believed wool prices had touched the lowest possible point. Heavier shipments of merchandise from Baltimore to southern points were caused by the announcement that freight rates would advance Aug. 1.

In a majority of instances prices for staple products show a net decline this week, notably wool, which was pushed up 1 cent, but later lost it; cattle, hogs, wheat, oats, cotton, coffee and raw sugar. The advance in Indian corn was due primarily to damage to that crop, and the gain in the price for lard followed.

There have been 237 business failures in the United States this week, compared with 313 last week, with 409 in the fourth week of July last year, when the effects of the financial panic were being severely felt by the business community; there were 163 in the week two years ago, and 200 three years ago.

Trade in shoes, leather, hides and lumber at Boston remains as for weeks past, of moderate dimensions, business in general lines there continuing of a hand-to-mouth character. Demand for summer specialties in dry goods is only fair. Cotton stocks are accumulating. Increased purchases of prints for fall delivery are based on concessions. At Providence manufacturers of worsted suitings say business is improving, but those of fancy cassimeres talk of curtailing output. Increased orders for Philadelphia textile manufactures are at exceptionably low figures. At Baltimore furniture manufacturers are fairly busy, and there is some slight gain in hardware. The remaining months of the year are not regarded at Buffalo as promising a material improvement.

From the south, Memphis, Nashville, Charleston, Augusta, Atlanta, Chattanooga, Savannah and Galveston report a slight improvement within a week, the South Carolina and Texas ports adding that favorable reports as to crops render the fall outlook encouraging.

LONDON PRESS COMMENTS.

The War a Matter Not To Be Regarded Lightly.

LONDON, July 28.—The Morning Post says: "War between China and Japan is not to be lightly regarded. It is a question of European importance. Any alteration of the feudatory position of Korea must adversely affect China's guarantee to Great Britain of 1886."

Referring to the Port Hamilton question, the writer affirms that should Russia seek to alter her position or vary the guarantee in question, Great Britain would certainly have to re-occupy Port Hamilton. As regards the claim of suzerainty, the Post says the weight of evidence is decidedly against Japan.

The Daily News says: "If it were a duel to the death victory must eventually rest with China. It would then resemble the struggle between the northern and southern states of North America. That quarrel admitted of no compromise. Everybody knew that, given equal courage and resolution, numbers and resources must decide. In many respects the case is different. There can only be a short passage at arms, by the result of which the civilized world outside can test the progress that China and Japan have made in the art of war."

The Daily Chronicle says: "We hope that European statesmen will watch carefully for the first opportunity to intervene, and then bring the whole weight of their combined prestige to bear in favor of a peaceful settlement. A month's experience probably will bring the combatants to a state of mind and body in which proposals for an armistice and arbitration will be readily received."

BOWDEN HORSEWHIPPED.

The Manager of the Duval Club a Mass of Bruises.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 28.—J. E. T. Bowden, who achieved notoriety as the manager of the Duval Athletic club, which pulled off the Corbett-Mitchell fight here last January, was severely horsewhipped. Bowden's assailant was a Mr. Brunson, a Pullman car conductor. The cause was an alleged insult to Mrs. Brunson.

Brunson met Bowden in a saloon, covered him with a pistol and then proceeded to wear out a buggy whip on him. Bowden begged for mercy, but Brunson was implacable, and when he finished Bowden was in a pitiable condition. His face was a mass of bruised and quiveriug flesh and his clothing was cut to shreds. Bowden denies that he insulted Mrs. Brunson.

FURTHER CONFERENCE

The Tariff Bill Goes Back to the House.

Same Seven Conferees Reappointed. Excitement Over the Vote on Mr. Washburn's Motion To Recede from the Additional Differential Duty on Sugar.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—The struggle in the senate on the issue of sending the tariff bill back to conference without instructions or conditions was short, sharp and decisive.

It began with a renewal of the discussion of the point of order made on Senator Washburn's motion to instruct the senate conferees to recede from the additional differential duty of one-eighth of a cent per pound on sugar. The point of order that had been taken on that motion was that it was not in order, inasmuch as it proposed to interfere with a "full and free conference."

Two arguments against that position were made by Senators Manderson (rep., Neb.) and Platt (rep., Conn.), the former assuming that a vote against the point of order would be a vote against the sugar trust, which had called forth so many denunciations on both sides of the chamber and in both houses.

The decision of the presiding officer (Senator Harris) was in favor of sustaining the point of order and excluding the amendment. The decision was appealed from by Mr. Washburn and the motion to lay the appeal on the table was made by Mr. Faulkner (dem., W. Va.). The vote was taken amid great excitement and resulted in a tie—yeas, 32; nays, 32. The three populist senators, Allen, Kyle and Peffer, voted with the republicans. Sodid Senator Hill; and the vote of Senator Irby (dem., S. C.) was paired with that of another democratic senator, Mr. Smith, of New Jersey. The only senator who, not being paired, did not vote was Mr. Stewart, of Nevada. He was present in the chamber, but refrained from voting.

The net result was that the motion to lay on the table, not having had a majority, failed. Then came the question whether the decision of the chair should stand as the judgment of the senate; and it was also decided in the negative in the same way.

The vote being identically the same as in the first instance. The next vote was on agreeing to Senator Washburn's motion, and it also failed from the same cause—the lack of a majority—the vote being for the third time 32 to 32; but this time the Republican senators and their allies voted aye and the Democratic senators voted no. Then Senator Gray's original motion to insist and agree to a further conference was agreed to without a division, and the same seven conferees were reappointed.

The conference report on the army appropriation bill was agreed to, and some dozen bills on the calendar were passed, after which, at 3:50 p. m., the senate adjourned till Monday.

House of Representatives.

A bill was discussed at length to amend the revised statutes so as to authorize the commissioner of navigation to grant an American registry to vessels wrecked in foreign waters and repaired in American ports by American labor or when such repairs cost three-quarters of the value of the vessel, but it was withdrawn without action.

The agreement of the senate to the request of the house for a further conference on the tariff bill was communicated by Secretary Cox, of the senate, and the bill again sent to the conferees.

The conference report on the military appropriation bill which the senate agreed to yesterday was agreed to and the bill now goes to the president.

FUTURE OF THE BILL.

Members of the House Reluctant to Express Themselves.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—The tariff bill, five minutes after the action of the senate had been communicated to the house by Secretary Cox, was carried to the room of the committee on ways and means and locked up in the safe. Much concern was felt by members of the house, especially by the leaders, over the possible effect upon the future of the bill of the close vote in the senate, but they were reluctant to express themselves for publication.

There were but two of the house conferees in the city yesterday afternoon, and it was impossible to fix a time for the reassembling of those to whom the bill has been again committed. It was said in the room of the committee on ways and means that Chairman Wilson was at his home in West Virginia, but that he would doubtless return to Washington to-day. Mr. Montgomery will return to-day. The general opinion, and in this Speaker Crisp agreed, was that the conferees would not get together before Monday.

What would be the outcome of the conference no one could say. Speaker Crisp was asked for his opinion, but smilingly said he had none to express. Mr. McMillin, one of the conferees, in response to a similar request, said: "It would be mere conjecture to attempt to state what the result of the conference will be. The only thing that I can say now is that the probabilities in my opinion are that some conclusion will be reached by the conferees. Any one can guess as well as I what that conclusion will be."

SAVE THE BABY!

THE WHITE HEARSE WITH ITS TINY CASKET.

Infants Are Fast Dying of Cholera Infantum—How the Dread Disease May Be Prevented—Lactated Food the Best Diet in July—Mothers and Physicians Recommend It.

One can hardly take a walk these days, says the Boston Globe, without encountering a funeral.

Half the deaths in July are those of children under 5 years. Year in and year out a third of all who die are infants.

The effect of the summer heat upon the health of the baby is fearful.

Yet the intestinal disturbances, which are attributed to the weather, actually arise from errors in diet, from lack of absolute purity in food—perfectly preventable causes.

"If all the babies were fed on a diet sufficiently nutritious and absolutely pure," says a member of the board of health, "there would be no such thing as cholera infantum." The weekly returns which physicians are obliged by law to make at this office show no infant deaths from summer diarrhea among babies who have been fed on a diet of pure lactated food.

Healthy mothers' milk is unequalled, but the mothers who are capable of nursing their children throughout the entire summer are rare, not only in Boston, New York and the other cities, but also in the country. When this natural food is sufficient, or the mother not well, or when recourse must be had to nothing but cow's milk, without personal knowledge of its fitness for the baby, trouble occurs. When the breast milk is insufficient the baby should be put at once upon lactated food.

Mothers of large families and physicians of experience everywhere, say that for perfect security against summer complaints, cholera infantum and intestinal disorders, there is one diet, that never fails: Feed the baby on lactated food during the hot months, attend carefully to its regular feeding, and keep all dishes clean and thoroughly scalded.

Mothers may in this way dismiss all anxiety, as lactated food itself is free from any possibility of contagion and will nourish the little ones as nothing else can.

Thousands of infants whose mothers have been sickly have thrived and grown to be strong children upon lactated food, which is as pure and healthy as the air among the Vermont hills where it is made.

Many a mother, too, has been strengthened by using it.

The principal element of mother's milk is sugar of milk; this is the basis of lactated food. With it are combined the nutritious elements of the great cereals, wheat, oats, and barley, so prepared as to be readily digested and assimilated; the addition of the salts found in mother's milk makes lactated food a perfect substitute.

Many mothers find that nothing else agrees with their children.

Lactated food works marvels with little ones who are puny and pale.

A week or two suffices to show its splendid effect in brighter eyes, fairer skin, livelier manner and a steady gain in weight.

Lactated food saves babies' lives. It is the surest preventive in the world of cholera infantum. It is within everyone's reach, and is so inexpensive that no mother ever had a real excuse for not using it.

Miners Drowned.

MCKEESPORT, Pa., July 28.—David O. Davis and Uriah Wall, brothers-in-law, both miners at Dravosburg, received their pay Tuesday night and later visited several saloons. Tuesday night they started home in a skiff on the Monongahela river. Since that time they have been missing. Yesterday a searching party found the body of Davis floating in the river. The body of Wall has not yet been found. Both men leave large families.

The Bancroft at Newport.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 28.—The cadet practice ship Bancroft arrived here from the New York navy yard. This is her first visit to this port since her speed trials here two years ago. She will probably remain several days. The principal object of her visit is to take on board her torpedo outfit and have the same set up by the torpedo station men.

CIRCULATION EXCEEDS THAT OF ALL OTHER PLAINFIELD DAILIES COMBINED.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., JULY 28, 1894

No copy of The Press today is complete without the extra sheet.

The Press has no apology to make for the fact that so large a portion of its space is today devoted to woman's realm. Woman is the best newspaper reader, and The Press is a home paper.

In all seriousness The Press makes the suggestion that churches be kept cool and inviting during the terrible heat of Summer by the use of mechanical fans. This is a practical age when agents of good are disposed to utilize as modern and as effective methods for accomplishing their ends as are utilized by the agents of evil. The gilded saloon of which the moral people speak so much is thronged in Summer because it is kept by artificial means at a comfortable temperature. If the barrooms can afford to fan suffering humanity, cannot the churches keep up that pleasant relief? Or better still cannot some enterprising church, or all enterprising churches, keep their buildings open all the week and cooled by fans, for the relief of mothers and their babes? That is a suggestion commended to the believers in and workers for practical Christianity. The cooling of churches Sundays would materially increase the attendance, and develop the attention of those attending; and every heat-sufferer would thank God for the life-reviving influences of the church affording shelter from the midday glare. Bodily comfort helps spiritual advancement amazingly. Remember the cup-of-cold-water injunction!

Wearying for the nonce of its vain attacks on The Daily Press, the Republican organ is now turning its spite against the good and progressive borough of North Plainfield. It predicts the downfall of real-estate values, and the early decay of that substantial and flourishing community. Local history shows that North Plainfield keeps ever apace with her sister, Plainfield city, and though as is natural Plainfield leads the way in all public improvements North Plainfield is always alert to follow her good example. Plainfield put in electric lights, and North Plainfield similarly illuminated. Plainfield established a water supply, and North Plainfield adopted it. Plainfield made rapid transit, and North Plainfield extended it. North Plainfield laid out streets and macadamized them into as fine driveways as those which Plainfield boasts. A fire-alarm system is North Plainfield's, as good and as effective as that which calls out the Plainfield firemen. And just so in the matter of sewers: you will find North Plainfield keeping right along with the head of the procession. She is bound to have all her things just as good as her neighbor's, and there is nothing too fine or too up-to-date for either side of the brook. As Plainfield is always ahead and on the go, just so North Plainfield moves merrily onward with her, hand in hand. You can't lose either twin sister, and the wheels of progress are not going to be clogged a bit by those bilious persons whose aim is to make miserable for others that life which is a disappointment unto themselves. The croaker we have ever with us, but he's like the bullfrog who can see nothing greater nor better than the slime of his stagnant pool, perfectly harmless, and eminently worthy of his fate of being ignored. North Plainfield do move, and all the obstructionist toads of the lesser creation can't stop her.

To Macadamize 182 Miles.

By a vote of 9 to 6 the Morris County Board of Freeholders, at a special meeting in Morristown, to bond the county to the full amount allowed by statue, $350,000, for the construction of a system of macadam roads. A map prepared by Engineer King, showing the 182 miles decided upon by the Board was accepted and filed by the county clerk. The road committee of the board was authorized to begin work upon any particular road at its discretion.

Borough Realty Booming.

Who said North Plainfield was asleep! Take the one section, Watchung Park alone, and there's hustle enough to satisfy the most active American. Edmund Embury has bought two lots, Attorney George DeMeza another, and William M. Greenwood of Cincinnati, wanting all who could get of a good thing, takes three!

That's how things go in the borough—midsummer, too!

A Result of the Fisk Suit.

Foster M. Voorhees of Elizabeth has been appointed auxiliary receiver under a $10,000 bond, of the Royal Arc Electric Company, in a suit brought by Pliny Fisk of Plainfield, on a note for $880. The company's liabilities are $50,000, and its assets unknown.

STABBED HIS SON.

ATROCIOUS CRIME OF A DUNELLEN RUM-CRAZED FATHER.

Tried to Slaughter Both His Boys, But They Had Spiked His Gun and Fled Before His Knife—Terrible Struggle for Possession of the Weapon—The Would-Be Murderer Jailed.

Crazed by drink, jealous of the kindness of his wife to his own children, was Ambrosius Marienscheck of Dunellen last night when he fought with his family. He lunged at the heart of his oldest son with a knife, and had he struck a sixteenth of an inch either side, the vital organ would have been pierced. As it was he was saved from committing murder only by the glancing of the blade from the rib it struck. And these were not the only wounds that the man inflicted on his son.

Eleven years ago Marienscheck came to Dunellen from Austria. He had learned gardening in his native country and he knew his trade so well that he found employment easily. He has lived in Dunellen ever since. His age is 54. His family now consists of his wife; his son Frank, aged 26, unmarried; Antoine, 23, married and having an infant child; and a daughter, aged 12.

The home of the family is a small cottage next to the railroad track by the Dunellen station, on the right hand side of Prospect avenue, the road leading to New Market. His whole family have been with him for some time, since his sons have been out of employment. Frank used to work in Orange, and Antoine in the Singer Sewing Machine Works in Elizabethport. When hard times gave them idleness, the boys naturally drifted home. Antoine's wife came with him, but she has since gone away, leaving the baby there.

Ambrosius has seen hard luck, too, this Summer, picking up what work he could in the vicinity, where his reputation for good gardening was known. His wife has taken in washing steadily. The family has lived economically, and everything should have been happy in the household.

The home would have been a happy one but for one thing. Ambrosius has the continental love of intoxicants. It is said that when he is really drunk he is harmless. When he has been drinking enough to make him irritable he becomes enraged at the slightest provocation. It was thus that he went home yesterday afternoon. During the morning he had been working for Dr. Brakely, and had been paid for his services, as nothing more could be found to keep him employed in the afternoon. He went to his home and slept for a while. When he awoke in the early evening he lost his temper at some trifling deed of his twelve-year-old girl, and struck her. The blow left a black and blue mark on her face.

The quarrel which narrowly escaped resulting fatally started later in the evening. Mrs Marionscheck has been giving a part of the money she has earned by washing to her sons. Ambrosius was kept fairly busy, so that the tender-hearted mother thought she was not denying him anything when she gave money to the boys. The father was enraged last night when he thought in his intoxicated state that his wife had misappropriated the family funds. There was trouble all through the evening.

The climax came at 10. Ambrosius swore that he would kill the sons and rushed for his gun. Previous fights had forewarned the boys, and they had placed a piece of a match in the nipple, so that the load could not be discharged. With the gun out of working order, Ambrosius could not carry out his threat, and the boys took the gun from him. He then went up stairs and took up a knife which he had concealed in a bureau drawer. It had been made from an old steel file. Hard and unbending, the blade was five inches long, five-eighths of an inch wide, and ground to a sharp point.

Ambrosius dashed at his sons. They saw he had the knife and ran. Antoine slipped into a small room near the head of the stairs and closed the door. Frank did not notice where his brother went, and ran downstairs. Both were safe from their father's attacks. At this moment Antoine, from his refuge in the room, began to shout for help from the neighbors. Frank, downstairs, heard his screams, and thought his father must be killing his younger brother.

He bounded up the stairs to help and rushed into the arms of his father who was at the head of the steps. Ambrosius had the knife in his hand and was wild with rage. He stabbed at Frank's heart. The point struck a rib, and glanced back, doing no more injury than to inflict a severe flesh wound. Frank struggled with his father for possession of the knife. He received a direct stab in the muscles of the right arm which reached the bone. His left arm was gashed, but less severely. His right thumb and the end of the little finger of the same hand were also cut. The father cut himself slightly under the left eye in the struggle.

Antoine heard what was going on and rushed out from the room. The knife was taken away then, and the drink-crazed father was thrown upon the bed in his room and kept there by main force. Neighbors who had been aroused by the noise flocked in to the number of nearly thirty. Dr. Brakeley was sent for, and he in turn sent for Constable Warden. The constable went to the house, but did not hurry at first as he thought the affair was only one like the three occasions when he had been called in before to subdue the head of the household when enraged by drink.

By this time, Ambrosius was allowed to sit upon the bed, the presence of the neighbors preventing him from renewing the fight. Dr. Brakely examined the wounded man. The wound in the breast did not bleed very much, and was soon dressed by the doctor. The wound in the right arm bled freely all night, and was sewn up this morning. While Dr. Brakely was dressing all the cuts, the constable turned his attention to the man who made them.

Handcuffed, he was taken to the house of Justice Huff, where a commitment to the county jail in New Brunswick was made out. The constable and two others took him to the jail in a wagon, reaching there at 3 this morning. The charge was atrocious assault with attempt to kill. On the way over to the jail, Ambrosius spoke very bitterly against his sons. He was sorry, he said, he had not killed Frank. He will be kept in jail until next September when the Grand Jury meets, and will probably have Judge Rice to sentence him, if he is convicted.

It was a sad home this morning. Mrs. Marienscheck kept bravely on with her washing, although her face showed that she had been weeping, and she sobbed occasionally. She is a German, although her husband is an Austrian. Both are Catholic. The little girl was there, and she was crying, too. Frank, with bandages about his chest and both arms, sat in the front room, his wounds evidently paining him very much. He thought they would heal quickly, however, if inflammation did not set in. The knife was bright, not rusty. The interior of the house gave evidence of the clean housekeeping of Mrs. Marienscheck. Outside the little garden was flourishing and free from weeds. It was drink alone that had brought trouble to the home.

Summer Comfort and Joys Complete at This Famous Neighbor-Resort.

WATER GAP HOUSE,
DELAWARE WATER GAP, PA.,
July 27, 1894.

We favored mortals at this cool and delightful resort, who sleep snugly under blankets, and wear fur wraps no our drives, pity the sweiterers of the cities and plains as we read the daily reports, and wish that all might join with us in the comfort and happiness afforded at Mr. Brodhead's big and hospitable hotel. The weather is as delightful as ever here, and the round of gaieties continues unabated. Sociability is a marked feature of the Water Gap House, and one makes charming friends. Miss Mae Bowles is one of the new arrivals from Philadelphia, and all love her merry ways and cheerful spirit. In all the indoor games and outdoor sports she is a royal good fellow. Her friend Miss Margaret Perry is an elocutionist of note, and the parlors will be filled to hear her at the next literary evening.

The dances of the week have been gay with handsome gowns and vivacious people. A novelty at the close of one programme was a serenade by the waiters of the hotel. They gathered on the East veranda, and sang old plantation songs with the true Southern flavor. The guests warmly testified their appreciation. A concert by the dusky songsters will result from this marked display of musical ability.

A bean-bag party is an essential of the mountains, and we have had ours. Lots of fun it was, and the winners were H. G. VanCourt, Miss Mary VanSelver, Mrs. VanCourt, Mr. Perot, Lou VanCourt, and Miss Grace Taft. The progressive euchre series ended with the lucky ones as follows: First prizes, Robert C. Woodhouse and Miss Nan Perry, both of Philadelphia; second prizes, J. W. Ellsworth and Mrs. E. E. Spencer, both of New York. By invitation of Mr. Brodhead two bus loads of sightseers drove to Marshall Falls today, and jollity was their portion. Lloyd Bellis took his cornet, and awoke the famous echoes of the rocks.

We have returned from our annual climb to the summit of Mount Minsi. It is a toilsome journey, but the view is glorious. One looks across all new Jersey, inspects the fairness and fertility of the Keystone State, and has a glimpse of the Catskills up in York. The wind whistles with an icy chill, and one holds fast to the tree trunks in fear of being carried on the wings of air to that peak that looms up so grandly in the distance, Pocono. The Delaware, that the Mohegans loved so well, is far below our cloud high altitude, and is the silvery chain that links together Nature's matchless jewels. Proud and patriotic are we over such a picture. How well the colors blend, of Nature and our flag, which floats in graceful folds from its commanding position at the top of the Gap House flagstaff.

As we paused ascending, at the Promontory, a superb standpoint half-way up the mountain, we were pleased to meet good friends from home, the junior of the hustling house of Van Emburghs, and his accomplished wife. They have been stopping at one of the pleasant homes that abound here, but will require no coaxing to come up higher, to the cream of them all, the Water Gap House.

The usual Saturday hop closes the week, and the morrow will be the accustomed restful Sabbath. A feature of Mr. Brodhead's house is the respect for worship which obtains there, and besides the Sunday concerts of sacred music he always provides a preacher of talent and power to conduct the services in the parlors. Last Sunday we were edified and refreshed by the eloquent lessons drawn from the mountain beauties about us, by Rev. J. Henry Smythe of Philadelphia, whose text was "His name shall be called The Wonderful". Dr. Smythe is poet and preacher, and his son who is stopping here gives promise of becoming as productive from his gifts of mind.

Plainfield ought to have an especial sympathy in the Water Gap House: It is without a bar, and a success. People come here to enjoy the glories of God as revealed in his earthly handiwork, and there is no room nor desire for the corrupting influences of baser man. C.

WHAT THEY SAW WEST.

PLAINFIELD IS TOLD OF THE GREAT C. E. CONVENTION.

Local Delegates to Cleveland Bring Back Tidings of Great Joy—What Was Accomplished in the Various Departments of the Work.

A large audience of Christian Endeavorers from the different societies of Plainfield and the vicinity assembled in Trinity Reformed Church last evening and listened to a series of reports of various phases of the great Cleveland convention. The addresses were more than interesting, for through the words of the speakers, the Endeavorers saw scenes of the session almost as plainly as if they had gone in person.

The first speaker introduced by President Smith was Miss Emily Coriell of the Trinity Reformed Church society. Her topic was "Christian Endeavor on Wheels". In her address she told of the doings of the delegates on their way to the convention and on the return trip, singing, cheering and holding prayer meetings. She told of what they did when the train stopped at stations for refreshments or because of a delay on the line, how the Endeavorers showed the natives who they were, and of the general feeling of social, helpful Christianity showed itself in all the acts of the travelers.

President Smith of the Trinity Reformed Society presided. The singing was by a special choir composed of the Misses Emma Gillem, Fannie Mattison, Phœbe Mills and Etta Krymer, and Horace J. Martin, A. J. Moore and A. B. Clemens.

"The Decorations and Hospitality at Cleveland" was the subject of W. J. Foster of Somerville. He pointed to the gold and white C. E. flags which decorated the organ and the pillars near the pulpit, and said that thousands of yards of similar flags and bunting of the same color were displayed in the Ohio city. He described the appearance of the Saengerfest Hall where the main body of delegates met. He told of the vast numbers there, and the general enthusiasm which prevailed.

After President Smith had explained that no introduction was necessary for the next speaker, Horace J. Martin began to report "The Music of the Convention". He said that it was a great, important feature. Singing began before the train on which he traveled was near the city where they were to assemble. Arrived at Cleveland, he was with a party that boarded two miles from the hall, but ten miles away by trolley car. They went to the central part of the city, five miles away, and there changed to the line which went to the place of meeting. The hundreds of cars were jammed with delegates, and the ride would have been most uncomfortable had singing not been kept up all the way. All remained in good humor while the Endeavor hymns were being sung. While the assemblage was waiting for the hour of opening, it was singing that kept the people interested. Music played an important part in Cleveland.

William Milliken then spoke on good citizenship, the connection of the C. E. movement with temperance work, explaining what Christian Endeavors, as such, should do to aid the cause. He recited a list of rules which some thought it proper to follow in regard to this branch of Christian effort. He closed with a plea for more earnest work against the saloon influence.

Rev. John Hart of Neshanic spoke on "Fellowship as Shown at the Convention". He started by referring to the indications of good fellowship which Mr. Martin had told of. Although the delegates were divided into classes by the wearing of State badges, there was really no division. They worked and prayed for one cause, in one spirit, and nothing but good fellowship could prevail among them. The movement was interdenominational, it was international. All were Endeavors, and the best of good fellowship marked the whole convention.

The topic of Rev. J. A. Davis of Nyack, N. Y., was "Inspiring Words". He said he did not come from New Jersey, but that he had married a New Jersey woman, and so was closely connected with the State. He mentioned nine things, dwelling upon the special significance of each, which characterized the addresses of the convention speakers. They were: Conquest, Loyalty, Effort, Victory, Evangelical work, the Lord's help, Christ an Associate, Nearness to Him, His Directing influence. The initials of the nine topics spelled the word "Cleveland". One of the most inspiring speeches was one in which the importance was referred to of each one's bringing one person to Christ during the year, a plan which, carried out, would double the number of Endeavorers each year, and speedily lead to the conversion of the whole world.

"The Spiritual Side of the Convention" was treated by Rev. A. L. Mershon of Bound Brook. He told a story which brought forth laughter at the expense of Rev. Mr. Hart, and then went on to say that everything about the convention was spiritual, everyone was enthusiastic. But one thing appeared to be of a harmful influence on the spirituality of the convention: the street cars were run on Sunday, and Endeavorers rode in them.

Rev. T. E. Davis of Bound Brook made an address on the "Impressive Scenes" he had witnessed at the convention. One was the ovation to Governor McKinley, another the way in which the meeting received the report of the secretary, showing the growth of the society since the last meeting a year ago. New members to the number of 454,000 have joined, and 7,395 new societies have been organized.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 29. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—True growth. What it is and how to get it.—Eph. iv, 11-32.

As a result of the ascension of Christ various gifts were given to His apostles and disciples. "He gave some apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers." But the objects for which these gifts were given was not simply the enjoyment that would come to their possessors because of them, but that as a result of them the church of Christ should be built up, and this object could only be obtained by building up the individual Christ. A church is simply what its members are, what they make it. There is no standing still in Christianity. Christianity is a life, and when there is life there is growth. What is this growth, and how is it obtained?

1. What is true Christian growth? (Eph. iv, 11-16.) It is the gradual attainment of Christian manhood. It is the perfect man in Jesus Christ that results from unity of faith and of knowledge and a stability of character that keeps us from being tossed about by every word of doctrine. The Christian life is like the physical life. It has its babyhood. When first by faith we are led to the Lord Jesus, we are babes in Christ, but we are not always to remain in that condition—no more than we would in physical life. The aim and object of Christian instruction and experience is that we shall grow, grow from childhood, and that only is true growth which step by step leads us nearer to Jesus Christ and makes us more and more like Him. Perfect Christian manhood, the object of our growth, is only attained when we are like Christ, and therefore he comes the nearest to perfect manhood who is in the closest union with Christ, and who is the nearest like Him. Christ should be our model, and with Him as our pattern we should go forward until "we grow up into Him, in all things which is the head, even Christ."

2. How may we have true growth! (Eph. iv, 17-32.) Two principles are here laid out down to guide us in this growth. One is negative; the other, positive. 1. We must avoid the way of unbelievers (verses 18-22). This way leads to spiritual decline and death, not to growth. 2. We must cultivate the Christian graces—truthfulness, gentleness, honesty, benevolence, purity, spirituality, kindness, tender heartedness and forgiveness.

Bible Readings—Ps. xcii, 12; Ezra. xvi, 43; Math. v, 1-12; vi, 4; Mark xi, 25; Rom. xii, 1, 2; Eph. ii, 1-3; v, 1-4; Col. ii, 4, 11, 19; iii, 7-10; I Thess. v, 19; II Thess. i, 3; I Pet. ii, 1, 2; iv, 3; II Pet. iii, 18; Heb. xii, 1.

Catholic Statistics.

"Sadlier's Catholic Directory" for 1894, a publication which purports to be official, gives the following statistics in regard to the Roman Catholic church in the United States: Archbishops, 16; bishops, 70; priests, 9,686; churches, 8,512; chapels and stations 3,975; colleges 116; academies, 637; parochial schools, 5,610; pupils in parochial schools, 68,498; charitable institutions, 655; Catholic population, 8,806,648. While these figures show the Catholic church to be one of the greatest religious bodies in this country, it must be remembered that the remarkable growth of the American Catholic church has been largely at the expense of the church in Europe. While the church appears to be fairly successful in retaining the allegiance of its members, it has made comparatively few converts from Protestantism. It was expected that the propaganda of the Paulist Fathers, which was undertaken some time ago, might result in a Protestant landslide, but thus far the expectation has not been realized. The chief factor in its growth has been Catholic immigration from Europe, and this is likely to be so for some time to come.—New York Tribune.

Christian Endeavor In France.

At a recent meeting of the Endeavor society of Montreuil the meeting was closed in the following impressive manner. A verse of a hymn was sung, and all the company turned their chairs so that they faced the middle of the room and knelt down. Each member then offered some definite prayer, one for guidance in a difficulty, one for courage to begin life in a new situation, one for the conversion of a member of her class. It can easily be seen that the Endeavorers of France are of the genuine stamp, and though they are few in number a spirit is among them that surely will spread and fructify.

Truth Is Mighty.

Put faith in truth as mightier than error, prejudice or passion and be ready to take a place among its martyrs. Feel that truth is not a local, temporary influence, but immutable, everlasting, the same in all worlds, one with God and armed with His omnipotence.—Channing.

Christian Endeavor Brevities.

There is a Christian Endeavor society in Australia no member of which comes less than one mile to attend every meeting, though they must travel distances of from three to twelve miles.

The board of foreign missions of the Reformed Church of America has received during the last year over $2,600 from Reformed Endeavorers for the foreign work of the church.

The latest statistics show that in Brooklyn there are 94 Young People's societies, with a membership of about 10,000, and 42 Junior societies, numbering about 1,700 members.

In the millennium committeemen will all be chairmen.

Bon Voyage.

Last evening was one of enjoyment and sociability at the residence of Mrs. Thomas Brown, South Second street.

The occasion was the departure of her nephew, James Braganah, to his old home, Belfast, Ireland.

About twenty-five of his friends were present to bid him godspeed. The evening was passed in the singing of familiar melodies, dancing, and various other amusements. About 1, refreshments were served, and after all had partaken dancing was again resumed. It was 2 this morning when the guests departed for their homes, parting reluctantly from their host and hostess.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

INTENSITY OF A WOMAN'S STRUGGLE TO EARN A LIVING.

Australian Women's College—The Care of Children—Gracious Empress Elizabeth. Divided Skirts—She Tells Ghost Stories. A Colored Woman Lawyer.

The following instance is an illustration of the difficulty girls find everywhere obtaining employment. A woman of 35, with considerable experience in sickness and nursing, is advised by a doctor whom she meets in a sickroom in Cincinnati to take the course for trained nurses in the hospital there. This she does; but, being obliged on account of family affairs to return to Boston, she meets the discouraging news that there are in that city alone 150 trained nurses out of employment, and, as she says, there would probably be as any more before she could complete her course.

This struggle for a living, in spite of all the new avenues open to women, is everywhere evident. Says one bachelor girl, "I have accomplishments, but I find as a rule they are of less value than a strong specialty." Such a girl may sometimes use an accomplishment to advantage in connection with a specialty, and so she should not despair. For instance, if one is conversant with French, German or Spanish, she should at once learn typewriting and stenography. With this business equipment she ought to obtain a lucrative position. On the other hand, a first class stenographer and typewriter may strengthen her hold on the business world by learning as soon as possible one or more modern languages. A girl who lost her position in a lawyer's establishment because her services could no longer be afforded owing to the hard times rented desk room in a large building devoted to offices and business headquarters and advertised by circulars distributed to do typewriting. She now employs an assistant, and both are making a good living. The employer who could not afford to pay her for her whole time was very glad of her services at different times and was also glad to recommend her to others in the same predicament as himself, because her work was invariably good, and she could be relied upon to keep an engagement.

Promptness and energy will conquer no end of obstacles in the commercial world of a large city. Women with new ideas must also have the courage to carry them out. A girl needing money laughingly suggested the other day that she put out a sign, "Cats, dogs and plants boarded for the summer." The idea suggested itself from the dilemma of many city people who do not know what to do with their pets during their vacation tours. Of course she was laughed at, but the scheme might pay well if tried. This is not more novel or fanciful than many schemes for making money which English women undertake. Such advertisements as the following are frequent in English papers, where they cause no surprise: "Board for several young ladies. Lessons in housekeeping given if desired." "Orders received for furnishing dolls' houses artistically." Or: "Fruits preserved. Orders received by mail." There are agricultural schools in England where pupils may take advanced courses in dairy work, making such an announcement possible, "Miss R. M. Armstrong has been appointed senior instructress in butter making to the Cumberland county council."

Tutoring is not a new way of earning money for educated girls. One college graduate, however, in New York city has a plan which makes tutoring only a means to an end. She came to the city from a county town and gave the best of references to several school agencies where she applied for chances to teach private pupils. While engaged in this work she herself is taking German in a well known school of languages, in hopes to find finally in Paris or some German metropolis a position to teach her own language. Through Pratt and other similar schools in Baltimore and Boston women capable with the needle and well enough educated to teach classes in sewing are finding such positions lucrative. A woman just graduated from the advanced course in dressmaking at Pratts has been offered a position as teacher in a new school in another city at a salary of $700 a year, her duties requiring her presence in the classroom only so many hours a week. —Brooklyn Eagle.

Australian Women's College.

Sydney university, New South Wales, has shown its progressive spirit by making exactly the same provision for women as students as it has made for men. In no other part of the British empire have government and university shown to women such conspicuous generosity and justice in the matter of higher education. In 1881 women were admitted freely to all courses in the university. In 1884, by the extension act, it was decided that all benefits and advantages of the university should extend to women equally with men, and three years later, to give full effect to this decision, it was determined to build a woman's residential college on an exactly similar foundation to that of the three colleges for men.

Two years ago Miss Louisa Macdonald, M. A., London, fellow of University college, was appointed principal, and the college was temporarily placed at Darlinghe Point, a near suburb of Sydney. Twelve thousand pounds were granted by the government, £5,000 were subscribed, and since then, through all the financial difficulties of the colony, the work has steadily gone on.

The new, residential college is extremely handsome externally. Inside the arrangements for the health and comfort of the students and for minimizing necessary service are really admirable. Everything has been planned as much with a view to the needs of a hot climate as for the education of young women in appreciation of really good and artistic surroundings. The dining hall, 71 feet long by 25 broad and 25 feet high, is paneled with dark Australian cedar—a beautiful wood—and lighted by windows of very pleasing stained glass. The ceiling is dome shaped. At one end is a broad dais. The line of wall is broken by a semicircular recess, benched with cedar. The floor is stained conformably with the tone of the panels, and the total effect is rich and sober.

The students' rooms are 24 in number and are alike in all respects. They are 13 feet in height by 14 and 16 in length and breadth respectively. The furniture is of walnut, of excellent workmanship and especial design. The cupboards and chimney pieces and all the woodwork of walls and windows and doors are painted in two shades of cold dark green, very refreshing in a land of intense sunshine. Fanlights, ventilators and French windows insure a free current of air throughout the house. Gas stoves insure cleanliness. Six bathrooms provide one of the greatest luxuries of subtropical Sydney, unlimited water. There are three tennis courts, two of grass, one of asphalt. The western boundary to the main lawn is formed by a memorial of young trees planted in August last by Lady Duff.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Care of Children.

During the warm months of the year children should spend nearly the whole of their days in the open air, even eating and drinking and taking their morning naps out of doors if it can possibly be managed. There is an old fashioned prejudice against children being allowed to sleep in the open air, but this probably arose from the fact that in the old fashioned perambulator the child's head was apt to fall into bad positions. The modern perambulator, however, is at once a bed and a carriage, and there is no objection whatever to children sleeping in it in warm weather if their faces are properly protected from the sun.

Youngsters should never be allowed to run in the sun unless provided with white linen sunbonnets to protect the back of the head, and these should have several thicknesses of linen, as the ordinary thin muslin bonnets or hats are not sufficient protection. A thickness of flannel under the hat is often very useful. Children should never be permitted first to run about until they are in a profuse perspiration and then sit down and allow the moisture to cool upon them, as they are thus rendered very liable to take cold, the temperature of the bodies being lowered by the rapid evaporation from the skin. If they are found to be perspiring profusely or their clothes are wet, they should be taken indoors, undressed, rubbed down with a towel and then dressed in dry clothes.

In hot weather between the hours of 11 and 12 a. m. and 4 p. m. it is, as a rule, unwise to let children play unsheltered, unless it should happen to be a cloudy or breezy day. The effect of great heat is to exhaust the forces and disturb the digestion, but it is a good plan, if possible, to have a tent out of doors where the children can rest during the heat of the day and take their meals in summer.

A lady I know who lives in a London suburb and has a garden attached to her house, although not at all well off, saved up a small amount weekly from her housekeeping bills to buy such a tent and told me she was amply repaid for the expenditure in the improved health of herself and children.—New York Dispatch.

Gracious Empress Elizabeth.

The Empress Elizabeth of Austria was recently spending a few days at Lintz. One morning she started for a long walk in the environs of the town, accompanied only by a lady in waiting. Suddenly it began to rain, but the empress opened her umbrella and continued on her way. Near the hamlet of Windlingen she noticed a little child, who had taken refuge from the storm under the branches of a great tree. The empress asked the little one a few questions about the neighborhood and was about to continue her walk when the child asked:

"Dear madame, I beg you to take me under your umbrella."

The request was granted, and the three marched on toward the village, the empress asking the child about her family, her duties at school and the people of the hamlet.

When the rain ceased, the child, the daughter of a peasant, bade her companions farewell. The empress, however, made her a present of the gold handled umbrella that she might "not get wet when it rained again."

"But, dear madame," remarked the child, her eyes wide open with wonder, "you must be rich if you can buy a new umbrella!"

Her majesty smiled and kissed the girl goodby. A few days later she took a drive in the same neighborhood and saw the child parading up and down the village streets with her umbrella, followed by her playmates. Her majesty greeted her little friend and was recognized by some of the older inhabitants of the village, who soon informed the parents of the girl to whom the present was due. The umbrella is now a sacred relic in the peasant home.

Divided Skirts.

Divided skirts, unless they are so short as to be almost grotesque, are much more inconvenient than the ordinary costume. Of course holding up the skirt has its unpleasant features, but it is scarcely more difficult to hold up the petticoat than to pull the divided up so that it shall not get wet or muddy, and once this gets drabbled the last state of the wearer is infinitely worse than the first. She can sit down and tuck her feet a little bit under her and get away from immediate contact with her damp skirts, but with the divided skirt clinging around her ankles her condition is hopeless in the extreme. Furthermore, there are women, plenty of them, who can walk through the muddiest streets for hours and come home without a scrap or stain of the earth earthy on their garments unless perchance they get spattered from some street car or the feet of some passing horse. Women who can get about in this way consider themselves highly accomplished. Those who cannot are loud in their expressions of amazement as to how it is done, but it is simply a matter of care and practice. Any woman can learn it if she takes the trouble. It is only necessary to wear a comfortably short petticoat. Then gather the skirts, not at the side, but from the back, and raise them very slightly with one hand.

The acceptable and desirable model for the coming dress reform is yet to be created. Certain it is that neither the bloomer, the divided skirt nor the Turkish trousers and overgaiters fill the bill. Even for bicycling the divided skirt is next thing to a failure.—New York Ledger.

She Tells Ghost Stories.

Telling ghost stories for a living is what one young English woman is doing.

Her family met with reverses—it is the usual story. What could she do to earn an honest penny?

"I cannot teach, I cannot paint, I cannot write, nor will I dig or beg or steal. What can I do—what shall I do?" was the question she put to a friend whose sympathy she did not doubt, although she did her ability to give her any practical reply.

After a moment or two of hard thinking the friend said:

"There is one thing at least that you can do and do well—you can tell ghost stories."

Acting upon this suggestion, she soon after joined the ranks of young women who support themselves and became a ghost story teller, and a great success she has made of the profession, if such it can be called.

An American lady who formed one of a house party at an English country place last winter speaks enthusiastically of the success of the undertaking and says that a very pleasant two hours were those which the party spent in listening to the thrilling and bloodcurdling stories told by the young girl, who was bright, pretty and well dressed. She was treated as a guest and supposed by the greater number of the party to be one and to have very obligingly consented to tell tales for the amusement of her companions. The check which she received from the hostess was for a goodly amount—about what a singer or musician would receive.

A Colored Woman Lawyer.

Miss Ida Platt of Chicago, a colored woman, has just been admitted to the bar in Illinois. A quarter of a century is not long in the life of a nation, but it is long enough to have seen effaced the most stubborn of all sorts of class legislation. In 1869 a colored man applied for admittance to the bar of Illinois. He was not asked as to his color. It was assumed that he was a Spaniard, and the precedent was not revoked. The sex line had a more stubborn contest. Mrs. Myra Bradwell, the wife of Judge Bradwell, was the first woman to apply for admission. It was refused, and she became the editor of the most prominent legal journal in the state. It was only a few years ago, after repeated efforts, that the Illinois legislature removed the legal disabilities of women. When one of the judges of the supreme court signed the license of Miss Platt to practice law, he said that for the first time the Illinois bar recognizes neither race, sex nor color.

Miss Platt is about 30 years of age, is a woman of marked ability, an excellent shorthand law reporter, proficient in music, French and German, and graduated from the law college with honors. A student's standing must be as high as 85 to graduate, but Miss Platt's marking was 96, being 11 above the required number. She has a very pleasing appearance and agreeable manners and enters on her professional career under most favorable circumstances.

To Establish Colonies.

Mrs. M. French-Sheldon, the African explorer, has sailed for London en route for Africa. Her purpose is to establish colonies in the country on the Tuba river, about 600 miles north of Zanzibar. The population of this region is about 40,000, who are said to be industrious, and most of them are runaway slaves who have received their manumission from the British East Africa company.

There may be some doubt as to whether Mrs. Strauss' rose growing farm, on the old Bladensburg road, in Washington's suburbs, is the largest in the world, as is said, but there is no doubt that it is the delightful business establishment of a successful business woman.

Dr. Julia H. Smith, a well known physician of Chicago, formerly Miss Julia Holmes of New Orleans, has been nominated by the Democratic party as a member of the state university board, an office that has never hitherto been held by a woman.

Low shoes are causing a dire enlargement of the ankles, and after a girl has worn Oxfords all summer she will find that her slender ankles are no longer as slender as in the spring, but a good quarter of an inch larger.

A new feature in skirts is to plait them in at the waist with box plaits on either side and two plaits in the back, so they stand out in real antique manner. It is foretold that this style will become general.

Sydney university, New South Wales, has shown its progressive spirit by making exactly the same provision for women as students as it has made for men.

The League of Republican Clubs in Denver has advised its members to "study up on woman suffrage." Verily the day of enlightenment dawneth!—Union Signal.

THE FADDIST.

Women Who Know a Little of Everything and Much of Nothing.

The word "fad" has somewhat altered in its signification of late years. Formerly it was used to express some especial taste or bent of the mind, permanent and characteristic. Now it means only a transitory following of some scientific, social or other will-o'-the-wisp, the pursuit being taken up from a mere desire for new things and dropped for the same reason. A hobby, provided it is a fairly rational one, is an excellent possession and carries the owner over many a dull reach in life's journey, but a succession of fads, however amusing they may be for the moment, are so superficial that they are of no real advantage to the one who indulges in them and are rather nonplusing, if the word may be used, to her friends. You meet a young woman whom you think you know very well, and she tells you in a weighty manner that makes you feel your own frivolity that she has been attending a series of medical and anatomical lectures and has concluded to become a physician. Seeing her again some time after, you inquire how she is progressing in her medical studies, and she looks blankly at you and tells you in a surprised tone that she is working at art and thinks of studying abroad next year. Later on, you observe her in the preliminary stages of journalism, socialism, literature, slumming, housekeeping on the scientific plan, astronomy, kindergartening, needlework and any other professions that happen to be going. At one time she divests her apartment of everything except the sternest necessities because biology has bid her beware of microbes.

A sketch is given of a princess gown of changeable taffeta, suede and blue. It is trimmed with bretelles and straps of suede satin fastened with steel buckles.

SHOPPING COSTUMES.

Plain Attire Often Receives the Contempt of Silly Clerks.

It has been often said that a woman should wear her plainest and least pretentious clothing when she goes shopping. Certainly natural sense and good taste would indicate such attire as the most appropriate and therefore the best, but practical experience leads one to believe that her best bib and tucker are the only wear for the woman who goes forth purchasing and to purchase. Plainly and quietly dressed, she is an object of contempt to the salespeople. As a rule, she has difficulty in finding anybody to wait upon her, and when found the sales person assumes an overbearing, even belligerent, air and takes no pains to supply the wants of the modestly attired customer. Sales men and women are alike prone to slight the plainly dressed woman and favor the one who wears silk and diamonds. This condition of things may seem a trifle to a man, who, not having experienced it himself, does not know all the small practical annoyances it implies. Almost every woman fully appreciates the spirit that prevails behind the counters of the majority of shops, however, and is beginning to think that the indulgence of good taste at the cost of time, patience, vexation of mind and liability to impertinence is too expensive a luxury. She reluctantly puts on her frills and furbelows when she goes on a shopping expedition in order to secure the ordinary politeness and professional attention of the persons whose business it is to show goods and to whose courtesy all customers are entitled, whether they wear calico or velvet.

If there is any woman whose experience has been so limited that she has not already proved the truth of these statements, let her go shopping one day in a plain, inconspicuous gown, and again the next day in one of obtrusively fashionable cut, color and trimming, and she will ascertain at once whether good taste always pays in anything except a certain placidity of mind. It is satisfactory intellectually to follow one's natural promptings in regard to the abstract fitness of things, but the practical result of such a course is sometimes failure.

The costume illustrated is of nickel gray moire. It has a plain skirt and a round bodice, the latter being covered with jetted tulle, which is gathered under a jet yoke. The black satin belt has long floating ends at the left side. The moire sleeves have a puff from shoulder to elbow and thence are plain to the wrist.

MAGIC IRON-TONE

For Nerve, Brain and Blood.

MAGIC IRON-TONE is an ideal summer drink. Served at fountains with soda it is incomparable. It must be remembered that the average summer drink is just so much syrup and water, having no medicinal properties, and which only serves to provoke instead of to assuage thirst. But MAGIC IRON-TONE not only quenches thirst, it gratifies the longing for "something that will go to the spot;" it sparkles and bubbles along the palate and the throat; it gratifies the parched stomach and immediately clears the films from the brain. It dispels the despondent, depressed feeling inseparable from weariness and overwork; it lightens the load the system seems to be carrying, causes the eye to flash, the mind to spring into activity, and the nerves and muscles to jump from a flaccid to an elastic condition.

MAGIC IRON-TONE EXTRACT FOR HOME USE.

25 CTS. A BOTTLE.

One bottle makes thirty-five Delicious Drinks when prepared as per directions, and served with Ice Water or Ice Cold Carbonic Water.

TWO GOWNS SEEN IN A NEW YORK SHOW WINDOW.

No End of New Ideas in Hats and Bonnets. Shapes May Conform to the Face of the Wearer—A Calico Ball at Lenox—The Four Hundred Hand Pushed.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

A novel idea has been developed this week and two gowns placed in a show window, from whence they were removed in a few short hours to deck the forms of two of the best dressers in this city. One was a skirt made of golden brown taffeta cut in circular shape. Over the gold brown silk were laid rows of black hercules braid an inch wide. This was tacked on, and then narrow soutache braid in silver was sewed in over and under pattern, the loops being fastened to the braid, the whole forming an openwork pattern between the braids through which the gold colored silk showed richly. The front of the skirt laid plain across, while the back fell in godet plaits. Around the waist was a pointed polka, and this was trimmed with two rows of hercules and one row of over and under pattern. There was a belt with long ends made in the same manner, and the collet had a similar trimming. The waist to this skirt was of gold colored moire, with a choker collar and bands around the elbow of the same work. The amount of hand labor put upon this gown made it sumptuous and also very expensive, but its novelty rendered it desirable. There will be others like it, but this has the merit of being the first.

The other gown was made of inch wide picot ribbon in dark blue, sewed together in Mexican lace stitch with saddler's silk of the same color, the stitches catching into the picot loops. The skirt beneath this was of pale pink, which showed up beautifully through the blue silk mesh. The skirt was plain, but quite full in the back portion, where it dipped a little, just enough to reach the ground. There was a basque cut exactly round and opening in front a little at the bottom to show a pink vest. The basque closed on the left diagonally under two loops and three bows of blue ribbon. The gigot sleeves were of blue faille of the exact shade of the ribbon and immense in size. All this openwork was done by hand and must have been a labor of great patience, but the effect was unique when done. I doubt if many gowns will be made exactly like it, but some of the many kinds of insertions may be sewed between the ribbons. It averages 20 bands of ribbon and as many rows of needlework to make the length of a skirt, and the width is five yards around the bottom, graduating to about two at the top, so that it is easy to calculate about how many yards of ribbon it needs, and this would cost not less than 8 cents a yard. The braid is a little cheaper, but not very much. Besides all that there are the silk, lining, bones, etc., that make the price run up to an alarming extent, aside from the handwork, but what is all that compared to the fact that you have a dress that few will be able to duplicate, at least until you have worn off the first freshness of your gown?

In the same house was a very pretty dress just completed for a bright young society lady, for a "Newport astonisher," as one person styled it. The whole suit was of drab and purple basket check in the new Irish hand woven linen. The skirt was gored, and around the bottom there was a bias sprung flounce 10 inches deep, stitched with black silk. The basque was cut bias and pulled into shape without darts, leaving a polka which was faced with plain drab linen. The sleeves were extra large and finished off like the flounce, and there was a double cape of the same faced with plain linen and closing on the left side with three fancy pearl buttons. White linen cuffs and collar gave a very neat effect to this suit. There were a black ribbon belt and a steel buckle at the waist.

This new linen is sold by but one house here and is woven to their order in Ireland. The weave is much like hopsacking; but, while flexible, it is very firm, and it is glossy and really a very beautiful fabric. The colors are nearly all neutral and woven in some sort of plaid, all small, however.

There seems no end to the development of new ideas in hats and bonnets. Some of the prettiest of these have little or nothing to them, yet they are pretty and nearly always becoming. A rough and ready black straw was in the shape of a turban with a decided point in the front of the brim. On the top were set black velvet bows, and along the front were rosettes of pink crepe de chine—six of them. It made a very becoming bit of feminine apparel. There was a hat of rough straw in dark blue and white, with an edge made to resemble white straw beads held with blue straws. The brim was faced with blue crepe italienne. On the outside there were three blue iris lilies, with green foliage caught down like so many ribbons. The flowers stood upright. This hat was to be worn with the blue ribbon gown.

It depends upon the wearer what shape the hat will take. It may be bent and twisted to any angle or any number of folds and involutions. One graceful style was made with the rushlike straw shape bent down on each side just enough to form a curve. On the top of the dark green crown was a bunch of field daisies and loops of sage green ribbon. There was a wire around the brim covered with twisted sage green ribbon. Such a hat was more than pretty for a golden blond. A cute little bonnet had a coronet of quilled pink satin ribbon around a crown of white porcupine chip. A large American Beauty rose was its sole trimming, except—if it may be called a trimming—large strings of white tulle to tie under the chin. The wide brim sailor, white, blue, red, green, purple or black, is a prime favorite. Some of them are trimmed quite heavily, but those in the best taste have little ornamentation. A flat bow is the most appropriate—white on white is by far the neatest and best taste for young women at least.

No middle aged woman ought to dream of wearing a sailor; but, as many do and will, let them at least choose the dark colors. The clam shell shape in rough straw make a nice everyday hat for women of almost any age. I remarked one today that is picturesque and from its broken lines is suited to any face. The hat itself was black. Under the brim was a wrinkle of mauve silk and another just above the brim. There were five black plumes—two laid along the sides and two stood up in front, while the fifth drooped in the back.

Several of the young leaders of fashion have adopted the mode of combing the hair up from the temples, and they laughingly dare all other women to do the same. Not all faces will bear this severe treatment, but when one thinks how very difficult it is to keep the hair in crimp and curl one feels like following the lead.

We have been told over and over that the sleeves were to be made smaller, but more than half of the newest gowns have larger sleeves than have ever been seen in this generation. If the material of which they are made is silk, it takes from six to eight yards; if of wide woolen goods, about three. But the sleeves are picturesque if costly, and we ought to be satisfied to get something tangible for our money for once. Even the sleeves to ball dresses are larger than the waist of the wearer.

Speaking of ball gowns reminds me that I hear from good authority that all those dainty sprigged and flowered lawns that were whisked off the counters of the importers so suddenly last winter are to be worn at the balls and hops and cotillons at the swell watering places. Some young ladies, I am told, have no less than 10 of these dainty and delicate frocks, each one having its own set of ribbons and laces to match the colors and flowers to correspond with those in the figure.

I was told, too, that there is to be a calico ball at Lenox, where every lady who does not wear a calico gown will be fined and any trimming costing over 10 cents will also be the occasion of a fine. The money accruing from fines will go into a fund for a worthy charity. No jewels will be permitted without a fine. One lady is having a "kaliker gown" made of chintz in the most enormous and outrageous pattern possible to discover. Another has a piece of calico representing whole families of cats, and this is to be made up into her costume. Verily the Four Hundred seem to be very hard pushed for something to amuse themselves with. Calico balls are not novelties, but dresses with flounces of cats are. There will naturally be plenty of pretty little costumes made of calico, and if girls only knew it they can be irresistible in dainty print dresses.

An Active Woman.

Leavenworth, Kan., has a woman police commissioner—Mrs. Eva M. Blackman. The inhabitants, particularly the newspaper, young men, were rather inclined to make a joke of her appointment at first, but she soon convinced them that she was not at all to be taken as a joke. She has succeeded in getting the disgraceful old jail thoroughly cleaned up and ventilated. She has also instituted a system of police signals whereby members of the force can be put into immediate communication with one another. Another thing she did was to drive a variety concert troop out of Leavenworth. Mrs. Blackman is young, only 27 years old. She was a stenographer before her appointment. She is one of the strong, intellectual women that the labor and Populist movement have brought to light in Kansas to such a remarkable degree. She edits a little paper called The Labor News and does much of the typesetting on it herself.

Sewing and Cooking.

The sewing and cooking classes connected with working girls' clubs have been of the greatest assistance to these young ladies. They carry the knowledge gained in the classes into their poor homes and make them brighter, happier and more healthful.

THE STYLES IN PARIS

NOTES OF HANDSOME COSTUMES SEEN AT THE GREAT RACES.

What the Countess of Herberstein Wore—A Few Pretty Bonnets—Green Velvet For a Young Face—A Costume of Silver Gray Crepon—Fine Woolen Dresses.

WITH the Grand Prix and the Vernissage the social season in beloved Paris has broken up, and all the grand mondaines have left for their chateaux in the interior or for the various watering places, chief of which is Aix-les-Bains, with Boulogne-sur-Mer next. But at the great races what a multiplicity of beautiful toilets! What ravishing hats and entrancing gowns! At the races the dresses are as light and ethereal as laces can make them and as delicate and flowerlike as the exquisite tints can render possible. One sees pale pink covered with cream lace, blue under butter color, green under white, lilac and mauve with cream or maize lace, or net overdrapery or trimming. Some of the dresses are entirely covered with lace, as if the dress was of that material over a lining. There are capes, fichus, collets and berthas of lace, and these, with the soft and summerlike colors of the materials, make the vast assemblage a beautiful thing to see. The parasols in nearly every case matched the color of the dresses and were ornamented as full as they could hold with puffs and gauffers of illusion, crepe lisse, chiffon or lace. Some of the lace parasols have the covers wrought to fit over the parasols smoothly, and for such there are bows of narrow ribbon, with many loops fastened to the top and also to the handles.

Among the loveliest of the toilets seen at the Grand Prix was that of the Vicomtesse de Logne. It was of rose colored taffeta, with white pear blossoms in bunches and their foliage as pattern. These flowers were natural size, and some declared they were hand painted. The skirt was made extremely full and gathered all around at the top. At the bottom was a shell trimming of white valenciennes lace about an inch and a half wide, exquisitely made. The corsage was French shape, gathered very full top and bottom to the belt. Around the waist was a belt formed of heavy cream lace with deep vandyke points, with a row of points turning downward and another pointing upward, so that it formed a sort of corselet over the shirrings of the waist. At the neck the lace was gathered full like a pierrot collar.

The sleeves were large balloon puffs, with outline cuffs and caps made of the vandyke lace. The hat worn with this was of white neapolitan, with pink velvet rosettes and bunches of the white blossoms of the cherry set loosely wherever they would hold, one bunch falling on the hair from under the brim.

Mme. de Giers, nee Countess Hoyos Herberstein, wore an elegant costume of salmon colored striped crepon with black dots. The corsage was draped with guipure both front and back to two small points. The edges of this flax colored guipure were bordered with a very narrow black chantilly lace. Around the neck was a flat band of black moire, and above that a full ruche of crepon. The belt was of wide black moire ribbon, tied in the back and hanging in two long ends to the bottom of the skirt. The skirt was finished plain around the bottom, but had rosette bows of moire set at intervals of 12 inches all around. The hat worn with his refined costume was of white chip, trimmed with much white lace and a few small black wings and two bunches of pink cornflowers on the salmon shade.

Another beautiful Parisian had a costume des courses worthy of her, and it was composed of mauve crepon and lilac silk muslin. The front of the waist was of plaited silk muslin and formed a small vest in front, with revers of dark green moire. The sleeves were Duse shape, with upturned cuffs of green moire. The front of the skirt was open in a panel and hadbands of moire down each side, and the panel itself was made of plaited silk muslin. With this was worn a straw hat, bent down in front and turned up high on both sides, faced with apple green crepe de chine. On the crown was a perfect garden of violets, and among them was set two roses with foliage—one deep red and the other light pink. There was a sans gene tie of white embroidered crepe lisse, with diamond shaped buckle in the center. There were many other dazzling costumes there, but it would be tedious to read of them all, so I will tell abont a few of the bonnets shown this week. One has a star shaped crown of emerald green velvet, bordered with Parma violets. Directly on the center is placed a large bow, with a grasshopper of green enamel in the act of crawling up the bow. There are "brides" of green velvet fastened with an emerald stickpin.

Green velvet makes a rich and not too showy a bonnet for a young face. There are ribbon loops and a large bunch of white star flowers on one and a white aigret tip tinted with green. The strings are of green velvet ribbon. A hat for a smart tailor costume is of checkered straw, black and white. The crown is rather high for a sailor and has a scarf of checkered surah and a bunched up bow of the same on one side, and on the other a shapeless mass of the silk with an upright piece looking like a chimney. For a little girl of 6 or 7 there was a hood of rough straw with plaitings of Russian lace at the back and in the front, the latter falling well over the face. There was a bow of blue baby ribbon on the top and another in the back of the neck above the cape ruffle of the same kind of lace. The strings passed around the back of the neck and tied in the front.

At the Vernissage the costumes are seen in all their beauty, and no part is hidden, as it is in a carriage, but they are generally of a quieter order. One costume that was much admired was of silver gray crepon, with black moire as trimming. The waist had a full vest simulated between two rounded revers of very heavy moire and a small Medicis collar of the same. The drooping puffs of the upper sleeves fell over the moire mittens. On the skirt were two rows of moire ribbon sewed flat and ending on each side under large rosettes of the ribbon, which, being 3 inches wide, made the rosettes 6 inches in diameter. With this was worn a tiny capote of gray chip, with black lace and yellow roses as trimming.

There were several barege dresses in evidence, two woolen barege and the others silk and wool. Those who have not seen one of these robes made by the skillful fingers of a French modiste miss seeing a thing of delicate beauty. These bareges are almost transparent, and yet they drape as richly as silk. Some of them are figured in small splotches of color, in polka dots, pin points, etc., and a few have clouded effects, and some have cheney flower patterns. All are beautiful. A few have crossbars of satin of the same color, which strengthen the material, but do not add to its beauty. These soft barege dresses require little trimming—just enough to finish off the edges and perhaps a bertha or bretelles of lace or silk. The most artistic decoration of the new bareges is shirring and gauffering. This material has a peculiar weave, which makes such gathers set up so well in view that it becomes ornamental when well-done.

I wished to mention the great popularity of fine black woolen dresses for street wear by women who like to be classed as elegant rather than showy dressers. The fine camel's hair, the silk warp henrietta, the superb endora cloth, are all even handsomer than silk and set the stamp of true taste upon the wearer. These dresses require little garniture, save such as would be put upon any corsage. The bourdon lace is a very suitable trimming for these goods. Black and dark colored silks in rather light weight are being finished in many houses now for early fall. Many are draped with what they call Greek net, which has a large coarse mesh and is very showy, and it wears well too. Many dresses have full, drooping vests of this net, and others have the upper sleeves made of it; also festooned flounces and panniers. The bayadere silk in brilliant cross stripes is now considered the prettiest of materials for morning dresses, and the most remarkable of them resemble a burnoose in form.

Three or four elegant jackets made of fine, glossy black mohair have been seen. They fly open in the front to show a lining of rich white satin. The enormous revers are covered with white guipure, and a row of guipure insertion is carried all around the full skirt. The sleeves are simply enormous gigot, but the whole jacket is very stylish.

Among the minor matters, which still have their places, I may speak of the novelty of having a fitted waist lining of whatever kind or color suits, and over this is draped in the fluffiest of puffs chiffon in white or colors. Silk should be the lining. They may have a little neat and fine lace insertion as finish or not, but the belts and shoulder knots, or harness bretelles, are always made of 3 inch satin ribbon. These can be worn with evening silks.

Among the new costumes for very warm days there are complete outfits all in mat white. The dress is of whatever material or style the wearer prefers, but she must wear with it white shoes, white gloves with black stitching, white hat and a white silk net veil, and she must have a parasol also all white. The hat preferred with white suits is generally a sailor, but some prefer the fancy brims on neapolitans. All the white parts of her outfit must be mat—no cream or oyster. MARY DERWENT.

The Silk Petticoat.

The silk petticoat has become an article of artistic elegance, made of rich brocades and moire silks and trimmed with lace covered ruffles and flounces of chiffon, and is almost as important an item of dress as the gown which is worn over it. A very dainty skirt is made of black and white striped silk, with a flounce of yellow satin at the bottom, over which is a plaited silk muslin ruffle edged with narrow black guipure and headed with black insertion and a ruche of muslin. White satin and white chiffon are the ideal combination for a bridal petticoat.

CHURCH CHIMES.

GLEANINGS FROM THE PLAINFIELD CORNER OF A MIGHTY VINEYARD.

Midsummer Visions on the Lawn—A Congregation in Hard Luck—Probability of a Call—Operations Suspended—Money Needed for a Pastor's Trip.

There will be no Sunday-school at the Mt. Olive Baptist Church tomorrow.

The colored Y. M. C. A. will be closed all the month of August. No meeting will be held tomorrow, and none till September 1.

Rev. F. Koechli, in removing to his new charge in Somerville, requests The Press to express his cordial regards to all friends whom he could not see personally.

The congregation of the Church of the Redeemer is delighted with the preaching and pastoral work of Rev. Dr. Jocelyn Johnstone, and he will probably be called to the charge.

Collections will be taken tomorrow in Mt. Olive Church for the pastor's vacation expenses. It is hoped that a large fund will be raised, as the pastor will leave August 6 for Richmond, Va., to be gone three weeks.

Rev. Gibson announces that he is still soliciting money for the proposed repairs and extention on the Mt. Olive Baptist Church. He has secured $445 in the last eight weeks, and $155 more is needed before the work can be started.

Rev. L. B. Goodrich left Bound Brook Tuesday, to spend his month's vacation with his wife and child at Good Ground, Long Island. For the next three Sundays the Bound Brook Congregational pulpit will be filled by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis of Plainfield.

A midsummer night's dream will be given on the lawn of the Church of the Heavenly Rest Tuesday evening of next week. Sixteen young women and 16 corps cadets will participate in military drill, manual of arms, camp scenes, and other picturesque posings, and will sing camp songs about a camp fire. The admission will be 25 cents.

At the business meeting to be held Monday in the First Church of Christ the question of selling the church building will be considered, and action taken. It is felt by Pastor Hand and others of the church that the expense of retaining the building is becoming too burdensome in these times. If a favorable offer is received for the building, it is almost certain that the congregation will vote to accept it. The matter was to have been decided at the meeting Thursday evening, but because the storm kept many away, and those who were present did not deem it advisable to act without their taking part in the discussion, the meeting was simply adjourned until Monday evening.

PIECES FOR PACERS.

NEWS FOR AND OF THE CHAPS WHO STOOP TO CONQUER.

Talk About the Triplet—Evading an Ordinance—A Question of Training—Personals of Pedal-Pushers—The Cycle in Politics—Track Talk.

A higher gear will probably mark A H Barnett's road riding in the fall.

A hungry midnight cyclist found The Press office the only thing open last night, and went away saying mad things of a town which provided no refreshment for the belated wayfarer.

A party of four business men, including an ex-policeman, rode their wheels on a West Front Street side-walk at 3 yesterday afternoon, taking to the street again when they saw a policeman in the distance.

A question which has not been settled among the Crescents is whether a rider should ride before a race or not. Each racer practices what he thinks best. The men who ride in races on consecutive days seem to have solved the problem for themselves at least.

The riders in both Class A and Class B are complaining that the prizes received by them at various meets are not up to the value stated. There is a rule in the race laws of the League of American Wheelmen that requires all prizes to be up to the value advertised.

The craze for handicap races at the Crescent track among the men who congregate there each afternoon, has died out for the present, and the time is occupied instead with discussions of cycling matters with the plain, long-trousered citizens who go down to watch the experts ride. Watching the triplet when it is in condition to use, and talking about it when it is in the repair shop, is another favorite amusement. An interesting race yesterday afternoon was one between a long Crescent on a high wheel with short reach, and another who rode alone on the triplet. The man with the extra seats in tow got started so fast that the other gave up in disgust, and finally walked his gilt and scarlet wheel home.

A movement is secretly under way to organize the members of all the bicycle clubs of the country into a political phalanx which will advocate the election of any candidate of either party who will stand on a platform of good roads. It is estimated that the bicyclists and their friends in New York State alone can poll at least 50,000 votes. This would make them next in strength to the two great political parties and stronger than the Prohibitionists, who have heretofore honored themselves with the name of "the third party". If such a number of votes could be massed in favor of candidates advocating good roads they would canstitute a decisive factor in an ordinary contest, and if politicians come to realize the strength of this factor, it will not be long before members of the Legislature will be climbing over each other to introduce bills in favor of appropriating public money for good roads.

Was Billy Born in Holland?

(From The Little Falls, N. Y., Evening Times.)

Those who know Billy Cronkhite will appreciate the intense and deep seated humor of this from the Plainfield, N. J., Press: "W. H. A. Cronkhite, George Thatcher's genial manager, arrived in the city today to complete arrangements for the opening of Our Billy's season in Music Hall Thursday, August 23. Mr. Cronkhite has been spending his vacation with relatives in Little Falls, N. Y., where he has made his home ever since he first arrived in America some fifteen years ago. He is a native of Amsterdam, Holland."

The Little Falls correspondent is evidently laboring under some strange hallucination regarding the facts in the case We have it on the best authority that Manager Cronkhite is a native of Holland and arrived in this country August 1, 1879, on the steamer Botterdam with a cargo of Edam cheese. It is not to the discredit of the gentleman in question, and from what we learn he is proud of his progress.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Today was the hottest of the year. Ninety-nine on Park avenue in the shade

—Those troublesome excrescences on your feet give you no more pain after you apply 10 cents worth of Leggett's magic corn cure.

—Mrs. Muirhead has applied to the Supreme Court for a divorce from her husband. The Plainfield co-respondent named is Mrs. David C. Bird.

—In Justice Nash's court the lease of Johnson against Stelle on contract, and the landlord and tenant case of Mulford against Harding, are returnable August 3

—The Honeyman party after spending six days in Paris left there yesterday morning, arriving in London last night, and will remain till next Wednesday. They will then leave for Oxford, where a drive through central England will begin.

WEST END NOTES.

Ex-Councilman A. T. Gallup is still enjoying his vacation on Long Island.

A son was born to Lawyer and Mrs. Quinn of West Front street yesterday.

A. Bunyon of Lafayette place has been quite ill, and is still confined to his bed.

William Lee of West Third street has a calf which is attracting considerable attention. It has a double tongue.

Mrs. J. C. Smalley, Sr., of Newark, accompanied by her grandchildren, is visiting her daughter-in-law, Mrs. W. C. Smalley of Lafayette place.

Fucci Is Confident.

Mr. Fucci, the promoter of the new telephone venture, was hustling in this city today for new subscribers. He claims that there are no difficulties in the way of making it a howling success, which he will prove to the satisfaction of all subscribers before their money is invested.

—Almost anything you want for 7 cents at Edsall's tonight.

NEWS OF NEAR NEIGHBORS.

Willis Gray is visiting his father in Irvington for a few days.

Mrs. Joseph Apgar has returned from a pleasant visit in Irvington.

Dr. Brakeley has returned from a visit to his mother in Phillipsburg.

Miss Henry of Basking Ridge is stopping with Miss Frances Moynihan.

The Misses Martine have returned from their visit in New York State.

Miss Flanagan of Plainfield called on Miss Frances Moynihan yesterday.

Miss Elizabeth Huff of New Germantown is visiting Mrs. Isaac C. Davis.

Miss Sally Lake of Somerville will spend a few days with Dunellen friends.

Miss Frances Greenwald is being entertained by Miss Maggie Vail of Greenbrook.

Ex-Judge W. B. Codington of Plainfield has been chosen counsel for the Law and Order League.

Mrs. W. A. Lewis of Ashaway, R. I., is the guest of Mrs. J. V. Garretson of West Dunellen.

Miss Lucy Royster, one of Brooklyn's charming young women, is being entertained by Miss Evans at The Pines, New Market.

L. B. Woolston, J. F. Buckle, T. J. Carey and George Musgrave all found business in the borough yesterday, which they combined with pleasure by riding their wheels.

In the Methodist Church tomorrow Rev. W. C. Kinsey, pastor, will preach both morning and evening. In the morning at 10:30 his subject will be "The Methodists for the Times", and at 7:45 the last sermon in the series on Living Issues will be given from the subject "Is the world growing worse or better?"

Superintendent Peddie of the Central Railroad notified Dr. Brakeley yesterday that he must stop selling papers at the station or in the vicinity. The doctor does not intend selling at the station, but he will no doubt take care of the vicinity, as he has many customers who wish to purchase their papers from him. He says that he sells as many papers as ever.

The case of the arrest of Ambrosius Marienscheck late last evening, and the inconvenience which the constable and the justice were put to, bring up again the need of a lockup in the borough. The place need not be large, and should not cost very much. It is well worth having, as with a lockup handy prisoners who are arrested at night, as they usually are in Dunellen, could be kept until morning for a hearing, thus making unnecessary the holding of court in the night and the drive in the dark to New Brunswick.

Death of Wm. Rider.

The attack of typhoid fever from which William M Rider of 63 Grove street has been suffering, terminated fatally yesterday. His wife, who was a daughter of John E Simpson, died six weeks ago. Two children survive. All that medical skill could accomplish, was done for Mr Rider. Dr. Janeway of New York was called in consultation with Dr Fritts, but fatality could not be averted. Instead of crepe on the door, is a wreath of white roses.

—Garrett Dreier of West Front street caught seven bass at Seely's Mills yesterday afternoon.

A Moral.

There was a man in a faraway town
Who thought him wondrous wise.
He swore by all the fabled gods
He'd never advertise.

His goods were advertised at last,
And thereby hangs a tale.
The ad was set in nonpareil
And headed "Sheriff's Sale."

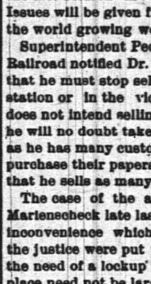
WOMEN MUST SLEEP.

SO SAYS MEDICAL AUTHORITY.

Serious Results of Sleeplessness, and the Way to Avoid It.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

If you are dangerously sick, what is the first duty of your physician? He quiets the frightened nervous system, he deadens the pain, and you sleep well.



Men fall by the wayside, victims of over-strained mental activity.

Friends ask, "What is it?" and the answer comes in pitying tones, nervous prostration.

Thousands of women tremble on the brink of the same precipice.

A little more pressure; some sudden grief, real or even imagined unkindness from loved ones, and over the brink fall one more victim of nervous prostration.

It came upon you so quietly, in the beginning, that you were not alarmed. But when sleep deserted you night after night, until your eyes fairly burned the darkness, then you tossed in nervous agony, praying for sleep.

You ought to have known when you ceased to be regular in your courses, and you grew so irritable without cause, that there was serious trouble somewhere.

You ought to be told that indigestion, exhaustion, womb displacements, fainting, dizziness, and backache send the nerves wild with affright, and you cannot sleep.

Want of sleep gives birth to a thousand morbid fancies of the brain.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for twenty years has saved women from all this misery. It is the certain cure for all derangements peculiar to women. It has saved them from torments for years, and it will save you. Go to your druggist at once: soon you will be well and sleep like a child.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

A Feminine Photographer.

Miss Frances Benjamin Johnston holds a unique position among women photographers. Her home is in Washington, where she is the only feminine member of the local camera club. She brought to her work a thorough knowledge of art acquired by several years' study in Paris. She has been a pioneer in developing the use of the camera as a means of making photographic illustrations for the periodical press. This was long her only field of work, but recently she has taken up literary work as well as other branches of photography. Last year at the World's fair she was engaged, in connection with Mr. Thomas W. Smillie of the Smithsonian institution, to make photographs with which to illustrate the United States government board report. She also made the entire photographic exhibit of the United States Naval academy, a series of over 200 splendid photographs showing all the phases of cadet life at Annapolis. All of these she printed and mounted herself, and they formed one of the most attractive exhibits on the brick battleship.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Miss Willard's Title.

Miss Frances E. Willard is now Dr. Frances E. Willard, since the Ohio Wesleyan university has conferred upon her the degree of LL. D. A telegram announcing the fact came to the great "welcome meeting" to Miss Willard in New York and was rapturously received by the audience. This is "a year of jubilee" for the Ohio Wesleyan university, being its semicentennial. The university is coeducational, and its president is that able and faithful advocate of woman suffrage, Dr. Bashford. It was a happy coincidence—or was it premeditated?—that one of the women graduates chose "Frances Willard" for her graduating theme. The Western Christian Advocate says: "The great honor of LL. D. sought illustrious subjects—Frances Willard and Bishops Warren and Thoburn. The foremost woman of her times, Frances Willard, is the first woman to receive this degree from an institution of the high rank of the Ohio Wesleyan. We congratulate both the honor giver and the honor bearer."

Gertrude Vanderbilt.

Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, the richest prospective heiress in America, is still a girl in skirts to her shoe tops. She is Cornelius Vanderbilt's only daughter. Her father's fabulous wealth is estimated at $150,000,000, and, as he has but three children—two sons and a daughter—her portion of his estate will hardly be less than $20,000,000.

Flowers In Finger Bowls.

A very pleasing table decoration that is easily carried out throughout the summer months is the addition of flowers to the finger bowls. Use double bowls, one large enough to hold the other, and fill the space between the two with very small blossoms. The effect of dipping the fingers into flower encircled water is decidedly unique and agreeable.

MRS. FRANK LESLIE MAKES A PLEA FOR ARTIFICIALITIES.

Wild Flowers Versus Exotics—A Frenchwoman's Idea of Distinction—Keeping Up Appearances—Duty In Good Manners Art Applied to Ethics.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

"PRETTY as a picture!" we often hear enthusiastic persons exclaim at sight of a fair landscape or a beautiful face. The speaker's genuine appreciation, then, is evidently for pictures rather than for the actual things which the pictures more or less truthfully represent, and his compliment to nature is in consequence lamentably left handed. But nature can stand it well enough, and the sentiment underlying such a spontaneous expression is very human and natural. There is indeed almost invariably an instinctive justice behind social traditions and popular prejudices. In this case the fact is that the picture is a simplified adaptation of nature to the general comprehension. In a successful picture much is made of the salient features which pleasantly strike the eye, and everything else is eliminated, for the sight, like the other senses, and like the heart itself, has its own predilections and antipathies, which it subtly imposes upon the reason. It is the discriminating selection and adjustment of these outward affinities, then, that constitute the main function of art. And social artificiality is simply art applied to ethics, to the minor morals and manners of everyday life; hence the unanimous preference of mankind, particularly women—of course, as the old phrase has it, mankind embraces women—for the suave conventionalities of art over the crude veritas of nature. It was easy to see that Alphonse Karr had been a philosopher before he turned florist when he said, "Few women love flowers, but all are fond of bouquets."

Flowers themselves are highly susceptible to the ameliorating influences of artificiality. Compare the wild flowers with the cultivated exotic or even with the favorites of the garden and see how splendidly nature acknowledges, with what richness of bloom and incense of odor, the ministering attentions of art. How immeasurably the exquisite Parma violet surpasses the modest hogtooth of the wood! While that dainty wild rose, the eglantine, when called by some other name—Jacqueminot, for example, with a fine pedigree of artificiality behind it—really does smell far sweeter. This, of course, is no disparagement to the dewy eglantine, which is charming in its native wilds. All I claim is that the comparison certainly does not slight the queenly Jacqua.

So the rule runs all the way up to men and women. High bred is high valued everywhere. War has repeatedly demonstrated that the city man—he of the nervous tension and artificial life—has better soldier stuff in him than the horny handed patriot fresh from the plow.

Nature lays the foundation of all beauty, moral and physical, but she does not bestow the cachet of distinction. A Parisian grande dame once said in my hearing to Mrs. C., a fair American who prided herself upon that wondrous lily and rose complexion which the late Horace Greeley bequeathed to all his daughters: "But, my dear, you should use powder. Not that you need it for beauty's sake or to make your skin whiter—no!—but it softens the eclat of color and takes away the shine. All the difference between a dairymaid and a duchess!"

Civilized life at this present stage of the comedy is as full of intricately interwoven artificialities as a bank note is of silken threads and fibers. Paradoxically speaking, these assure its genuineness. From the most trivial affectations of speech and personal adornment to the awfulest concerns of life, death and the hereafter we progress through such a series of discoveries of things being not at all what they seem that we may well ponder over Berkeley's theory of the unsubstantiality of the universe. Form and fact bear about the same relation to each other as the lines in a perspective drawing do to those of material objects.

Why, then, rail at artificialities or vanities, as they are called in the case of most women, or hypocrisies or foibles, in the case of some men? For people, particularly writing and lecturing people, of both sexes, do rail at them constantly, though unprofitably enough unless in a pecuniary sense. Most of these take their cue from Carlyle, of whom R. H. Hutton significantly remarks in a recent essay that he was forever fulminating in righteous wrath against shams, but never became enthusiastic over any truth.

After all, the main motive of the thousand and one amiable little deceptions practiced by everybody except the unco guid is to please us—to please, or at least to avoid displeasing, the onlooking world. Is the wearing of a wig more immoral than a public display of nude cranium in the front parquet of a theater? Who will maintain that a stayless, shapeless woman receives or deserves more deference in public than one who has tastefully made good the deficiencies of nature, while at the same time accentuating her really good points? Can I in my heart care less for the worldling who breezily inquires after my health here than for the saintly person who preaches to me about my hereafter? This reminds me of a little damsel I know who is always making delightful "breaks," and who once inquired, "Mother, what part of heaven do people go to who are good, but not agreeable?"

Keeping up appearances is surely an excusable affectation. It is on the side of setting a good example. What good men conceal is not their virtues, while bad men pay virtue the compliment at least of disguising themselves in her outward semblance. Assume a virtue if you have it not. Doubtless it is best, on the whole, that a public career should so frequently show of the person who has lived it, like his epitaph, after death,

Not what he was, but what he should have been.

The gulf between the apparent and the actual is not so impossibly wide. To be something and to appear it are indeed two quite different matters, yet in our time the latter is often the stepping stone to the former.

Love itself is a gorgeous fabric of artificialities. Some philosophers have undertaken to prove to us that modern romantic love is entirely a product of latter day aesthetics, developed from the fantastic chivalry of the middle ages. Certainly the passion portrayed in the epics and odes of antiquity, though heroic enough, is far grosser, more sinister and more material than the exquisite sentiment, the "love that is passion's essence," in Rousseau, for example, or the fine, fervid exaltation of Tennyson. No; love in our era is, as compared with the classic days of old, far more delicate, far more spiritual and far more artificial. Today the adorer beholds the adored one encircled with such a nimbus of ideality as can only be approached by a somewhat kindred perfection; hence a studious concealment of defects, a sudden bourgeoning out of qualities, a general putting on of grace. And, on the other side, the adored one is probably making equally strenuous efforts to appear in a favorable, even though artificial, light. Thus we see artificiality in its noblest aspect—that of a striving after the ideal.

But are not such ideals predestined to disillusion and disappointment? Disillusion, no doubt. But why be ungrateful? Why expect too much? The denouement of a happy dream is necessarily the awakening, yet I fancy all will admit that in such case 'tis better to have so dreamed and weakned than never to have dreamed at all or than to have had bad dreams. Love is the dream, marriage the waking. Quite pertinently does Byron ask:

Think you if Laura had been Petrarch's wife
He would have written sonnets all his life?

Of course not. There was something palpably artificial about Petrarch's well sung devotion to the lovely Provencal. But the world is agreed that this immortal fantasy was worth quite as much as the solid reality possessed by Laura's husband, M. de Sade, who was a commonplace and rather morose bourgeois of Avignon.

What is duty? That which we exact of others, wittily answers Dumas fils. Well, one of the things we are most certain to exact of others is good manners. Good manners, like charity, should begin at home. We must set a good example in this respect, especially we women, whose prerogative of administering the unwritten laws in polite society and in matters of taste I believe even our most churlish critics have not as yet challenged. The five talents of woman, according to Ruskin, are those which enable her, first, to please people; second, to feed them in dainty ways; third, to clothe them; fourth, to keep them orderly, and, fifth, to teach them. Pray, how is she to fulfill all or any of these duties if you deny her the right to exercise her supreme talent, the one which inspires all the rest, her talent for artificiality, for the arts of affectation and dissimulation? Virtue itself fails to please unless it be clothed in gentleness and grace, and, as Miss Edgeworth has told us, even vice loses half its evil by losing all its grossness.

On the masculine side take the Duc de Morny's succinct illustration of politeness. "A polite person," he declared, "is one who listens with interest to things he knows all about when they are discussed by a person who knows nothing about them." Then the politeness of the man of the world, which in truth stands for our modern chivalry, is obviously incompatible with outspoken unartificiality.

In the matter of hospitality this question touches us very nearly. Did you ever feel your heart warm to the winning effusion of a southern welcome and half unconsciously contrast it with the glacial "sincerity" of the receptior you got when you first presented yourself as a stranger somewhere in England, for instance? Not but that the English hospitality was true hearted and genuine, but, alas! it was masked in that stony British formality which as a matter of fact is quite as preposterous an affectation as the superficial extravagance with which all Anglo Saxons reproach all Latins. If you desire really to appreciate them both, to enjoy your visit for all it is worth, you must never dream of taking either one or the other of them literally at his word.

Let us deprecate so far as we can the conventional tirades against conventionality, against artificiality. If by force of repetition they end by almost persuading us against our own conscience, we can take refuge in the sterling maxim of Amiel that human kindness is the first principle of tact, and respect for others' feelings the primary condition of savoir vivre.

GLUTTONY AS AN ART.

Those Who Understand Eating Keep Young Longest.

It has been said a number of times lately that women will never prove their equality with men until they take as much thought on the subject of what they eat as men do. Therefore it behooves them to set about that task immediately. They cannot be expected to eat as much, not being, generally speaking, as large, but they must cultivate a nice appreciation of flavors and know a gastronomically artistic menu, when they see it, as a picture connoisseur knows a fine painting. If the caterers to women's clubs were consulted, they might be able to state, with authority, that women already know the difference between good and bad food. If they put up with inferior viands, as they often do, it is rather because they are not so belligerent as men and dislike to "kick," as the phrase goes.

Brillat-Savarin is quoted as saying: "It has been proved by a series of rigorously exact observations that by a succulent, delicate and choice regimen the external appearances of age are kept away for a long time. It gives more brilliancy to the eye, more freshness to the skin, more support to the muscles. Those who understand eating are four years younger than those who are ignorant of that science."

No doubt food has much to do with beauty, but it is doubtful if exceeding niceness of palate is any aid to the retaining of youthfulness. A cultivated palate is usually taken to mean a fondness for curious seasonings and unique combinations that do not appeal to the multitude. It is desirable to be able to eat epicurean cookery when it is set before one, but it would be hardly convenient for either men or women to be able to eat nothing else. Confinement to high living has not been found to have a particularly beautifying effect on those who have tried it.

The sketch given is of a gown of bayadere striped crepon in blue and white. The blouse corsage is gathered to a yoke of gauze and insertion, and straps of insertion trim the skirt as well as the bodice. The elbow sleeves consist of two puffs and have epaulets of blue moire. The back of the skirt is arranged to fall in coquilles.

HANDLE WITH CARE.

The Difference Between Gently Touching and Roughly Banging.

A rough touch is one of the most common of unpleasant personal traits. There are many persons who cannot set down a bit of china without running the risk of cracking it, and who cannot touch a flower without bruising the petals. A person of this sort habitually pushes her face into a bouquet in order to smell of it, dog's ears books and rubs her hands over the face of a picture. She strikes an animal with the idea of caressing it, she hurts the person with whom she shakes hands, and she leaves her mark on everything she touches. This habit is exceedingly displeasing in a man. In a woman it is intolerable, since she is naturally more delicate and has more to do with fragile things. When a woman of this sort borrows sheet music she folds and soils it. She takes the freshness out of every ruffle, ribbon or bit of velvet she lays her finger on. She handles a baby or a sick person as she would a log of wood, and she steps as if she would put her heels into the floor. This is entirely habit and can be conquered like any other superficial peculiarity. Parents ought to suppress the propensity in their children as soon as it appears, but if they do not the child herself can control it when she grows older, if she will take the trouble. Her own vanity ought to be sufficient to make her avoid being a source of continual nervous irritation to those about her. There is nothing restful in the society of a person who is always banging furniture, slamming doors and making the house jar with her walk. It is said to be the fashion for women to be feminine just now, and it is to be hoped that we will all be feminine to the extent of touching persons, animals and things gently.

TAFFETA GOWN.

An illustration is given of a gown having two skirts, the lower of which is of pansy colored taffeta. The second skirt is of pearl gray taffeta striped with pansy color and sprinkled with bouquets. The plain corsage has a double ripple basque and is trimmed with a wide, pointed collar of white lace. The balloon elbow sleeves are finished with a fall of lace and a pansy colored knot. A white lace hat is worn trimmed with pansy ribbon and a spray of flowers.

THE HOME IN WARM WEATHER.

Ways Worth Following to Add to the Family Comfort In Summer.

In planning for the comfort of the household during the heated term the intelligent homemaker realizes that half the battle is gained when a cool appearance is secured. To this end she divests her rooms of ever bit of drapery, window, mantel and door hangings, and puts cool looking mattings, which come now in inexpensive and artistic weaves, on the floors.

Covers for the upholstered furniture are very effective and summery in appearance, now that the linen fabrics for them come in graceful rosebud and fern designs and delicate tints. If our housekeeper is very up to date, she can make these coverings herself, their shapely fit being not at all difficult to secure. If it is desired to cover the chandeliers and pictures, a delicate buff tarlatan is most restful to the eye. This sheer material lends itself gracefully to chandelier draping and is additionally ornamental tied down with narrow ribbons of the same hue. It can be used as well laid in smooth folds over mirror and picture frames, held in place at the back by small gimp tacks.

Green shades at the windows are an absolute necessity through the warm days, and, with the indispensable awning, temper the glare in the most grateful way. Those of hunter's green are the best in color and can be bought as low as 49 cents.

Have the hues of your dining room neutral in tone. Do this by banishing gay cloths and brilliant effects of any sort except the box of window plants, whose bloom is a pleasure and whose cultivation is a saving occupation. If your china is strong in color, put it away and use the creamy white. For your relishes have plenty of ice. A pretty table center at a certain suburban home is, for the 6 o'clock dinner, on hot days, a crystal bowl filled with bits of loose ice, among which nest the rosy radish and the succulent olive.

The care of the sleeping rooms in summer is important. Do not make them the day sitting rooms, as is often done unnecessarily. If you have two, furnish one for morning use and the other to sleep in. Let all decorations be as simple as possible. Complexity of ornament is fatiguing, and in summer everything should be restful.

Keep your sewing corner out of your bedroom.

Screen your windows from flies and insects. The best screens are those that cover the entire frame space, hooking into a staple at each side. These are expensive to begin with, but if you own your house or have a long lease more than pay in comfort for the cost. If you cannot put them all over the house, have them in the kitchen and in the bedrooms. In the former they will permit the capricious and careless window shifting of the cook without harm, and in the bedrooms will make possible opening windows both top and bottom, thus securing the best ventilation.

All beds should have very thin sheets, summer blankets and honeycomb spreads. Pillow and bolster cases should be lightly trimmed, and on very hot days in the cool twilight the beds should be uncovered to insure later comfort. At the headboard keep always a large palm leaf fan, and a tray on the small table by the bedside which will hold ice water, a glass, lemons and a bowl of sugar will be found acceptable many times.

In the second room a cool linen covered lounge or divan, with pillows to match, out of the draft, yet within reach of air, will be an inviting siesta nook, with a Turkish stool near on which books and papers are piled. In the closet hang a loose sack or gown of fine muslin, that bit of thin stuff which has ruffle and lace, but not a regular fit. All these may be trifles, but it will be found that much of the discomfort of the summer solstice is lessened by their observance.—New York Times.

She Convinced Them.

The Populist state convention of South Dakota at Mitchell adopted a woman suffrage plank by an almost unanimous vote of the 561 delegates. Mrs. Anna Simmons of Huron obtained leave to address the convention, and they were so pleased with her speech that they extended her time repeatedly and at the close adopted her plank, though it had been declared in advance that no such resolution could possibly be carried. A scene of enthusiasm followed, and for half an hour the convention was given over to rejoicings. Men came to the platform by the dozen to shake hands with Mrs. Simmons and to thank her for her earnest and convincing plea.

Mrs. Boardman Elected.

Mrs. L. C. Boardman, the New York cyclist, has been elected a member of the Mowbray House Cycling association of England. The president of the association is Lady Henry Somerset, and Mrs. Boardman will organize an American branch of the association. This action is the introduction to a more widespread organization, which ultimately hopes to bring the cyclists of all English speaking countries within its fold.—London Gentlewoman.

For Training Domestics.

Mrs. Amory of New York has started a school for the training of waitresses. Women of slight figures, neat of appearance and quick ways are selected as pupils. In this way extra help is supplied households for a single evening or single occasion of any kind, the charges being specified. Not long ago a school for the training of domestic servants was opened in New Orleans by a Mrs. Muller, who is being lauded as a public benefactor by the press of the city.

Sara Yorke Stevenson.

Mrs. Sara Yorke Stevenson, or, as she is better known, Mrs. Cornelius Stevenson, who recently received the unusual distinction of an honorary degree from the University of Pennsylvania, has long been known as one of the most learned archaeologists in the country.

DELAWARE WATER GAP, PA.
The location of this house, on a spur of the Kittatinny Mountain, is the Finest in the Whole Range of the Blue Ridge. From its elevation are compassed views of great extent and beauty, embracing the gorge through which the river winds, the Upper Delaware Valley to the north, and Cherry Valley westward. From the Pioneer Walks, through hundreds of acres of forest, charming vistas are opened, affording frequent surprises for the alert pedestrian. The quiet and lake-like repose of the Delaware is very attractive to oarsmen and from the boat fine views of the great pass are obtained. The drives in every direction throughout the neighborhood are diversified and interesting. The hotel is large and complete in every detail, with broad verandas, a well-lighted billiard rooms, bath room, electric bells and mountain spring water in bed rooms. Superior table.
Good bass fishing in season on the Delaware, and trout fishing in the adjacent tributaries. For the accommodation of business men a daily train leaves the Water Gap at 7:02 a. m., and arrives in New York at 9:30 a. m. Weather, cool. Breezes, delightful.

NEW EVIDENCE

Of Dr. Lighthill's Success.

A Flattering Testimonial From Col. John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

A HAPPY EXPERIENCE.

The Interesting Testimony of Mr. W. E. Dilts, the Popular Passenger Conductor of the N. J. Central.

ROSELLE, N. J., July 1, 1894.

To My Friends and the Public:

I take pleasure in calling public attention to the remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case. For the past ten years I had been afflicted with a severe form of piles which finally gave me the greatest pain and distress nearly all the time, and from which I could not obtain any relief, in spite of all my efforts.

Hearing of a number of cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in similar cases, I placed myself under his care, and I rejoice to say, he effected a complete cure in my case and gave me new life in doing so, for I am sure that I could not have endured my misery much longer. And it will be a matter of importance to those who are suffering from this disease to learn the happy fact that Dr. Lighthill effected my cure without giving me pain or detaining me from work.

W. E. DILTS.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose grateful testimonial is in Dr. Lighthill's possession.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

DEAD IN A CABOOSE

Sad Fate of the Three Guinan Children.

Found by Policemen After Days of Search in a Trainman's Clothes Press—Evidently Died from Suffocation—Supposed the Little Fellows Were Hiding from the Police.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 20.—The three Guinan children, who strayed away from their home, in this city, last Thursday afternoon, have been found and all three are dead. The whole affair is so sad a one, and for a while it was so mysterious, that whole city became interested in the search for the missing little ones.

Chief of Police Bill gave orders that all cars about the depot and the freight yards be thoroughly searched. Policemen Gray and Manti, who had been searching cars in the yard of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad for about two hours, came to a caboose from which sickening oders came. They burst open the door and the stench, which had been strong enough before, became almost overwhelming. Keeping at their work of investigation, the officers traced the smell to the closet which the trainmen use as a clothes-press, and breaking open the door they found the three little bodies, naked and preyed upon by vermin.

Freddie, the 4-year-old boy, lay on the bottom. On him was Raymond, 9 years old, and on top of both was Leroy, 7 years old. Under the bodies were the few garments the boys wore when they left home. It was a sickening sight and a sad sequel to the story of their disappearance. There are no suspicions of murder or of foul play.

At the autopsy, which was performed by Dr. H. S. Fuller, the medical examiner, assisted by Dr. Beach, nothing was found to indicate violence.

The condition of the lungs indicated death by suffocation, and the absence of effusion and other marks about the neck precluded the suspicion of strangulation.

The theory is that the little fellows ran into the car to hide from a passing policeman Thursday afternoon and that the door of the closet swung to and caught them in with the spring lock. The closet is five feet high and its floor space is 28x15 inches. It is impossible that the little boys could have lived long in such a confined space, and the doctors think they became unconscious in about 15 minutes and that they did not live more than 30 minutes after the door was locked on them.

The day they left home an older brother had just started for the public bath house to go in swimming. Raymond, the oldest of the three boys who disappeared, asked his mother if he might go too. She gave him permission and told him to run along and overtake his older brother. Instead of doing this he took his two younger brothers, unknown to his mother, and left the house. The elder brother saw nothing of them and did not know that Raymond had been given permission to go with him.

It is supposed that the three boys had taken off their clothes to play going in swimming, as that idea was in their minds when they left home.

The car in which they were found stood near the Park river, but, as the banks are walled, it is not thought they intended going into the water. They were found within a stone's throw of the house of their parents. James Guinan, father of the boys, is a conductor on the New York, New Haven & Hartford road.

WILL RECEIVE THE PALLIUM.

Archbishop Chapelle, of New Mexico, To Be Honored by the Pope.

SANTA FE, N. M., July 30.—Archbishop Chapelle has been singled out by the pope to receive the pallium, a distinguished honor which will be conferred sometime during the fall.

Delegate Satolli and Cardinal Gibbons will attend, and the old cathedral, said to be the oldest sacred edifice in America, will receive an overhauling to drive away the musty odors of centuries.

Archbishops Lamy and Salpointe were honored with the pallium in this city.

ZIMMERMAN BEATS LOSTE.

The Best Rider in Southern France Not in It With Him.

LYONS, July 30.—Rivierre, the bicyclist, arrived here from Paris at 5:17 o'clock yesterday on his wheel. He covered the distance of 1,040 kilometres in 33 hours and 15 minutes, thus winning the race. Meyer was second and Joyeux was third.

In Bordeaux A. A. Zimmerman, the American crack, beat Loste, the best rider in southern France, and several wheelmen of local fame.

The Evidence Insufficient.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., July 30.—United States Marshal Ware has received a letter from Secretary of State Gresham stating that the state department had decided that the evidence in the case of Manuel Villareal, committed for extradition on warrants sworn out by the Mexican government charging him with murder, robbery, arson and kidnapping at San Ignacio, Mexico, does not justify the issuance of a warrant of surrender, and the release of the prisoner from custody is ordered.

Prof. Le Blanche Badly Hurt.

JERSEY CITY, July 30.—Mme. De Haven and Prof. Le Blanche made a double balloon ascension from Eldorado yesterday afternoon. The lady's balloon went up all right, but the professor's broke just as he entered it, and he was thrown through a piece of scenery in the amphitheatre and badly hurt. His balloon went to New York.

Gogebic Range Mine Strike Ended.

IRONWOOD, Mich., July 30.—The miners strike on the Gogebic range has been declared off after an idleness of six weeks and a loss to the workingmen of $100,000 and an additional tax to the county of $50,000. The militia will leave here to-day.

Killed in a Railroad Accident.

CHICAGO, July 30.—An accident occurred on the Chicago & Northwestern railroad at 48th and Kinzie streets at a late hour last night. Agnes Christopher, aged 16 years, was instantly killed, and Lydia Hansen, aged 22, badly injured.

Tanlongo Jury Condemned.

ROME, July 30.—The entire press condemns the jury that acquitted Tanlongo. The trial is regarded as a farce and nobody hesitates to say that Tanlongo was saved by political interference.

NATIONAL LEGISLATION

Senate Appropriation Bills To Be Rushed Through.

The End of the Week Will Probably See Them Out of the Way—Chinese Treaty May Get Its Day—No Programme Arranged for the House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Senator Jones, who has had the laboring oar on the tariff bill on the senate side ever since it left the house, is reported as saying this morning that he is confident that an agreement of some sort on that measure will be reached this week. Whether the debate which will then follow will be brief or indefinitely protracted will depend entirely upon the nature of the report presented by the conferees.

Omitting the tariff bill from the calculations as to what may take place, there is every indication that the end of the week will see all of the appropriation bills safely out of the way. Mr. Cockrell, chairman of the senate committee on appropriations, expects to get the sundry civil bill—that vehicle which carries everything not otherwise provided for—out of the committee room by to-night and have it reported to-morrow morning. He will call it up at once for consideration. He expects to have the general deficiency bill in such shape that he can follow the sundry civil with it when needed. This will complete the appropriation bills and leave the senate free to discuss tariff or threaten adjournment if delays are interposed.

It may be that the Chinese treaty will get its day in court, but there does not appear to be much interest in treaties just now, and this particular treaty seems to have more active enemies than friends.

House of Representatives.

Drifting is the only word that will now accurately describe the condition of affairs in the house of representatives. All the business which the managers feel it is anywise essential for record purposes to pass at this session of congress has already been disposed of, and they are now simply waiting on the conference committees to give them an opportunity to settle the differences between the two branches over those measures upon which the house has already passed once.

No programme has been arranged for the rest of this week further than that Wednesday will be devoted to the Moore-Funston contested election case from Kansas. Moore is a democrat seeking to get Funston's seat, and the majority of the committee has reported in favor of the former.

A meeting of the committee on rules will be held during the day to decide what committees shall have the sessions of to-day and to-morrow for the consideration of business. The Indian and naval committees will in all probability be the ones favored.

The other days in the week will be appropriated later if it shall then be found desirable to continue the policy of parceling out the time.

The programme is always subject to interruptions by conference reports, and there are six appropriation bills, besides the tariff bill, which are likely at any time to come in and vary the proceedings.

DEAD ON THE TRACK.

Ghastly Find of a Freight Train's Crew Near Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, July 30.—The crew of a freight train coming into the city last night found the dead and mutilated bodies of two men lying alongside the Pennsylvania railroad track at Ben Venue, a suburb of this city.

In the pockets of one of the men was found a letter addressed Harry G. Coustin from R. T. Schoonmaker, Westfield, N. J. On the person of the other man was found a postal card addressed to C. H. Ruby, 814 Pavonia avenue, Jersey City, signed A. W. C. In a diary was found the name of A. W. Clark.

The oldest man was apparently about 30 years, and the younger man, who is evidently Clark, is about 20 years of age. The bodies were taken to the morgue. The men were evidently stealing their way on the cars.

HELD UP THE DOCTOR.

Attacked in the Woods and Relieved of $500.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 30.—Dr. Wilbur F. Worth, an aged physician of Manton, was held up by highwaymen yesterday morning while passing through some woods.

The doctor had returned from Boston on the midnight train, bringing $500 with him. He had been in his office but a short time when he was requested to visit a sick man. In the woods three men attacked him and demanded money, which they got, and then cleared out. In a scuffle the doctor was shot in the right foot, but the wound is slight.

The police think the men followed the doctor from Boston.

Thunder Storm Causes a Panic.

WELLSBORO, Pa., July 30.—A violent thunder storm in this place damaged the crops and much property. A dramatic performance was going on in a tent here and the wind split the canvass, and the audience of 1,000 persons were drenched and thrown into a panic. Women fainted and children screamed and pandemonium reigned, while the rain fell in sheets and the lightning was incessant. Fortunately no one was seriously injured.

Killed His Brother.

MILLVILLE, N. J., July 30.—Andrew Furman, the infant son of Andrew Dilke, died from the effects of an overdose of medicine administered by his 2-year-old brother Willard. The baby had been sick and was recovering, and Mrs. Dilke had fallen into a doze when Willard got out of bed, and, taking the medicine bottle, poured the contents down the throat of the infant, who soon expired.

There Is Some Doubt.

BOSTON, July 30.—Regarding the statement of Mr. Frank Buckley, in New York, to the effect that there was little doubt but that the Jackson-Corbett fight, if arranged, could be pulled off in Boston, Chairman Hallstram, of the board of aldermen, said that such was most decidedly not the case.

Cyclone in Massachusetts.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., July 30.—A cyclone swept through Lanesboro yesterday, cutting a swath twenty rods wide. It damaged fields and orchards and tore up trees by the roots. Orchards owned by Henry Farnum were completely demolished.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

DEBS AT TERRE HAUTE.

Greeted Enthusiastically by an Immense Crowd.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., July 30.—Eugene V. Debs, president of the American Railway union, was greeted by one of the most enthusiastic audiences at the opera house last night that ever assembled in this city. Many thousands were turned away. His address on the recent strike was a conservative one, and consisted of a plain statement of the causes and results of the conferences which led to the Pullman boycott. Every sentence was greeted with prolonged applause, and his homecoming was an ovation.

In opening his address Mr. Debs said that he had done everything in his power to prevent the Pullman strike and followed with a statement of the incidents which led to the strike and boycott. "I am opposed to strikes," said Mr. Debs, "and firmly believe in the principles of arbitration. I challenge the production of any evidence that I have ever advised any man to strike. I did not order the Pullman strike, as has been repeatedly stated by the press. I did not even have a voice in ordering it."

Mr. Debs then explained the action of the railroad managers in combining to down the American Railway union and labor organizations. He spoke of the Great Northern victory and finally launched into a political discussion.

"I am a populist out and out," he continued. "There is no difference between democrats and republicans as far as labor is concerned. I am ashamed to say that I voted for Grover Cleveland three times. Evidence of the control of capital is shown in the power which Havemeyer exercises over the present government."

In conclusion Mr. Debs plainly stated that the fight would be continued in a reform political movement, and he declared that the strike would be the last in which he would ever take part.

CHOLERA AT CANTON.

With a Proper Observance of Cleanliness There Would Be No Plague.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Several reports regarding the "plague" in China have been received at the marine hospital bureau. Secretary Danby of the United States legation says that at Canton a novel and thoroughly Chinese method of checking the disease was hit upon.

A fortune teller, having given out that the plagne would die away with the approach of the spring solstice, the people of Canton, in order to deceive the gods of sickness, made the first day of fourth moon, May 5, their New Year's day. Every ceremony by which the day is celebrated was gone through with scrupulous exactitude. The local authorities assisted in this farcical performance.

The New Year's festivities in the presence of such widespread death had a somewhat ghastly character.

Consul Seymour, writing from Canton, says everything continues in wild confusion. Business is almost suspended. He has been in nearly all parts of Canton during the plague and has remained at his post through it all, and is persuaded that with the observance of proper precautions, especially in securing a supply of pure water for cooking and washing, and for flushing drains in time of drought, there should and would be no such thing as this plague.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

The Tall Spire on a Norwich, Conn., Church Badly Damaged.

NORWICH, Conn., July 30.—Lightning struck the steeple of the Broadway Congregational church in this city at noon yesterday.

The steeple is 198 feet high and a big slice three feet wide and sixty feet in length was torn out of it. The falling bricks crashed through the roof and made a hole six feet in diameter in the ceiling. A pedestrian was slightly injured by falling bricks.

There was no service in the church, the Sunday school service being held at Second church.

The damage will amount to $5,000; insurance on the church $46,000. The steeple was the tallest in the city and will be torn down.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

The Electric Fluid Plays Havoc with a Camping Party.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., July 30.—This city was visited yesterday afternoon by a succession of severe thunder storms which killed one man, shocked several others and wrought havoc generally.

The direct work of the lightning was at Thomas island, Onota lake, where George B. Castle, aged 28, was instantly killed, and Charles Johnson, Henry Wagner and Lena Wagner were terribly shocked. These four, with Castle's wife and Mrs. Samuel Williams have been camping at Thomas island, a delightful spot, for six weeks, and were to break camp last night.

NEW YORK, July 30.—The Commercial Cable company made the following announcement to-day: "We are advised that, except for Shanghai, Foochow, Amoy, Hong Kong and Macao, messages for places in China must be expressed in plain English language."

CARLSTADT, N. J., July 30.—George W. Hollenstein, 50 years old, a letter carrier, committed suicide here yesterday. He drank a bottleful of morphine. He anticipated being discharged from his position and was despondent.

You hear a great deal about oatmeals as good as H-O. Do you ever hear that H-O is as good as some others?

PERISHED IN THE FLAMES.

Many Bodies of Victims of the Phillips, Wis., Fire Found.

PHILLIPS, Wis., July 30.—All that is known of a certainty, 55 hours after the destruction of the town, regarding the loss of human life in the flaming sea is that 16 persons perished by fire and water on the burning of the raft on which they sought to escape from the flames on the bayou. The most conservative estimate of the loss, made by the principal sufferers, is $1,500,000, one-third of which falls on the Davis Lumber company.

The charred bodies of many victims are expected to be found in the debris of the big lumber yard near the bridge which burned over the bayou. Women and children fled there when the bridge fell under the fiery wave. It is certain that several women and children, who were crossing the bridge when it burned, perished in the flaming mass.

A semblance of order was created out of the smoking mass upon the arrival of Governor Peck and his staff and relief parties with provisions from Marshfield and Stevens Point. The carloads of food were welcomed more than the visitors.

All except 37 of the building are in ashes. The names of the dead as far as discovered at an early hour this morning are as follows:

Anton Flentzer, killed by the fall of the chimney of his house.

Frank Cliss, machinist, body found under a pile of driftwood.

Mrs. Frank Cliss and two children, found near Cliss' body.

James Lock, butcher, body brought to the surface of bayou by dynamite.

Child of James Lock, drowned in his arms.

Mrs. David Bryden, wife of the foreman of the Fayette-Shaw tannery, and her two children.

FATAL BOILER EXPLOSION.

One Man Instantly Killed, Two Others Die and Another Seriously Burned.

SHENANDOAH, Pa., July 30.—By the explosion of a boiler in a nest of six at Packer's No. 4 colliery of the Lehigh Valley Coal company, one man was instantly killed, two so badly hurt that they have since died, and one seriously burned. The dead are:

John Miller, aged 45 years; leaves wife and family.

Darby Shiels, 44 years; leaves wife and family.

John Laubock, 25 years, single.

Steve Salisky, a Pole, was seriously burned.

The cause of the explosion is not known. The boilers were in the engine room and had been inspected a day or two ago, and the men were engaged in making the steam pipe fittings and getting ready to fire up when the explosion occurred. The men were hurled in every direction, and the boiler house was wrecked by the force of the explosion.

Miller was instantly killed, and Shields and Laubock were so terribly burned that they lived but a few hours.

ADVICES FROM HAWAII

The Government Firmly Established and Peace Prevails.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 30.—The steamship Australia has arrived bringing Hawaiian advices to July 21. Peace prevails throughout Hawaii and the new government appears to be firmly established.

The jury system under the new constitution is causing some trouble in the country districts. The constitution requires all jurors to take the oath of allegiance to the new republic and to abjure all help in restoring the monarchy in any form. In one country dirtrict it has been impossible to get enough jurors to serve, the Honolulu royalists having sent out a circular stating that no answer had yet been received as to President Cleveland's intended action, and warning the natives to keep out of politics and to take no oaths of allegiance. Even the most ardent royalists, however, have little hope that the commission recently sent to Washington will be able to accomplish anything in ex-Queen Liliuokalani's behalf.

ARCHDUKE WILLIAM KILLED.

The Austrian Nobleman Thrown from a Horse and Dragged by His Foot.

VIENNA, July 30.—While the Archduke William was riding in Baden, near this city, his horse was frightened by an electric car and bolted. The archduke was thrown. His foot caught in the stirrup, and he was dragged more than a hundred yards. He was insensible when the horse was stopped, and he died within a short time without having recovered consciousness.

The physicians who attended him said that death was caused by concussion of the brain.

The archduke was born in 1827. He never married.

He was inspector-general and master of ordnance in the Austrian army.

Death of Artist McDougal.

NEWARK, N. J., July 30.—John A. McDougal, one of the most famous artists of the early half of the present century, died at his home, 151 West Kinney street, this city, yesterday after a long illness. Mr. McDougal was born in New York city 87 years ago, and grew up with and was a close friend and contemporary of Edgar Allen Poe, Nathaniel P. Willis, Washington Irving, and other famous literary men of that period.

Three Men Drowned.

NEWMARKET JUNCTION, N. H., July 28.—During a heavy thunderstorm on Great Bay a sailboat capsized and William R. Byrne, formerly of Boston, and Michael Carroll were drowned. Byrne leaves a wife and two children. Carroll leaves a mother. An unknown boat also capsized and one man was drowned.

Caserio's Friends Condemned.

PARIS, July 30.—Many men have been prosecuted in the larger cities for having spoken well of Santo Caserio, the murderer of President Carnot. Some of these have been condemned to severe punishment, although they were proved to be merely drunken babblers. A few have been acquitted.

SWEPT THEIR DECKS

Japs Entirely Disable Chinese Troop Ships.

The Kow Shung Foundered With 1,700 on Board and Only Forty Survived—Other Chinese Transports Arrived Safely at Korea—No New Developments in the Situation at Washington—Chinese Residents Fleeing from Japan.

LONDON, July 30.—The Central News has this dispatch from Shanghai:

"The Chinese warship Tsao Khaa, which was captured by a Japanese warship off the coast of Round island, is a vessel of an obsolete model and was equipped poorly for fighting. Although completely outmatched by the Japanese cruiser, the troopship offered some resistance and lost fully a hundred men, killed and wounded, before she yielded. She was entirely disabled when the Japanese boarded her.

"The troopship Kow-Shung tried to get away as soon as the Japanese warships began their attack, and made only a weak running fight. The Japanese guns swept her decks and carried off the Chinese soldiers by the score.

"The latest estimate of the number aboard her is 1,700. Only 40 survived the foundering of the ship. They say that all her officers were killed before she went down.

"The announcement that the rest of the Chinese transports arrived safely at Korea and landed their men is confirmed.

"On the 27th the Japanese fusiladed heavily those who had landed on the 26th at Yachan. The Japanese officers hoped thus to prevent the junction of the Chinese with the Koreans near Seoul.

"Whether they accomplished their object is not known.

"No news of the hostilities can be obtained from Pekin. Code messages are refused at the telegraph offices and no other messages referring to current affairs are accepted.

"The outlying battallions of the northern army are concentrating rapidly at Taku, the rendezvous from which the regiments are embarked for Korea.

"The work of preparing harbor defenses here are progressing rapidly. Torpedoes are being laid in the north channel at the entrance of the Yang-tse-Kiang.

"Great quantities of ammunition have been purchased by the government and are being collected at the ports for shipment.

"The exportation of rice and grain has been prohibited. Trade is paralyzed. The coasting steamers and small craft are afraid to leave the harbors.

"While everything looks and sounds like war, the Chinese officials continue to maintain that war has not been declared."

The Central News says that in official circles here there is a strong feeling in favor of mediation on the part of the United States, although few believe that Japan and China would accept arbitration unless under considerable pressure.

NOTHING NEW AT WASHINGTON.

Attempted Mediation by the United States Unsuccessful.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—There have been no new developments in the situation between China and Japan in this city. The efforts of European governments to secure the consent of the belligerent powers to accept mediation by the United States, so far as can be learned, have not been attended with success. Neither the Chinese nor the Japanese legation in this city has received any information with respect to the matter, and the impression prevails here, as in Europe, that a compromise is no longer possible. While it is understood that the good offices of the United States would be most gladly exercised, no advices have been received by the authorities here to indicate that China or Japan will invoke them.

At the Japanese legation Minister Tateno said the only advices he had received from his government notified him of the fact that communication between Korea and Japan had been interrupted, and that there was no news to communicate to him. The minister said he had hoped the difficulties between his country and China might be arbitrated without resort to hostilities, but the condition of affairs was such that he did not feel able to express an opinion as to the outcome.

A gentleman who is familiar with the condition of things, as viewed from the Chinese standpoint, said that there was nothing to add to the reports already published, as coming from the Chinese legation.

It is impossible to-day to learn any thing direct from the officers of the legation themselves.

Secretary Herbert stated last night that the navy department was in receipt of no additional information from the officers on duty at the Chinese station. The last news that had been received at the department was the dispatch from the commander of the Baltimore announcing the capture of the king of Korea by the Japanese troops.

The secretary said the fact that nothing further had been received was probably due to the disturbed condition of the ordinary channels of communication, the telegraph and cable lines being more or less seriously interrupted.

FLEEING FROM JAPAN.

Chinese Residents Leaving in Large Numbers.

YOKOHAMA, July 30.—The army and navy reserves have been summoned into service. Chinese residents of Japan are fleeing in large numbers.

Reliable news has reached Tokio that the main body of Chinese troops crossed the northwestern frontier of Korea on July 25. In official circles everybody is convinced that China's recent negotiations were a mere subterfuge to gain time and concentrate her forces with a view to combining with the Koreans for an attack.

It is reported that the Japanese ships have been fired on again from the shore.

WOULD NOT HELP HIM.

Korea's King Appealed in Vain for His Liberty.

SHANGHAI, July 29.—The British cruiser Porpoise sailed from Chee Foo yesterday to protect British interests in Korea.

The Japanese minister at Seoul requested the king, before his capture, to demand the withdrawal of Chinese troops from Korea. He refused, and thereupon the Japanese troops advanced upon Seoul. After a brief encounter they routed the Koreans and occupied the royal palace. The king appealed to the representatives of European powers to intervene, but his appeal was not heeded.

ABSOLUTE NEUTRALITY

Germany's Attitude in the Japan-China War.

Berlin Dailies Maintain that the Japs Will Win—Victory for Japan, They Say, Would Mean Reform of Barbarous Abuses of Korea's Internal Affairs.

BERLIN, July 30.—Here, as elsewhere on the continent, all eyes have been turned eastward throughout the week. Several days ago Chancellor von Caprivi sent his instructions to Freiherr von Gutschmid, German minister in Tokio, and Freiherr von Schenck, German minister in Pekin. He told them to support strongly England's initiative to restore peace between Japan and China, and, in the event of continued hostilities, to maintain an attitude of absolute neutrality.

The Japanese legation here is in receipt of despatches announcing that active hostilities have begun. At the Chinese legation, however, the officials still persist in asserting that the dispute will be settled without war. The Pekin government either neglects to inform its Berlin representative of current events or the Chinese minister distorts the official dispatches sent to him.

The concensus of official opinion is that a prolonged war is at hand, and that European efforts to restore peace will be futile. This is the opinion of diplomatists best acquainted with eastern politics.

The press comments on the situation reveal some novel views. For instance, the Post, familiarly known as "the diplomatists' organ, turns on the United States with the words:

"There is no doubt that the Americans covet territory in east Asia, and see in the present crisis an opportunity. Californians are especially eager for a foothold on the east Asiatic coast, and they naturally feel a stronger attraction toward that territory than to the southern states. They are linked by the ocean with Asiatic trading interests. Americans who look far ahead now desire to create in Japan a point of vantage for further Asiatic ventures. Therefore they back Japan against China, undmindful of the fact that by so doing they give an irreparable shock to the much lauded and natural friendship between Russia and the United States."

The Vossische Zeitung maintains that Japan will win in the war, and blames China for refusing to adhere faithfully to the spirit of her treaties and for trying to keep Korea in barbarism. China, it says, is endeavoring to stop the progress of civilization in East Asia. The majority of the Berlin dailies take this view of the conflict and express the hope that the war will crush the ignorant self-conceit of the Pekin government. The victory of Japan, they say, would mean the reform of the barbarous abuses of Corea's internal affairs, the introduction of proper schools and of telegraphs and railways, and the opening of rich Corean mines.

The dissensions of the ministers over the policy to be pursued toward the anarchists have become acute. Count Bothoun Eulenburg, the tory premier of Russia, leads the ministerial group who demand exceptional laws to stop the spread of anarchic and social democratic propaganda. Dr. Hinzpetre, once the emperor's tutor, is said to be exerting all his influence in favor of Eulenburg's proposals. The emperor is said to be undecided. While inclined to favor repressive laws, he fears to oppose Chancellor von Caprivi, who undoubtedly would resign his office the moment the Eulenburg programme should be adopted. One way out of the dilemma has been suggested—probably at the emperor's instance—and that is to lay the whole subject before the federal council, not in the form of a bill, but merely as a matter for discussion. The opinion of the federated governments could be obtained thus without the imperial government's being committed to any definite policy.

THE BAYREUTH FESTIVAL.

Berlin Musical Critics Do Not Look Upon It Favorably.

BERLIN, July 30.—The Bayreuth festival is not in high favor with the musical critics. The Nordeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung prints a formal denunciation of the management whose artistic abilities are regarded by its Bayreuth correspondent as little above zero. "The Bayreuth festival may continue to exist," he says, "as a place of amusement for splenish Englishmen and rich Americans, but it has ceased already to exist as the mecca of the lovers of the master's art."

The Vienna Fremdenblatt says: "No amount of advertising can restore the Bayreuth performances to the standard from which they have fallen. One of Wagner's friends has written to us that Frau Cosima has committed sacrilege against the master's memory by the style in which she allows his masterpieces to be performed."

Toadying to the Czar.

BERLIN, July 30.—The Prince and Princess Ferdinand of Bulgaria were in Bayreuth and Coburg last week and are now back in Carlsbad. The Russian Svet says the prince has professed readiness to embrace the orthodox Russian creed, have his heir baptized in the orthodox Russian church, and reinstate in the Bulgarian army all the military emigrants, if, in return, the czar will only recognize him as prince of Bulgaria.

Hawaiian Royalists.

CHICAGO, July 30.—The representatives of the Hawaiian royalists arrived in Chicago last evening over the Santa Fe railroad. The party consists of H. E. Wideman, formerly chief justice under the monarchy; Samuel Parker, ex-prime minister; J. A. Cummins, and Major Seward, the latter acting as an aide to the commissioners.

CIRCULATION EXCEEDS THAT OF ALL OTHER PLAINFIELD DAILIES COMBINED.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., JULY 30, 1894

"By the skin of my teeth" is the theme of Talmage's sermon in The Press today.

$200 is Westfield's Centennial deficit. Does n't she wish she had her fireworks money back? You can't burn powder and keep the price.

Most people found it too hot yesterday to "dress up" and sweiter through church service. The attendances were in most cases very slim. Would n't the relief afforded by mechanical fans have been a help?

Practical Christianity is that of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. It provided good talks and good singing yesterday, and its free fount of ice-cold lemonade was a blessing in a line with Divine injunction. It was a modern application of "Ho, everyone that thirsteth", and it brought fruit.

100 is a dandy mark, if you look at it from a High-School point of view. But this being vacation, who cares for the even century, especially when it represents the attainment not of the industrious student but instead that of the more assidpous thermometer. 100 is just what the mercury accomplished yesterday, in Plainfield, and everybody was sorry for it. People wished that the quicksilver would fall with speed enough to melt the glass tube by its friction.

The old plea for pastor's salary was "The laborer is worthy of his hire". Dr. H. K. Carroll of Plainfield shows that the modern saying should be "He gets it". The Press has already published Dr. Carroll's surprising statistics on the pay of preachers, and the New York Sun comments thereon as follows:

The statistics laboriously compiled by Dr. Carroll should put an end to the current notion that preachers are, as a class, underpaid. There is no lack of prizes in their profession, and they are sure of a support commensurate to their merits.

The Press has before remarked on the evil of soaking the streets when sprinkling is intended, and has advised that the streets be wet one side at a time, affording a drier pathway for cyclers and carriages. It seems that Plainfield is not the only town where it is a case of either thick dust or thick mud, with no happy medium. From the Westfield Standard comes this plaint:

This petition is wrung from the heart of one of Westfield's most patient citizens and will, doubtless, be heeded by the head of the Street Sprinkling Department, Robert Woodruff, Jr., who never does things by halves; but sprinkling, not deluge, is what Westfielders will be satisfied with, Robert.

For heaven's sake bring the strength of Standard to bear upon the subject of excessive street sprinkling. It is unjust and disgusting to pedestrians and those who drive. One can drive all day without getting his buggy muddy until he strikes Broad street in Westfield.

That all-day drive does n't include Plainfield. Let's see if we can't get the dust laid—no more.

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

TROLLEY VICTIM.

THAT'S WHAT IS CLAIMED OF CONRAD SEAWALD.

Smitten by Heart Disease Resulting from His Electric Shock of Months Ago—Coroner Reed Permits Burial.

Conrad Seawald, a German hostler employed at the Arlington Hotel, died under peculiar circumstances yesterday afternoon. His death was due to heart failure, and came while he was lying down in his room.

Conrad was 26 years old and had been in this country for nearly two years. Two months and a half ago he received an electric shock from a trolley wire at the corner of Somerset and Chatham streets. Since that time his employer, Henry Windham, and others about the hotel, have noticed a change in him. He never seemed to recover his strength, and it was even thought that his mind was somewhat unbalanced, as he would talk and laugh to himself in a queer way.

At 10:30 yesterday morning he was found in his room, lying on the bed with his trousers and a shirt on. He laughed when spoken to and said he would stay there for a while. At 1:15 he was seen again and was then apparently in good health. Shortly after 2 a servant heard the sound of heavy breathing coming from his room, but thought it nothing unusual.

He was not needed until 5:20, when Mr. Windham went upstairs to tell him to care for a horse. He found him dead. He had fallen backwards, and his head nearly touched the floor as he lay upon his back over the edge of the bed. The upper part of his body had turned black. Blood was issuing from his mouth and nose. The body was stiff. He had evidently been dying when the servant heard his heavy breathing.

Acting Chief Marshal VanHorn was sent for. At 8 Coroner Reed came from Somerville and gave a certificate of death from heart disease. Later in the evening the body was removed by Undertaker Henry DeMott from the hotel to the Gesang and Turn Verein Hall, Conrad having been a member of the Saengerbund for three months.

Conrad was unmarried. He had a sister in New York and was known to have friends in Lenox, Mass. He never made many acquaintances while in Plainfield.

LOOK OUT FOR THE SIXTH!

Plainfield to Make Ready a Metropolitan Production.

August 6 will be a red-letter day in Plainfield. Then it will be invaded by an army of masculine and feminine comedians, vocalists, dancers, and musicians, comprising the extra-strong artistic aggregation engaged for the forthcoming season of George Thatcher's minstrels and farce-comedy company in their new and original production entitled "About Gotham". All the rehearsals will take place here daily in Music Hall, until the eventful first performance on August 23, on which occasion Mr. Thatcher's fellow-townsmen are to be treated to the first view of this magnificent combination.

Harry W. Emmett, the celebrated author, actor, and stage director, has already been here four or five days arranging the scenery and costumes, etc., and consulting with Messrs. Thatcher and Cronkhite about the many novel features of the plays. Mr. Emmett has written and produced plays of all kinds for the past 20 years in America, Australia, England and other parts of the world, but he feels confident that he will make this the most successful production of his life.

SAVED!

The Thrilling Rescue of a Bicycle Girl who Hadn't Learned how to Stop.

The shades of night were getting in their work, and the peace of a righteous community was filtering through the atmosphere. Brown and Jones were enjoying their last cigars and conversing on stocks; there is nothing frivolous or flighty about Brown and Jones.

Suddenly there came a swish of feminine skirts, a skurry of a bicycle, and through the darkened air a shrill wail faltered: "Oh, won't you please help me!" Then a bicycle at full tilt sped across the street crossing, and Brown and Jones stared at each other aghast.

"O-o-ooh!" half cried the voice of the disappearing rider.

"What in thunder does she want help about?" gasped Jones.

"She wasn't tipping over!" cried Brown.

"Her wheel was all right!"

"No one was pursuing——"

"Help!" floated back to the crossing. With one wild gush of alarm two cigars were flung to destruction and two reputable citizens went spinning down Lake avenue. Never since their college days have Jones and Brown made a running record like the one credited to that night's performance with a movable goal for an object. One block, two blocks, two and a half, and then the fleeing wheel with its sobbing rider came in view.

With an extraordinary spurt Brown and Jones caught up, grabbed the handle bars, and stopped the wild progress of the modern Flying Dutchman.

"What——," began Jones. "How——" gasped Brown, who was stout and unpleasantly conscious of something ridiculous in the whole proceeding.

"Oh," quavered the feminine rider, who was not young and not fair: "oh, how can I ever thank you! Oh, my goodness, what a scare! I can ride, you know—just learned—but I can't turn round, and I can't mount and I can't stop my wheel, and I was getting farther away from home every minute, and, oh, dear, what would I have done if——"

Jones coughed. In her excitement the distressed lady was reposing against his shirt front. It was a fresh shirt front, and her sot disturbed him.

"Shall we get you started for home?" queried Brown, who always had presence of mind.

"Oh, if you would," said the distressed lady, and then the two reputable citizens put her on her wheel, turned it around, pushed her half a block, and saw her disappear in the darkness, leaving a trail of inarticulate gasps, thanks, protests, and exclamations in her wake.

Silence fell over Lake avenue. Brown and Jones stuffed their handkerchiefs into their collars and looked at each other meditatively. Suddenly Brown went into convulsions. He grabbed Jones's arm.

"How," he stuttered, "how I say, is that fool woman going to stop when she does get home?"

Then they sat down on the curbstone to recover; and incidentally to calculate whether the woman who hadn't learned how to make the wheel stop going round would eventually reach the North pole or be drowned in Lake Superior.

"And yet," Brown says scornfully when he tells the adventure, "yet some misguided mortals claim that women have sense enough to vote and decide the fate of the nation. Humph!"

The way he says "humph" makes the hearer wither right away—if the hearer is a woman.—Chicago Daily News.

The Spread of English.

The rapid spread of English is largely to be attributed to the simplicity of its grammar, which is less complicated than that of any other other western nation. Its marked poverty of inflections, as distinguished, for example, from the German, is a great point in its favor, and thus it is much easier for a German to learn English than for an Englishman or American to learn German. On the other hand, the extraordinary orthographic inconsistency of the language is a decided drawback, and there is little doubt that if English were written on phonetic principles as Spanish or German, its spread would be much more rapid, to say nothing of the great boon this would be to the Anglo-Saxons themselves, who spend years of unnecessary toil in learning to read and write their own language.

It is not likely, however, that any change will be made in this direction in the near future, at least in England, for the English as a nation are noted for their conservative habits, and, although they recognize the great advantages of a phonetic system, are in no hurry to adopt it. Any change in this respect must probably be looked for to America, where a few innovations have been already introduced. Thus, the spelling "vigor," "favor," "honor," etc. Other more recent forms, as "program," and "catalog" are already well established in America, but have found little favor in English.

Russian Officials Fear Turtle Doves.

Most people regard the turtle dove as an ideally innocent creature, but the Russian Minister of War evidently looks upon it as a positive danger to the stability of the Czar's dominions. A lady prestidigitator from the Folies-Bergere in Paris was traveling to St. Petersburg to fulfill an engagement in that city. Along with her she carried a number of turtle doves for professional purposes, but on reaching the Russian frontier, these were seized in virtue of the war minister's order—really aimed at the suppression of carrier pigeons—prohibiting the introduction of any kind of pigeon on any pretext whatever. Prayers and expostulations were in vain, but it is pleasing to think that the general commandant of the town gallantly undertook to take good care of the birds until their owner should regross the frontier.—Westminster Gazette.

When the Mother Hubbard toilet was abroad in the land, one small Ohio town distinguished itself forever by passing a law prohibiting the wearer of the gown outside of house limits. And the landlady of a small village inn in England has handed herself down to posterity in similar fashion by refusing to let two women guests, clad in knickerbocker suits, sit down to dinner in her public coffee room.

AT WASHINGTON.

THE HOT WEATHER COSTUME AND THE HOT WEATHER TEMPER.

White Flannel Suits Worn by Congressmen. Senator Hill and Other Members of the Upper House in Warm Debate. Armor Plate and Immigration.

Washington may not be the hottest place in North America in summer, but it is hot enough; and when the mercury gets away up among the nineties the statesmen begin to think more of comfort than of legislation. The ways they take to obtain it are various, the white flannel suit marking the most extreme effort so far noted on the part of perspiring Congressmen.

There was a time when no one would have dared to violate the traditions of Congress requiring members to envelop themselves in the formal frock coat; but cooler garb now passes muster, although the Washington papers usually gibe the Congressmen when they first put on their summer outfits, and refer to the dignified days of the past when a Senator would have melted rather than clothe himself in the variegated garb of the summer resort dude who puts the butterfly to blush and eclipses the rainbow colors.

One of the earliest and most astonishing iconoclasts in the clothes' evolution, or revolution, was Tom Reed, the big man from Maine, who appeared in the Speaker's chair with a sash about his ample waist. At that time his daring act rippled the whole surface of official society, even if it did not stir the depths of it. Some of the sticklers for dignity were shocked to the point of panic; but the calm counter of quorums was not disturbed, and tradition yielded to the sash. Now, if it cannot truly be said that, in the matter of summer garb "everything goes," it would be hard to name anything against which the congressional doors would close.

The effect of the hot weather was especially observable when Senator Hill made his three hours' speech against the Income Tax. His linen was in a state of limp confusion, and the Senator himself showed the effect of the heat. Perhaps to the weather may be, in part, referred the disregard of the amenities of debate that have marked some of the recent speeches. Senator Hill, one of the coolest of debaters, told Senator Harris, with some warmth, that plantation manners would not do in the United States Senate, and warned him that cracking the whip was not a useful part to play. Mr. Hill also referred to Mr. Gorman as "the great compromiser," and called attention to "the spirit of conciliation" which had "always marked the course" of that astute gentleman. This last remark may not look bad in print, but its significance is known to every Senator and to every person who has knowledge of Mr. Gorman's character, and there need not be any doubt that the Maryland man has cut a fresh notch upon the stick which represents the sum of his grievances against the senior New York Senator.

Among the most belligerent and entertaining, however, have been Senator Chandler, and Senator Allen, of Nebraska. Mr. Chandler, in a brief debate, charged that the Populist Senator was dickering for the exchange of his vote, a remark to which Mr. Allen subsequently retorted by likening Mr. Chandler to a baboon. To this the New Hampshire Senator replied by saying:

"So far as the Senator from Nebraska is concerned, referring to the term which he used, I regret, Mr. President, that I have discovered that the surroundings of the Senator from Nebraska before he entered this body were such as not to allow him to observe those courtesies which all gentlemen regard even in the heat of the most partisan debate. The Senator from Nebraska, Mr. President, is to be pitied, and not censured, for that which he could not help."

Not everybody seems to know that Ellen Terry's first husband was Mr. George Frederic Watts, the eminent and veteran Royal Academician, still living, and past seventy. His superb picture "Love and Life" he has given to the American people, and it will hang in the White House at Washington.

The armor plate investigations, an unsuccessful and then a successful test of heavy Harveyized armor, have combined with other matters to keep the naval contingent more or less excited lately. Something that many naval officers are talking about is the recent test of giant projectiles. In the test mentioned a thirteen inch Carpenter projectile weighing half a ton went clear through a seventeen inch nickel steel plate with its customary backing, and after ploughing through the sand butts against which the plate was bedded was finally recovered unbroken and to all intents as good as new in the woods 500 yards away. This remarkable performance shows what a tremendous engine of destruction the United States has secured in its thirteen inch gun, which has rather aptly been named the "Peacemaker." These shells weighed 1,100 pounds each, and it is thought from their behavior that the "Peacemaker" could drive them through the greatest battleship ever built.

The immigration question is one that Congress always has with it, and every Immigration Committee has new ideas as to the best means for dealing with the matter. The Existing Committee has been to New York, and the members came back with assorted opinions on the subject of immigrants. Representative McDowell, of Pennsylvania, a Republican said: "The only way to restrict immigration properly is to provide for a thorough consular inspection of immigrants before they embark on the other side. It is very hard on a man to ship him back home after he has arrived here, and it is evident that the officers sometimes strain a point to let him through. I would not do away with inspectors at this end, however, and would make a severe penalty for shipowners who bring people not qualified to land. Representative Paschal, of Texas, a Democrat, said: "My impressions from what we saw are that the law needs amendment in several particulars in order to break up the 'padrone' system which, to a greater or less extent, exists. Immigration has fallen off in a marked degree, and I think, on the whole, a better class of immigrants is coming over. It will take time and careful observation so to amend and perfect our immigration laws as fairly to exclude the undesirable classes and yet not unduly exclude the industrious, honest immigrant who intends to become assimilated with our institution's best traditions." But how will Mr. Paschal frame a law so arcadian as to just shut all the bad immigrants out, while letting all the good ones in? Something more than statesmanship is required for that. It is a job for infallibility.

FISTS AND A KNIFE USED IN ROWDY SHINDIES.

Notorious Jim Frisbie Knocks Out an Irishman—Joe Green Stabs John Morecraft — A Drunken Painter Takes a Nap in a Brook.

Ex-dogcatcher Frisbie "laid out" Dinnis Murray in the Arlington Hotel Saturday night at 11. The fight between the Negro and the Irishman was rather one-sided. It started from an encounter a short time ago, when Dennis was set upon and his face washed with a black stain. A short time after that, says Frisbie, Murray asked the dogcatcher if he had done it. Frisbie said Yes, "just for a joke". The two have not been friendly since. Murray had been drinking Saturday night, and called Frisbie out of the bar-room and began to talk to him, being supported by four other white men. Then they followed Frisbie back. After more conversation Frisbie got mad, and claims that he made a strike for William Emmons's head. At any rate Murray received the blow on the chin, and was made insensible. His chin was badly cut. He came to shortly. Frisbie ran out and went down Somerset street. Officer Wilson met him, but knew nothing of the fight and so did not arrest him. Special Officer William Wyckoff arrived too late to catch the dogcatcher.

Charles Boynton, a colored man who lives on Plainfield avenue near South Plainfield, was arrested by Marshal Lines yesterday morning at 2. He was found drunk and disorderly on Westervelt avenue near the house of Alfred Hankerson. Hankerson promised to go to court this morning and make a more serious charge against Boynton, but did not appear. It is said by some that Hankerson was to blame in the matter, not Boynton. This morning in the borough court, Boynton acknowledged that he had been intoxicated, and was fined $5 with a choice of ten days in the County Jail by Borough Magistrate Crosley. He had $2.50, and thought he could raise the rest, so he was held in the lockup, awaiting the coming of the money.

John Morecraft, Thomas Stevens and Joseph Green became engaged in a row on Somerset street, on the borough side of the bridge at 9 yesterday morning. Everything had been quiet at 8 when Acting Chief Marshal VanHorn was there. Morecraft was stabbed in the left breast with a pen-knife which Green used in the struggle. Chief Grant appearing on the city sideof the bridge the three men ran away. Morecraft was caught in the city later in the day and turned over to the borough police. His stab-wound was a gash an inch long and about two inches deep. This morning he was released, as it could not be proved that he was the offender in the fight. Those who witnessed the affair could not be found in time to testify in the borough court this morning.

Charles Cashen was in the City Court this morning, and later went to Elizabeth for a stay of 20 days. He was arrested late last night by Policeman Frederickson for being drunk and disorderly.

Peter Dunn of Brooklyn came to town with Robert Spooner yesterday. At 11 last night Policeman Cooney from the corner of Front and Somerset streets heard swearing in the distance. He went to Jim Babbitt's pool room on East Front street, and found Spooner and Dunn on the piazza. Dunn was doing the swearing, and was promptly gathered in by the policeman. This morning Spooner paid Dunn's $3 fine.

A Plainfield painter who wandered along Stiger's late Saturday night became weary, and walking into the race, went to sleep in the water. The alcohol on his breath floated him, and Good Samaritan Miner of the alley saw him and pulled him out before he had time to get restless and roll under. Mrs. Kate Vermeule then cared for the tired painted and directed him to his home.

HIS TOOLS WERE GONE.

And Even Payment for Them Did Not Satisfy.

This morning at the Climax Bottle Stopper factory while C. T. Nightingale was giving directions to the working force, Ralph W. Jorres who had until recently been employed there appeared and demanded the return of some of his tools which he had left.

Mr. Nightingale disclaimed any knowledge of the tools, and asked Jorres how much they were worth, and, learning, he paid Jorres the amount asked for. Jorres thereupon abused and threatened Mr. Nightingale.

Judge Moore happened to be present and heard the threats, and on his affidavit, substantiating Nightingale's complaint, the offender was apprehended by Chief Grant and on a hearing before Justice Mosher held in $200 bonds to keep the peace and appear before the October Grand Jury. John Vetterlein gave security.

Had Heard of the Netherwood Yacht Club.

The New York Herald gave an entertaining letter from the pen of the resort prince, Col. J. Aug. Hinchman, Sunday, chronicling the season's successes of the hotel prince, F. E. Millet. This was all very fine, as becomes Col. Hinchman and the famous hostelry where the wealth and fashion of the metropolis assemble each Summer. But the Herald headwriter must have been hearing some of the tales of the Netherwood Yacht Club, or possibly the rumor that the Heights were to be made a port of entry for star-route sea-going mails, for as an initial letter he inserted the picture of a miss with her skirts rolled up to her thighs, to save them from the wet waves surging over the Netherwood beach where lay her tin pail, shovel, and play pile of sand.

Suffered, Soaked, Shot.

A dog ran through Spooner avenue yesterday morning at 10, frothing at the mouth and acting as if it were mad. It ran into the yard by Ayres Brothers' vegetable market, where a pail of water was thrown on it. Running to the avenue again, the animal was shot by A. Q. Fine.

CHASING A DERBY.

An Employer Unwillingly Pays for His Hired Man's Vacation.

Charles Derby, a driver who has lived in Plainfield and vicinity for many years, is being sought for by his late employer, Silas Williams of Washingtonville. For several months Derby has worked for Williams as a teamster. No money was due him for his work Saturday night, but he prevailed upon his employer to advance him $10. He said he wished to buy clothing.

Then he hastened to Plainfield, and took upon himself the job of making collections for Mr. Williams from people whom he knew owed him for carting. Soon he had about $50, as near as Mr. Williams can calculate from investigation among his customers. Then, finding himself with $60 in his possession, Derby left town. Mr. Williams says he is as anxious to find him as he is to recover his money.

NEW LIGHT ON THE REVOLUTION.

Jerseymen and New Yorkers Sneered at Washington, and Begrudged What Independence Cost.

Historian Appleton Morgan has been asked to answer the "Westfield" letters published in The Daily Press, and cleverly evades replying while giving a scholarly and interesting statement of local events in the Revolution. He concludes:

"It interests me to know that our town is mentioned in the only account we have of the last affair between armed parties on New Jersey soil, and that the name was spelled, in 1780, as it is now, 'Westfield.'

"In conclusion, I should like to say that there two very common errors in regard to our Revolution. One of them is that the whole country at the outbreak of the Revolution was poor. It was not. In this vicinity, especially New York city, the State of New Jersey and Philadelphia, there was a great deal of wealth. Indeed, you remember, that Lord North's first project to tax the Colonies was urged on the fact that the Colonies were rich, and that they ought to help bear the expenses of England's continental wars.

"The second error is that the war of the Revolution was a popular war—that everybody went in for it. On the contrary it was a very unpopular war. There were some 2,500,000 inhabitants in the Colonies at the beginning of hostilities. But the largest army Washington ever commanded was 25,000 men, and in a week or two this dwindled to 17,000, and for the rest of the seven years it is doubtful if he ever commanded more than 3,000 or 4,000 men at once. The fact is, that almost everybody hung on to their possessions, and even to the date of Yorktown either spoke of Washington's troops as raggamuffins and tattered rebels, or else carefully concealed their opinions. Up to the last, Washington fought a fire in the rear, which belittled his success, hooted at his defeats, and almost the entire press was Torry, and jeered and prophesied daily, that he would be 'hung as high as Haman'. All the more honor, then, to the faithful few who followed him in faith and hunger and rags, to the end."

SPREADING HER FAME.

The Old Bay State Learning of Plainfield's Glories.

The Revere, Mass., Journal in its report of the National Editorial Convention says:

"Plainfield is one of the wealthiest towns in New Jersey and many New York business men reside there. It is a city of beautiful homes, fine shaded streets and splendid drives. It was settled by the Quakers in 1735 and during the Revolution General Washington used 'The Rock', a prominent point on the Orange Mountains, just southwest of the town, to make observations of the movements of the British Army.

"The Walter Scott & Co. printing machinery works are located here and it was a treat to most of those present to inspect the many fine pieces of printing machinery on exhibition. Luncheon was served in Scott's new building, after which a delightful drive about the town was given all who desired."

COMMUTERS COLUMN.

Jersey Central commuters have a Summer blessing that is denied all others—the refreshing trip across Newark Bay.

What makes a man mad is to find that his train has been baking in the sun in the yards all the afternoon and that the windows are all glued fast.

The Press has prayed repeatedly for the reform which Westfield's Pearsall now hammers at:

Unquestionably the Jersey Central Railroad is one of the best roads in the country. We think, after traveling over almost every road in the country, that it is without exception the best road, as far as it goes, in the United States, which is another way of saying that we think it is the best in the world; since the United States is acknowledged by world trotters to have the best roads in the world. Yet is it not passing strange that the Jersey Central officials (Mr. Olhausen is the man, really,) should be so short-sighted as to roast their patrons in the Jersey City train house, all for the want of opening the great windows that line the train house on either side for a thousand feet, coaxing the sun blasts and shutting out God's fresh air that blows up from the bay.

Crescent Cyclers Find Rocky Racing Away from Home—Changes in List of Events—Peculiar Course of the Labor Day Race—Track Talk and Wheeling Gossip.

Entries for the handicap races of the 18th close August 11, and for the other events August 15.

An Italian laborer who could n't tell the difference between a membership ticket and a single admission pass was in sole charge of the Crescent track Saturday afternoon.

A cycler from Newark who tried to cover Union and a large portion of Middlesex counties yesterday on his wheel was overcome with the heat when he reached Plainfield, and had to be taken home by train.

Henry Scott was attending to the injuries of his brother Monte at Manhattan Field Saturday, when the finals of his races were run off, and so did not ride in either. He had qualified in both the mile and the half-mile handicaps.

The Crescents have changed the order and the events for their meet of August 15. The corrected list is as follows: 1-mile novice, 1-mile handicap, 2 3-mile scratch, 1-mile scratch (boys under 16), 2-mile lap race, 1-mile 2:30 class, 2-mile handicap.

A number of Crescent members witnessed the racing of Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs on Manhattan Field Saturday afternoon. The difference in safety and speed of the New York track and the Plainfield course was the most noticeable thing about the racing to all of them.

The Associated Cycling Club's twenty-five-mile road race Labor Day is to have a peculiar course. It will be started from Elizabeth, on Morris avenue, ride to Springfield, to Westfield, to Rahway, and back to Elizabeth, then make a turn on Rahway avenue, near Cherry street, and return to Rahway, to the finish line. This will necessitate transferring the officials from Elizabeth to Rahway after the race has started. The start will be made at 11 a. m.

Ex-President John Traynor, William O'Connor and Matthew Cashin of the Lyceum Cyclers went riding on their wheels yesterday afternoon. When near Bound Brook Traynor's tire struck a spike. No repair traps were at hand, and Traynor walked home alone. The others rode. Traynor is in training for the Diocesan Union field day events of August 11, and is now thought to have a good chance in the walking match as well as in the bicycle races.

In Port Jervis Friday, Monte Scott of the Crescents, Frank Doupe of the Kings County Wheelmen and E. L. Blauvelt of the Elizabeth Athletic Club, who were on a trip with Secretary Teel, each won a first and a second prize. Blauvelt gave a complimentary exhibition mile in 2:19, and Scott an exhibition half mile in 1:05½. The track was an old trotting track which had not been used for five years. The cycling spirit having been aroused, the local sports pulled the weeds from the track, hoed it down, and started in as promoters of wheel working. Scott's and Blauvelt's performances are records from which the racing there will start.

On the wretched Manhattan Field track Saturday Monte Scott of the Crescents took third prize in the one-mile scratch, 2:30 class, finishing half a length behind Fred Boyce. Scot was third in his heat in the one-mile handicap, but did not ride into place in the final, as he fell with 16 others and was quite severely bruised. Rydell rode without being successful in the one-mile and the two-mile handicaps. In the two-mile handicap Cuming from 130 yards rode a good race, and thought he had a place in the final, as he had saved himself and finished fourth. It was decided that the condition of the track would not permit of the safe riding of more than two from each heat, so he was not allowed to try in the final heat. Line rode in the mile handicap, but he had not practised on the track, and did not understand how to reach the comparatively safe portions of it, and soon dropped out.

FITTING ACCOUNTS, NOW.

Plumbers Take a Vacation Opportunity to Look After the Money They Have Made.

A receiver has been appointed for the firm of Zimmerman & Brown of Newark at the request of the senior partner and without opposition from the junior, who is Isaac F. Brown of Watchung avenue, Plainfield. The firm went into the business of plumbing and steam fitting only in 1865. In 1876 they began to manufacture celluloid emery wheels on a large scale. Six or seven years ago the firm bought out a tenant who was in the laundry business, and conducted it in addition to the other ventures.

It is said that all of the branches were prosperous; but when an examination of the books was made a few months ago it was shown that in the last seven years a business of $260,714 79 had been done, and that the expenses were $289,215 98.

Mr Brown did the bookkeeping at his home in Plainfield. Mr. Z'mmerman sa'd that he was sure that he had not overdrawn his account. The deficiency does not affect the standing of the firm, as the property in Newark alone is worth three or four times as much as the liabilities, which are said to be only $12,000.

Chancellor VanFleet Saturday appointed James E. Howell receiver. It is understood that Mr. Z mmerman will put in a claim for $50,000 and enter suit for it.

WEST END NOTES.

Harry McComas of Prescott place leaves this week for Harrisburg, Pa., to be gone the remainder of the Summer.

William Crater of Newark paid a visit to his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Foose, of South Second street. Friday.

Harry Foose, after a pleasant two-weeks visit with friends and relatives in the West End, left for his home in Poughkeepsie, Saturday.

The Street Railway Company did a big business yesterday, as was shown by the attendance at the colored camp meeting. At one trip car No 3 carried 71 passengers.

A new sidewalk has been put down on West Front street, leading from Grant avenue to Evona. Now pedestrians can enjoy a fine walk instead of taking to the middle of the road.

Samuel Howarth, who was injured in Bound Brook several weeks ago, is getting along as nicely as can be expected. He was able to leave the hospital yesterday and take a short walk.

A YOUNG GIRL'S FORTUNE.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

Nothing appeals so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter just budding into womanhood. Following is an instance: "Our daughter Blanche, now 15 years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. She was in such a condition that we had to keep her from school and abandon her music lessons. In fact, we feared St. Vitus dance, and are positive but for an invaluable remedy she would have had that terrible affliction. We had employed physicians, but she received no benefit from them. The first of last August she weighed but 75 pounds, and although she has taken nearly three bottles of Nervine she now weighs 105 pounds; her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and studies with comfort and ease. She has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid, and no money could procure for our daughter the health Dr. Miles' Nervine has brought her.

When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines, and would not listen to him, but as a last resort he sent us a bottle, we began giving it to Blanche, and the effect was almost immediate."—Mrs. E. E. Bullock, Brighton, N. Y.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express charges paid. Positively free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

BURNED ON ELECTRIC WIRES.

NEW YORK, July 30—Michael Ennis, a tinsmith, while at work this morning repairing a cornice on the building No. 307 Third avenue, fell upon a network of electric light wires and before he could be removed was terribly burned about the head and body. Two men who tried to lift him from the wires also received severe electric shocks.

Father Goth was taken ill Saturday and did not officiate in St. John's Church yesterday. The church was obliged to send to Trenton for a priest.

Dr. Manning of Plainfield was called to Dunellen Saturday to attend Charles Richardson, porter at the Park Hotel, who became suddenly ill. The patient is now out again.

The residents of Dunellen in the vicinity of Rock avenue and Front street wish The Press to call attention to the condition of the pond which has been drained and left in such a bad condition. A great deal of illness has resulted therefrom, and the people think the difficulty should be remedied. The matter is said to come under the jurisdiction of the Plainfield Board of Health, and something should be done to end the horrible stench arising from this place. It being situated near the road makes it a very unpleasant place to pass.

Miss Eleanor Underwood of Crescent avenue left Saturday for Stonington, Conn., to visit the daughter of ex-Mayor Gilbert Collins of Jersey City, who is spending the Summer there.

STORY TELLING FOR PROFIT.

A Vocation Which Serves to Earn a Livelihood.

The information has just been spread abroad that a new avenue toward earning a livelihood has opened itself to women. A young English woman has lately become a professional story teller and goes about to country houses in the guise of a guest to amuse her companions on rainy afternoons. The idea is a good one, but by no means new, and the fact that the just mentioned young woman is the first person known publicly to follow the calling, at least out of the orient, does not prove her to be specially original, for the heroine of one of Thomas Hardy's novels —"The Hand of Ethelberta," if recollection serves—earns her living by means of her impromptu narrative powers and indeed supports her whole family by exercising her enviable faculty in the houses of her wealthy friends. However, if the real story teller did get her notion from Mr. Hardy, it is nothing against her, and it is to be hoped that she will be successful enough to make the spinning of yarns a recognized calling, provided the public will refuse to accept any except first class entertainment. We all like to read stories of adventure and supernatural incident, and we even like to hear tales that we have already read recited by an elocution-ist. How much pleasanter it will be to have original tales told us, with all the natural inflections of tenderness, pathos, fury and horror which we have to imagine in our reading! There are persons who can talk very cleverly and tell a joke or story to admiration, but who, when requested to write the same things for publication, are utterly at a loss and cannot set down a word. From the ranks of these individuals the corps of professional story tellers should be recruited, for there is no reason why spoken narratives should have no market value while written ones have a recognized price. A ready tongue is one of the most desirable gifts that nature can bestow, but heretofore it has been of little practical value unless the possessor became a lecturer or political speaker. If women who possess the power of invention and flowing speech will take pains to qualify themselves and put conscientious effort into their preparation, they ought to make a great success of the new profession and will be more to be envied than actors and actresses, for the latter sway their auditors through the medium of other persons' thoughts, while the story teller's influence is entirely personal.

COSTUME OF SUEDE BENGALINE.

The costume shown is of suede bengaline. The draped skirt opens over a panel of white embroidered gauze and is tied by a knot of moss green moire. The blouse corsage has a long basque and is gathered to a yoke of bias bands of moire and plaited gauze. The balloon sleeves are of suede bengaline, the full epaulets of moire over gauze.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

WHAT JOB KNEW ABOUT DENTISTRY AND THE ENAMEL OF TEETH.

Dr. Talmage Chooses a Unique Text and Constructs a Sermon of Rare Power. Job's Escape by "the Skin of His Teeth." Promises That Never Die.

BROOKLYN, July 29.—Rev. Dr. Talmage has selected as the subject for his sermon for today through the press "Narrow Escapes," the text being taken from Job xix, 20, "I am escaped with the skin of my teeth."

Job had it hard. What with boils and bereavements and bankruptcy and a fool of a wife he wished he was dead, and I do not blame him. His flesh was gone, and his bones were dry. His teeth wasted away until nothing but the enamel seemed left. He cries out, "I am escaped with the skin of my teeth."

There has been some difference of opinion about this passage. St. Jerome and Schultens and Drs. Good and Poole and Barnes have all tried their forceps on Job's teeth. You deny my interpretation and say, "What did Job know about the enamel of the teeth?" He knew everything about it. Dental surgery is almost as old as the earth. The mummies of Egypt, thousands of years old, are found today with gold filling in their teeth. Ovid and Horace and Solomon and Moses wrote about these important factors of the body. To other provoking complaints Job, I think, has added an exasperating toothache, and putting his hand against the inflamed face he says, "I am escaped with the skin of my teeth."

A very narrow escape, you say, for Job's body and soul, but there are thousands of men who make just as narrow escape from their soul. There was a time when the partition between them and ruin was no thicker than a tooth's enamel, but as Job finally escaped so have they. Thank God! Thank God!

Saved as by Fire.

Paul expresses the same idea by a different figure when he says that some people are "saved as by fire." A vessel at sea is in flames. You go to the stern of the vessel. The boats have shoved off. The flames advance. You can endure the heat no longer on your face. You slide down on the side of the vessel and hold on with your fingers until the forked tongue of the fire begins to lick the back of your hand, and you feel that you must fall, when one of the lifeboats comes back, and the passengers say they think they have room for one more. The boat swings under you; you drop into it; you are saved. So many men are pursued by temptation until they are partially consumed, but after all get off, "saved as by fire." But I like the figure of Job a little better than that of Paul, because the pulpit has not worn it out, and I want to show you, if God will help, that some men make narrow escape for their souls and are saved as "with the skin of their teeth."

It is as easy for some people to look to the cross as for you to look to this pulpit. Mild, gentle, tractable, loving, you expect them to become Christians. You go over to the store and say, "Grandon joined the church yesterday." Your business comrades say: "That is just what might have been expected. He always was of that turn of mind." In youth this person whom I describe was always good. He never broke things. He never laughed when it was improper to laugh. At 7 he could sit an hour in church perfectly quiet, looking neither to the right hand nor to the left, but straight into the eyes of the minister, as though he understood the whole discussion about the eternal decrees. He never upset things nor lost them. He floated into the kingdom of God so gradually that it is uncertain just when the matter was decided.

Here is another one, who started in life with an uncontrollable spirit. He kept the nursery in an uproar. His mother found him walking on the edge of the house roof to see if he could balance himself. There was no horse he dared not ride; no tree he could not climb. His boyhood was a long series of predicaments. His manhood was reckless; his middle life very wayward. But now he is converted, and you go over to the store and say, "Arkwright joined the church yesterday." Your friends say: "It is not possible! You must be joking!" You say: "No. I tell you the truth. He joined the church." Then they reply, "There is hope for any of us if old Arkwright has become a Christian!"

By the Skin of Your Teeth.

In other words, we all admit that it is more difficult for some men to accept the gospel than for others.

I may be addressing some who have cut loose from churches and Bibles and Sundays, and who have at present no intention of becoming Christians themselves, but just to see what is going on, and yet you may find yourself escaping, before you hear the end, as "with the skin of your teeth." I do not expect to waste this hour. I have seen boats go off from Cape May or Long Branch and drop their nets, and after awhile come ashore, pulling in the nets without having caught a single fish. It was not a good day, or they had not the right kind of a net. But we expect no such excursion today. The water is full of fish; the wind is in the right direction; the gospel net is strong. O thou who didst help Simon and Andrew to fish, show us today how to cast the net on the right side of the ship!

Some of you in coming to God will have to run against skeptical notions. It is useless for people to say sharp and cutting things to those who reject the Christian religion. I cannot say such things. By what process of temptation or trial or betrayal you have come to your present state I know not. There are two gates to your nature—the gate of the head and the gate of the heart. The gate of your head is locked with bolts and bars that an archangel could not break, but the gate of your heart swings easily on its hinges. If I assaulted your body with weapons, you would meet me with weapons, and it would be sword stroke for sword stroke, and wound for wound, and blood for blood, but if I come and knock at the door of your house you open it and give me the best seat in your parlor. If I should come at you today with an argument, you would answer me with an argument; if with sarcasm, you would answer me with sarcasm, blow for blow, stroke for stroke, but when I come and knock at the door of your heart you open it and say, "Come in, my brother, and tell me all you know about Christ and heaven."

Three Questions.

Listen to two or three questions: Are you as happy as you used to be when you believed in the truth of the Christian religion? Would you like to have your children travel on in the road in which you are now traveling? You had a relative who professed to be a Christian and was thoroughly consistent, living and dying in the faith of the gospel. Would you not like to live the same quiet life and die the same peaceful death? I received a letter sent me by one who has rejected the Christian religion. It says, "I am old enough to know that the joys and pleasures of life are evanescent, and to realize the fact that it must be comfortable in old age to believe in something relative to the future and to have a faith in some system that proposes to save. I am free to confess that I would be happier if I could exercise the simple and beautiful faith that is possessed by many whom I know. I am not willingly out of the church or out of the faith. My state of uncertainty is one of unrest. Sometimes I doubt my immortality and look upon the deathbed as the closing scene, after which there is nothing. What shall I do that I have not done?" Ah, skepticism is a dark and doleful land! Let me say that this Bible is either true or false. If it be false, we are as well off as you. If it be true, then which of us is safer?

Let me also ask whether your trouble has not been that you confounded Christianity with the inconsistent character of some who profess it. You are a lawyer. In your profession there are mean and dishonest men. Is that anything against the law? You are a doctor. There are unskilled and contemptible men in your profession. Is that anything against medicine? You are a merchant. There are thieves and defrauders in your business. Is that anything against merchandise? Behold, then, the unfairness of charging upon Christianity the wickedness of its disciples! We admit some of the charges against those who profess religion. Some of the most gigantic swindles of the present day have been carried on by members of the church. There are men in the churches who would not be trusted for $5 without good collateral security. They leave their business dishonesties in the vestibule of the church as they go in and sit at the communion. Having concluded the sacrament, they get up, wipe the wine from their lips, go out and take up their sins where they left off. To serve the devil is their regular work; to serve God, a sort of play spell. With a Sunday sponge they expect to wipe off from their business slate all the past week's inconsistencies. You have no more right to take such a man's life as a specimen of religion than you have to take the twisted irons and split timbers that lie on the beach at Coney Island as a specimen of an American ship. It is time that we drew a line between religion and the frailties of those who profess it.

A Righteous Indignation.

Again, there may be some of you who in the attempt after a Christian life will have to run against powerful passions and appetites. Perhaps it is a disposition to anger that you have to contend against, and perhaps, while in a very serious mood, you hear of something that makes you feel that you must swear or die. I know of a Christian man who was once so exasperated that he said to a mean customer, "I cannot swear at you myself, for I am a member of the church, but if you will go down stairs my partner in business will swear at you."

All your good resolutions heretofore have been torn to tatters by explosions of temper. Now there is no harm in getting mad if you only get mad at sin. You need to bridle and saddle these hot breathed passions, and with them ride down injustice and wrong. There are a thousand things in the world that we ought to be mad at. There is no harm in getting redhot if you only bring to the forge that which needs hammering. A man who has no power of righteous indignation is an imbecile. But be sure it is a righteous indignation and not a petulancy that blurs and unravels and depletes the soul.

There is a large class of persons in middle life who have still in them appetites that were aroused in early manhood, at a time when they prided themselves on being a "little fast," "high livers," "free and easy," "hail fellows well met." They are now paying in compound interest for troubles they collected 20 years ago. Some of you are trying to escape, and you will—yet very narrowly, "as with the skin of your teeth." God and your own soul only know what the struggle is. Omnipotent grace has pulled out many a soul that was deeper in the mire than you are. They line the beach of heaven—the multitude whom God has rescued from the thrall of suicidal habits. If you this day turn your back on the wrong and start anew, God will help you. Oh, the weakness of human help! Men will sympathize for awhile and then turn you off. If you ask for their pardon, they will give it and say they will try you again; but, falling away again under the power of temptation, they cast you off forever. But God forgives seventy times seven; yea, seven hundred times; yea, though this be the ten thousandth time he is more earnest, more sympathetic, more helpful this last time than when you took your first misstep.

If, with all the influences favorable for a right life, men make so many mistakes, how much harder it is when, for instance, some appetite thrusts its iron grapple into the roots of the tongue and pulls a man down with hands of destruction! If, under such circumstances, he break away, there will be no sport in the undertaking, no holiday enjoyment, but a struggle in which the wrestlers move from side to side and bend and twist and watch for an opportunity to get in a heavier stroke, until with one final effort, in which the muscles are distended, and the veins stand out, and the blood starts, the swarthy habit falls under the knee of the victor—escaped at last as with the skin of his teeth.

A Trial Asked.

In the last day it will be found that Hugh Latimer and John Knox and Huss and Ridley were not the greatest martyrs, but Christian men who went up incorrupt from the contaminations and perplexities of Wall street, Water street, Pearl street, Broad street, State street, Third street, Lombard street and the bourse. On earth they were called brokers or stockjobbers, or retailers or importers, but in heaven Christian heroes. No fagots were heaped about their feet, no inquisition demanded from them recantation, no soldier aimed a spike at their heart, but they had mental tortures, compared with which all physical consuming is as the breath of a spring morning.

I find in the community a large class of men who have been so cheated, so lied about, so outrageously wronged that they have lost faith in everything. In a world where everything seems so topsy turvy they do not see how there can be any God. They are confounded and frenzied and misanthropic. Elaborate argument to prove to them the truth of Christianity or the truth of anything else touches them nowhere. Hear me, all such men. I preach to you no rounded periods, no ornamental discourse, but I put my hand on your shoulder and invite you into the peace of the gospel. Here is a rock on which you may stand firm, though the waves dash against it harder than the Atlantic pitching its surf clear above Eddystone lighthouse. Do not charge upon God all these troubles of the world. As long as the world stuck to God God stuck to the world, but the earth seceded from his government, and hence all these outrages and all these woes. God is good. For many hundreds of years he has been coaxing the world to come back to him, but the more he has coaxed the more violent have men been in their resistance, and they have stepped back and stepped back until they have dropped into ruin.

Try this God, ye who have had the bloodhounds after you, and who have thought that God had forgotten you. Try him and see if he will not help. Try him and see if he will not pardon. Try him and see if he will not save. The flowers of spring have no bloom so sweet as the flowering of Christ's affections. The sun hath no warmth compared with the glow of his heart. The waters have no refreshment like the fountain that will slake the thirst of thy soul. At the moment the reindeer stands with his lip and nostril thrust into the cool mountain torrent the hunter may be coming through the thicket. Without crackling a stick under his foot, he comes close by the stag, aims his gun, draws the trigger, and the poor thing rears in its death agony and falls backward, its antlers crashing on the rocks, but the panting heart that drinks from the water brooks of God's promise shall never be fatally wounded and shall never die.

NEW EVIDENCE

Of Dr. Lighthill's Success.

A Flattering Testimonial From Col. John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

10 ARLINGTON PLACE, Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

A HAPPY EXPERIENCE.

The Interesting Testimony of Mr. W. E. Dilts, the Popular Passenger Conductor of the N. J. Central.

ROSELLE, N. J., July 1, 1894.

To My Friends and the Public:

I take pleasure in calling public attention to the remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case. For the past ten years I had been afflicted with a severe form of piles which finally gave me the greatest pain and distress nearly all the time, and from which I could not obtain any relief, in spite of all my efforts.

Hearing of a number of cures which Dr. Lighthill effected in similar cases, I placed myself under his care, and I rejoice to say he effected a complete cure in my case and gave me new life in doing so, for I am sure that I could not have endured my misery much longer. And it will be a matter of importance to those who are suffering from this disease to learn the happy fact that Dr. Lighthill effected my cure without giving me pain or detaining me from work.

W. E. DILTS.

A Card from Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

Of No. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time I found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose grateful testimonial is in Dr. Lighthill's possession.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,

JAPAN THE AGGRESSOR

China Awaiting the Arrival of Vessels and Arms.

Further Details of the Sinking of the Kow Shing and the Loss of 2,000 Lives—According to the Stories the Japs Acted in a Most Fiendish and Barbarous Manner.

SHANGHAI, July 31.—It is understood that China will not formally declare war until the vessels and ammunition which she has ordered abroad shall have been got safely into Chinese ports.

The transports, Mee Foo and Toonan, which the Chinese feared had been captured, have arrived at Chee Foo. Sixty torpedoes were sent up the Kian-Gyin channel of the Yang-tse-Kiang.

The 41 survivors of the Kow Shing disaster, who were picked up and landed at Che-Foo by the French gunboat Lion, tell a story differing in a few details from previous accounts of the Kow Shing's end.

When the Japanese began the attack, they say, the Kow Shing bore away for safety. The Japanese warship drove her into a bay so shallow that the Chinese captain hove to rather than run the risk of running aground. Several Japanese officers then came aboard to say that they had orders to sink the ship and to offer to take off the Chinese officers and crew. The Chinese captain declined the offer. The Japanese repeated it, but the captain persisted in his refusal even to consider it. The Japanese then left the ship, which went down but a few moments after, being struck with a torpedo.

The survivors, who are almost exclusively coolies, confirm the report that not an officer was saved.

Chinese assert that when the Kow Shing sank the Japanese warship fired at the men who were struggling in the water. This, however, is denied by the Japanese.

It is reported that two German passengers on the Kow Shing jumped overboard, swam to the Japanese warship and asked to be taken on board. Though they declared themselves to be non-combatants, their appeal was refused and they were shot by the Japanese marines.

The report that a large Chinese army has crossed the northwestern frontier of Korea and is marching down the peninsular is confirmed. No details of the reported battle at Ashan have been received.

It is reported that Japanese cruisers have sunk several Chinese transports at Taku and captured a number of others.

LONDON, July 31.—The foreign office received important dispatches late last night from British representatives in China. No definite statement was made, however, concerning the declaration of war. Soon after the dispatches arrived the foreign office communicated by private cable with several British embassies abroad.

The owners of Kow Shing have made a claim through the government for compensation from Japan. They base their claim on the grounds that the Kow Shing flew the British flag and war had not been formally declared. The Central News says that the Kow Shing incident is regarded as forcing the situation and involving serious complications.

SINKING OF THE KOW SHING.

Englishmen Claim that British Blood Was Shed and Their Flag Insulted.

LONDON, July 31.—The Daily Graphic says in a leader on the Chinese-Japanese conflict:

"Inasmuch as war has not been declared, it is impossible to doubt that the sinking of the Kow Shing is an outrage for which the promptest and fullest reparation must be exacted by the Earl of Kimberly. China was acting within her rights, and the owners of the Kow Shing were equally justified in carrying troops. The Japanese seemed to have acted with perfectly fiendish brutality. The British flag has been insulted and British blood has been spilt. Japan will have to forsake Her Korean venture until she has given full satisfaction for this gratuitous outrage."

Tea Trade Not in Danger.

NEW YORK, July 31.—Inquiry was made to-day of the leading merchants doing business with China and Japan as to the possible effect of the war between those countries on account of the Korean imbroglio on the trade between them and this country, and especially with reference to imports of tea. These merchants agreed that the war, as long as it was confined to the northern part of the Korean country, would not be likely to affect such trade.

China Stops Emigration.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 31.—There was but one Chinese passenger on the steamer Gaelic which arrived from Hong Kong and Yokohama yesterday. The officers of the steamer say that the Chinese government, in view of the present crisis, will not allow any able-bodied natives to leave the country.

Not Pleased With Japan's Energy.

BERLIN, July 31.—The German press regards with suspicion Russia's attitude toward the Japanese-Chinese conflict, although the comments of the Russian newspapers indicate that the St. Petersburg government is far from pleased with Japan's energetic action.

France Leaning Towards Japan.

BERLIN, July 31.—The Paris newspapers affect an attitude of neutrality and impartiality toward events in Korea, but a strong general tendency in favor of Japan is noticeable.

Minneapolis Placed in Dry Dock.

PHILADELPHIA, July 31.—The cruiser Minneapolis has been placed in government dry dock at League island navy yard where a thorough examination will be made of her hull by a naval board appointed by the navy department. In going and returning from her recent trial trip the cruiser grounded in the Delaware river and the examination of her hull is being made to discover if she suffered any damage, and settle any questions of injury before she is turned over to the government.

ALBANY, July 31.—State Comptroller James A. Roberts has appointed ex-Assemblyman James Forsyth, of West Troy, to a clerkship in his department.

HOPE FOR TARIFF YET

Belief General That a Bill Will Be Agreed Upon.

Springer Insists That His Call for a Caucus on Thursday Will Not Be a Pizzle—Members of the House Said To Have Been Advised To Stand Firm for Their Bill.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—It is apparent, even to a casual observer, that the house democrats have determined not to accept the senate tariff bill without some concessions. Three of the four house conferees, Messrs. Wilson, Montgomery and Turner, are willing to remain in session until the 4th of March next, rather than surrender to the senate. Mr. McMillin, of Tennessee, the remaining member of the house committee, is more liberal, and is willing to meet the senate conferees in a more conciliatory spirit.

The house conferees know, however, that their position has the endorsement of the president and Speaker Crisp, as well as a majority of the leading members of the party upon the floor, and this a great encouragement to them.

Last week there was considerable talk of a recession on the part of the house, and the acceptance of the senate bill as being better than no bill. These sentiments were expressed again in the house to-day, but not to the same extent as formerly, while it was significant that those who insist upon the house bill were more determined in their position than ever.

Notwithstanding the deadlock in conference, the belief is general to-day among the house democrats that a bill will yet be agreed upon. The house democrats insist that the senate conferees will yet yield on some of the points in dispute, although the senate conferees maintain that their bill must remain unchanged, and that if amended in any vital particular, it cannot pass that body.

Senator Vilas, of Wisconsin, who is one of the spokesmen of the administration on the floor of the senate, is quoted as advising a house democrat to urge his associates to stand firm and that the senate would yet meet them at least half way.

Other senators are said to have spoken in a similar strain to their house friends, and it may be that this encouragement from the north end of the capitol has not been without its effect on the house.

An eastern republican informed a United Press reporter that the president would veto the senate bill if it was sent to him for his signature. He declined to give his authority for the statement, but insisted that he knew whereof he spoke. The statement was repeated to a New York democrat whose relations with the president are more than usually intimate, who emphatically characterized it as "nonsense."

"I am as good a tariff reformer," said this gentleman, "as the president. I am so pronounced a believer in the principles of tariff reform that I would not vote for the senate bill if it should come to the house except through the conferees. I would, however, support the bill which the house conferees would report, and the president would sign it, knowing if these gentlemen indorsed it it would be the best they could get."

Mr. Springer, of Illinois, has had numerous conferences with the members of the house with respect to the caucus that will be held on Thursday instead of to-day. While the proposition is fiercely combated by a large number of democrats, Mr. Springer insists that the caucus will be held, and that before Thursday of this week the call will bear the signatures of 50 or 60 gentlemen. He denies the report that any confiderable number of democrats have withdrawn their names from the paper, and says that all but three of the original signatures remain.

The call has not the indorsement of Speaker Crisp or the democratic members of the committee on rules, but appearances indicate at the present time that a caucus will be held on Thursday unless the conferees "get together" during the interim.

B. & O. FLYER IN COLLISION.

Engineer and Fireman and an Unknown Tramp Killed.

CINCINNATI, July 31.—The Royal Blue flyer of the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern, from St. Louis, struck a freight train two miles west of Aurora, Ind., 20 miles out of Cincinnati, at 5 o'clock last evening.

The engineer and fireman of the passenger train were killed. An unknown tramp was also killed.

The passengers escaped unhurt.

Brighter Outlook at Harrisburg.

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 31.—The industrial situation is brightening in this region. The Pennsylvania Railroad company has given orders for four days' work a week of eight hours a day, at the shops in this city. This is a great improvement over the conditions of the last three months. It is expected that full time will be resumed before the end of August. The track gangs have also been increased at the Pennsylvania steel works. No. 3 blast furnace will be blown in on Wednesday after an idleness of many months.

Bennett's Nomination.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—Another of the troublesome New York nominations, which has been held up by the New York senators, has been reported favorably to the senate. It is that of J. L. Bennett, to be United States attorney for the eastern district of New York, which was sent to the senate by the president Feb. 27.

Pawnee Bill in Trouble at Antwerp.

ANTWERP, July 31.—Pawnee Bill's Wild West show, which has been here since the exhibition opened, has been seized for debt. The cowboys were watching for the bailiffs and fled when the first officer appeared. Most of them took the first train that would carry them over the frontier.

LAST ECHO OF THE STRIKE.

Steel Mills and Car Shops at Chicago Resuming Work.

CHICAGO, July 31.—The Chicago steel mills, which were closed during the recent railway strike, have started up with 2,500 men. About 100 strikers have returned to work in the Nickel Plate car shops. The Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad strikers are clamoring to resume their old positions and they will be taken back so far as it does not interfere with the men already at work.

Work is being resumed in all the railroad shops, and by the end of this week the last echo of the strike will have been heard.

Providence Chinamen Meet and Discuss the War Situation.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 31.—A meeting of the Chinese laundrymen was held here to discuss war news. Every Mongolian in Providence and as many as could get here from other cities and towns attended.

It was arranged that as soon as positive news was received that war had been declared against China by Japan a delegation would leave this city for San Francisco and there join the New York contingent to enlist under the yellow banner.

The local Chinese are highly enthusiastic.

MRS. BISMARCK ILL.

Suffering Greatly from the Heat, But in No Danger.

BERLIN, July 31.—The Princess Bismarck has suffered greatly from the intense heat in Varzin and has had several fainting fits since Saturday morning.

Her condition is not alarming, however.

A report was started yesterday that Prince Bismarck was ill, but it was due only to the misunderstanding of a dispatch concerning his wife's illness. He is in his usual health.

Emperor William has telegraphed from the north his congratulations upon the 47th anniversary of Bismarck's wedding.

SENATOR VOORHEES' CONDITION

He Appears Bright and Cheerful, But the Warm Weather Is Against Him.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—The condition of Senator Voorhees this morning is unchanged from that during yesterday, and the distinguished patient appears bright and cheerful, although the warm nights cause the senator considerable discomfort.

New Foundland Legislators Unseated

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., July 31.—George Emerson, speaker of the legislative assembly, and James McGrath, ex-chairman of the board of public works, both members of the legislature for the Placentia district, have been unseated by a decision of Chief Justice Carter, who held that they were disqualified from sitting in the legislature on account of the use of corrupt practices at the recent elections.

Looking Into Affairs in Mars.

BOSTON, July 31.—A communication from Mr. Percival Lowell to Messrs. Chandler and Ritchie announces the discovery on July 19, by Mr. A. E. Douglass, of the Lowell observatory, of an irregularity in the southern portion of the terminator of Mars. The discovery was confirmed by observations on July 20. This irregularity is, perhaps, evidence of mountains of Mars of comparatively small height.

A Formidable Enterprise.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., July 31.—It is stated, on what appears to be excellent authority, that the trolley road between this city and Wappingers Falls, which is approaching completion, is only one link in a chain of trolley systems connecting all the inland towns between New York and Albany. A road connecting Wappingers Falls with Fishkill will next be constructed.

The Remains Identified.

JAMAICA, N. Y., July 31.—The body of the man killed on the Southern railroad at Springfield yesterday has been identified as that of Rev. Schuyler Tregus, of Rockville Centre, assistant pastor of the Presbyterian church at Ocean Side. He was 60 years old, and during the late war was chaplain of the 30th regiment, New York volunteers.

DOHERTY TOLD THE TRUTH

Tuthill Says He Speculated Successfully for the Ex-Captain.

NEW YORK, July 31.—Gus Tuthill, the well-known sporting man and the backer of ex-middle weight champion Jack Dempsey, and maker of ex-Police Captain Doherty's fortune, was seen last evening on Broadway by a reporter.

"I came down from Saratoga," said he, "purposely to make a statement regarding my relations with Captain Doherty. All this about Doherty and myself is straight, but a fellow don't hanker after so much notoriety. Fourteen or fifteen years ago, when Doherty was a roundsman of the Mercer street station and when the boys all stopped at the Grand Central hotel on Broadway, he and I became acquainted just as many others did with him. I kept up his acquaintance when he was made sergeant and transferred to the Old Slip station. In the close of the eighties I was an active member of the Consolidated exchange.

"What Captain Doherty tells of his $200 is straight. In 1887, I believe it was in the fall, I went to Doherty and told him a couple of hundred dollars could be invested to good profit just then. He gave me $200 and I bought some New York & New England, Delaware Lackawanna and other stocks, and gave him back $1,200. I am not sure that I made just $22,000 for him. I know that at times I gave Doherty as much as $9,000.

"There were big fluctuations in stocks then as anybody who can recall the time will tell you.

"While I made this much for Doherty I made three times as much, yes, nearly $100,000 for myself.

"I failed in December, 1888, for $9,000. Many offers were made to me by my creditors to settle for one half. I told them if they waited for two weeks I would pay them one hundred cents for every dollar and in about ten days after I paid them every cent as President General Wilson of the board knows."

RHODE ISLAND MILLS CLOSED.

Shut Down on Account of Low Water—Crops Ruined.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 31.—The Anthony mill in the town of Coventry, employing 1,000 operatives, has shut down. A new wheel is to be put in, and it may be eight or ten weeks before the mill resumes operations.

The Ashland mill in Scituate is shut down on account of low water. The Rockland mill is running by steam only, but will have to stop unless the rainfall comes soon.

The reservoirs throughout the Pawtucket valley are six feet lower than a week ago and a water famine is imminent.

The crops in the western part of the state are ruined for want of rain.

BIG FIRE AT MINNEAPOLIS.

Twenty-five Million Feet of Lumber and Other Property Destroyed.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 31.—Twenty acres of lumber piles containing about 25,000,000 feet of lumber belonging to the Shevlin-Carpenter Lumber company, situated on the west bank of the river within a quarter of a mile of the centre of the city, were destroyed by fire last evening, at a loss of fully $300,000.

In addition to this the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railroad roundhouse was burned, together with twenty-one freight cars and the valuable Pintsch gas plant.

Carelessness on the part of the engineer and fireman of an Omaha switch engine, who neglected to close the dampers of their engine while passing the yards, is supposed to have been the cause of the fire.

Long before the firemen had arrived the fire was beyond control. The lumber yard was doomed before a stream of water had been turned upon it, and all the firemen could do was to seek to confine it to the district in which it originated.

To the west of the yards stood the Star elevator containing 1,500,000 bushels of wheat, and a row of warehouses extending for several blocks; these were saved with great difficulty.

FARM BUILDINGS LEVELLED.

Destructive Cyclone Sweeps the Country West of Cooperstown, N. Y.

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., July 31.—A destructive cyclone swept over the towns of Burlington and Exeter, eight miles west of here, Sunday, in a track seven miles long by half a mile wide. Farm buildings, except the dwelling on the farm of Alonzo Light, were blown down and the house partly unroofed. John Shields' hop house and barn, in the same town, were laid flat. In Exeter, David Curtis' barn was destroyed and a team of horses killed. Patrick Shields' house was unroofed.

The loss on buildings will be from $4,000 to $6,000, and on crops about $5,000.

NOW FOR THE DAMAGES

Many Suits Against Chicago and Cook County.

Railroad Companies and Shippers Demand Remuneration for Losses Sustained During the Late Strike—Believed That Numerous Other Damage Suits Will Soon Be Filed.

CHICAGO, July 31.—Notices have been served by Samuel B. Foster, attorney for several railroads, of damages claimed against the city of Chicago and the county of Cook for loss of property during the A. R. U. strike.

The notices were served on the mayor, city clerk, the corporation counsel, the city attorney and on the president of the county board, the county clerk and the county attorney.

The aggregate damages claimed are $32,000.

This represents only about one-tenth of the actual damage claimed, many roads having several days left in which to file their claims.

The roads which have filed claims, with the amount of damages, are: Lake Erie & Western, $10,000; Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee, $220; Chicago & Northwestern, $410; Chicago Refrigerating line, $1,000; New York Central & Hudson River Railway company, $345; Monon, $330; Flint & Pierre Marquette, $75; Chicago & Erie, $100; Swift Refrigerator line, $300; Armour Refrigerator line, $100; Central Car Trust company, of New York, $600; Chicago & Grand Trunk, $12,150; Grand Trunk railroad, $7,785 and Grand Trunk company, of Canada, $5,285.

Besides these shippers filed through Mr. Foster claims amounting to at least $200,000.

This was done by the shippers on the express declaration of the railroads that they will pay no claims whatever made against them by shippers for damages to freight handled during the strike.

The General Managers association takes the ground that the city and county, in not furnishing adequate protection to the railroads, are directly responsible for all damages to freight.

The damages by the railroads in the above list are mostly for cars burned after July 1.

It is believed that many more suits for damages will be filed by shippers who lost heavily on perishable freight during the strike.

CURED BY FAITH.

Alleged Miracle Performed at a Church in Reading, Pa.

READING, Pa., July 31.—Mrs. Uriah S. Henry, aged 40, fell down stairs some time ago and injured her hip so badly that she was obliged to use crutches. Sunday night she visited the Rescue mission, Holiness Christians, who believe in healing by faith.

Mrs. Henry presented herself at the altar, was annointed by the pastor, Rev. William P. Austin, and a moment later dropped her crutches and shouted for joy, declaring that she was healed. She walked home without assistance and has experienced no pain whatever since. The cure is regarded as a miracle.

Congressional Deadlock Broken.

PITTSBURG, July 31.—The deadlock in the 24th congressional district was finally broken last night by the nomination of E. F. Acheson, of Washington county, on the 250th ballot. Hopewood, of Fayette county, retired at the end of the 249th ballot, and his delegates joined the Washington county delegates. Eberhardt's delegates from Allegheny county supported him to the last ballot. Acheson's nomination was then made unanimous.

Wealers Short of Cash.

PITTSBURG, July 31.—E. J. Jeffries, in command of about 500 commonwealers, has arrived at Jack's Run, a suburb of Allegheny. The men are from the state of Washington. There was but $4.75 in the treasury, and the men spent that for bread. Jeffries is now trying to procure rations in this city for his men. The men are a very respectable looking crowd, and expect the people will not allow them to starve before reaching Washington.

Charges Against a Sheriff.

ALBANY, July 31.—Gov. Flower has not yet taken any action in the charges which have been preferred against Sheriff Duffy, of Westchester county. B. G. The governor said he would consider the charges when he has more time.

DOINGS IN CONGRESS

Oppressive Heat Almost Blocks Senate Work.

Only About One-Third of the 85 Members Present—House Wastes Time on the McRae Bill To Protect Forest Reservations—Little Accomplished by Either Branch.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—The points that marked yesterday's session of the senate were an oppressive heat, and, as a result of it, a general apathy in regard to all matters of legislation that came up for action. Throughout most of the day there was not one-third of the 85 senators present. The vice-president, however, was back and in the chair, and Senators Hoar, of Massachusetts, and Morgan, of Alabama, were also in their seats after an absence of several weeks.

The conference report on the agricultural appropriation bill was presented and agreed to; but there was one point in the bill on which no agreement had been reached by the conferees. That was the senate amendment appropriating $1,000,000 for the extirpation of the Russian thistle. The senate vigorously insisted formally on that amendment and asked the house for further conference. The house joint resolution extending the appropriations up to and including the 14th of August, was passed.

House bill providing for the public printing, binding and distribution of public documents was considered and passed. It was a compilation and a modification of all the existing laws on the subject and was described by Senator Gorman, chairman of the committee on printing, as a measure of very great importance.

Mr. Allen introduced and had referred to the committee on finance, a bill having for a title "For the relief of the several states in the union," and for purpose the distribution among the states, according to population, of fifty million dollars in treasury notes to be issued for the purpose and to be used "For relief of the worthy poor."

Repayment to the government is to be secured by state bonds bearing 2 per cent. interest payable in not less than three nor more than ten years from date.

House of Representatives.

After the morning hour, in which the committee on military affairs succeeded in having passed a few bills of comparatively no importance, the session was wasted in a vain effort to get consideration of Mr. McRae's bill entitled a bill "To protect public forest reservations." The committee on rules had given him the afternoon for its consideration, the vote to be taken at 4 o'clock, but the opposition, which was quite active among the representatives of the western states, in which these reservations lie, was sufficient to prevent definite action on the order. The bill has been before the house on several occasions and has always been successfully antagonized.

Mr. Talbert (dem., S. C.) endeavored to get some information from the speaker at the beginning of the session, but was not successful. About a week ago he introduced resolutions instructing the committee on coinage, weights and measures to bring in a bill for the free coinage of silver and the committee on banking and currency to report a bill providing a new financial system of government, and he asked the speaker if the committee had the right to pigeonhole his resolutions. The speaker told him the rules of the house would give him all necessary information respecting the power of the committees.

Resolution recognizing the new republic of Hawaii and directing the president to notify President Dole of the recognition was offered by Mr. Boutelle (rep., Me.) as a matter of privilege. He asked its immediate consideration, but Speaker Crisp ruled that it was not privileged, and it was referred to the committee on foreign affairs.

Mr. Boutelle explained that the resolution was a copy of the one introduced by Mr. McCreary, (dem., Ky.), chairman of the committee on foreign affairs, on July 27, 1890, recognizing the republic of Brazil; and he asked of the chairman, as the real author of the resolution, that prompt action which he said the house had a right to expect.

Michigan Republican Convention.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., July 31.—Governor Rich will enter the convention to-day with 630 of the 909 delegates back of him for renomination for governor. Pingree men concede this, but are making a hot fight for recognition on the balance of the ticket. Pingree withdrew last night for the sake of harmony. The Pingree delegates will vote blank for governor, and the faction will be recognized in the make-up of the ticket.

Against Aliens Holding Land.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—Mr. Bowen (pop., Minn.) introduced in the house a bill making it unlawful for aliens to own land in the United States. Three years from the passage of the bill the government is to seize and sell all lands owned by aliens, the proceeds of the sale to go to the alien owners.

New Coaling Station.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—The government has determined to establish a naval coaling station for the North Atlantic and Carribean Sea fleet at Key West.

BABIES IN RICH FAMILIES.

Like Those in Modest Homes, Have but a Few Great Needs—Lactated Food Not Beyond the Reach of Any—They All Thrive Upon It.

Every one knows of splendid homes that lack nothing but children.

The rooms, with all their elegance, look vacant without the clutter of baby toys, and the smooth, sunny lawns seem wasted without a troop of children playing on them.

But when the babies do come into these homes all that thought and love and wealth can do combine to keep them healthy, happy and charming.

And yet these little ones, like the countless children in homes where there is "little to earn and many to keep," are all human babies, and the things that are really their health and happiness are very simple during the first few years of their lives.

LITTLE MOLLIE WARD.

In fact, when parents have made sure that baby's food is sufficiently nourishing and healthy, that there is plenty of pure air and absolute cleanliness, they can do nothing else. In homes where trained nurses are employed lactated food is always kept on hand. And at the first sign of bowel trouble baby is put on an exclusive diet of lactated food till the intestinal disturbance is over.

Physicians know of nothing else equal to lactated food to take the place of mother's milk. It is made for the express purpose of forming as perfect a substitute for healthy mother's milk as analysis will show. It is pleasant to the taste and has the unusual virtue of inducing delicate babies to take nourishment when other food disagrees with their weak stomachs. Lactated food has saved thousands of babies from falling victims to cholera infantum by keeping up their strength, without increasing, as most foods does at such times, the irritation in the intestines that is accountable for most of the fatalities among children in July and August.

This valuable baby food is everywhere used in the homes where the most modern and valuable appliances for securing health and comfort are met with, and yet this best of baby foods is easily within the reach of the most modest homes.

One hundred and fifty meals can be made from a $1 package, or sufficient to last about four weeks, making the food prepared for baby cost less than 5 cents a quart. In thousands of unpretentious homes, in the large cities especially, this valuable food is found.

Medical skill can do no more to save babies' lives and to keep them well than it has done in the preparation of lactated food.

Little Mollie Ward, whose picture is given above, is the charming daughter of Mr. M. P. Ward of Providence, R. I., who writes:

"It gives me pleasure to advise you that our little Mollie is just four years old today, and our youngest little girl, strange to say, is five months today, both being born on the third of the month. I think both of babies owe their good health to lactated food. It is the best food for infants who cannot enjoy mother's milk, that there is on the market.

"Our babies have both thrived on it, and when teething had very little trouble.

"I have recommended lactated food hundreds of times."

Don't be Deceived

By those who offer substitutes for Cottolene. Its success has been so phenomenal that numerous imitations are now being offered which are claimed to be, "just as good." All these

CIRCULATION EXCEEDS THAT OF ALL OTHER PLAINFIELD DAILIES COMBINED.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., JULY 31, 1894

When we come to cross the valley
We will gain a keen delight
In gazing at the fiend whose taunts
Were with us day and night:
As he blisters on the broiling-bed,
And longs for clover-dew,
How sweet to hurl back his retort—
"This hot enough for you?"

Six pages are required for The Press again today, to accommodate the advertising. The supplement includes in its reading matter the latest letter of Dr. Talmage, an entertaining contribution from Miss Maude James Chilton giving sensible advice, and much choice miscellany.

Contentment—how easy of attainment! The happiest man in town last evening was an Italian laborer, carrying home a pair of bright red shoes for his baby's first birthday celebration, and bursting into melody of song and harmonica as he merrily trudged East Front street. Simple was his happiness, but complete.

The paper which continually sees through glass darkly affects to sneer at The Daily Press suggestion to cool churches by mechanical fanning, and in the same column laments that because of the heat some of the Plainfield meeting-houses are suspending business temporarily. Consistency is a jewel not worn by some persons.

The discovery of cesspool contamination of wells in a North Plainfield district points the wisdom of analyzing all well-water used for drink, and emphasizes the great and immediate need of a sanitary sewerage system. It further proves that Plainfield physicians are wide-awake and know their business. The prompt examination and the emphatic orders given, are a credit to the faithfulness of the local medical men.

The career of the First Church of Christ has been of especial interest to The Daily Press, because the religious enterprise was that of a people dependent for achievement entirely on their own hard work. Therefore it is a matter for regret that the congregation finds its financial burden more than it can carry. But a greater regret is that Preacher Hand feels called to surrender the work he so bravely and so piously pursued. The zeal and the power of the self-educated minister were the more admirable because he was from among the people, and a humble carpenter, like his Master Whom he served so well, and Whose simple and beautiful Gospel he so plainly preached. After all, great learning is not so glorious a thing as gentle goodness.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Jacob Miles.

Mrs. Jacob Miles died at her home, 326 Somerset street, this morning. Her death was quite sudden. She has been caring for her husband, who has been ill with a complication of diseases, and overtaxed her strength in her efforts to aid him in recovering. Last evening she was stricken with apoplexy, and this morning she died. Her husband's condition was considered very serious this morning.

Mrs. Miles had lived in Plainfield for 27 years, moving here from New York, where Mr. Miles has been connected with the Sixpenny Bank and the leather business. She leaves three children, Frank W. Miles, the florist and nurseryman of Somerset street, William Miles, who has been looking after his father's property, and Miss Annie Miles, an artist, who lives at home.

COUNCILMAN SEE RECEIVER.

His Legal Ability and Personal Integrity Mark Him as the Man to Handle the Funds for Adjustment.

After several days spent in looking about for just the man suited to the purpose, Chancellor McGill yesterday appointed W. G. E. See, President of the Plainfield Common Council, receiver in New Jersey for the Higgins Soap Company of Brooklyn, which became embarrassed a week ago through fraudulent operations. Mr. See was chosen because of his legal cleverness in unraveling tangles, and because a man of strict probity was wanted to assume charge of affairs. Provision was made to deposit funds to secure his remuneration for the arduous and responsible work.

GALLANT CAPTAIN MARTIN.

Though Held Down by Three Drowning Damsels, He Saves Himself and Them.

Capt. Frank L. C. Martin was in bathing near the Fourth Avenue pavilion, Asbury Park, Sunday morning, when three women were swept out of their depth and screamed for help. He and two others went to their aid, and each man succeeded in landing one of the fair ones. Capt. Martin was first on the scene, and all three had hold of him at one time, and came very near to drowning him. As it was, he drank more water—salt water—than he ever did before at one time.

When he got his damsel on the beach he was thoroughly exhausted, but recovered in a short time.

LOST A KEG OF GOLD.

$50,000 in a Shipment to Europe Has Disappeared.

A cable despatch received in Wall street today from Paris reported the loss of a keg containing $50,000 in gold, which was part of an amount of $2,500 000 shipped from this city on La Touraine July 21. The firms shipping gold that day were Lazard Freres, $2,000,000, and Heidelbach, Ickelheimer & Co., $500,000

According to the despatch the gold was taken from the $2,00,000 lot, as only 39 kegs, each containing $50,000, reached Paris on this consignment. The gold is supposed to have been lost or stolen between Havre and Paris.

At the office of Messrs. Lazard Freres it was said this morning that while the despatch was possibly true they did not believe it, and, at any rate, knew nothing of the matter.

Thatcher's New Song.

Those who know George Thatcher personally, as well as professionally, can readily appreciate a hint as to his having a new story or song. Wit has proved itself to be embodied in the form of Geo. Thatcher, but his friends were startled when they learned that he proposed to blossom out as a ballad singer in his new piece "About Gotham", which he and his comedy people produce in Music Hall, Aug. 23. As he very rightly says, "One of my company becomes famous with 'Sweet Marie'; another gets a life-insurance cinch on 'Mary and John'; still again I find my audiences succumb to 'Mommer's Baby's Off her perch', or a somewhat similar rhapsody; therefore I have determined to put on the poetical brain fever gloves myself; and, don't make any mistake, as a balladist I'll be a corker. Of course, ballads are a little beyond my swirldupois, but I'm training for it. Just watch me the first night, please. If I get through that alive, I'm solid for the whole season." The night watchman on Seventh street says that the middle-aged corn pricks up its ears at unusual hours waiting for Thatcher to warble his new song.

Coombs has returned to the management of Hotel Grenada bar, where his pleasant presence and deft manipulation are gratifying to the patrons, who missed him during his absence, and who hope he is now on deck to stay. Louis is an expert dispenser of liquid refreshments, and a jolly acquaintance.

Bad Well Water.

Plainfield and North Plainfield physicians have forbidden the use of the water from some of the wells in Manning avenue and vicinity, because of its contamination by sewage. In some cases the odor of the water is terrible, and a scum arises to the surface.

Brown as a berry, and good-natured as ever, Counselor Charles A Reed paid a flying visit to town today from his shore pleasures at Forked River. He returns tomorrow.

David Carney, Frank Stover, Wiswell Drayton, Fred Stover and William Scott made up a fishing party that went to New Market yesterday and returned with six black bass and two catfish.

Sydney R. Titsworth of Watchung avenue and Arthur W. Vail of Franklin place will leave tomorrow for Beach Haven to spend the season, being joined shortly by a number of their friends.

W. K McClure, Wm. H. Brower, A. V. Nolen, Randolph M. Stelle, F.O. Herring, Wm. I. Brower, Harold Wills, and Wm. McClure, leave Thursday for Camp Good Supply, Megantic Club, Quebec, one of finest gentlemen's gatherings in the country. They will be joined in camp by Geo. Kirkner and Judge Bartine.

Joseph W. Goltra of Blair, Nebraska, is visiting in Plainfield after an absence of 38 years. He left here when a boy of 15. He is greatly interested in noting the changes which have been made here since he went away, and is having a pleasant visit though he is unable to recognize many of his old friends.

Eleven tables of progressive euchre players made merry at Hotel Netherwood last night. Elegant prizes were supplied, selected with exquisite taste by Mrs. Miller and Mrs Williams. The winners were Mrs. Charles Blandy, Mrs. W. G. Brady, Mrs. W. J. Eaton, Mrs. I. L Wiltsie, Mr. Nathan, W. J. Eaton, W. G. Brady, and H. W. Williams.

Attracted thither by the correspondence of The Daily Press, several Plainfield families have gone to the Delaware Water Gap to enjoy its glories. Among them are Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Brandon and son Bertrand H., of 1030 West Front street. Mr. Brandon is one of the most active and successful commercial travelers in the business, and deserves the rest and enjoyment that are now his portion. Of course they are stopping at the queen of hotels there, the Water Gap House, and they write that they are delighted with that perfect Summer home. The registry of recent arrivals also includes these Plainfielders: Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Struthers, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Burgess, Willis West, and Percy Brown, all of whom find the region an ideal resort. Fred VanEmburgh, of the enterprising Plainfield bargain house, is still lingering, with his wife, among the romantic hills.

—The cases on contract of Marsh against Kline and of Marsh against Schoonmaker were adjourned for one week by Justice Nash today.

AT WASHINGTON.

EVENTS THAT ARE MAKING THE CAPITAL INTERESTING.

Senator Call's Feet the Subject of an Animated Debate. The Kind of Paragraphs that Gall Sensitive Congressmen. Some Effects of the Tariff Legislation.

While the potent senators and sapient representatives have been trying to settle the fate of the tariff bill, personal events more entertaining, if not more instructive, have occurred in the legislative hall. Senator Wilkinson Call and the correspondent of a Florida newspaper have been the chief actors in one of these events, and Washington is still talking of the drama in which they figured. The correspondent, in an ornate article on the senator, said:

"His costume just at present is very stunning and costly, among the articles of apparel he seems most to delight in being a pair of glaring yellow shoes. These he wore in the Senate to-day. He came creaking into the chamber about noon, seated himself calmly at his desk, and with easy nonchalance, removed his shoes and elevated his unsightly blue stocking-ed feet to the desk in front of him."

The etiquette of the Senate is not always maintained with the exemplary strictness that characterized the days of Webster and Clay, but unshod feet, elevated upon the desk, are a distinct infringement of all that the most extreme modern license permits, and Senator Call knows it. Naturally he was indignant when the story of his blue-clad extremities was spread abroad in his state, and he objected with dramatic vigor. "Mr. President," he said, rising in his place in the Senate, "this story is an infamous falsehood. The man who conceived it knew it to be a falsehood, and it was told for a malicious and political purpose. Let us see what is the evidence of that; let us see if there is anything more than my statement to sustain the truth of the assertion I make."

The evidence produced by Senator Call was convincing and conclusive. It consisted of a formally drawn document signed by Senators Kyle, Bate, Allen, Irby, Jarvis, Murphy, Roach and Walsh saying that they occupy seats near the accused blue-stocking and that the event so graphically described never occured. The story, however, will not down, and reputable witnesses still insist that the feet were in evidence as charged, despite the senator's denial. Perhaps they were, for, in law, the evidence of one man who saw a thing is stronger than the evidence of a dozen who didn't see it, and more than one insists that the feet were seen.

The warm weather, trying alike to collars and tempers, has not resulted in any pugilistic encounters, but the relations of several congressmen have been strained almost to the breaking point. Senator Joe Hawley, of Connecticut, and Senator Allen, of Nebraska, have been on a war footing, but the trouble passed away without personal violence—a fact that is probably fortunate for the Connecticut man, as when Allen is in one of his "moods" he is as dangerous as John L. Sullivan on a bender. He is afraid of nothing and merciless in his pummelings. Out in Nebraska, where they know him, people give him a wide berth on such occasions. When he starts out to "do" his native village of Madison, there is never the slightest question about his ownership of the town. As for the Senate, there isn't a man there who could stand up against him when he had on his fighting clothes.

A gentleman, speaking of the presidential aspirations of congressmen, says of Pennsylvania's senior senator: "There is no doubt about it. Don Cameron is a full-blown candidate for the presidency. You could tell it even if he had never written that Denver letter or allowed his friends to scatter sly hints. A great change has come over the once taciturn Pennsylvania senator. For years he has walked through the lobbies and the corridors of the capitol, apparently oblivious to everything but himself, but now all is different. He is generally one of the most conspicuous figures on the floor when the Senate is in session, and outside the Senate he is brushing up old acquaintances, and altogether has become as effusive and companionable as he once was reticent and exclusive."

Diet and harmony have a close relation, if Senator Hill is a good prophet. When asked during the days of the conference on sugar what the news was, he said that he knew nothing of the doings of the conferees, but when told that they had just lunched, he asked:

"What did they have for lunch?"

"Two pitchers of milk and some hot corn muffins," was the reply.

Mr. Hill shook his head and looked grave. "I don't like the sign," he said. "They must be very far apart. Men who are in agreement and making progress never send for sweet milk and corn bread. You keep your eye on the lunch tray. It's a faithful barometer, and when you see it carrying a decanter and a box of cigars you may bet that an agreement has been reached or is not far off."

People who study the effect of the tariff legislation upon business will be interested in the figures showing the importation for ten months of sugar and wool. During the period named the quantity of sugar imported aggregated 3,356,172,695 pounds, valued at $100,131,188, an increase in quantity of 291,151,497 pounds, and an increase in value of $9,038,899. The quantity of raw wool imported during the ten months was 43,331,974 pounds, valued at $4,770,468, against 150,097,924 pounds, valued at $18,448,546, for the corresponding ten months of the preceding fiscal year, thus showing a decrease of over 100,000,000 pounds, or more than two-thirds of the total imports. In manufactures of wool there was a decrease of $16,000,000.

Congressmen have all kinds of hot weather vagaries, and the means they take to avoid the effects of climate are various and interesting. Bailey of Texas, never wears a straw hat. In the hottest days of July he traverses Pennsylvania avenue with a heavy black felt surmounting his head. The gigantic Curtis of New York also eschews the straw, and a chance conversation between the two statesmen revealed the fact that they were actuated by the same reason. Each had learned somewhere that there was no case on record of a person being sunstruck who wore a felt hat, and that in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the thatch of the unfortunate victim was straw. The fact that about every sane man wears a straw hat during the period when prostration from heat occur is a feature of the case which they have perhaps not fully taken into account.

A FEW BRIDAL SUPERSTITIONS.

No Girl May Really Believe Them; but in Wedding She Respects Them.

It is a brave girl who will consent to a marriage in May. This time is supposed to be peculiarly unlucky, as death, or misfortune of another character, is promised to attend the union of two hearts that best at one if they select the fifth month for their nuptials. The bride to be watches the weather forecasts with an anxiety that proves her faith in the old adage, "Happy is the bride that the sun shines on," and of course she knows that the friends left at home are equally concerned as the weather on the wedding day tells to a nicety the peculiar future disposition of the bride, while that of the day following is equally prophetic in regard to the bridegroom.

"Something old and something new, something borrowed and something blue," is a couplet that rules alike the trousseau of the richest and poorest bride. To walk to the altar without having fulfilled this poetical injunction is to call down upon the union the wrath of all those gods whose particular duty it is to look after the newly wed.

On the day of the great event so many superstitions enter into every detail that it is a very wise bride indeed that remembers all those little acts that are so sentient with meaning in regard to the future. If by chance she should happen to put on her left shoe first her married life will prove unhappy; therefore it behooves her to look carefully to this portion of her toilet and be certain to select the right foot as the first to be attended to.

No bridal guest should wear a costume entirely black, as such a choice will bring sorrow to the bride. If the best man stumbles on his way to the altar it is regarded as a most ominous proceeding, and, at any rate, is awkward enough to merit rebuke.

The wedding ring should be a circlet of gold, unbroken by any jewel, as the significance of the ring demands that the form shall be typical of the endless love that prompts its bestowal. To try on the ring before marriage is certain to bring sorrow to the bride. To lose it is prophetic of dire misfortune, and many there are who would regard taking it off as an actual sin, holding fast to the belief that it was placed on the finger for all time, and not merely as the symbol of an evanescent affection.

Best of Its Kind.

A good many years ago, when church organs were regarded with much disfavor, by many pious and intelligent people, it was proposed to introduce one of these dangerous inventions into a New England meeting-house, one of the pillars of which was an old man of Quaker blood.

He was one of the most violent opponents to the plan when it was first proposed; in fact he expressed his views so strongly that the person who was collecting money for the organ when it was at last decided to have it, did not venture to call upon the old Quaker for any subscription.

He met him on the street one day, however, and was agreeably surprised when the old man took out a substantial-looking wallet, and presented him with a most generous sum to add to his collection.

"Why," stammered the young man, "I—I am greatly obliged, sir, but I hardly thought you would care to be asked to contribute."

"My son," said the Quaker, with a suspicion of a twinkle in his serious eyes, "if thee will worship the Lord by machinery, I would like thee to have a first-rate instrument."

Took to the Water.

A lady who lives in Lincoln, Neb., has a canary of which she has long been fond, and is now both fond and proud. Its cage hangs in a room heated by a large coal stove.

One afternoon, as the story is reported by the St. Louis Globe Democrat, the lady was going out for a little while, and as the fire was low she filled the stove and opened the draught. She was gone much longer than she expected, and when she got back the stove was red hot, and the air of the room was like a furnace seven times heated.

Her first thought was of the canary. She glanced up at the cage. The bird was nowhere in sight, and she stepped into a chair, expecting to find the little fellow lying on the floor of the cage, dead.

Instead, to her delight, there he sat in his bath tub, squatting down in the water with nothing out but his head and even that he was ducking at short intervals.

Even with Her.

"Is this a smoking car?" she asked in choice Bostonese, as she peered through her girlish spectacles into the uncultured conductor's face.

"No, miss," he answered, with a glad, joyous feeling that for once he was getting even with a woman; "it is not."

She disappeared into the interior of the car, but in a few moments came out livid with rage.

"You—told—me," she said in icy tones, "that it was not a smoking car."

"It is not, miss. None of our cars smoke. It is the smoker's car."—Detroit Free Press.

Lamb's Ready Wit.

It is told of Charles Lamb, that one afternoon returning from a dinner party, having taken a seat in a crowded omnibus, a stout gentleman subsequently looked in, and politely asked:

"All full inside?"

"I don't know how it may be with the other passengers," answered Lamb, "but that last piece of oyster pie did the business for me."—Newcastle Chronicle.

HE WAS SHIPWRECKED.

A GRAPHIC EXPERIENCE IN THE CARIBBEAN SEA.

And a Fortunate Rescue—The Thrilling Story Told by Mr. A. W. Burch the Survivor, and How He Overcame Other Troubles.

The following account of a shipwreck rescue, subsequent disaster and final salvation is given by Mr. A. W. Burch, of Rome, N. Y. It is exceedingly graphic and will be found most interesting:

"On the 17th day of January, 1893, while cruising down the Carribbean Sea, accompanied by my wife and child, we were caught in a heavy northeast gale which drove our schooner ashore on the north coast of Honduras. No one, unless he has been shipwrecked, can imagine what this means. Fortunately we were rescued from the wreck by some Carib Indians who were living in a small village on the coast, and such comforts as the village afforded were placed at our disposal.

"Among this semi-barbarous people we remained five weeks, finally crossing to the island of Ruatan in a dugout boat.

"During the time we were among the Caribs we were forced to live upon cocoanuts, bananas, cassava, and other foods to which we were unaccustomed. Our stomachs were soon deranged by this diet and we suffered acutely from dyspepsia. Both myself and wife had terrible indigestion, nausea, occasional headaches, sinking at the pit of the stomach and the usual troubles dyspeptics generally undergo.

"We finally reached the United States in a very broken condition, where we employed the best physicians and used various preparations, but we received little if any benefit. The malarial poisons which we had taken into our systems, with the acute gastric troubles, refused to yield to the various methods of treatment and our conditions became daily more painful and alarming.

"It seemed terrible that we should be rescued from a watery grave only to be plunged into a worse than living death, and you can naturally understand that I became quite discouraged.

"It was at this time that I observed, from an article in one of the leading papers, that there had been a scientific discovery which I felt was suited to our case I at once began its use and experienced instant relief. My appetite became good and my food, instead of distressing me as formerly, was perfectly digested and caused me no inconvenience. I began to gain flesh, and now both myself, my wife and our child are restored to perfect health and strength wholly through the use of the great pre-digested food Paskola.

"It was this great discovery which took us from an almost hopeless condition of existence and has placed us in a position where we enjoy life to its utmost. I have felt, since my most remarkable recovery that any discovery such as Paskola which could make me a new man and restore my family to health after we had been brought so low must be of the greatest value to the hundreds of thousands of people who are suffering constantly from indigestion, constipation, stomach troubles, malarial difficulties, headaches and all those things which so hamper life and interfere with our happiness and success.

"This is my story in brief, and while I feel grateful for the rescue from shipwreck, I feel still more grateful for the salvation from the condition of sickness and misery which I might even now be undergoing had it not been for this great pre digested food."

It may be remarked in conclusion that a pamphlet fully describing Paskola and what it does, will be sent free to any address, by the Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade street, New York.

AROUND THE WORLD

DR. TALMAGE IN "THE PARADISE OF THE PACIFIC."

First Glimpses of the Islands—The Land of Flowers and the Greatest Volcano In the World—Christianity's Part In Hawaiian Progress.

[Copyright, Louis Klopsch, 1894.]

HONOLULU, June 7.—It was 2 o'clock in the afternoon when at San Francisco I stepped aboard the Alameda of the Oceanic Steamship company, our Captain Morse one of the most genial, popular and able commanders who ever sailed the seas. He and the Pacific ocean are old acquaintances. He has been in 17 hurricanes and safely outrode them. Profusion of flowers were sent up the gangplank, and the masses of people on the wharf who had come to see their friends off waved handkerchiefs and threw kisses and cried and laughed as is usual when an ocean steamer is about to start. The gong sounded for the leaving of all those from the ship's deck who did not expect to accompany us. The whistle blew for loosening from the wharf, and the screw began to whirl, and the ship moved out toward the Golden Gate.

The Pacific ocean met us with waves high enough to send many to their berths and to arouse in the rest of us the question why so rough a sea should be called the Pacific. And for two days the roll, the jerk, the rise, the fall, the lunge, the tremor, the quake spoiled the appetite and hid from sight the majority of the passengers. But after the third day the ocean and the ship ceased their wrestling, and peace smoothed the waves and hushed the winds, for the same Lord who took a short walk upon rough Galilee takes a longer walk upon Pacific seas. Different from most voyages, there seemed no disagreeables on board—enough passengers to avoid loneliness, not so many as to be crowded. What difference between a sea voyage now, with all comforts afforded and the table containing all the luxuries that can allure a weak appetite, and those days when the missionaries crossed to Honolulu in vessels greasy and rude, and with food rancid or stale, and with sail full of whims, now full curbed and now limp and idle!

Politics has never done much for the Sandwich Islands. If a man have no expectations for these gems of the Pacific except that which comes from human legislation, I would think he would be as despairful as was Kamehameha, the third king of the Sandwich Islands, when on his dying bed he said: "What is to become of my poor country? There is no one to follow me. Queen Emma I do not trust, Lunalilo is a drunkard and Kalakaua is a fool." All that has been done for the Hawaiian Islands has been done by our gracious God and the missionaries. A foreign ship brought them the mosquitoes. The foreign sailors brought them the leprosy. American politics brought them the devil. Had it not been for the gospel those islands would have been putting to death women for eating bananas when forbidden to do so and bowing to a disgusting idolatry, and in all the islands it would have been a mingle sight of cruelty and abomination.

The Annexation Question.

But the missionaries came, and in eight years 12,000 people gathered into the churches and 26,000 children into schools proposing Christian civilization, which now holds a beautiful supremacy over the Sandwich Islands. There are two great parties in the Hawaiian Islands—royalists, who want the queen, and annexationists, who want to come under our eagle's wing.

Neither of them will triumph. The final result will be a republic by itself, of which the present government is an antepast. The Hawaiian nation is strong enough to stand alone. Because a nation is not gigantic is no more reason why it should not have self control than a man with limited resources of physical or financial strength should be denied independence.

If God had intended Honolulu to belong to the United States, he would have planted it hundreds of miles nearer our American coast. The United States government is not so hungry for more land that it needs to be fed on a few chunks of island brought from 1,800 miles away.

No danger that some other foreign nation shall take possession of the islands and give us trouble when we want to run into Honolulu for the coaling and watering of our ships. With some ironsides from our new navy and the aid of our friends on the islands we would knock into smithereens such foreign impertinence. Besides that, if we become as a nation a great maritime power, and we will, none of the islands of the Pacific would decline us sheltering harbor or supply for our ships. What though they belonged to other nations, they would sell us all we want. It is not necessary to own a store in order to purchase goods from it.

Hawaiian Progress.

These are venerable islands. Those who can translate the language of the rocks and the language of human bones say that these islands have been inhabited 1,400 years at least. When found in 1778, they were old places of human habitation. The most unique illustration in all the world of what pure and simple Christianity can do is here. Before the supernatural force began infanticide was common, and not by milder forms of assassination, but buried alive. Demented people were murdered, old people were allowed to die of neglect. Polygamy in its worst form reigned, and it was as easy for a man to throw away his wife as to pluck an apple core into the sea. Superstition blackened the earth and the heavens. Christianity found the Sandwich Islands a hell and turned them into a semiheaven. As in all the other regions where Christianity triumphed, it was maligned by those who came from other lands to preach their iniquities. Loose foreigners were angered because they were hindered in their dissoluteness by a new element they had never before confronted.

"There is Honolulu," cried many voices this morning from the deck of the Alameda. These islands, called by many an archipelago, I call them the Constellation of the Pacific, for they seem not so much to have grown up as alighted from the heavens. The bright, the redolent, the umbrageous, the floralized, the orchardized, the forested, the picturesque Hawaiian Islands. They came in upon us as much as we came in upon them in the morning. Captain Cook no more discovered them in 1778 than we discovered them today. He saw them for the first time for himself, and we saw them for the first time this morning for ourselves. More fortunate are we than Captain Cook. He looked out upon them from a filthy boat and wound up his experiences by furnishing his body as the chops and steaks of a savage's breakfast. We from a graceful ship alight amid herbage and arborescence and shall depart with the good wishes and prayers from all the islanders.

High Official Courtesies.

As you approach the harbor there is in sight a long line of surf rolling over reefs of coral. High mountains, hurricane cleft and lightning split, but their wounds bandaged with the green of perennial foliage. In a few minutes after landing a chamberlain of the queen called to invite us to her mansion, and Chief Justice Judd called with a delegation to ask me to preach that afternoon. I accepted the invitation brought by the chamberlain and was beautifully entertained by the queen. With President Dole of the provisional government and Chief Justice Judd I went to the executive buildings, which were formerly the palace. The council of the president were already assembled in what was originally the throneroom, and taking the chair on the platform he called for order and then rose, and all the councillors arose with him, and he led them in prayer, saying, as near as I can remember: "O Lord God of nations, we ask thy direction in the matters that shall come before us. Give us wisdom and prudence and fidelity in the discharge of our duties, and thou shalt have all the praise, world without end. Amen." I have not been told whether most of the presidents of the United States have opened their cabinet meetings in that way, but it certainly is a good way.

At 3 o'clock that afternoon the Congregational church was packed to overflowing with a multitude, about one half native Hawaiians and the other half people of many lands. It was amazing to me that with such a short notice of a few hours such a throng could be gathered. But the Honolulu papers have been publishing my sermons for years, and it was really a gathering of old friends. An interpreter stood beside me in the pulpit, and with marvelous ease translated what I said into the Hawaiian language. It was such a scene as I never before witnessed, and I shall never see it repeated. After shaking hands with thousands of people I went out in the most delicious atmosphere and sat down under the palm trees. What a bewitchment of scenery! What heartiness of hospitality! The Hawaiians have no superiors for geniality and kindness in all the world. In physical presence they are wondrous specimens of good health and stalwartness. One Hawaiian could wrestle down two of our nation.

The Land of Flowers.

Miracle of productiveness, these islands. Enough sugar to sweeten all the world's beverages, enough bananas to pile all the world's baskets, enough rice to mix all the world's puddings, enough cocoanuts to powder all the world's cakes, enough flowers to garland all the world's beauty. Banks of flowers white as snow, or blue as skies, or yellow as sunset, or starry as November nights, or red as battlefields. A heaven of flowers—flowers intwined in maidens' hair and twisted around hats and hung on necks and embroidered on capes and sacks. Tuberoses, gardenias, magnolias, passifloras, trumpet creepers, cleanders, geraniums, convolvuli, dahlias, hibiscus as red as fire, jessamine, which we in America carefully coax to climb the wall just once, here running up and down and jumping over to the other side and coming back again to jump down this side. Night blooming cereus, so rare in our northern latitudes we call in our neighbors to see it, and they must come right away or never see it at all, here in these islands scattering its opulence of perfume on all the nights, and, not able to expend enough in darkness, also flooding the day.

Struggling to surpass each other, all kinds of trees, whether of fruit or of rich garniture, mango and orange and bamboo and alligator pear and umbrella trees and breadfruit and algabora and tamarine, and all the South sea exotics. Rough cheek of pineapple against smooth cheek of melon. The tropics burning incense of aromatics to the high heavens.

The World's Greatest Volcano.

These islands are volcanic results. The volcanoes are giants living in the cellars of the earth and warming themselves by subterraneous fires, and when they come out to play they toss islands and sometimes in their sport they sprinkle the sea with the Society islands, and then they toss up the Navigator islands, and then the Fiji islands, and then the Hawaiian Islands. They are Titans, and when they play quoits they pitch islands. When the earth finally goes, as go it will, while it will be a very serious matter to us, it will be only the work of volcanoes, which in their sport are apt to be careless with fire. While volcanoes are assigned to the destructive agencies we see here what they can do as architects. See here what they have builded. All up and down these islands are dead volcanoes. Rocked in cradle of earthquake, they grew up to an active life and came to their last breath, and the mounds under which they sleep are decorated with tropical blooms. But the greatest living volcano of all the earth is Hawaiian and named Kilauea. What a hissing, bellowing, tumbling, roaring, thundering place is Kilauea! Lake of unquenchable fire! Convolutions and paroxysms of flame! Elements of nature in torture! Torridity and luridity! Congregation of dreads! Molten horrors! Sulphurous abysms! Swirling mystery of all time! Infinite turbulence! Chimney of perdition! Wallowing terrors! Fifteen acres of threat! Glooms insufferable and Dantesque! Caldron stirred by the champion witch of pandemonium! Campfire of the armies of Diabolus! Wrath of the mountains in full bloom! Shimmering incandescence! Pyrotechnics of the planet! Furnace blast of the ages—Kilauea!

Once upon a time all the geysers and boiling springs and volcanoes of the earth held a convention to elect a king, and Etna was there, and Hecla was there, and Stromboli was there, and Vesuvius was there, and Fuslyama was there, and Mauna Loa was there. The discussion in this convention of volcanoes was heated. They all spouted impassioned sentiment. Some were candidates for the throne and crown because of one pre-eminence, and others for other superiorities. But, when it was put to vote, by unanimous acclamation Kilauea was elected to be king of volcanoes. All the natural forces of the earth, all the vapors, all the earthquakes, all the hills, all the continents voted aye! And that night was the coronation. The throne was of lava. The scepter was of smoke. The coronet was of fire. And all the sublimities and grandeurs and solemnities of the earth kneeling at the foot of the burning throne cried out, "Long live Kilauea of the Hawaiians!" And a voice from heaven added mightiness to the scene as it declared, "He toucheth the hills, and they smoke."

I must leave to my next letter the political aspects of the Hawaiian Islands, and the story of my visit to the president and the ex-queen, and my opinion of both of them.

T. DE WITT TALMAGE.

Experience on a Heldup Train.

"I used to think that it was a marvelous exhibition of cowardice for a trainload of passengers to submit quietly to being held up by one or two train robbers, and I used almost to hope for the chance of showing what I would do if the command 'Hands up' should be given on a coach in which I was traveling," said a commercial traveler. "The chance came, and my ideas underwent a rapid change. It was on a Little Rock and Fort Smith train near Ozark, I think, when a man appeared at the door and sang out, 'Hold up your hands, everybody.' Before I had time to do what I thought I would do two shots were fired almost simultaneously. The first came from the pistol of the conductor, John Kane of Little Rock, a brave man, who drew and fired the moment he realized what the trouble was. The second shot was fired by the train robber, and Kane fell dead. The brakeman then fired, and a second later he fell with a bullet through his loins, which crippled him for life. One of the robbers was wounded by either Kane or the brakeman, and his companions were captured by the trail of blood. I was happy to attend their hanging at Clarksville, Ark., a few months later."

Arranging Pottery.

If the reader has the pottery mania, let him collect in piece. What can add more to the attractions of any room than well chosen specimens of ancient and modern pottery and porcelain of different countries, not forgetting our own, with their dainty, grotesque or fanciful designs? Place them in cabinets about the room or wherever they will be safe, for if broken they cannot usually be replaced.

One does not tire of rooms furnished in this way. They are always pleasant and homelike, and one of their best features is undoubtedly the abolition of the carpet, that abode of dust, moths and other kindred housekeeper's trials without which we live in peace and cleanliness all the changeful summer days.—Selected.

Life's Unwritten Melodies.

A writer in Womankind says: "I would rather leave my children the remembrance of hours spent together around the library table, of books we have read, of walks we have taken and of drives we've enjoyed than I would leave to them simply the legacy of beruffled petticoats and elaborately worked doilies. Life is full of unwritten melodies, and we women are as yet learning only its nursery rhymes, yet in their jingle there is a rhythm which dances between the sober lines of everyday prose. They soften many a stubborn fact and brim with sweetness many a disappointment."

Cow Beats Cycle.

John P. Horsey of Baltimore had an exciting chase in East Goshen last evening, says a letter from West Chester, Pa. He was riding a bicycle from Philadelphia to his home and wore a bright colored suit. Near S. R. Downing's farm he met a cow. His gaudy clothes enraged the animal, and she gave chase. For half a mile she galloped after Horsey, who rode at the top of his speed to escape. The cow caught him, upset and badly bruised the rider and smashed the wheel. He was picked up by a farmer and carried to town.

A Fallacy About Electric Fans.

Many people imagine that the electric fan, because it cools a room, lowers the temperature. As an exchange remarks, the fallacy of this may be easily proved by putting a thermometer in front of an electric fan. A man is cooled by fanning himself because his face throws off heat, and this is carried away by new air. A thermometer throws off no heat, and you may fan it for an hour without making the slightest change in its register as long as no new cold air is admitted into the room.

A Twice Told Tale.

Charley Jecks (to Fogg, who has just told a story)—And you say that happened to you yourself?

Fogg—Certainly. You don't doubt my word, do you?

Jecks—Fogg, you ought to cultivate your memory a little more than you seem to do. That's the same story I told you about a month ago.—Boston Home Journal.

Aluminium In Lithographing.

Aluminium is at present being experimented with as a substitute for Bavarian stones for lithographing. Popular Science News remarks that its great lightness gives it the advantage in many directions. The drawback at present is the price, but this is likely to be overcome very soon. For cylinder press work its elasticity gives it a decided advantage over the stone.

Chicago Outdone by Conservative London.

A much bigger wheel than the great Ferris wheel is being erected at Earl's Court, London. It is a 400 foot wheel and will carry 2,000 people in 50 cars. Three restaurants will be built on platforms at varying heights on the supporting towers, and a big ballroom will crown the towers at the axle.

Piano Key Covers.

Ornamental covers laid along the top of the keys of the piano serve to keep out the dust. Quilted satin, daintily finished with fringe or lace to fall over the edge of the keys, makes a handsome covering, or bright colored flannel, lightly wadded, serves the same purpose.

MRS. KATE M. BOSTWICK.

A Literary Woman of Great Organizing and Executive Force.

Mrs. Kate M. Bostwick of Brooklyn is a type of the literary worker of today not restricting her activities to book and magazine making, but successfully uniting the professions of author and journalist. In early life she contributed to magazines and papers to gratify literary impulses and afterward adopted writing as the work of her life. With a bent for descriptive and historical productions she descends from the higher flights and is well known to magazine readers through her short stories and home talks. In a contest for the best definition of "home" Mrs. Bostwick won the prize of a building lot. She has been for some years in charge of a department of The Consumers' Journal, a trade magazine devoted to home interests, and writes regularly upon special topics for the Brooklyn Eagle, the New York World and the New York Recorder. Some years ago she published a catechetical history of Spain for the instruction of deaf mutes and has now in press a book for children.

In social and public affairs Mrs. Bostwick is known as a woman of organizing and executive force. She is chairman of the executive committee of the New York Woman's Press club and represented the club at the meeting of the International League of Press Clubs held at Atlanta in May. The success of the Woman's Press club is due in a great measure to her personal efforts, backed by a wonderful enthusiasm. Her forte is in the executive sphere, and her motto, "Never despair." She inspires those around her through her energy and cheerfulness and wins them through jolly good heartedness. In person Mrs. Bostwick is of fine presence, with a healthy, rosy complexion, blue eyes and brown hair threaded with gold.

Outside of strictly professional interests Mrs. Bostwick devotes much time and thought to benevolent and church work, to the King's Daughters, the Dorcas circle and the Professional Woman's league. Of the personal traits of this representative woman worker a writer in The Journalist says: "Mrs. Bostwick is genial and responsive in temperament, not profuse in expression of words or promises in either friendship or business, and undervalues instead of exaggerating. She has great pluck and energy, while her ambition to accomplish successfully whatever she undertakes has developed a perseverance and steady push which hold out to the end of her work. She is fond of her own home, and in it true southern hospitality is exhibited. Her mother and sister reside with her."

Marshall P. Wilder, the humorist, is a half brother of Mrs. Bostwick. The maiden name of this talented woman was also Bostwick, she marrying a distant relative. Her married life was passed in the south, where the family lost property during the war. The Bostwicks are of old colonial stock settled in Connecticut. THEO. HOLLAND.

That Steamer Trunk.

"Wear old clothes and take necessities only" has been the advice given to tourists for years. It is time there should be an amendment to that law. There is no place in the world where you are stared at so long and persistently as on shipboard. A stylish woman at such a time seems to enjoy the poetic compliment of being "a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

Truly, "take necessities only," as every article of luggage goes by weight on "the other side." The following list allows of the advantage of being well gowned and economical as well. A steamer trunk and a shawl strap are all that are required for a tourist's trip. Take one gown of gray or tan cravenette cloth (the cloth is waterproof and does away with a mackintosh) made with a flaring skirt and cutaway jacket. Stow away as many fancy fronts to be worn with this suit as you possess, so as to allow of variety. For headgear a billycock hat and black silk veil. A smart tan ulster, with lapped seams and white pearl buttons, is a wrap that will keep you warm on the steamer or look well on the box seat of a four-in-hand, if you take a coaching tour through England. One pair of patent leathers, one calfskin walking and one pair of dress shoes will be all you require. A black moire skirt, with two fancy waists, one of pink chiffon, the other of heliotrope mirror velvet, and a black hat with no feathers will be what you need for dress occasions.

Your underwear should consist of black silk skirts and tights. A nightdress of French flannel is the most comfortable for steamer use. It is often difficult to have your underclothing laundered when traveling rapidly from one place to another. On your stateroom or hotel door tack a linen case with compartments. This should contain hair, tooth and nail brushes, tooth and face powders, cold cream, hat and whisk brooms, bedroom slippers, seidlitz powders, alcohol lamp, curler, nail file and polisher, needles and scissors. Never carry a steamer chair. You may hire them on shipboard for 50 cents a trip.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

YOUNG EDITORS.

A Monthly Magazine Published by School Children In Lynn.

The School Review is a monthly magazine published by some little people in Lynn.

The publishing is done under the name of the Center Street News company.

The sanctum is a room in the Center Street school. The building is mostly devoted to primary classes, but there is a fifth grade class of the grammar school in the building, and that is the class and room to which the members of The Review staff belong.

Miss L. M. Crosby is the teacher. Her method is the modern idea of leading young minds to grasp knowledge rather than pumping it into them, and her room exhibits many evidences of this.

It is more like a museum than a conventional schoolroom. There are all sorts of objects calculated to instruct or entertain the children—a table with mineralogical, botanical and other specimens, artistic drawings adorn the blackboards, and colored sketches by the teacher cover the walls above. At one corner is a meteorological chart, where the children make and record daily their own observations of the weather, according to the weather bureau's system.

"I have always had a paper published by my scholars," said the teacher, explaining the origin of The School Review, "but we did not get the idea of the present magazine until we saw something in The Globe about a little paper published in Washington. Here is the clipping."

Miss Crosby led the reporter to one of the windows, where, pasted on the woodwork, was the story of Milton Tibbets and his Weekly Bulletin of Washington, printed in this paper several months ago with a cut of the young publisher.

"The children sent for a copy of Milton's paper, and that furnished them with a suggestion which they have followed, though The Review is a larger undertaking than The Bulletin."

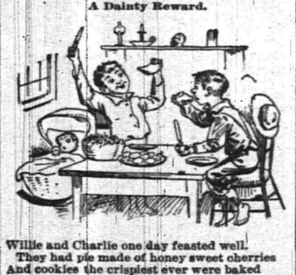
Exhibiting a pasteboard box quite full of manuscript, the teacher explained that this was the repository of the contributions to The Review, from which the editors made their selections. This was a plan by which authors could tell whether their stories were accepted or not, as they could look in the box and find out at any time.

"The children have their own way in everything connected with The Review," said the teacher. "They bought the outfit for printing the paper, a copying process. Of course I assist them, but they are entitled to full credit for all the bright, original things published. It does not interfere with, but rather helps in, their school studies."

Robert Kellam, editor in chief, is a 10-year-old lad, not very robust in body, but bright as a gold dollar mentally. Albert Eldridge, the business manager, is 9 years old and handles his department like a veteran. He lives at 94 Grove street, and that is the business headquarters of the magazine. Albert also contributes editorials, prose and poetry to The Review.

The staff includes Matthew Martin, a clever pencil artist; Margaret Fahey, Willie Buckley, Herman Haines, Katie Connolly, Katie Martin and Emily Norton.—Boston Globe.

A Dainty Reward.



Willie and Charlie one day feasted well.
They had pie made of honey sweet cherries
And cookies the crispiest ever were baked
And a bowlful of loveliest berries.
And the reason their mother gave them these good things—
You have guessed it, my merry ones, maybe—
Was because every time that she went out to work
They took such good care of the baby.

The Little Prince Baby Carol.

The little Bulgarian prince, Baby Carol, likes to go riding. A young woman who saw him says that he is really a very bright, bonny boy. He was seated on the lap of his English governess, while in front of him was his Saxon nurse dazzling in a bright red gown, her head bound in a yellow kerchief and decked with glittering earrings. The prince's carriage is a small landeau, drawn by a pair of cream colored ponies. The coachman and footman in royal livery seemed somewhat out of keeping in the dusty rustic lane.

WEATHER WISDOM.

On January 13, 1810, quicksilver froze hard at Moscow.

The mean temperature of the whole earth is about fifty degrees.

The average annual rainfall over the whole earth is thirty-six inches.

The heaviest rainfall is near the equator, and diminishes steadily as the latitude rises.

Every civilized nation of the world, even China and Japan, now has a weather bureau.

Sun spots, now believed to have an effect on meteorological phenomena, were first observed in 1611.

The coldest place in the world is Yakutch, Russia; the thermometer sometimes falls to seventy-three degrees below zero.

The falling snowflakes bring with them all the floating dust of the air, leaving the atmosphere extremely pure.

A wind moving at forty miles an hour exercises a pressure of nine pounds to the square foot; at 100 miles of fifty-six pounds.

In 1544 the winter was so severe in Europe that in Flanders wine was frozen and was cut in blocks and sold by weight.

In 1855 extremely cold weather prevailed in the United States. Mercury froze and forest trees were killed by the frost.

A window cord is an excellent barometer. When it tightens, the reason is found in the fact that the air is full of moisture, and rain is probable.

In A. D. 42 the Nile failed to rise because of the lack of rain in the heart of Africa, the crops failed, and over a million people perished in Egypt.

The wettest place in the world is Cherrapungi, in Assam, where the average rainfall for fifteen years has been 493 inches. In 1861 it was 905.

The winter of 1812 and 1813 was one of the most severe ever known in Russia, a fact which partially explains the terrors of the retreat from Moscow.

One of the heaviest snowfalls known in this country was February 19 to 24, 1717, when the snow remained five to seven feet deep all over New England.

The opening of the door of a warm room in Lapland during the winter will be instantly followed by a miniature snowstorm, the condensed moisture falling in flakes.

The annual rainfall of Great Britain equals 9,300,000 horse-power; of Germany, 11,800,000; of France, 12,000,000; of Russia, 77,000,000; of the United States, 430,000,000.

In 1684 nearly all the birds of Europe were killed by the cold. Wolves entered Vienna and other large cities, and, driven by hunger, attacked the people in the streets.

In 1771 an unprecedented drought prevailed throughout India. Scarcely any rain fell for a year, and hundreds of thousands died of famine, whole districts being depopulated.

In 1887 and the following year a severe drought spread over North China. The loss of life was appalling, it being estimated by the Chinese government that 9,500,000 lives were lost from famine.

The dryest place in the world is that part of Egypt between the two lower falls of the Nile. Rain has never been known to fall there, and the inhabitants do not believe travelers when told that water can fall from the sky.

Aristotle was the first philosopher to suggest the real cause of the phenomenon of dew. He said: "The sun's heat raises the vapor, from which the dew is formed as soon as the heat is no longer present to sustain the vapor."

The Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence valley have more storms per annum than any other portions of this country. This is due to the fact that storms originating west of this district move directly east, while many originating further south move to the northeast.

In the northern parts of Siberia, the cold is so intense that the earth never thaws to a greater depth than five or six feet. Bodies of the dead buried below this remain perpetually frozen. At a depth of 400 feet below the surface the earth is still at a temperature of ten degrees below freezing.

The hottest place on earth is the vicinity of Massowah. When the northeast wind blows from the desert the thermometer has been known to go to 160. The men of the Italian garrison there can sleep only by the assistance of natives employed to go to and fro all night and sprinkle the bodies of the sufferers with water.

SUBJECTS FOR THOUGHT.

Each individual's actions are his own, but the consequences belong to society.

The manners that are neglected as small things are often the most necessary qualification for success in life.

It is a law of life that labor always awaits those who are anxious to work. It is the question of wages that causes so many to remain idle.

Nearly all reformers fall into the error of presenting their pet hobbies as remedies for all the ills of life. Under the best conditions, human life can give no assurance of either comfort or happiness, except to the contented mind.

The principle of evolution is growing more and more popular with all students of social conditions. Revolutions, even when successful, are the cause of much harm. Evolution destroys the evil tendencies of society without injuring anything that is good. Its processes are slow, but certain.

The principles of mercy unmistakably prevails in Nature. The erring often escape the consequences of evil acts through true repentence. The laws of God governing the world are adopted to human frailty, and there is no real need for despair to ever enter a human heart.

The Dakota, the Tobin-brouze finkeel ten-rater designed by the Herreshoffs, is surprising Englishmen by her great speed.

FRILLS OF FASHION.

SOME OF THE NEWEST DESIGNS FROM PARIS.

The Tendency of Fashion—Black and White—Every-day Costumes—Bodices and Berthas—An Eton Suit—Washable Materials and Costumes.

The tendency of fashion the present season has been to reduce and bring into order the somewhat erratic ideas of the past season. The summer styles are very graceful and pretty. Clinging as well as draped skirts are in vogue, according to the age and tastes of the wearer. Many young women, with pretty figures, still affects the clinging skirt.

The influence of dress reform is shown in the fact that a woman of independent mind can wear pretty much what she pleases. Yet the desire of most women to please others rather than themselves leads them to modify and adapt prevailing fashions rather than to follow the radical suggestions of those who fail to recognize the eternal beauty and adaptability of the skirt form of dress.

The fad for wearing black has been rather overdone, especially by young women. Black, as a rule, does not agree with a young face and figure, and the tendency at present is to modify its solemn sameness. A recent Paris costume is a pretty suggestion for a combination of black and white, and illustrates how neatly sharp contrasts may be made use of for summer wear. The real tendency, however, is to change from black to white. Beautiful white toilets for dress occasions and chic white costumes of serge, sacking and similar fabrics will be in special favor the summer season through. Black, however, in combination with pure white, or softer, less trying cream tints, will be popular for evening wear with those who have the taste and courage to make use of strong contrasts.

Everyday costumes and dresses are mostly made with sleeves cut in one piece, very long and coming down well over the wrist, and as loose and voluminous in their upper part as they are tight and trim below the elbow. In nine cases out of ten they are absolutely plain, save, perhaps, for a single row of trimming at the wrist. The only ornament vouchsafed them is a rosette nestling in the loose portion just above the elbow. Jockeys are discarded, though the bertha and deep collar falling over the top of the sleeve has much the same effect. More dressy is the sleeve made in two parts, the tight sleeve, molding the elbow and forearm, surmounted by a globular baloon sleeve, or a very wide boulleune or bell sleeve. It is in reality only the full-dress sleeve, prolonged for ordinary wear by an elongated cuff, which by some fashionables is dispensed with for smart day dresses, the long glove doing duty for it. Whether of the balloon or bell shape, the top is extremely wide and voluminous (a yard and a half of velvet is required for each), and in their case too, a rosette is almost the only applicable trimming.

Tailor Made Eton Suit.

In bodices, the present mode is to recall in the design suggestions of the skirt trimming. Neither the one nor the other is overloaded with extraneous ornament this season, but the reverse is not always the case. Quite plain skirts will be combined with bodices made gay by facings of brilliant hue, by the addition of creamy silk chemisettes, an entire contrast to the rest of the dress. Berthas arranged so as to look like fichus, wide collars covering the shoulders, and huge, flat, pointed Directoire facings give a stylish effect to whatever bodice they may be adapted. Gradually the cravat is becoming a portion of the dress, not an adjunct, and will be en suite with the rest of the trimming.

The Empire styles, except for little children, have vanished, and in their stead are presented adaptations of the fashions of Louis XV., showing lengthened pointed bodices, draped skirts and paniers, not only suggested by filmy laces, but of decided outlines, and made of stand-alone satins, brocades, fancy silks and moires.

The Eton suit is still popular. Its revers are broader than ever, but the jacket is not the most important part of this season's tailor-made gown. The waistcoat is its newest and most charming feature. It also possesses the delightful characteristic of making one gown do duty for three. In spring days a waistcoat of flannel vesting in shades of tan, blue, scarlet or black is worn with a serge skirt and jacket. As the days grow warmer fancy duck and pique vests appear, and when the serge gown is called upon to serve duty at an afternoon affair it is fashionably combined with a waistcoat of moire, fastened with costly buttons.

There is an immense choice this season in washable materials and costumes. The fancy linen duck suits are especially suitable for morning wear, and the blue duck costumes, dotted with white, black or red, are just the thing for warm weather shopping or seaside wear. These linens and drills are shown in the new postman's blue, in tan, ecru, and pure white, with small colored figures or stripes. Among washable wool fabrics for day gowns are Kanka and Yanry Oukee crapes in delicate stripes of ivory or cream white and a color.

There is both here and abroad a decided reaction against widely flaring and over-trimmed skirts The newest models are either quite plain or have merely rows of milliners' folds, a single ruche, flounce or a number of rows of braid or galloon set close together, occupying not more than four inches of the skirt-edge, still appears among the handsome toilets for evening wear, for plainer gowns for dressy afternoon uses, and likewise among the stylish capes and jackets of satin, lace and jetted net.

Among utility dresses for the beach and mountains are new tints in blue, the favorites being swallow blue relieved with pale chamois color in the bodice trimmings, a lovely shade known as Mediterranean blue, and also silver blues and bluish grays, which are mostly becoming, and, if not, are made so by carefully-chosen accessories.

Death to Moths.

Benzine and carbolic acid, one gallon to one ounce, is sure death to moths. But it cannot be used in delicate fabrics, and from its inflammable character must be used with great caution. A hand atomizer is the easiest way to apply it.

The fumes of burning camphor gum or sulphur will suffocate moth millers. It is a very disagreeable operation, but is so effective that any room where they are known to be should be fumigated this month. To do this with entire success remove the contents of trunks and wardrobes and hang on backs of chairs; close down the windows; set a panful of water in the middle of the room, at a safe distance from all the hangings and furniture; in this place a small iron pot half filled with ashes and the camphor; for a room 15 by 18 feet use a piece as large as a walnut; saturate with alcohol and set the camphor on fire. It will burn fiercely at first, but if proper precautions are observed there is no danger tions are observed there is no danger. Leave the room as soon as you are satisfied that your furniture is in no danger of taking fire; allow the mass to burn itself out, which it will do in half an hour; open the windows and doors for an hour.

Moths prefer soiled to clean garments. The first step toward the safety of garments before putting them away is to turn pockets inside out, beat all dust, saturate and clean with benzine if necessary. Allow the clothes to hang in the sunlight for several hours. Moths hate the light. They work in the dark.

Bags of various sizes made of seersucker and stitched with double seams are safer receptacles of clothing than trunks, and are fully equal to expensive cedar chests.

To Tempt the Appetite.

Eggs for the sick room should be coddled instead of boiled. To coddle an egg, put it in a quart cup and fill nearly to the brim with boiling water. Let it stand on the back part of the stove (where it cannot even simmer) for five minutes. The white will be found a delicate jelly, and the whole perfectly wholesome and delicious.

Milk is now given in almost all forms of illness, and especially those in which solid food is prohibited. Hot milk is a valuable stimulant, and proves a most excellent tonic. It should not be permitted to boil, but simply raised to a temperature as hot as proves comfortable in drinking; it should be drunk from a spoon, as this slow method insures better digestion.

A potato baked with the skin unbroken is rich in nutrition and agreeable to the palate. The addition of a little salt and a tablespoonful of rich sweet cream renders it truly delicious. —Ingalls's Home Magazine.

How to Dust a Room.

To correctly dust a room is not the accomplishment of every woman. Instead of wiping off and removing the dust it is simply flirted into the air and soon settles again upon the articles which have just been dusted.

Soft cloths make the best dusters. In dusting any piece of furniture begin at the top and dust down, wiping carefully with the cloth, which should be frequently shaken from the window. If the furniture will permit the use of a damp cloth, it will more easily take up the dust and it can be washed out in a pail of soap suds. It is far easier to save work by covering up fine furniture while sweeping. Much time is required to dust it if it is left uncovered, and the dusting will in time give the furniture a dull look. —New York World.

PASTOR HAND'S RETIREMENT.

He is Not to Be Succeeded by J. B. Cleaver, and Will Be on Hand as Supply.

The business meeting of the First Church of Christ held last evening was attended by about twenty-five heads of families, representing most of the members of the church.

It was the sentiment of the meeting that Pastor B. W. Hand should be persuaded to withdraw his resignation. Mr. Hand insisted upon giving up the pastorate, however, and the resignation was finally accepted with many expressions of reluctance. The matter of selling the church property was brought up, but no definite action was taken at the meeting. While it was evident that all were satisfied that the financial burden was very heavy on the society, and some felt that they had given more than their means would allow, it was not thought advisable to decide the question of selling hastily.

The usual routine of business was transacted, and a seal was chosen for the incorporation. Although the society was incorporated in 1892, no seal has ever been selected. The meeting was adjourned indefinitely, the understanding being that another would be held next week.

It is possible that something will be done in the way of calling a new pastor at the meeting next week. It is unlikely that Rev. J. B. Cleaver will be called back to the pastorate. Mr. Hand is still an elder in the church, and will act as a supply for the present. He denies the rumor that he has accepted a call to a church in Pennsylvania at a salary of $1,500, and says that the only foundation for it was the fact that he had preached in such a place several times. His plans for the future are not settled yet.

RAILWAY WITHOUT A TIME TABLE.

Ex-Gov. Ludlow Made Receiver of the Rockaway Valley Railroad.

Lawyer Lindabury of Elizabeth made an application to Chancellor McGill in Jersey City yesterday for the appointment of a receiver for the Rockaway Valley Railroad Company. The system is known as the Rockaway Valley route, and consists of three roads—the Rockaway Valley road, which extends nine miles and has a debt of $200,000; the Rockaway Valley and Morristown Railroad, with seven miles of track and $125,000 debt, and the Rockaway and Mendham extension road, with five miles of rail and $75,000 debt.

Mr. Lindabury, who represented the stock and bondholders, said that the roads were being improperly managed and allowed to go to ruin. There is no system of running trains, no time table, and it is a kind of a go-as-you-please concern. It has no money in the treasury. Besides this, it has been leased to the Rockaway Construction Company, which is in the hands of Receiver Honeyman who has been unable to find any assets.

Lawyer Flavel McGee, in behalf of the First National Bank of Jersey City, which holds a large amount of the company's paper, asked hat a responsible person be appointed, and nominated John S. McMaster. James H. Sayres of New Germantown and Mr. Honeyman were also suggested by the different interests involved. Chancellor McGill ignored the suggestions, and appointed ex-Governor George C. Ludlow.

TOWN HOUSE-CLEANING.

Pertinent Suggestion for Improving Plainfield's Beauty.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Our city is the banner town for beauty and fine streets, and residences of the State and surrounding of New York. Still it might be improved. In taking a drive about the city, we now and then observe here and there a vacant lot, or an unoccupied dwelling that is left neglected and ragged as the wilds of the desert. If the owners of such lots would keep them cleaned up, it would not only make them more valuable, but add largely to the beauty of the city and give good impress to visitors that ride about our town. To see a fine residence on one side of a beautiful street or avenue, and on the opposite side a ragged uncared-for lot makes a break in the beauty of the street, and is quite unpleasant for the occupants of the mansion on the opposite side You can see this sad look of the School Board property on Central avenue and the old Thomas B. Stillman property on Seventh street and some other popular streets about city. If owners would take an interest in these matters, and have such lots kept cleaned up, it would be a great help to the beauty and character of the city. Some back lots seem to be a sort of dumping grounds for rubbish, old tin cans, etc. A little expense would add much to pleasantness and beauty. Every person owning property here would not only be doing for his own good; but for the pleasure, health and beauty of others. Will such persons take a little more interest in these matters and please everybody?

FOR THE relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

TO END EVIL.

Law and Order League Working in a Great Crusade.

The Law and Order League of Dunellen met last evening in the W. C. T. U. rooms to discuss and formulate plans for aggressive work against evil in the borough. The meeting was called to order by A. A. Lake, president of the League, who introduced ex-Judge W. R. Codington of Plainfield, who has been chosen counsel for the League. Mr. Codington made a few remarks regarding the work about to be taken up and gave many valuable suggestions that will be followed out. In speaking about the matter this morning Mr. Codington said: The condition of things in the borough is alarming and demands immediate attention by those interested in good government and the observance of the laws regulating the town. It is the intention of the League to close up all places that are open on Sundays and to see that nothing is sold, and anyone detected violating the laws will be prosecuted to the full extent.

The League acting under the direction of counsel will be in a position to prosecute all law-breakers, and this it is determined to do if such a thing is possible, and Mr. Codington says that it is and that the League means business. The future gives promise of great things for Dunellen, since a body of progressive citizens has taken hold of this important matter.

William M. Rider, one of the most popular members of the Middlesex Bowling Green Club, died in Plainfield Saturday after a short illness of typhoid fever. Mr. Rider was in the importing business and stood high in the business community as well as in social circles in Plainfield and Dunellen. He owned a beautiful place in Dunellen directly adjoining that of Christian Schepflin. Mr. Rider was bereaved only a few months ago by the death of his young wife, a very refined and excellent woman.

Pierce Guarantees a Cure.

Kenner, N. C.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—When about three years old I was taken with mumps, also had fever, finally I had that dreaded disease Scrofula. The most eminent physicians in this section treated me to no avail. I had running scrofulous sores on left side of neck and face. I was small and weakly when eight or nine years old, and in fact was nearly a skeleton. Six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery wrought marvelous changes. Although the sores were healed in eight months, I did not quit taking it until I was sure it had been entirely routed from my system. The only signs left of the dreadful disease are the scars which ever remind me of how near death's door I was until rescued by the "Discovery." I am now eighteen years old and weigh 148 pounds; and have not been sick in five years.

Yours respectfully,

HARRY M. HOLLEMAN,

MADE HIM SKEPTICAL.

Cleveland Tells of his Experience with the Witty Retort Man.

"A curious thing about political oratory and wit is the side light I got upon one aspect of it years ago in Buffalo." Thus Mr. Cleveland is quoted by a listener. "One morning a quaint looking old chap came into my office and said that he had read in the newspapers that I was to speak at a mass meeting the following night, and wanted to know if it was true. When I told him that it was so he revealed to me a new method of gaining oratorical distinction. He volunteered to interrupt my speech at stated intervals with a remark that should be agreed upon between us. To this interjection I was to retort wittily, and thus, as the old fellow pointed out, I would acquire a reputation as a witty speaker. My first impression was that he was amusing himself at my expense, but he repeated to me several things I could reply to wittily, and wanted me to pay him roundly for helping me to a reputation. But I told him I was indifferent to that kind of fame, and he went away disappointed. Not very long after that I was seated on a stage listening to a speaker when, who should arise in the audience but my quaint visitor and bawl out one of the very things he wanted me to pay him for interrupting me with. The orator answered him with the same retort that I was offered the privilege of making, and the audience exploded into laughter and I heartily joined in, but my amusement had not the same foundation, I fancy, as that of the rest of the laughers. And during the rest of the evening the old fellow made an occasional interruption from different parts of the house, and the retorts were of the same manufactured sort. I am a trifle skeptical now on the subject of witty retorts.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Buttermilk as a Beverage.

Buttermilk is destined to be the drink of the future; for, among the many advantages which are claimed for it, is one that appeals to the vanity of men—it will not cause a flushed face nor a red nose as other drinks do, but, on the contrary, is considered a good specific for both. Any afternoon you may find what are now derisively termed "buttermilk brigades" lined up in front of any of the larger bars guzzling buttermilk, happy in the knowledge that it will soon erase the expensive coloring on their face which old king alcohol has painted—not in water colors, either. The cow may yet in a way take the place of the brewery.

SUCH AS DREAMS ARE MADE OF.

Evidence that the Mind Reasons to the Cause Rather Than from It.

"Did it ever occur to you that when we dream our minds operate backward?" said a scientific man. "I mean by this that the cause which gives the impression to the sleeper's mind that makes him begin to dream is always the climax of the vision. Take, for instance, a man who falls out of bed. He dreams, perhaps, that he has fallen from a precipice. The cause of this dream is the shock he receives by coming in contact with the floor. Between the time he receives the fall and the moment he awakes—in this short period, almost infinitesimal—his mind follows out the impression received by the fall, reasoning to it as a climax. Thus, when he comes to his senses he remembers having had the vision and wonders why he should have fallen out of bed just at the moment he should have reached the bottom of the abyss. It would be folly to think that he had been dreaming of falling, and then suited his actions to the dream by doing so at exactly that moment. I have had dreams in which explosions occurred, and they were caused by the noise of a door being slammed. The noise sound gave my mind the impression of an explosion, and so I reasoned to it. The details have been so perfect and the series of incidents leading up to the explosion have seemed to take up such a great length of time that I have often wondered at the rapidity of thought while in sleep. In a moment incidents can be reviewed which it would take hours to act out. I know of a friend who fell asleep while looking at a clock one afternoon and began a trip to New York in a dream. He remembered vividly the ride from his house to the depot; how he was stopped by a friend who questioned him about important business; how he got on the train after having an altercation with the baggageman in regard to charges for overweight, all of which compelled him to run to catch the train; how he sat in the parlor car and enjoyed the scenery, remembering all the stations until he arrived at Greensburg, when a friend asked him to join a game of poker; how he played each hand, the pleasant recollection of several times holding four aces being plainly in his mind; how he continued playing without interruption except for dinner, until he arrived at Philadelphia, when he counted over some $400 in winnings. Then he remembered having met a friend while eating in Broad Street station who talked upon a leading topic in politics; then he got on the train and began reading a magazine which he had purchased at the news stand, finally arriving at Jersey City. He had just got on the ferryboat when his wife came in and woke him. He rubbed his eyes, and thinking he had been asleep for some time he looked up at the clock when he found that but three minutes had elapsed since he fell asleep. In these three minutes he had made a journey to New York, seeing everything as vividly as if real. I tell this just to show the wonderful activity of the brain of a sleeping person and in support of my theory that in a dream the mind reasons to the cause rather than from it."

Congressmen of Other Days.

It used to be told of General Logan, who was a member of Congress at the breaking out of the war, that when he saw there was really going to be a fight, he seized a musket, slipped out of Washington, and walked all the way to Bull Run, where he arrived just in time to have a hand in the fray.

He wore a dress coat, but he stood his ground as a long as any one. The rout was complete, and the next morning, a good deal out of breath, he was back at the capital, telling some of his fellow-congressmen what he had seen.

The Latest Baconian Theory.

The latest theory as to the authorship of Shakespeare's plays is to the effect that the great Bacon concealed his work on them because he was too much afraid of his domineering mother to admit that he had done such an evil thing as to write plays. Lady Ann Bacon did not believe in mumming and masking, being a dame of strict opinions; hence, the claim that her son used Master Shakespeare as a blind. It is as reasonable as any of the silly Baconian stories.

FIRE STRANGELY QUENCHED.

Unexpected Assistance in Subduing an Outbreak.

The New York firemen who were called out at 3 this morning to extinguish a fire on the top floor of the five-story building at 438 Broome street, were materially aided by the bursting of a large water tank, which fortunately almost quenched the flames just at the moment when the firemen anticipated much difficulty in reaching them with the apparatus summoned by the first alarm.

After that they had little trouble in finishing the work and most of the damage, amounting to about $4,000, was caused by the flood of water which escaped from the broken tank.

Hawaiian Royalists Still Active.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—H. A. Wideman, minister of finance under the late Hawaiian monarchy; J. A. Cummins, ex-minister of foreign affairs, and Samuel Parker, the successor of Mr. Cummins under the regime of the deposed queen, accompanied by Major Seward, of Honolulu, will arrive in Washington this afternoon. The authorized agents of the Hawaiian royalists, commissioned by the ex-queen herself, will seek an audience of President Cleveland.

Baseball League Meeting.

SCRANTON, Pa., July 31.—Shortly after midnight Scranton decided to remain in the state league, and the Troy franchise will probably go to Johnstown, N. Y. It was discovered that the national agreement had been broken in regard to both Hogan and Hodson. Hodson had signed a contract with Cleveland, and Hogan had received offer from Comiskey in Chicago.

TWENTY YEARS

OF ONE WOMAN'S LIFE

Spent With and For the Benefit of the Women of the World.

(SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.)

One woman's work has told for good in thousands of homes throughout the world. What a record of helpfulness!

What happiness and comfort that work has brought to thousands of despairing women; what pains banished and how smooth the way was made for weary sufferers, no pen or tongue can ever tell.

Lydia E. Pinkham gave the best of her life to the women of the world, that through her the suffering of her sex might be relieved.

Her Vegetable Compound saves women from all diseases of the womb and kidneys. It has stood for twenty years against all cavil, and won the first place in the hearts of women.

Look at the picture of this New York woman, once confined to her bed by chronic female weakness, now able to follow her husband in the Adirondacks on long gunning tramps. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made this change in her life.

Just hear this one talk. It does one's heart good.

"Female sufferers, hear me!

"I was discouraged, broken-hearted. I was so ill with female trouble I could not walk or stand, and had to be assisted to my feet when arising from a chair. My head whirled, and my back ached; but worst of all was that awful crowding-down feeling in my abdomen.

"A friend of mine told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; her faith won mine, and now I am well. Oh! how can I return thanks to Mrs. Pinkham?

"Every woman troubled with uterus or womb troubles can be cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for it cured me, and will them."—MRS. KERHAUGH, Juniata St., Nicetown, Pa. Every druggist has it.

When Girls Smoke Cigarettes.

"I have repeatedly asserted," commented a woman the other day, "that I never knew any woman who smoked and never met any one who knew one who did, but I can no longer say so. A case has come home to me in the family of a dear friend in a neighboring city, where the young daughter of the house, a girl of 16, is, it is feared, hopelessly ill from the effects of cigarette smoking. She first smoked in a spirit of foolish sport, but soon became addicted beyond control to the habit. A package a day often did not satisfy her, and she is now a wreck, with little prospect of recovering. It has been a terrible revelation and shock to her mother, who had no suspicion of the fact till her child was almost beyond help. Other mothers ought perhaps to be told of the case as a warning to vigilance, though it cannot be possible that it will be often duplicated."—New York Tribune.

Baroness de Langenau.

The Baroness de Langenau of Vienna, widow of a former minister from the Austrian court to Russia, has taken the vice presidency of the W. C. T. U. for that country. The baroness devotes all her varied gifts to the well being of those who need help. She has opened a home for servant girls, a mission for postmen and a chapel for the Wesleyan missionary—a German sent out under the auspices of the London society. Perhaps a more difficult field for women's work could not be found than Vienna, but even there the light begins to dawn. Not only among women of the highest social rank, but among those of the least opportunity, there is "the sound of a going in the mulberry trees" that means an escape from the bondage of century old tradition and prejudice into the new liberty of "Christianity applied."

Portia Versus Ophelia.

It was Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson, the impressive president of the Chicago Woman's club, who won the admiration of every one in attendance upon the meetings of the General Federation of Woman's Clubs, held in Philadelphia recently, who once declared that "if Hamlet had been in love with Portia instead of Ophelia he never would have gone mooning round and debating whether it was better 'to be or not to be.'"

That fashions change the names of children is already apparent. Undoubtedly there are ten times as many Dorothys since puffed sleeves came in as there were in the days of plain sleeves. Stately Elizabeths of 3 years play where a decade ago sweet little Lizzies frolicked. Rosamunds and Eleanors, Prudences and perhaps even Pamelas, Clarissas and Amelias will return now that the fluttering skirts and the brocades of our grandmothers are coming back.—San Francisco Call.

A Live Frog In a Stone.

In Hardwicke's "Science Gossip," issue of Feb. 1, 1867, on page 45, I find the following communication from one Simon Hutchinson under the heading of "A Frog In Oolite." Mr. Hutchinson opens by begging to submit the following certificate for the consideration of all those who delight in pondering over curious and unaccountable facts in nature and art. The certificate, or affidavit, is given below:

"I, William Munton of Waltham, England, quarryman, hereby certify that I was a witness to the discovery of the stone and frog now before me (in possession of Mr. Simon Hutchinson of Manthorpe Lodge, Grantham), in the stone quarry at Waltham. The frog was found about 10 or 12 feet below the natural surface in a rock that was perfectly solid, with the exception of the cavity occupied by the frog's body. When the stone was split open, the frog was seen to be alive and in size equal to the cavity which his body had occupied. It continued to live for the space of about 10 days after being released from the stone and was afterward preserved in spirits by the late Mr. Stow of Waltham. Before the stone was broken by the workman's sledge no crack or crevice was anywhere visible. Witness my hand this 1st day of December, 1866."

After giving the above Mr. Hutchinson made these comments: "It is not difficult to imagine that in the ages passed this frog was enveloped in mud, which subsequently hardened into stone, remaining sufficiently porous to admit air and moisture enough to maintain a torpid existence. That, like the seeds of vegetables buried enormously deep, remains dormant until some accident brings them within the influence of moisture and light sufficient to reanimate and develop them. As to the age of the frog in question, I offer no theory or opinion."—St. Louis Republic.

HOW C. P. HUNTINGTON GOT RICH.

He was Industrious, and Whatever His Income a Portion was Saved.

Collis Potter Huntington was born at Harwinton, Conn., October 22, 1821. At the age of fourteen years he went to work for a neighbor at $7 a month and board. At the end of the year he had saved all he earned. "Why," said a friend, "that's all you got." "Yes," was his reply, "and that's why I didn't save any more." When two years older his cash capital was $175, but he had already established a reputation for business ability and honesty, which enabled him to get all the credit he would ask, so that, in his seventeenth year, it was not surprising to those who knew him that he should strike out alone and go to New York city and buy a stock of goods amounting to $3,000.

In 1848, when the attention of the world was drawn to California, he had become dissatisfied with the narrow sphere for commercial undertakings in an interior Connecticut town, and in October of that year, he shipped a stock of goods around the Horn and started for San Francisco himself by the way of Panama; was detained on the isthmus three months, but while others were carousing and wasting their money otherwise he attended to business, and bought and sold in the midst of the confusion and demoralization that prevailed around him. When he reached Sacramento and had paid all his expenses, he had $5,000 more in cash than he started from home with.

COLLIS P. HUNTINGTON.

The great feature of Mr. Huntington's history is the part he took in the building of the pioneer overland railroad. Since the building of the Central Pacific Railroad began, he has resided in New York City, where, for the most part he accomplished his splendid triumphs in the world of finance.

In a recent address in San Francisco, Mr. Huntington summed up his convictions in this wise:

"I feel the danger that is ahead of us as American citizens in the propagation of doctrines which are unsound at their foundations. The rules of life that are requisite to success are so very few and simple that the average wage worker needs no one to instruct him in them. Work with an honesty of purpose and live on less than you make, is one of them, and if a young man begins, continues, and acts on this line, he is certain to build up a fortune.

"When I was a boy, I earned and saved in one year, by the most rigid economy, $84, and at the end of that year I was as rich I have ever been. Start two young men upon the road of life, and if one earns $75 the first year and saves $50 of it, and another earning the same amount saves nothing, it seems an easy problem to figure out the probable difference at the end of twenty years."

Outlines for a Dime Novel.

I.

As he rode slowly over the trail the crack of a rifle was heard. * * * Bill Dalton lay dead with a ball through his temple.

II.

The next morning Bill Dalton arose, and, though somewhat pained by the wound through his head, set forth to find his comrades. As he reached the canon his horse shied and lost his footing. Horse and rider went toppling down 2,000 feet to instant death.

III.

Bruised and wounded, he got up three hours later, and in a moment of desperation, rode off twenty miles to the cave where his brother desperadoes lived. As he entered, a long, low "Hist!" came from the deepest corner of the cave. There was an instant's pause, the flash of a bowie and Bill Dalton bit the dust, never more to rise.

IV.

Somewhat feeble, but strengthened by the fresh morning air, Bill Dalton left the cave next day. Ill luck attended him. Riding all alone through the mountains he was startled by a horrible sound. Looking up he saw—an avalanche! It came on with terrible speed. It reached him, pushed him into the chasm two miles below and buried him under a thousand tons of rock and stone. Poor Dalton was dead!

The next afternoon he was arrested in a frontier mining town while in the act of robbing a bank.—Chicago Record.

She Wanted an Uneasy Plaster.

"I want an uneasy plaster, sah!"

The colored woman, whose head was done up in a bandana handkerchief turban fashion, offered a silver quarter of a dollar to the apothecary as she spoke.

"I—er—don't think I understand you," replied the man behind the counter.

"It's an uneasy plaster I want," repeated the woman.

"What's that?"

"Uneasy plaster, sah."

"I don't know what you mean."

"The missus said I was ter git an uneasy plaster. Here's the money for it."

The apothecary reflected for a moment and scratched his head. Then an idea seemed to break upon him.

"A porous plaster is the most uneasy kind of plaster I know of," he said. "I'll give you one of those. If it's not right bring it back."

The colored woman did bring it back about fifteen minutes later. She also had a note from her mistress, explaining that adhesive plaster for a cut finger was the article wanted.—Washington Star.

The Prevailing Epidemic.

"What's the matter that there is no dinner ready?" asked the labor leader.

"The cook quit," replied his wife, leaning back in her chair and fanning herself gently.

"Why didn't you get it ready yourself? You know how well enough."

"Me? I'm out on a sympathetic strike with the cook."

NEWS FROM GOTHAM.

THE LIVING PICTURE FAD OF THE THEATRE.

The Old Bowery Passing Away—Chinatown Brushes Up to Receive American Sight-Seers—Flower Girls in Uniform and Under Orders.

Chinatown is beginning to show an interest in its visitors. For years the Caucasian searchers after novelty have wandered through Mott, Pell and Doyers streets, which make up the heart of New York's Chinatown, without attracting more than passing attention. John Chinaman seemed to regard them much as an indolent farmer might view his neighbor's chickens when they strayed into his barnyard. The occupants of private apartments barely looked up when the visitors entered and talked about their way of living. Any other nationality would have been outraged at such curiosity, but John kept on ironing his clothes or stirring his stew, thoroughly regardless of the remarks of the callers. The surliest Chinaman never ventured beyond inquiring, "What you want?" But John is, after all, a cunning fellow. New restaurants have been opened, and they are no longer difficult to find. The new Chinese restaurants have double signs, one in Chinese characters and the other in English. The furnishings also indicate a desire to cater to outsiders. The walls are painted and frescoed, and instead of rough, plain wooden tables, there are tables of handsome polished cherry. The seats are of teak instead of pine. The smells characteristic of the old restaurants are not met with in the new. At least one waiter in each can speak English, and efforts are made to please visitors. No better tea can be obtained anywhere. The charge is ten cents a cup, which is a fabulous price in Chinatown. In the old days the native amusement, which consisted partly of concert and partly of Chinese plays, was found only with the aid of a guide. Now the concert hall has an English sign as well as one in Chinese characters, and American patronage is sought. Altogether, Chinatown now realizes that it is a show-place and that it can make money out of the fact.

A San Francisco industry has been planted in the metropolis. A company is now supplying bouquets and boutonnieres to the public through the agency of attractively uniformed flower girls. The girls employed live at home and are paid regular salaries, according to their worth as saleswomen. The entire company is run on strictly military principles. At present shere are two captains, who will receive $7.50 a week; the lieutenants' salaries will be $7; sergeants $6.60 and the privates $6 per week. Later will be added inspectors and superintendents, according to the promotion of the young soldiers, which depends entirely on the amount of sales made, conduct and executive ability. After $2.50 worth of bouquets are sold the successful ones receive twenty per cent. of the amount taken, and this will be added to their regular salaries.

At the present time living pictures are a feature of the entertainments of four New York theatres, and as many more theatres have a similar feature of entertainment underlined. The present craze for Living Pictures is merely a sporadic recurrence of a fad, which was general in theatricals about twenty years ago for statue groupings, which, once started on a career of popularity, invaded in turn nearly all of the theatres, and ultimately ran its course when the artistic character of the original groupings made place for others of inferior merit. When the Clencenean Case was originally produced at the Standard theatre a few years ago, was voted a failure on the first night. On the second night, however, another exponent of the character of Iza, who poses for her sculptor-husband, was substituted, and the notoriety which this actress evoked by the beauty of her appearance made the play a success, and it continued to draw crowded houses in this city and elsewhere for a considerable time afterward. The salary paid an actress posing in one of the living picture is substantially the same as is received by a model in a large cloak house, and varies from $15 to $25 a week. But, especially at this time of year, it is easier to secure actresses than models for the reason that appearance in a living picture leads in a good many cases to the appearance of the actress on the professional boards in a speaking part at a material increase of salary, whereas a cloak model has usually no assurance of betterment.

A most wonderful transformation has overtaken the Bowery at night in the last six months. For years before, almost as soon as night set in this most remarkable street was apparently abandoned by respectable persons, and from the surrounding streets there thronged into it a motley crowd of the vicious. Concert saloons opened their doors, and the crowd that streamed in and out of them made the street obnoxious and even dangerous to passers-by. Lately, the police have been doing a little work and the Bowery at night has become almost respectable.

A New Yorker once said to a friend from out of town who expressed surprise at learning that he had never been to Bedloe's Island. "Well, it's so near, you see. It only takes an hour, the whole trip, and I know I can go at any time, so I just keep putting it off. If it were a hundred miles away I dare say I should have seen the view from the torch long ago." This is a mental attitude largely shared. Of the crowds that visits the statue of Liberty on Bedloe's Island fully one-half of the visitors are out of town people. To them it is one of the points of interest, like the Metropolitan Museum or the Brooklyn Bridge, and they proceed to do it conscientiously. It is worth any man's hour, that trip from the Battery in the little tug across the churned-up-bay, the view from the island, and the climb up inside the huge statue. Then, too, there is a good swimming place there, and cool breezes nearly always. Yet hundreds of New Yorkers die every year without ever having been there, having neglected in the familiarity which contempt breeds to pay their respects to the goddess by so much as even a single visit.

A million and a half of money was offered to some of our Wall street brokers, for a year at 3 per cent., and the offer was declined. Some of the leading brokers have been able to get all the money they want and for so long a term as seven months at 2 1-2 per cent., and in these evidences of a plethora of money and a very low rate of interest some of the financiers believe they see indications of the promise of higher prices and greater business activity.

ST. PATRICK'S INK.

The Indelible Writing Fluid Used by Irish Monks.

It is impossible to read the most ancient histories of the Irish saints without noticing how large a part books play in their lives.

In the library some cut the sheets of parchment, or even sewed together in the neatest way the odd shreds (for the monk must not waste the gifts of God, especially when they are rare and dear). They polished it on one side, until it was smooth, and laid it near the scribe. Others prepared the peculiar thick inks of the Irish writers, very much like varnish, in different colors. The red was the most beautiful, and after a thousand years it yet shines as the day it was first used. It was got from a kind of cockles collected on the sea-shore. Then there were black and green and golden inks, used in various thicknesses by the illuminators, and the artists in miniature.

All these inks will resist chemicals that corrode iron. The ink was placed in thin conic glasses attached either to the side of the desk or to the chair, sometimes to the girdle of the writer, often fixed to the end of a pointed stick placed upright in the ground. It is owing to this peculiar skill in making ink that so many of the old Irish manuscripts have come down to us. They were like the cloth of corduroy, unless cut up or burned up; they were bound to last for ages, and are an eloquent symbol of that tenacious love of learning, and that unquenchable faith which the hand of Patrick wrote in characters ineradicable on the very soul, in the very blood and innermost marrow of the Irish race.—Donohoe's Magazine.

BONUSES THAT CATCH TRADE.

Ingenious Schemes of the New York Shop Keepers to Attract Customers.

Any one who buys a pair of shoes at some of the up-town shoe shops will receive in addition to his purchase a ticket which will entitle him to from ten to fifty shines at the expense of the shoemaker. The shoes must be shined in the building in which the shoes are sold, but the inducement is one which has its attractiveness, and it goes to show the advance which has been made in the art of selling merchandise. Tickets are issued by hatters which entitle men to have their hats blocked a certain number of times without extra cost, clothiers enter into a contract with customers to press their clothes after they have been worn, and matinee tickets for some of the continuous shows are given away by our dry goods houses for all purchases of more than fifty cents. The system began years ago when a tea company gave away chromos with every pound of tea. From that it has developed through every branch of trade.—N. Y. Sun.

Bismarck and His Wig.

As Bismarck has found little time in his busy life for women outside his family, he always has been quite indifferent to his personal appearance, and it was not until last month that anybody except his wife and children knew that he once tried to conceal the three hairs which long bristled in conspicuous solitude on his bald head. He told the story thus:

"There was a time when I wished to wear a wig. I was stationed in St. Petersburg and there was a military review in Warsaw in honor of the Prince Regent of Prussia, later Emperor William I. I resolved to wear a wig. As we galloped along in the royal party, a general who rode at my side remarked in a rather scornful tone:

"'Ah! You wear a wig, do you?'

"'How can you see that?' I asked.

"'The devil! How can I see it?' he exclaimed; 'why, it is sliding off.'

"He was right; it was sliding off. My carriage, which was to take me back to the city, stood near by and I rode off to it, accompanied by the general. I halted at the carriage, and there, in the presence of the Czar, the Prince Regent, the general staff, and the army, I ripped off the wig and flung it on the seat. Afterward the Prince Regent, who paid much attention to forms and appearances, asked me rather sharply:

"What kind of a devilish performance were you going through with your wig?"

Getting Even.

"Cynthy," said Farmer Corntossel, "everything's erbout ready fur takin' boarders from the city."

"Fur ez I kin see," was the reply.

"Wal, they's jes one matter I wanter ten' to. It's an idee I got while I was to the hotel. The next time I go ter town I wanter git some signs printed ter hang up in the bed-rooms."

"Whut'll ye say on 'em?"

Mending Association.

A Ladies' Mending association has come into being which besides fulfilling a want will provide employment for some of the many poor gentlewomen whose abilities do not soar above the level of homely needlework. To some people, strange as it may seem, mending has a curious fascination. They shrink away in nervous terror from a length of new material and a pair of scissors to revel over a three cornered tear or rejoice in a huge darn. To such, therefore, the work of the new association will be not only remunerative, but pleasant.—Lady's Pictorial.

Miss McCulloch on Horseback.

Miss McCulloch, daughter of the Hon. Hugh McCulloch, former secretary of the treasury, is going on a tour around the world, which will occupy two years. Although it is not very generally known, she has been writing some extremely readable stories for the past year, and people who have carefully criticised her work think that she is one of the possibilities for coming foremost women writers. She is very independent in her opinions and a fine horsewoman. The family spend the summer in the country, where the natives at one time used to plan to meet her when she rode abroad, for Miss McCulloch, they declared, had adopted a bifurcated riding habit and rode astride.

Marcia H. Daniels.

Mrs. Marcia Harbert Daniels, who was elected on the Danville school board last April, is the first woman chosen in that city for that position. She is a daughter of a Massachusetts father and a Kentucky mother. Her grandmother was a sister of Nancy Hanks Lincoln, the mother of President Lincoln. She was born in Indiana, but has lived in Danville for nearly 20 years. For eight years she served as professor of mathematics in a prominent seminary, after which she became the wife of Mr. J. A. Daniels. She is the mother of five promising children, a thoroughly capable woman and a suffragist.—Danville (Ills.) Letter.

Silken Petticoats.

The silk petticoat has become an article of artistic elegance, made of rich brocades and moire silks and trimmed with lace covered ruffles and flounces of chiffon and is almost as important an item of dress as the gown which is worn over it. A very dainty skirt is made of black and white striped silk, with a flounce of yellow satin at the bottom, over which is a plaited silk muslin ruffle edged with narrow black guipure and headed with black insertion and a ruche of muslin. White satin and white chiffon is the ideal combination for a bridal petticoat.

Fly Poison.

An effective fly poison, which has the merit of being poisonous only to flies, is made of the yoke of an egg beaten up with a tablespoonful each of ground black pepper and molasses. It should be poured in shallow plates and set about. This is a simple process to catch the few flies that slip into a house before the screens are put up, for most housekeepers wait until warned by the buzzing insects of their arrival to put in these safeguards.
